VI. BRIMA'S APPEAL

A. Brima's First Ground of Appeal: Equality of Arms

217. In his First Ground of Appeal, Brima alleges that the Trial Chamber erred in law and in fact in failing to ensure the equality of arms between the Prosecution and Defence, which "denied or substantially impaired [his] right . . . to a fair trial" and resulted in "a miscarriage of justice."[336]

1. Submissions of the Parties

218. Brima submits that the principle of equality of arms is a core element of the right to a fair trial;[337] that while equality of arms does not guarantee an equality of resources, there must at least be an approximate equality in terms of resources.[338] Brima complains that the Trial Chamber denied him "adequate time and resources" necessary to present his case.[339]

219. In response, the Prosecution contends that Brima's Ground of Appeal consists almost entirely of a discussion of general legal principles relating to the concept of equality of arms. Brima does not make any statement on the particular circumstances of his own case, except for general complaint contained in paragraph 81 of his Appeal Brief.[340] The Prosecution further states that during the trial, Brima never filed any written request seeking additional time or resources, and that he cannot now place on the Prosecution the burden of establishing that he did, in fact, have adequate time and resources.[341]

2. Discussion

220. The Statute and Rules provide for an accused's right to a fair trial.[342] In particular, Article 17(4) of the Statute requires that an accused has "adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his or her defence and to communicate with counsel of his or her own choosing."[343] Equality of arms is a core element of the right to a fair trial.

235. The Prosecution responds that the "Trial Chamber was duly mindful of the concerns of the Defence in this regard and had correctly instructed itself on the appropriate legal standards."[351]

2. Discussion

236. Kamara's First Ground raised two issues relating to:

(i) Contradiction in the evidence of Prosecution witnesses; and

(ii) Assessment of evidence of accomplice.

237. The Appeals Chamber has earlier in this Judgment pronounced on these two issues and there is no reason to repeat what it said already.[352]

238. The Appeals Chamber will not disturb the Trial Chamber's reliance on the testimony of witness TF1-334. Having heard the testimony of witness TF1-334, the Trial Chamber is in a far better position than the Appeals Chamber to decide whether his alleged participation in the commission of crimes affects his credibility and the reliability of his testimony. The Appeals Chamber finds that Kamara failed to demonstrate that a reasonable tribunal could not have relied on the evidence of the unlawful killings in Karina. This Ground of Appeal therefore fails.

B. Kamara's Second, Third and Fourth Grounds of Appeal: Planning Crimes in Bombali District and Other Parts of the Western Area

239. The Appeals Chamber has considered Kamara's Grounds Two, Three and Four where the substance of complaint is that the Trial Chamber erred in fact in finding that Kamara planned the crimes alleged in Counts 9, 12 and 13. Having scrutinised the Record on Appeal the Appeals Chamber concludes that the Grounds of Appeal were misconceived. The Trial Chamber in its findings had not found that Kamara planned the crimes set out in Counts 9, 12 and 13. However, the Appeals Chamber has noted that the Trial Chamber in its Disposition had mistakenly stated that Kamara was guilty of the crimes in Counts 9, 12 and 13 pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute when it should have been Article 6(3).

240. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber revises the Trial Chamber's Disposition by substituting Article 6(3) for Article 6(1) in respect of Counts 9, 12 and 13.

[351] Prosecution Response Brief, para. 4.41.

C. Kamara's Fifth and Sixth Grounds of Appeal: Aiding and Abetting Crimes in Freetown and the Western Area

241. Kamara contends that the Trial Chamber erred in law and in fact by finding him guilty under Article 6(1) for aiding and abetting the mutilation of civilians in Freetown and other parts of the Western Area as well as the killing of civilians at Fourah Bay.[353] In particular, he argues that the Trial Chamber erroneously "applied a wider standard of liability instead of the stricter standard to find the Appellant guilty as an aider and abettor based on its analysis of the mens rea of aiding and abetting."[354] He submits that the Trial Chamber was required to find that he was aware that his acts assisted the specific crime committed by the principal perpetrator and that he was aware of the essential elements of that crime.[355]

1. Errors of Law

242. In discussing the mens rea for aiding and abetting, the Trial Chamber stated:

> "The mens rea required for aiding and abetting is that the accused knew that his acts would assist the commission of the crime by the perpetrator or that he was aware of the substantial likelihood that his acts would assist the commission of a crime by the perpetrator. However, it is not necessary that the aider and abettor had knowledge of the precise crime that was intended and which was actually committed, as long as he was aware that one of a number of crimes would probably be committed, including the one actually committed."[356]

243. The Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber was correct in its analysis. The Appeals Chamber of the ICTY in both Blaškić and Simić found that it was not necessary to prove that the aider and abettor knew the precise crime that was intended or actually committed by the principal perpetrator.[357] In both cases the ICTY Appeals Chamber held further that liability for aiding and abetting requires proof that the accused knew that one of a number of crimes would probably be committed, that one of those crimes was in fact committed, and that the accused was aware that his conduct assisted the commission of that crime.[358] The Appeals Chamber endorses this principle.

concerning the burning of five young girls inside a house in Karina and the events in Freetown. In respect of the incident involving the death of five young girls in Karina, the Prosecution concedes that there are "variations in the details of how the crime was committed;" but notes that there is no dispute concerning what it calls the "essential features" of the evidence.[385]

3. Discussion

257. In addition to military commanders, superior responsibility under Article 6(3) of the Statute encompasses political leaders and other civilian superiors in positions of authority.[386] A superior is one who possesses the power or authority to either prevent a subordinate's crimes or punish the subordinate after the crime has been committed.[387] The power or authority may arise from a de jure or a de facto command relationship.[388] Whether it is de jure or de facto, the superior-subordinate relationship must be one of effective control, however short or temporary in nature. Effective control refers to the material ability to prevent or punish criminal conduct.[389] The test of effective control is the same for both military and civilian superiors.[390]

258. Kamara submits that a finding of superior responsibility requires proof of both command and control which he claims are inseparable.[391] The Appeals Chamber rejects this assertion. The terms "command" and "control" are two related but distinct concepts. The term "command" refers to powers that attach to a military superior, while the term "control," which has a wider meaning encompasses both military and civilian superiors.[392]

(a) Kamara's Responsibility for Crimes Committed by Savage

259. Kamara contends that the Trial Chamber erred in finding him liable as a superior for crimes committed by Savage in Kono District. According to Kamara, he did not have the material ability to control the acts of Savage because Savage was unruly in character.[393] The Trial Chamber noted that enlisting children under the age of 15 years] was legitimate."[451] He contends that at all material times, he lacked the requisite criminal intent required for the crime of "conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups or using them to participate actively in hostilities" punishable under Article 4.c of the Statute of the Special Court.

294. In the alternative, Kanu argues that conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 was not a war crime at the time alleged in the Indictment.

295. The Prosecution observes that the Appeals Chamber has already ruled that conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups or using them to participate actively in hostilities was a crime entailing individual criminal responsibility at the time of the acts alleged in the Indictment. The Appeals Chamber refers to its dictum that:

> "The rejection of the use of child soldiers by the international community was widespread by 1994 . . . Citizens of Sierra Leone, and even less, persons in leadership roles, cannot possibly argue that they did not know that recruiting children was a criminal act in violation of international humanitarian law. Child recruitment was criminalized before it was explicitly set out as a criminal prohibition in treaty law and certainly by November 1996, the starting point of the time frame relevant to the indictments. As set out above, the principle of legality and the principle of specificity are both upheld."[452]

296. Kanu's submission that conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 was not a war crime at the time alleged in the Indictment is without merit. Furthermore it is frivolous and vexatious for Kanu to contend that the absence of criminal knowledge on his part vitiated the requisite mens rea in respect of the crimes relating to child soldiers.

297. Kanu's Seventh Ground of Appeal therefore fails.

D. Kanu's Ninth Ground of Appeal: Findings of Responsibility Pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute

1. The Parties' Submissions and the Findings of the Trial Chamber

298. In his Ninth Ground of Appeal, Kanu submits that the Trial Chamber erred in convicting him under Article 6(1) for planning the commission of sexual slavery (Count 9), the conscription and use of children for military purposes (Count 12), and abductions and forced labour (Count 13).

[450] Kanu Appeal Brief, para. 7.1.
[452] Norman Child Recruitment Decision, paras 52-53.

The Trial Chamber held that Kanu "planned, organised and implemented the system to abduct and enslave civilians which was committed by AFRC troops in Bombali and Western Area." It further held that Kanu "had the direct intent to establish and implement the system of exploitation involving the three enslavement crimes, namely, sexual slavery, conscription and use of children under the age of 15 for military purposes, and abductions and forced labour."[453] The Trial Chamber was, therefore, satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that Kanu bore individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(1) for planning the commission of the above crimes in the Bombali District and the Western Area.[454]

299. Kanu argues that while the evidence shows that it fell upon him, as Chief of Staff, to manage the system of slavery within the AFRC faction, he could not be convicted on that basis for planning the crimes of sexual slavery, conscription and use of children for military purposes, and abductions and forced labour.[455] He further argues that at best, the evidence implicates him at the execution stage in the military training of children and the exploitation of women for sexual purposes.[456]

300. The Prosecution responds that Kanu's position of influence in the AFRC and his admission that he managed this system of slavery amply justify a reasonable inference that he was involved in planning the above crimes.[457]

2. Discussion

301. The Appeals Chamber concurs with the Trial Chamber's definition of planning under Article 6(1). The Trial Chamber stated that " 'planning' implies that one or several persons contemplate designing the commission of a crime at both the preparatory and execution phases."[458] Circumstantial evidence may provide proof of the existence of a plan, and an individual may incur responsibility for planning when his level of participation is substantial even though the crime may have actually been committed by another person.[459] According to the Trial Chamber, the actus reus for planning requires that "the accused, alone or together with others, designated [sic] the criminal

IX. GROUNDS OF APPEAL RELATING TO SENTENCE

A. Introduction

307. The Trial Chamber imposed a sentence of fifty (50) years imprisonment on Brima and Kanu respectively and forty-five (45) years imprisonment on Kamara.[469] The Trial Chamber found that there were a number of aggravating but no mitigating factors. The Appellants have appealed against the sentence, while the Prosecution has not done so except to request that if some of its Grounds succeed, the Appeals Chamber should consider revising the sentence to reflect any additional criminal liability. The Appellants' Grounds of Appeal are closely related, therefore, dealing with them separately would lead to unnecessary repetition. It is convenient to address the Appellants' submissions together except for those which raise a different issue in Kanu's Eighth Ground of Appeal.

B. Standard of Review on Appeals Relating to Sentence

308. Article 19 of the Statute limits the penalty that a Trial Chamber can impose upon a convicted person (other than a juvenile) to "imprisonment for a specified term of years." It further provides that the Trial Chamber shall, in determining the "terms of imprisonment," as appropriate, have recourse to the sentencing practices of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda ("ICTR") and the national courts of Sierra Leone. The Statute requires the Trial Chamber to take into account such factors as the gravity of the offence and the individual circumstances of the convicted person in imposing sentences.[470]

309. The determination of an appropriate sentence being at the discretion of the Trial Chamber, the Appeals Chamber will only revise a sentence where the Trial Chamber has committed a discernible error in exercising its discretion or has failed to follow the applicable law. To show that the Trial Chamber committed a discernible error in exercising its discretion:

> "the Appellant has to demonstrate that the Trial Chamber gave weight to extraneous or irrelevant considerations, failed to give weight or sufficient weight to relevant considerations, made a clear error as to the facts upon which it exercised its discretion, or that the Trial Chamber's decision was so unreasonable or plainly unjust that the Appeals

Chamber is able to infer that the Trial Chamber must have failed to exercise its discretion properly."[471]

C. Excessive Sentences: Ground Twelve of Brima's Appeal and Ground Ten of Kamara's Appeal

310. Brima alleges that the Trial Chamber erred by imposing a global sentence of fifty years, that it is "excessively harsh and disproportionate," and that it is inconsistent with the sentencing guidelines of the ICTY and the ICTR.[472] Kamara's Tenth Ground of Appeal argues that the Trial Chamber was required by Article 19(1) of the Statute to consider the sentencing practices in the ICTR and the national courts of Sierra Leone.[473] Kamara further argues that a sentence of 45 years is inconsistent with the penalties that have been imposed by the ICTR.[474]

311. Article 19(1) of the Statute provides that the "Trial Chamber, as appropriate, shall have recourse to the practice regarding prison sentences in the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the national courts of Sierra Leone." The phrase "where appropriate" shows that the Trial Chamber has a discretion in determining when to have recourse to sentencing practices in the two courts.

D. Mitigating Factors: Ground Nine of Kamara's Appeal and Grounds Eleven, Fifteen, Sixteen, Seventeen and Eighteen of Kanu's Appeal

312. The Appellants make two distinct submissions with regard to mitigating factors. First, that the Trial Chamber did not consider mitigating factors and second, that particular mitigating factors were not given adequate weight.[475]

313. Rule 101(B) of the Rules provides that the "Trial Chamber shall take into account the factors mentioned in Article 19(2) of the Statute, as well as such factors as: ...any mitigating circumstances including the substantial cooperation with the Prosecutor by the convicted person before or after conviction." Brima and Kanu argue that the Trial Chamber failed to consider mitigating factors.[476]

314. In the view of the Appeals Chamber an appellant challenging the weight given by a Trial Chamber to a particular mitigating circumstance has the duty of showing that the Trial Chamber abused its discretion.

315. The mere recital of mitigating factors, as the Appellants have done, without concrete arguments, does not suffice to discharge the burden of demonstrating that the Trial Chamber abused its discretion.[477]

E. Double-Counting, Gravity of the Offence and Aggravating Factors: Ground Twelve of Brima's Appeal

316. Brima submits that the Trial Chamber erred by considering the following factors in determining the gravity of the offence as well as aggravating factors:

> "The brutality and heinousness of the crimes such as the drugging of child soldiers, brutal gang rapes, lengthy periods of enslavement, the burning alive of civilians and amputations."

317. Although the issue of double-counting was only raised by Brima, it is in the interest of justice for the Appeals Chamber to consider the issue in relation to Kanu and Kamara as well. As the Trial Chamber notes in the Sentencing Judgment, "where a factor has already been taken into account in determining the gravity of the offence, it cannot be considered additionally as an aggravating factor . . . ."[478] This prohibition is well established in the case law of the international criminal tribunals.[479]

318. In Nikolić, the ICTY Appeals Chamber determined that the Trial Chamber had double-counted by repeating facts concerning the accused's general role in the offences.[480] However, the Appeals Chamber determined that there was no double-counting where the Trial Chamber considered the impact of the crimes on the victim in one section and the vulnerability of the victims in the other section.[481]

[476] Brima asserts that the Trial Chamber did not consider his lack of criminal convictions, good reputation in the Army and contribution to the peace process (Brima Appeal Brief, para. 184); Appellant Kanu asserts that the Trial Chamber did not take into consideration his relatively low position in the AFRC and that the length of time it took to conclude the proceedings caused him unbearable anxiety and mental anguish (Kanu Appeal Brief, para. 11.6, 11.9).

319. The Appeals Chamber notes that there were instances of double-counting in the Sentencing Judgment.[482]

320. Although the Trial Chamber made an error by double-counting, the Appeals Chamber does not consider that this error had a significant impact upon the Appellants' sentences.

F. Kanu's Eighth Ground of Appeal: Cumulative Convictions and Sentence

1. Submissions of the Parties

321. In his Eighth Ground of Appeal, Kanu submits that the Trial Chamber erred in law in imposing a global sentence of fifty years. He argues that the term of imprisonment shows that the cumulative convictions entered against him were not discounted for sentencing purposes[483] and that the sentence imposed on him reflects the number of convictions rather than the underlying criminal conduct.[484] Kanu further submits that a more appropriate penalty that reflects his criminal conduct and not the number of convictions should replace the sentence imposed on him. In response, the Prosecution contends that the Trial Chamber was under no obligation to discount the cumulative convictions entered against Kanu for sentencing purposes.[485]

2. Discussion

322. The Trial Chamber stated that the Special Court Statute permits it to impose a single sentence. It added that in exercising its discretion whether to impose a single sentence, "[t]he governing criteria is that the final or aggregate sentence should reflect the totality of the culpable conduct, or generally, that it should reflect the gravity of the offences and the overall culpability of the offender, so that it is both just and appropriate."[486] The Trial Chamber then explained that "[i]n

X. DISPOSITION

For the foregoing reasons, THE APPEALS CHAMBER

PURSUANT to Article 20 of the Statute and Rule 106 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence;

NOTING the written submissions of the Parties and their oral arguments presented at the hearings on 12, 13 and 14 November 2007;

SITTING in open session;

UNANIMOUSLY;

WITH RESPECT TO THE PROSECUTION'S GROUNDS OF APPEAL;

HOLDS in regard to Grounds One and Three, that as the Appellants have been convicted and sentenced to terms of imprisonment of fifty (50) years and forty-five (45) years for crimes committed under Article 6(1) or Article 6(3) of the Statute, in Bombali District and in the Western Area, it becomes an academic exercise and also pointless to adjudicate further on Grounds One and Three of the Prosecution's Appeal;

ALLOWS the Fourth Ground of Appeal relating to joint criminal enterprise but sees no need to make further factual findings or to remit the case to the Trial Chamber for that purpose, having regard to the interest of justice;

ALLOWS Ground Seven relating to forced marriage but declines to enter a further conviction on Count 8 of the Indictment;

ALLOWS Ground Nine relating to cumulative convictions, but declines to enter such convictions for responsibility found under Articles 6(1) and 6(3) of the Statute, having regard to the global sentences imposed which are adequate;

DISMISSES Grounds Two, Five, Six and Eight;

WITH RESPECT TO BRIMA'S GROUNDS OF APPEAL;

NOTES that Grounds Two, Three, Seven and Eight have been abandoned;

DISMISSES the rest of his Grounds, namely Grounds One, Four, Five, Six, Nine, Ten, Eleven and Twelve and AFFIRMS the sentence of fifty (50) years imprisonment imposed by the Trial Chamber;

WITH RESPECT TO KAMARA'S GROUNDS OF APPEAL;

DISMISSES all of Kamara's Grounds of Appeal;

REVISES the Trial Chamber's Disposition in respect of Counts 9, 12 and 13 by substituting Article 6(3) for Article 6(1) of the Statute and AFFIRMS the sentence of forty-five (45) years imprisonment imposed by the Trial Chamber;

WITH RESPECT TO KANU'S GROUNDS OF APPEAL;

DISMISSES all of Kanu's Grounds of Appeal and AFFIRMS the sentence of fifty (50) years imprisonment imposed by the Trial Chamber;

ORDERS that this Judgment be enforced immediately pursuant to Rule 102 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence.

Revised pursuant to Corrigendum issued by the Trial Chamber on 19 July 2007.

128. The Practice Direction requires the Special Court's Witnesses and Victims Section ("WVS") to provide records of payments to the Special Court's Finance Section, and vice versa.[192] In the present case, records of disbursements to Prosecution witnesses were disclosed to the Defence pursuant to Rule 68 of the Rules,[193] and disbursement forms concerning witnesses for both Parties have been admitted into evidence.[194] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that these payments have been made in a transparent way and in accordance with the applicable Practice Direction. Allegations to the contrary are therefore without merit.

129. Relocation to another country is a protective measure employed by WVS pursuant to its responsibility to provide appropriate protection for witnesses and victims who are at risk on account of the testimony given by them.[195] The mere fact that a witness has received protection in that form is not in itself reason to doubt his or her evidence.

130. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber has not given undue weight to these alleged 'incentives' when assessing the credibility of the witnesses in question.

(h) Putting the Defence Case to Prosecution Witnesses

131. The Prosecution submits that "the Trial Chamber should refuse to accept, or give less weight to, Defence evidence that presents a line of defence that has not been put to Prosecution witnesses - for example the evidence of the First Accused that he was maltreated in the presence of Lieutenant Colonel Petrie - in the interests of fairness to the witnesses and overall considerations of justice."[196]

132. In contrast to its ICTY and ICTR counterparts,[197] the Rules of the Special Court do not oblige a Party to put its case to a witness. However, before such a Rule was adopted at the ICTR, the ICTR Appeals Chamber held that > when weighing the [Defence's] allegation going to the credibility of the Prosecution witnesses, the Trial Chamber was entitled to take into account the fact that the [Defence] did not put such allegations to the witnesses for their reactions. Indeed, without the benefit of observing the Newton before arriving in Benguema in the Western Area in December 1998. Throughout the advance, the troops withstood frequent attacks by ECOMOG. Little evidence was adduced that the troops targeted civilians during this period, rather, they concentrated on purely military targets.

199. While the AFRC troops were advancing on Freetown, RUF troops in the east recaptured Koidu and planned an advance on Makeni in Bombali District. They reached Makeni in the final days of 1998.[341]

200. On one occasion during the advance, SAJ Musa and the AFRC troops heard the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) interview Sam Bockarie over the radio. Bockarie revealed the position of the AFRC fighting forces and explained that it was RUF troops who were approaching Freetown. Soon after, ECOMOG bombarded the area.[342] Musa immediately contacted Sam Bockarie, insulted him and told him that he had no right to claim that the troops approaching Freetown were RUF troops.[343]

201. On 23 December 1998, shortly after the arrival in Benguema, SAJ Musa was killed in an explosion during an attack on an ECOMOG weapons depot.

6. Attack on Freetown (January 1999)

202. Following the death of SAJ Musa, the troops reorganised. On 6 January 1999, they invaded Freetown. From Benguema, the troops passed through the villages of Waterloo, Hastings, Wellington and Kissy. During the advance, the civilian population was increasingly targeted. The AFRC troops were able to capture the seat of government at State House on the morning of the 6th of January.[344] That same day, Sam Bockarie announced over Radio France International (RFI) that the troops had taken Freetown and that "they" would continue to defend Freetown.[345]

203. One of the first acts of the invading troops upon reaching Freetown was to attack the city's central prison at Pademba Road and release all the prisoners. The release of the prisoners into the general population contributed to a general breakdown of order amongst the troops.[346] However, during the three days following the capture of State House, the AFRC fighting forces were able to control large areas of Freetown.

204. From State House, senior AFRC officers established radio contact with Sam Bockarie and asked for reinforcement. Bockarie instructed them to burn down Freetown if they could not hold the city.[347] Bockarie then announced over the BBC that if ECOMOG did not stop attacking troop positions the whole of Freetown would be burnt down.[348] In a second communication, Bockarie promised to send manpower, arms and ammunition, and arranged a location at which the AFRC troops should meet the RUF reinforcements. However, the support never arrived.[349]

205. The AFRC troops remained in Freetown for around three weeks, although they were not able to advance into the western part of the city. This period is often referred to as the "Freetown invasion".

7. Retreat from Freetown (January/February 1999)

206. Following heavy assaults from ECOMOG, the troops were forced to retreat from Freetown. This failure marked the end of the AFRC offensive as the troops were running out of ammunition.[350] While the AFRC managed a controlled retreat, engaging ECOMOG and Kamajor troops who were blocking their way, RUF reinforcements arrived in Waterloo. However, the RUF troops were either unwilling or unable to provide the necessary support to the AFRC troops.[351]

207. Most of the damage to Freetown, especially the damage to infrastructure and civilian housing, was inflicted by the retreating AFRC forces. The AFRC were also responsible for massive civilian casualties.[352]

8. Port Loko District (February 1999 – April 1999)

208. The AFRC forces withdrew, reorganised and established bases in the Western Area, including at in Newton and Benguema. They remained there until approximately early April 1999, when the AFRC divided. One group travelled to Makeni in Bombali District to support one of several RUF factions involved in internecine battle. A smaller group moved to Port Loko District and settled in the region of the Okra Hills near Rogberi. This group became known as the "West Side Boys" and frequently targeted and attacked the civilian population. Towns and villages

395. In addition to the concerns regarding the credibility of Prosecution witnesses discussed above, the Brima Defence submits that Prosecution witness Gibril Massaquoi "painted a false picture" of events "designed to blame others and exonerate himself."[768]

(a) Prosecution Witnesses

396. Prosecution witness TF1-334 testified that despite rumours among the troops that the Accused Brima had killed SAJ Musa, Brima became overall commander following Musa's death and began to organise the movement of the troops around the region.[769] On Christmas Day, Brima called his commanders and told them that a woman had had a dream that SAJ Musa was crying in his grave and urging the troops to continue on towards Freetown. He took the opportunity to remind the AFRC soldiers that he was now overall commander and promoted himself to the rank of Lieutenant General.[770] He then restructured the troops.[771] The witness estimated the troop strength to be about 1500 men.[772]

397. George Johnson testified that following the death of SAJ Musa, there was a short power struggle between the Accused Brima and the Accused Kamara, but this was quickly resolved in favour of the Accused Brima, who became overall commander of the troops.[773] The witness corroborated the evidence of witness TF1-334 that Brima restructured the troops. The witness was promoted from the rank of Major to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.[774]

398. According to witness TF1-334, on 5 January 1999 the Accused Brima gathered the troops in Allen Town and told them the time had come to attack Freetown.[775] At this meeting he further instructed his troops to capture State House, burn police stations, release the prisoners held at Pademba road prison and execute 'collaborators,' meaning anyone who did not support the troops. He further informed his troops that as he did not have the wherewithal to pay them, they were free to loot from the civilian population although he expected his troops to hand any 'government property', meaning diamonds or dollars, to the Brigade.[776]

399. George Johnson corroborated the evidence that the Accused Brima chaired a meeting prior to the attack on Freetown at which he announced the attack and instructed that certain crimes be committed.[777] While George Johnson testified that this meeting took place at Orugu village rather than Allen Town, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that both witnesses were referring to the same meeting as very little distance separates the two locations.

400. According to Witness TF1-334, State House, the seat of the government, was captured by AFRC troops on 6 January 1999 at 6 a.m and the three Accused arrived there approximately half an hour later.[778] The witness alleged that throughout the time that the AFRC headquarters were at State House, the Accused Brima committed and ordered the commission of crimes, and that his orders were implemented.[779]

401. George Johnson corroborated evidence that crimes were committed by the troops at State House and that the Accused Brima ordered the release of prisoners held at Pademba Road prison.[780] Johnson provided a great deal of detail about troop movements around the city during the invasion.[781] He also corroborated the evidence of the witness TF1-334 that the Accused Brima was the overall commander of the troops, and that as Commander he communicated on at least one occasion with Sam Bockarie[782] while he was at State House. The witness also detailed the commission of crimes by troops associated with the Accused.[783] While there were discrepancies between this witness's evidence and that of witness TF1-334 regarding the commission of these crimes, most were minor.

402. Witness TF1-153 also testified that the Accused Brima became overall commander of the troops at Benguema following the death of SAJ Musa.[784] The witness confirmed that Brima met with the troops at Orugu village before the final onslaught on Freetown and that he ordered the

718. Rape (Count 6) is an offence which is specified in Article 3(e) of the Statute as being an outrage upon personal dignity . As stated by the ICTR Trial Chamber in Akayesu, "[l]ike torture, rape is used for such purposes as intimidation, degradation, humiliation, discrimination, punishment, control or destruction of a person. Like torture, rape is a violation of personal dignity".[1403]

719. With reference to the elements of sexual slavery set out in the discussion of Count 8 above, the Trial Chamber is similarly satisfied that sexual slavery is an act of humiliation and degradation so serious as to be generally considered an outrage upon personal dignity. The Trial Chamber in Kvočka held that "perform[ing] subservient acts," and "endur[ing] the constant fear of being subjected to physical, mental or sexual violence" in camps were outrages upon personal dignity.[1404] Sexual slavery, which may encompasses rape and/or other types of sexual violence as well as enslavement, entails a similar humiliation and degradation of personal dignity.

720. "Any other form of Sexual Violence" in the context of crimes against humanity is a residual category of sexual crimes listed under Article 2(g) of the Statute, and may encompass an unlimited number of acts. The Trial Chamber agrees with the conclusion of the ICTY Trial Chamber in Kvočka that "sexual violence is broader than rape".[1405] The prohibition embraces all serious abuses of a sexual nature inflicted upon the physical and moral integrity of a person by means of coercion, threat of force or intimidation.[1406]

721. The Indictment fails to provide any particulars as to the specific form of sexual violence alleged. One of the fundamental rights guaranteed to an accused under Article 17(4)(a) of the Statute is the right to be informed "of the nature and cause of the charge against him". An Indictment is defective if it does not state the material facts underpinning the charges with enough detail to enable an accused to prepare his or her defence.[1407] In the present case, given the broad scope of the offence of 'any other form of sexual violence', it was essential for the Indictment to clearly identify the specific offence or offences which the Accused are required to answer. The Trial Chamber finds that the Indictment is defective in this respect because it fails to plead material facts with sufficient specificity. For this reasons, the charge of 'any other form of sexual violence' is dismissed and thus will not be considered additionally or alternatively under Count 9.

> The fact that any of the acts referred to in Articles 2 to 4 of the present Statute was committed by a subordinate does not relieve his or her superior of criminal responsibility if he or she knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the superior had failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof.

(a) Elements of Superior Responsibility

781. As is evident from its terms, Article 6(3) of the Statute requires a three-pronged test for criminal liability to attach:

1. The existence of a superior-subordinate relationship between the accused as superior and the perpetrator of the crime;

2. The accused knew or had reason to know that the crime was about to be or had been committed; and

3. The Accused failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the crime or punish the perpetrators thereof.[1510]

782. The principle that an individual may be held responsible as a superior in the course of an armed conflict is enshrined in customary international law.[1511] The scope of Article 6(3) does not only include military commanders, but also political leaders and other civilian superiors in possession of authority.[1512]

783. Under Article 6(3) of the Statute, a superior is held responsible for an omission, i.e., for the failure to perform an act required by international law.[1513] The culpable omission of a superior consists of his or her failure to prevent or punish crimes under the Statute committed by subordinates. Hence, a superior is responsible not for the principal crimes, but rather for what has been described as a 'dereliction' or 'neglect of duty' to prevent or punish the perpetrators of serious crimes.[1514] Responsibility of a superior is not limited to crimes committed by subordinates in person, but encompasses any modes of criminal liability proscribed in Article 6(1) of the Statute. It follows that a superior can be held responsible for failure to prevent or punish a crime which was planned, ordered, instigated or aided and abetted by subordinates.[1515]

(i) Existence of a Superior-Subordinate Relationship

784. The doctrine of command responsibility is "ultimately predicated upon the power of the superior to control the acts of his subordinates."[1516] It is immaterial whether the power of the superior over the subordinates is based on de jure or on de facto authority,[1517] as long as the superior possessed the material ability to prevent or punish the commission of the offence.[1518] This requirement has been widely referred to as the exercise of 'effective control'.[1519] It may be presumed that the existence of de jure authority prima facie results in effective control unless proof to the contrary is produced.[1520] Substantial influence over the conduct of others falls short of effective control.[1521]

785. Indications for effective control include the formality of the procedure used for appointment of a superior,[1522] the power of the superior to issue orders[1523] or take disciplinary action,[1524] the fact the Trial Chamber to reach any conclusion regarding his relationship with alleged subordinates based on that position alone. Membership of the Supreme Council and attendance at meetings per se, does not suffice to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Brima was in a superior-subordinate relationship with the perpetrators of the offences committed in Bo, Kenema and Kailahun Districts during the relevant Indictment period. As stated above in the Trial Chamber's discussion of the applicable law, the authority of members of a power-sharing collegiate body like the Supreme Council must be assessed on a case-by-case basis and requires an analysis of the functions of the particular Accused.[2876] The Trial Chamber finds that there is no evidence that within the Supreme Council the Accused Brima possessed any individual decision-making capability.

1658. The only evidence before the Trial Chamber relating to his actual functions as PLO 2 is that he was nominally in charge of several Government ministries.[2877] It is assumed that the Accused Brima would have had the power to give orders in relation to work carried out under his Ministries. However, there is no evidence regarding the type of issues that came within his portfolios or to whom he would have been entitled to issue orders, even apart from the question of whether such orders were issued and obeyed.

1659. The Prosecution submits that the Accused's position as "an Honourable" gave him authority over soldiers and officers of higher rank, on the basis that position precedes rank in the military. The Prosecution consequently submits that the Accused Brima was subordinate only to Johnny Paul Koroma, Foday Sankoh and Abu Sankoh. The Trial Chamber is thus invited to accept that the Accused was capable of exercising control over any other person in the AFRC. The Trial Chamber is not persuaded by this theory. Proof of superior responsibility requires conclusive evidence of the actual exercise of command and control over an identifiable group of subordinates. The Trial Chamber agrees that the Accused Brima enjoyed a privileged position on the Supreme Council as one of the original coup-plotters, as an 'Honourable' and as PLO 2. However, the Prosecution evidence adduced regarding his de jure position is insufficient to persuade the Trial Chamber to draw a conclusion, based on that position alone, that Brima had effective control over subordinate perpetrators of the crimes in the said districts, during the AFRC Government period.

1660. The evidentiary burden required to establish 'effective control' is high. For example in Kordić, the court failed to find 'control' despite the fact that the defendant, a civilian, wore a military uniform, held the title of 'colonel,' issued orders for military equipment and supplies, managed personnel, represented the Croatian forces in UN negotiations, exercised control over roads, roadblocks, and prisoners, participated in planning, was physically present during military operations, and provided "political authorization" for ethnic cleansing campaigns.[2878] The Trial Chamber will now examine the evidence adduced by the Prosecution regarding Brima's alleged superior responsibility in relation to the Districts of Bo, Kenema and Kailahun in which crimes were found to have been committed by AFRC/RUF troops during the Junta period.

i. Bo District (1 – 30 June 1997)

1661. The Prosecution evidence showed that administratively, Bo District fell within the responsibility of AFRC Secretary of State East Eddie Kanneh.[2879] Although superior responsibility is not precluded by the existence of other superiors in relation to the same subordinates, there is no evidence that the Accused Brima's responsibilities as PLO 2 overseeing Eddie Kanneh entailed command of AFRC/RUF forces stationed in Bo District.

ii. Kenema District (25 May 1997 – 19 February 1998)

1662. Evidence before the Trial Chamber shows that AFRC forces in Kenema District were under the command of Secretary of State East Eddie Kanneh, who reported directly to Johnny Paul Koroma.[2880] The Trial Chamber heard evidence that the Accused Brima was involved in mining activities in Kono District but that he did not have any executive powers in relation to these activities.[2881] The Trial Chamber notes that the three Accused have not been charged with enslavement in Kono District during the Junta period. The Accused Brima's involvement in Kono District is insufficient to prove that he possessed the material ability to prevent or punish the persons responsible for the use of civilians as forced labour in Kenema District during the Junta period.

iii. Kailahun District (27 May 1997 – 14 February 1998)

1663. It has not been established beyond reasonable doubt that AFRC troops were present in Kailahun during this period. Indeed, Prosecution witness TF1-334 testified that there were no AFRC troops in Kailahun during the Junta period.[2882] The area was controlled by Sam Bockarie of mark on Karina and that no one should be spared. It also alleges that the Accused Brima participated in the shooting on the attack on Karina.[2950] However, it does not specify the details of the attack on the mosque; that is the means and purpose of the attack or a description of the victims. In addition, the OTP Opening Statement does not specify the Accused Brima participation in the killing of civilians at a mosque in Karina. Instead, the Prosecution indicated that when the people of Karina village were assembled at the mosque at 5:00 o'clock for morning prayers, AFRC/RUF forces led by the three Accused descended on them with guns, machetes and axes. They lined them up and one after the other hacked them to death.[2951]

1708. The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution disclosure materials of a Witness Statement of TF1-334 dated 6 November 2003, does not mention the shooting of the Imam by the Accused Brima. However, it specifically states that Witness TF1-334 saw 'Gullit' going to a mosque in Karina and questioned the people as morning prayers were going on. Thereafter, the witness saw 'Gullit' remove his pistol and shoot the civilians dead.[2952] Therefore, the Trial Chamber finds that the above constitutes sufficient notice of the material particulars relating to Brima's participation in the Karina killings and that the defect in the Indictment with regard to this crime was cured by clear, timely and consistent notice to the Defence.

1709. In light of the foregoing considerations and the Trial Chamber's finding that the Accused Brima participated in a mass killing of at least 12 civilians at a mosque in Karina, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt the Accused's responsibility by committing on a large scale the massacre of civilians at a mosque in Karina. The Trial Chamber is further satisfied that the Accused Brima was aware that his participation in the killings on such a massive scale amounted to the crime of extermination.

b. Ordering

i. Order to terrorise and kill the civilian population at Karina

1710. Around June 1998, at Kamagbengbe and in the presence of Kamara and Kanu, the Accused Brima gave orders to the AFRC troops to attack Karina. Brima referred to Karina as a strategic location because it was the home town of President Ahmed Tejan Kabbah. The witness stated that [2952] Statement of Witness TF1-334, 6 November 2003, CMS p. 6557 [confidential].

Brima ordered the troops to burn down Karina, capture strong male civilians, and amputate civilians. Brima concluded that he wanted the attack on Karina to shock "the whole country" and the international community. The Trial Chamber has found that there were no ECOMOG or Kamajor troops in Karina at the time and that all the victims were civilians.[2953] Witness TF1-157 testified that after the attack on Karina, he heard rebels say that the town had been attacked because it was the home town of President Kabbah.[2954] Witness TF1-033 testified that he heard 'Gullit' order that civilian women should be stripped naked and raped during the attack on Karina, and the neighbouring town of Bornoya.[2955] The Trial Chamber found this evidence detailed, consistent and credible.

1711. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the Accused Brima ordered his subordinates to perpetrate crimes against the civilian population in Karina and its environs with the specific intent of instilling terror in the civilian population.

ii. Order to terrorise the civilian population around Rosos 1712. Witness TF1-334 testified that during the rainy season in 1998, the AFRC/Junta forces established a base at Rosos and remained there for approximately three months. While at Rosos, the witness heard Brima order the troops to occupy the surrounding villages and ensure that no civilians remained within 15 miles of the village.[2956] Brima ordered that any civilians be executed rather than brought back to the camp, and added that he would take disciplinary action against any soldier who brought a civilian to the camp. Brima named this action "Operation Clear the Area". Witness TF1-334 testified that villages surrounding Rosos were burnt down and looted following this order.[2957] Witness TF1-033 corroborated the evidence of Witness TF1-334 testifying that he heard Brima order his soldiers to kill any civilians in the area of Rosos.[2958] Witness TF1-267 also testified that rebels told her that civilians who did not leave a village near Rosos would be killed.[2959]

1713. The Indictment does not charge unlawful killings at Rosos and therefore will not make any findings on the killings perpetrated following Brima's order. However, the evidence shows that the Accused Brima, in issuing such orders to his subordinates specifically intended to terrorise the civilian population in the areas surrounding Rosos. The Trial Chamber concludes that Brima's generalised instruction created a climate of criminality which endured in the months following the order.

iii. Order for killings at Mateboi and Gbendembu

1714. Witness TF1-334 testified that after the Accused Brima banned civilians from the area surrounding 'Camp Rosos',[2960] an AFRC commander executed six civilians, four men and two women, with an AK-47 rifle in a village near Mateboi.[2961]

1715. Witness TF1-033 testified that in or around August 1998 at 'Colonel Eddie Town,' the Accused Brima ordered two AFRC commanders named Salifu Mansaray and 'Arthur' to attack Gbendembu because ECOMOG and "loyal" Sierra Leonean Army troops were present there.[2962] When the Operations Commander returned from the operation he reported to Brima that the troops had captured arms and ammunition and that 25 civilians had been killed. Brima commended his men for "a job well done."[2963]

1716. The Trial Chamber finds that as overall commander in Bombali District the Accused Brima had sufficient authority over his troops to order the commission of the crimes in the expectation that his orders would be implemented. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that the Accused Brima was aware of the substantial likelihood that crimes would be committed in the execution of the order given at 'Colonel Eddie Town.' The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Accused Brima ordered the murder of civilians in the villages of Mateboi and Gbendembu.

iv. Order at Rosos to recruitment children for military purposes

1717. Witness TF1-334 testified that during a three week training program at Rosos [2964] 77 civilian abductees, including children under the age of 15 years, underwent military training. He was able to provide this estimate because he conducted head counts during muster parades.[2965] Witness George Johnson also confirmed this training at Rosos but estimated that 520 civilians were trained at Rosos. The Trial Chamber observes that Witness TF1-334 referred to the number of civilians trained during one three week period, while George Johnson refers to the number of civilians trained overall at Rosos. Therefore the Trial Chamber does not consider the discrepancy in numbers to be significant. Witness TF1-334 testified that following the completion of the training period, the trainees were addressed by both the Accused Kanu and the Accused Brima. Brima then ordered that the male children be distributed to the various company commanders, while the girls and women were to be turned over to "their husbands" meaning the soldiers and commanders.[2966]

1718. Witness TF1-158, a former child soldier, testified that he was abducted by the AFRC forces and spent one week at Rosos. Upon arrival in Rosos, a commander named 'Staff Alhaji' gave the civilians guns and ordered them to search the town for food.[2967] 'Staff Alhaji' told witness TF1-158 and the other civilians that this order came from the Accused Brima.[2968] During the week at Rosos, the witness was given military training together with approximately 300 other civilians.[2969]

1719. The Trial Chamber has found these witnesses to be credible and is therefore satisfied that the Accused Brima ordered the abduction of children under the age of 15 years for military purposes.

c. Planning, Instigating and otherwise aiding and abetting

1720. The Prosecution has not adduced any evidence that the Accused Brima planned, instigated or otherwise aided and abetted any of the crimes committed under Counts 1-6, 10 and 14 in Bombali District. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved any of these modes of criminal responsibility against the Accused Brima for the crimes committed under Counts 1-6, 10 and 14 in Bombali District. In view of the continuing nature of the crimes charged under Counts 9, 12 and 13 and the fact that they span across several Districts, the Trial Chamber will discuss the Accused Brima's responsibility for these crimes below.[2970] was not stolen.[3002] The Trial Chamber is of the opinion that this prohibition does not demonstrate the Accused's intention to prevent general looting of civilian property by the troops.

1743. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the Accused Brima failed to take necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the crimes committed in Bombali District or punish the perpetrators thereof.

(iii) Conclusion

1744. On the basis of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Brima as a superior, bears individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(3) for the crimes committed by his subordinates in Bombali District between 1 May 1998 and 30 November 1998 in which he did not directly participate.

7. Freetown and Western Area

1745. The Trial Chamber found in relation to Freetown and the Western Area that AFRC troops committed unlawful killings of civilians[3003] and inflicted sexual[3004] and physical[3005] violence on civilians; that AFRC troops also abducted civilians and used them as forced labour;[3006] that AFRC troops illegally recruited and used children under the age of 15 years for military purposes in the attack on Freetown;[3007] and that AFRC troops engaged in looting,[3008] and committed collective punishments and acts of terror against the civilian population,[3009] as charged in the Indictment.

(a) Responsibility of the Accused Brima under Article 6(1) of the Statute

(i) Submissions

1746. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution asserts that the Accused Brima together with the Accused Kamara and Kanu planned and led the invasion of Freetown, and that the attack on Freetown was designed and organised by Brima. The Prosecution further asks the Trial Chamber to infer that the Accused, based on his position and participation in the commission of crimes in Freetown, intended the commission of the crimes pleaded in the Indictment in Freetown 1999, or not object to the leading of evidence of this incident. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the failure to give notice did not materially impair the ability of the Brima Defence to prepare its case.

1755. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds the Accused Brima criminally responsible for committing the murder of three civilian Nigerian men at State House as part of a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population.

ii. Killing of a soldier's wife at the State House Area

1756. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused Brima personally killed the wife of one of his soldiers outside State House in Freetown in early January 1999.[3022] Witness TF1-184 stated that he heard the husband of the victim assert that "[t]his Papay [the Accused Brima] had been after my woman for quite sometime."[3023]

1757. Yet again this incident is not pleaded in the Indictment, rendering the Indictment defective. The Trial Chamber must therefore determine whether this defect in the Indictment was cured by clear, timely and consistent notice to the Brima Defence. The Prosecution Supplemental Pre-Trial Brief and the Prosecution's Opening Statements do not refer to this incident. The only document that does refer to the incident is a prior statement of Prosecution witness TF1-334, dated 7 November 2003, which described the killing in the following terms:

> [...] I returned to State House. Surprisingly Gullit started firing soldiers who, according to him, were not members of the troop, who were not cooperating. Also, some Nigerian soldiers we have captured, Gullit fired them. Also, in my presence, he killed a certain lady we had brought from the jungle.[3024]

1758. As the date of disclosure was not provided to the Trial Chamber, it is unable to determine the timeliness of the notice to the Defence.

1759. Prosecution witness TF1-334 did not ultimately give evidence of this incident in his oral testimony, but Prosecution witness TF1-184 did. The Trial Chamber is unable to determine the passage of time between the initial disclosure of the Prosecution material and the testimony of witness TF1-184, and is therefore unable to determine the timeliness of the notice. However, the Brima Defence did not object. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the failure to give notice did not materially impair the ability of the Brima Defence to prepare its case.

1760. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the Accused Brima is criminally responsible for personally killing a soldier's wife at the State House area.

iii. Unlawful killings at Kissy Mental Home/Portee area

1761. The Trial Chamber heard unchallenged evidence that shortly after the AFRC forces invaded Freetown in early January 1999, on the way from Kissy Mental Home towards the Portee area, the Accused Brima personally shot dead a nun.[3025] Witness TF1-153 stated that he moved together with the AFRC troops to the Portee area by the Cotton Tree where they met nuns and that after 'Gullit' ordered the nuns to walk faster, he later took out his pistol and shot dead "a black nun".[3026]

1762. The Trial Chamber finds that once again, the Indictment does not plead the incident of the killing of a nun by the Accused Brima around the Portee area, which renders the Indictment defective. The Trial Chamber observes that the Prosecution Supplemental Pre-Trial Brief and its Opening Statement do not mention the killing of a nun in the Portee area. However, this defect was cured by the information provided in the pre-trial statement of witness TF1-153 dated 28 February 2003.

1763. Although the pre-trial statement of witness TF1-153 does not provide specific details on the killing of a nun by the Accused Brima, the information contained therein put the Defence on adequate notice.[3027] Further information was contained in the pre-trial statement of witness TF1-153 on the conduct of the Accused Brima upon the AFRC troops' retreat from Freetown, and the witness responded to the question put to him in relation to the killing of the black nun. In addition, the Defence cross examined the witness on this incident.[3028]

1764. Taking these statements together, the Trial Chamber finds that adequate notice was given to the Brima Defence of this incident. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds the Accused Brima individually criminally liable for committing the murder of a nun around the Kissy Mental Home/Portee area, as part of a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population.

> there. I saw Gullit cutting hands of one man with [a] cutlass. The boys were doing this too. I saw 6 persons whose hands were cut.[3032]

The Trial Chamber cannot determine whether this information was disclosed to the Defence before the start of trial. Therefore the Trial Chamber considers that the Defence was not given timely and consistent notice of critical material facts.

1769. The Trial Chamber notes however that the Defence cross examined the witness with respect to this incident,[3033] and therefore finds that the failure to provide adequate notice did not materially impair the ability of the Brima Defence to prepare its case. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds the Accused Brima individually criminally liable, pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute, for committing the amputation of one civilian at Shell Company, Old Road, as part of a widespread and systematic attack against the civilian population in January 1999.

b. Ordering/Instigating

i. Order to kill civilians in Fourah Bay area

1770. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused Brima ordered his soldiers to kill civilians in the Fourah Bay area in retaliation for the killing of an AFRC soldier.[3034] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima ordered the commission of these crimes in the awareness that the crimes were likely to be committed.

ii. Orders to terrorise and collectively punish the civilian population

1771. The Trial Chamber heard the following unchallenged evidence of witness TF1-184 who was with the AFRC troops during the Freetown invasion of January 1999. The witness testified that in the presence of the Accused Kanu, 'Gullit' ordered 'Major Mines' to collect cutlasses and to distribute them to the soldiers so that amputations could be carried out. 'Changabulanga' distributed the cutlasses to the soldiers. Describing the manner in which the amputations were carried out, the witness stated that "[c]ivilians were given either "long sleeves" meaning that the hand from the wrist downwards was removed, or "short sleeves" meaning that the entire arm from the bicep or elbow downwards was removed".[3035] The witness further stated that a new battalion under the command of 'Changabulanga' was created by 'Kande'. The aim of the battalion was to create fear order to compensate for those fighters killed by ECOMOG. Following the order, civilians who refused to join the AFRC forces were shot in the presence of the Accused Brima, and their dead bodies thrown out of the back of State House.[3043] In addition, witness TF1-334 also testified that Brima ordered the abduction of civilians from Freetown during the attack "so as to attract the attention of the international community".[3044] During the attack civilians were indeed abducted. Another witness testified that when the ARFC entered Freetown, they ordered the civilians to sing while they were burning their houses.[3045] The Trial Chamber found the above Prosecution evidence, which was unchallenged, credible.

1775. The Trial Chamber also heard evidence that soon after the troops lost State House the Accused Brima was informed by a soldier that one of the troops had been hacked to death by civilians at the Fourah Bay crossroad.[3046] In response, the Accused Brima called 'Major Mines', one of his subordinates, and instructed him to collect cutlasses at the SLRA[3047] compound. 'Major Mines' returned with cutlasses, some of which he kept for himself while the remainder he distributed to 'Changabulanga' who was the "battalion commander for amputations". The Accused Brima then ordered his men to go to Upgun roundabout where he told his fighters that "these people we should teach them a lesson." He ordered his men to amputate and kill civilians and burn the area down. The Trial Chamber has found that the order to commit these crimes was carried out.[3048] On the basis of this evidence the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima ordered the commission of crimes in full awareness that the crimes were likely to be committed. Witnesses TF1-334 and TF1-104 testified that the amputations and killings of civilians continued during the AFRC retreat from Freetown. When it became clear that Guinean troops had taken over, 'Gullit' saw that the civilian population was celebrating. In the presence of the Accused Kamara and Kanu, 'Gullit' stated that the people of Freetown were ungrateful and ordered the troops to go as far as they could burning and killing people. Attacks on civilians were then carried out by the troops around the area of the Kissy Mental Hospital, Blackhall Road and the Kissy Police Station up to PWD Junction near Shankardass.[3049] Witness TF1-334 testified that he personally saw six civilians whose arms were amputated by 'Changabulanga'. The arms of the civilians were chopped off at the elbow and 'Osman Sesay' told them to "go to Pa Tejan Kabbah to get new hands".[3050]

1776. Prosecution witness TF1-033 testified that after the AFRC lost the battle in Freetown he remained with the AFRC troops during their retreat for three weeks. During this time the eastern part of Freetown was occupied by AFRC fighters under the command of 'Gullit'. The witness saw and heard 'Gullit' ordering his men to commit atrocities against the civilian population as they were retreating. As a result of the order, girls and women were raped by the fighters.[3051] This evidence was not challenged. The Trial Chamber finds that through the above unchallenged evidence, the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Brima is individually criminally responsible for ordering his subordinates to commit those crimes, as part of a widespread attack on the civilian population during the January 1999 invasion of and retreat from Freetown.

iii. Orders to kill collaborators

1777. The Trial Chamber also heard evidence that during the January 1999 attack on Freetown, the police were specifically targeted and punished by the AFRC troops who saw them as "collaborators" of the Kabbah Government. Witness TF1-334 heard 'Gullit' giving orders to the AFRC troops in Freetown, specifying that "[p]olice stations should be targeted and burnt down" and "collaborators" killed.[3052] Witness TF1-157 confirmed the fact that the invading AFRC troops searched Freetown for police officers and killed them and "their people", meaning their families. The witness also saw the AFRC troops attack the Eastern Police Station.[3053]

iv. Order to loot UN Vehicles and civilian property

1778. The Trial Chamber heard the unchallenged evidence of witness TF1-334 that on 6 January 1999, the Accused Brima ordered the Operations Commander to loot vehicles at United Nations headquarters and to bring them back to State House and that the Operations Commander complied with the order.[3054] Another witness, Gibril Massaquoi, testified that soon after the January 1999 Freetown invasion, he saw the Accused Kanu and other commanders driving UN vehicles in Freetown.[3055] The Trial Chamber is satisfied on the basis of this evidence that the Accused Brima

Freetown.[3050] The Trial Chamber is satisfied on the basis of this evidence that the Accused Brima's that he ordered the commission of this crime in full awareness that the crime was likely to be committed and that the order was carried out. The Trial Chamber heard evidence that in Allen Town, on the eve of the invasion of Freetown in January 1999, the Accused Brima gathered his troops and instructed them to execute "collaborators" - a term witness TF1-334 explained was used to refer to any person who did not support the AFRC troops. Brima also informed his troops that as he did not have the means to pay them they were free to loot from the civilian population. Brima also instructed the troops to burn down all police stations.[3051]

v. Order to kill 14 captive Nigerian ECOMOG soldiers at State House

1779. The Trial Chamber has found that at State House on an unknown date during the Freetown attack, Brima ordered the execution of 14 to 16 captive and unarmed Nigerian ECOMOG soldiers.[3052] Although the Prosecution witnesses TFI-334 and TFI-033 gave varying accounts of why the Nigerians were killed, they were all consistent regarding the fact that the Accused Brima gave the order for the Nigerians to be killed.[3053] The Trial Chamber found that these ECOMOG soldiers, hors de combat, were subsequently killed.[3054] On the basis of this evidence the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima ordered the commission of crimes in full awareness that the crimes were likely to be committed.

vi. Order to kill eight nuns at Kissy Mental Home

1780. A number of Prosecution witnesses testified that on an unspecified day in early January 1999, AFRC troops captured two clerics and eight nuns at Kissy Mental Home. After ECOMOG began bombarding the troops there, the two abducted clerics escaped. 'Gullit' ordered his fighters to execute the eight nuns "so as to prevent them escaping and leaking information". Pursuant to this order, Foday Bah Marah a.k.a. 'Bulldoze' executed five nuns. [3055] The witness stated that following the execution of the nuns, the Accused explained to his troops that they were trapped and that it was time "for a complete bulldoze." The entire brigade then began to withdraw towards Wellington killing civilians and burning houses as they went.[3056] Witness George Johnson also testified that the troops had eight abducted nuns at Kissy mental home. However, he stated that when ECOMOG attacked the troops, Foday Bah Marah killed three nuns and the others escaped. The witness did not state whether this was pursuant to any order.[3057] Witness TF1-184 corroborated the evidence that three nuns were killed when the Nigerians attacked the mental home. He does not state who killed the nuns, but he testified that it was 'Gullit' who ordered their execution.[3058] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima gave the order to kill the nuns and that the killing was carried out. On the basis of this evidence the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima ordered the commission of crimes in full awareness that the crimes were likely to be committed.

vii. Order to massacre civilians in Rogbalan Mosque

1781. The Trial Chamber heard unchallenged evidence that at Kissy Mental Home while the AFRC were retreating from Freetown, the Accused Brima called several senior commanders together and informed them that he had received information that civilians were harbouring ECOMOG troops in a nearby mosque. He told his commanders not to assume that mosques were housing civilians and ordered that all those found in the Mosque be killed. On these instructions, the Accused Kanu set off with the soldiers. Once they reached the Mosque the Accused Kanu ordered the troops to begin firing. The witness observed that the mosque was full of civilians and that many people were killed.[3059] The evidence of this massacre was corroborated by the following evidence.

1782. Witnesses TF1-083 and TF1-021 both testified about a massacre at Rogbalan Mosque in Freetown in January 1999. Towards the end of January 1999,[3060] TF1-083 was told that there was an ongoing fire fight between ECOMOG troops and rebels. He therefore decided to seek refuge in Rogbalan Mosque. When he arrived he found approximately 70 dead bodies inside the mosque.[3061] TF1-021 testified that he was present in Rogbalan Mosque at midday on a Friday in January 1999 when men wearing "mixed clothing" (partly combat uniform and partly civilian clothing) and carrying guns and machetes attacked the mosque. The attackers first robbed the worshippers and then told them that they would all be killed for supporting President Kabbah. The attackers then began shooting. The witness estimated that 71 worshippers were killed in this attack. The witness stressed that the victims were civilian worshippers who had gathered for the traditional 14:00 prayers.[3062] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima gave the order to kill the civilians at Rogbalan Mosque and that the killing was carried out by his subordinates. On the basis of this evidence the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima ordered the commission of crimes in full awareness that the crimes were likely to be committed.

viii. Order to abduct and enslave civilians including child soldiers 1783. The Trial Chamber heard evidence that during the retreat of the AFRC fighters from Freetown, the Accused Brima ordered the abduction of civilians "in order to attract the attention of the international community". Civilians were then abducted by the renegade-SLA troops and used to carry loads. On Brima's orders, the young boys under the age of fifteen years were later trained as Small Boy Units.[3063] The Trial Chamber notes the evidence of Prosecution witness TF1-024 that the Accused Brima ordered the abduction of civilians because he lost so many troops and needed reinforcements from among the civilian population.[3064] On the basis of all the Prosecution evidence narrated above, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima ordered the commission of these crimes in full awareness that they were likely to be committed. The Trial Chamber finds, pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute, that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Brima ordered his subordinates to commit crimes against the civilian population in Freetown, in January 1999 as part of a widespread attack on the population.

c. Planning

1784. No evidence was adduced that the Accused Brima planned any crimes under Counts 3 through 6, 10 through 11 and 14 in Freetown and the Western Area. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved this mode of criminal responsibility against the Accused Brima, in relation to Freetown and the western Area.

d. Otherwise aiding and abetting

1785. As stated above with regards to liability for commission of crimes in Fourah Bay, the Trial Chamber has found that there is evidence that the Accused Brima participated in the attack on Fourah Bay in which civilians were killed and houses burnt. The Trial Chamber found that the Accused Brima was present during the commission of the crimes and either himself participated or failed to admonish the troops from committing the crimes.

1786. Given his authority as commander of the troops, the Trial Chamber finds Brima's presence at the scene gave moral support which had a substantial effect on the perpetration of the crime. In addition, given the systematic pattern of crimes committed by the AFRC troops throughout the District, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima was aware of the substantial likelihood that his presence would assist the commission of the crime by the perpetrators.

(b) Responsibility of the Accused Brima Under Article 6(3) of the Statute

(i) Submissions

1787. The Prosecution submits in its Final Brief that the Accused Brima has superior responsibility for all crimes committed by his subordinates in Freetown between 6 January 1999 until around 28 January 1999.[3065]

1788. The Brima Defence submits that the evidence of mutiny by junior soldiers at Colonel Eddie Town, which led to the arrest and 'long detention' of the three Accused, 'weakens any responsible chain of command and the existence of superior authority'.[3066] The Brima Defence further submits that there was no effective command or control over the fighters that attacked Freetown, citing in support of this argument the Prosecution Military Expert's conclusion that 'the AFRC faction had a strong command capability which failed on 6th January 1999'.[3067]

(ii) Findings

a. Existence of a superior-subordinate relationship

1789. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused Brima was overall commander of the troops in Freetown.[3068] The Trial Chamber will now consider the evidence pertaining to the Accused Brima's control of the troops from the time he regained command throughout the attack on Freetown until the retreat of the troops to Benguema in February 1999 in order to ascertain whether a superior-subordinate relationship existed.

decisions, and the command structure was effective enough to be able to conduct a relatively complex manoeuvre".

1805. The foregoing evidence establishes a superior-subordinate relationship existed between the Accused Brima and the AFRC troops in Freetown after the troops lost State House. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Accused Brima was in a superior-subordinate relationship with the AFRC troops that committed crimes in Freetown even after the "Headquarters" were dislodged from State House.

b. Actual or Imputed Knowledge

1806. The Prosecution submits that 'based on the fact that in most cases the orders to commit crimes were given to the subordinates directly by the Accused or at least in their presence, the Accused either knew or at the very least had reason to know that the subordinates were about to commit the offences or had done so.'[3107]

1807. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Brima ought reasonably to have known of the commission of crimes committed in which he was not directly involved. He directly participated in the commission of a number of crimes.[3108] The crimes were committed on a wide scale in physical proximity to the Accused Brima at State House.

1808. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that there can be no reasonable doubt that the Accused Brima was in possession of information to put him on notice that crimes were being committed by his subordinates, although he may not have been directly involved in such crimes.

c. Failure to prevent or punish 1809. There is no evidence that the Accused Brima took any measures to prevent the troops under his control in Freetown from committing crimes against or punish the perpetrators of such crimes.

(iii) Conclusion

1810. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Brima is liable as a superior under Article 6(3) for crimes committed in Freetown and the Western Area during the relevant Indictment period.

Rosos, abducted young women were forced to provide sexual services and to perform domestic tasks.[3124]

1824. The magnitude of commission of the three enslavement crimes by AFRC troops indicates their systemic nature. The Trial Chamber notes that the Brigade included a position in which an individual was appointed specific responsibility for abducted civilians.[3125] Although the Trial Chamber is unable to make a finding on the total number of civilians abducted and forced to undergo military training, the example provided by Colonel Iron that one battalion at 'Colonel Eddie Town' consisted of approximately 150 trained soldiers supplemented by approximately 200 abducted civilians[3126] corroborates the evidence of fact-based witnesses that these crimes were committed on a large scale.[3127]

1825. Indeed, it would appear that once established the modus operandi of enslavement became so deeply entrenched that it was difficult to break. Col. Iron's conclusion about the abduction of civilians during the withdrawal from Freetown is instructive.

> There can be little military justification for what happened" during the retreat from Freetown [...] The abductions seem particularly self-defeating: at a time when there was benefit in reducing the size of the force to make it faster moving during the escape, the abductees swelled the size of the column, slowed it down, and made it a bigger target. One reason given for the abductions was to make the fighting strength seem larger than it was; but I suspect that the truth is more simply that abductions were now common practice for the AFRC." [3128] [emphasis added]

1826. Based on the large scale, continuous and organised nature of the enslavement crimes, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the only reasonable inference is that a substantial degree of planning and preparation were required to commit the crimes.

1827. On the basis of the evidence below, the Trial Chamber is further satisfied that the Accused Brima, alone or with others, designed the commission of the three crimes (enslavement, sexual slavery and recruitment and use of child soldiers) and that although these crimes were largely committed by his subordinates, his contribution was substantial.

1828. The Accused played a substantial role in the system of exploitation and cruelty. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused Brima was the overall commander of both the AFRC troops that moved from Mansofinia, Koinadugu District to Camp Rosos, Bombali District and of the 1832. As was the pattern with all operations overseen by the Accused Brima, AFRC fighters exhibited a depraved indifference towards human life in abducting and enslaving civilians. Children watched their abductors executing family members.[3142] Throughout the conflict women and young girls were treated as war bounty, abducted from their homes and repeatedly raped.[3143] Child soldiers were terrorised, drugged and forced to commit crimes against other civilians.[3144] Given his authority, the Accused was in a position to shut down this system of exploitation entirely, to deter the excesses committed by his troops, and to alleviate the plight of the victims. On the evidence adduced the Trial Chamber finds that he failed to do so.

1833. The Trial Chamber stresses that the above evidence relates entirely to enslavement crimes committed in Bombali and the Western Area. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused Brima was not involved in the commission of crimes in Bo, Kenema, Kailahun, Kono, Koinadugu and Port Loko Districts.

1834. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused planned, ordered, organised and implemented the system to abduct and enslave civilians which was in fact committed by AFRC troops in Bombali and Western Area. It is further satisfied that the Accused had the direct intent to set up and implement the system of exploitation involving the three enslavement crimes, namely, sexual slavery, conscription and use of children under the age of 15 for military purposes, and abductions and forced labour.

(a) Responsibility under Article 6(1) for Count 9 (Outrages on Personal Dignity)

1835. On the basis of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Brima is individually criminally responsible under Article 6(1) of the Statute for planning the commission of the crime of outrages on personal dignity in Bombali District and Freetown and the Western Area.

(b) Responsibility under Article 6(1) for Count 12 (Child Soldiers)

1836. On the basis of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Brima is individually criminally responsible under Article 6(1) of the Statute for planning the commission of conscription of children under the age of 15 into the armed group or using them to participate actively in hostilities in Bombali District and the Western Area.

(c) Responsibility under Article 6(1) for Count 13 (Enslavement)

1837. On the basis of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Brima is individually criminally responsible under Article 6(1) of the Statute for enslavement in Bombali District and the Western Area.

(d) Responsibility under Article 6(3) for Counts 9, 12 and 13

1838. As the Trial Chamber has already found the Accused Brima criminally responsible for the planning of the enslavement crimes, it is not necessary to examine his responsibility under Article 6(3).

C. The Accused Kamara

1. Allegations in the Indictment

1839. The Indictment alleges:

> At all times relevant to this Indictment, Brima Bazzy Kamara was a senior member of the AFRC/ Junta and RUF forces.
>
> Brima Bazzy Kamara was a member of the group which staged the coup and ousted the government of President Kabbah. Johnny Paul Koroma, Chairman and leader of the AFRC, appointed Brima Bazzy Kamara a Public [sic] Liaison Officer (PLO) within the AFRC. In addition, Brima Bazzy Kamara was a member of the Junta governing body.
>
> Between about mid February 1998 and about 30 April 1998, Brima Bazzy Kamara was a commander of AFRC/RUF forces based in Kono District. In addition, Brima Bazzy Kamara was a commander of AFRC/RUF forces which conducted armed operations throughout the north, eastern and central areas of the Republic of Sierra Leone, including, but not limited to, attacks on civilians in Koinadugu and Bombali Districts between about mid February 1998 and 31 December 1998. Brima Bazzy Kamara was a commander of AFRC/RUF forces which attacked Freetown on 6 January 1999.
>
> In [his] positions referred to above, [...] Brima Bazzy Kamara [...], individually or in concert with [the Accused Brima and the Accused Kanu], Johnny Paul Koroma aka JPK, Foday Saybana Sankoh, Sam Bockerie aka Mosquito aka Maskita, Issa Hassan Sesay aka Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon aka Belai Karim, Augustine Gbao aka Augustine Bao and/or other superiors in the AFRC, Junta and AFRC/RUF forces, exercised authority, command and control over all subordinate members of the AFRC, Junta and AFRC/RUF forces.
> [...] Brima Bazzy Kamara [...], by [his] acts or omissions, [is] individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1. of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Indictment, which crimes [he] planned, instigated, ordered, committed or in whose planning, preparation or execution [he] otherwise aided and abetted, or which crimes were within a joint criminal enterprise in which [he] participated or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of the joint criminal enterprise in which [he] participated.

indicating that the civilians in Tombodu were celebrating. Witness George Johnson testified that the Accused Kamara passed through Tombodu after the commission of the crimes and himself observed the bodies of the civilians killed.

c. Failure to prevent or punish

1890. The Prosecution submits that 'as the key commander in the field, the Second Accused clearly had the material ability to prevent offences or to punish those subordinates responsible for committing crimes.'[3224]

1891. The Trial Chamber finds on the basis of the evidence examined above that the Accused Kamara had the ability to issue orders which were followed; that he took over authority for promoting SLA soldiers after Johnny Paul Koroma left Kono District; and that generally, that the SLAs maintained an effective day-to-day chain of command and regularly mustered, that therefore, as examined above, it was within the Accused's material ability to prevent crimes committed by his subordinates or to punish subordinates for committing crimes.

1892. The Trial Chamber finds further on the evidence the Accused Kamara did not attempt to prevent or punish the crimes committed by 'Savage' and his battalion in Tombodu.

d. Conclusion

1893. The Trial Chamber finds that the Accused Kamara was in a position of superior responsibility and criminally responsible under article 6(3) of the Statute, for crimes committed by his subordinates in Kono District; namely, unlawful killings and physical violence, committed with the primary purpose to spread terror and to collectively punish civilians for allegedly failing to provide sufficient support to the AFRC/RUF.

4. Kailahun District

1894. The Trial Chamber has found that an unknown number of civilians were unlawfully killed by RUF forces in or around February 1998, as charged under Counts 3 through 5[3225] and that RUF troops or troops not established beyond a reasonable doubt to be members of the AFRC abducted [3224] Prosecution Final Brief, para. 1287.

[3225] Factual Findings, Unlawful Killings, para. 864, supra.

persons to do so. Finally, it argues that those witnesses who did allege such participation - in particular TF1-334 and George Johnson - failed to corroborate each others' testimonies.[3245]

(ii) Findings

a. Committing

1914. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved this mode of individual criminal responsibility against the Accused Kamara for the crimes committed in the Bombali District.

b. Ordering

1915. The Trial Chamber finds that the Accused Kamara ordered the unlawful killing of five young girls in Karina. Kamara ordered that the girls be locked in a house and that the house then be set on fire. This order was obeyed by AFRC troops.[3246]

1916. The Trial Chamber finds that as the deputy commander in Bombali District the Accused Kamara had sufficient authority over the troops to instruct the commission of the crimes. On all the evidence adduced, the Trial Chamber finds that the Accused Kamara was aware of the substantial likelihood that the burning to death of the five young girls in Karina would be carried out.

c. Planning

1917. The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Accused Brima ordered the attack on Karina in an address to the troops at Kamagbengbe.[3247] In the course of this address, the Accused Brima stated that he wanted to divide the troop and make attacks on both Karina and Kamabai, but that the other commanders suggested to him that keeping the troop together would result in less casualties. The Accused Brima agreed to this.[3248] The Trial Chamber notes that this incident was a strategic discussion between commanders which could constitute planning of the attack on Karina and the crimes committed therein. However, witness TF1-334 does not name the commanders involved in this discussion. The Trial Chamber is not prepared to infer merely by virtue of the Accused Kamara's position as deputy commander that he was one of them.

therefore look at the available evidence to determine whether the Accused Kamara, as deputy commander, was able to exercise effective control over the AFRC troops in Bombali District.

1924. There is evidence that the Accused Kamara played a role at a senior level in military operations in Bombali District. Witness TF1-334 testified that the Accused Kamara was Deputy Brigade Commander[3254] and, at Karina, "[...] the commanders have been monitoring each and every soldier"[3255] The Accused Kamara was one of the senior AFRC commanders who was present at the meeting with SAJ Musa at Kurubonla at which the restructuring of the troops was discussed; however, no evidence was adduced as to his contribution.[3256] Within the structure which was subsequently established by the Accused Brima, the Operations Commander and the Provost-Marshal were required to report to the Accused Kamara. At Rosos, the Accused Kamara was based at 'headquarters', from where operations were planned and orders issued. Whilst there is no direct evidence on the Accused Kamara's precise involvement[3257] Witness TF1-334 testified that the Accused Kamara was one of the commanders who made decisions regarding the brigade;

> Q. Witness, I'm going to ask you to clarify. My question to you was what did you subsequently see the deputy chief in command do as second in command? Just focus on him specifically, please.
> A. He, the chief in command, the chief of staff and the senior military supervisors were responsible for taking decisions in the brigade.
> Q. How do you know that?
> A. I myself was present whenever they want to take a decision in my presence. I was there whenever they were deciding on anything before they can send it out.[3258]

1925. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused Kamara issued an order to the troops in Karina which was obeyed.[3259] The Trial Chamber is satisfied on the evidence that the Accused Kamara participated in decision making. On the evidence the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Kamara exercised effective control over the AFRC troops and was aware that the troops under his control committed crimes in Bombali District.

1926. The Trial Chamber finds on the foregoing evidence that there was a formal command structure in the AFRC faction in Bombali District, that the Accused Kamara, in his capacity as Deputy Brigade Commander had and exercised effective control over the troops under his command.

1927. Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds on the evidence adduced that a superior-subordinate relationship existed between the Accused Kamara and the AFRC troops in Bombali District and that the Accused Kamara had actual or imputed knowledge of the crimes committed and failed to prevent or punish the perpetrators.

1928. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the Prosecution established beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Kamara is liable as a superior under Article 6(3) for crimes committed in Bombali District.

7. Freetown and the Western Area

1929. The Trial Chamber had found that AFRC troops engaged in unlawful killings of civilians as charged under Counts 3 through 5[3260] and inflicted sexual and physical violence on civilians as charged under Counts 6 through 9 and 10 respectively.[3261] AFRC troops also abducted civilians and used them as forced labour and used children illegally recruited for military purposes in the attack on Freetown, as charged under Counts 13 and 12 respectively.[3262] Finally, AFRC troops engaged in widespread looting, as charged under Count 14, terrorised the civilian population, as charged under Count 1, and committed collective punishments, as charged under Count 2.[3263]

(a) Responsibility of the Accused Kamara Under Article 6(1) of the Statute

(i) Submissions

1930. In its Final Brief, the Prosecution submits that the Accused Kamara was present when the attack on Freetown was planned and that it can be inferred from his position as second in command that he was therefore actively involved in the planning phase. It further contends that Kamara was often present when the Accused Brima issued unlawful orders.[3264]

1931. The Prosecution further asserts that 'Captain Blood' carried out Kamara's order to execute civilians, ordered the burning of houses during the retreat towards Waterloo and was present when the Accused Brima ordered other burnings in Freetown and the Western Area.[3265] that the Prosecution has not proved these modes of individual criminal responsibility against the Accused Kamara for the crimes committed in the Western Area.

1938. In view of the continuing nature of these crimes charged under Counts 9, 12 and 13 and the fact that they span across various districts the Trial Chamber will discuss the Accused Kamara's criminal responsibility for Counts 9, 12 and 13 below.[3271]

c. Otherwise aiding and abetting

1939. As stated above with regards to liability for commission of crimes in Fourah Bay, the Trial Chamber has found that there is evidence that the Accused Kamara "partook" in the attack on Fourah Bay in which civilians were killed and houses. While the precise meaning of "partook" is unclear, the Trial Chamber has found that Kamara was present during the commission of the crimes and either himself participated or failed to admonish the troops from committing the crimes.

1940. Given his authority as deputy commander of the troops, the Trial Chamber finds Kamara's presence at the scene gave moral support which had a substantial effect on the perpetration of the crime. In addition, given the systematic pattern of crimes committed by the AFRC troops throughout the District, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Kamara was aware of the substantial likelihood that his presence would assist the commission of the crime by the perpetrators.

i. "Operation Cut Hand" in Freetown

1941. The Accused Kamara led an mission to loot machetes from the World Food Program warehouse. He later explained to Tina Musa, the late SAJ Musa's wife, that they had been used that day in "Operation Cut Hand," meaning that his troops had used the machetes to amputate civilians.[3272] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused, in providing weapons to the troops, with knowledge of how these weapons were to be used, the Accused Kamara gave practical assistance which had a substantial effect on the perpetration of unlawful killings and physical violence in Freetown. It further finds that the Accused Kamara was aware of the substantial likelihood that the use of the machetes would assist in the commission of these crimes. The Trial Chamber therefore finds the Accused Kamara liable for aiding and abetting physical violence.

1946. Given the limited resources of the AFRC, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that this evidence proves that the Accused Kamara exercised a degree of authority over the AFRC faction.

1947. The Accused Kamara was present at the State House when the Accused Brima announced to the battalion commanders and others, that they were likely to lose "the ground totally" and that the burning of Freetown should start.[3280] After the loss of State House, the Accused Kamara gave an order to AFRC troops to burn houses.[3281]

1948. The Trial Chamber finds the evidence adduced indicates the continual presence of the Accused Kamara during the invasion of Freetown up until State House was lost. He was often in the company of other senior commanders, including the Accused Brima and the Accused Kanu, and gave a number of orders himself, he participated in decision making and did not distance himself from decisions made. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused's had both a de jure position of authority during this period, and the de facto ability to effectively control the AFRC troops under his command in Freetown.

b. Knowledge and failure to prevent or punish 1949. The Accused Kamara had actual or imputed knowledge of the crimes committed and failed to prevent or punish the perpetrators.

c. Conclusion

1950. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Kamara is liable as a superior under Article 6(3) for crimes committed in Freetown.

8. Port Loko District

1951. The Trial Chamber has found that AFRC/RUF troops unlawfully killed a number of civilians in Port Loko District as charged under Counts 3 through 5.[3282] In addition, AFRC troops held persons in sexual slavery as charged under Count 9.[3283] AFRC/RUF troops used abducted civilians for forced labour, as charged under Count 13.

Trial Chamber notes that witness Gibril Massaquoi testified that Bazzy sent a message to Gullit regarding the attack on Port Loko.[3301] Neither witnesses George Johnson nor TF1-334 mention this.

b. Actual or Imputed Knowledge

1966. Prosecution Witness George Johnson testified that en route to Port Loko, he sent an advance troop to secure a village ahead. Upon arrival there, he observed a number of dead civilians and 'Sheriff' complained to him that 'Cyborg' had amputated and killed civilians in the villages.[3302] The Trial Chamber has found that this village was Manaarma.

1967. George Johnson further testified that on his return to camp after the successful operation to Port Loko, he reported to the Accused Kamara, informing him of the conduct of 'Cyborg'. The Trial Chamber is accordingly satisfied that the Accused Kamara had actual knowledge of the commission of crimes in Manaarma by his subordinates.

c. Failure to prevent or punish

1968. George Johnson stated that the Accused Kamara did not take any disciplinary action in response to his report regarding the killings in Manaarma. Rather, the Accused Kamara radioed Sam Bockarie in Kailahun and recommended that the witness be promoted to Colonel, and Bockarie subsequently endorsed this promotion. George Johnson testified that the Accused Kamara did not take any action.[3303] Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Kamara failed to punish his subordinates for committing unlawful killings in Port Loko District.

d. Conclusion

1969. The Trial Chamber finds that it has been established beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Kamara is liable as a superior under Article 6(3) for crimes committed in Manaarma in Port Loko District.

captured who were conscripted into the AFRC force.[3306] While the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Operations Commander was under the effective control of the Accused Kamara after the departure of Johnny Paul Koroma from Kono District. The evidence adduced does not establish beyond reasonable doubt whether these crimes were committed prior to the departure of Johnny Paul Koroma or subsequently when the Accused Kamara had effective command over the AFRC commanders who were among the perpetrators.

1975. The Trial Chamber has found that Witnesses DAB-098, TF1-072 and TF1-216, along with an unknown number of other civilians, were captured in approximately March 1998 in Kono District and enslaved in Tombodu. The Trial Chamber is satisfied, from the testimony of these witnesses, that the perpetrators of these crimes were led by AFRC commanders 'Savage' and 'Staff Alhaji', who were under the effective control of the Accused Kamara.

1976. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds the Accused Kamara liable as a superior under Article 6(3) for the crime of enslavement in Kono District.

(ii) Port Loko District

1977. The Trial Chamber has made no findings on Counts 12 and 13. The Trial Chamber notes the evidence of witnesses TF1-282 and TF1-085 who were subjected to sexual slavery in Port Loko District.[3307] However, the evidence adduced does not establish beyond reasonable doubt that the perpetrators of these crimes were troops under the command of the Accused Kamara.

2041. The Trial Chamber is also satisfied on the evidence beyond reasonable doubt that in his role as leader of the attacks, the Accused Kanu knew or should have known of the crimes committed by his troops and that it was within his ability to have prevented such crimes or to have punished his subordinates for committing them, but that he failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to do so.

2042. The Kanu Defence submits that the Accused Kanu's responsibilities with respect to civilians was 'protective'.[3388] The Trial Chamber rejects this submission. The factual findings demonstrate that the Accused Kanu presided over a system that institutionalised serious abuse of civilians. The characterisation of the Accused Kanu's function as 'protective' is incorrect and unacceptable.

2043. The Trial Chamber thus finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Kanu knew or ought to have known of the commission of crimes by his subordinates in Bombali District and failed to prevent or punish the perpetrators thereof.

c. Conclusion

2044. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Kanu is liable as a superior under Article 6(3) for crimes committed in Bombali District.

7. Freetown and the Western Area

2045. The Trial Chamber had found that AFRC troops engaged in unlawful killings of civilians as charged under Counts 3 through 5[3389] and inflicted sexual and physical violence on civilians as charged under Counts 6 through 9 and 10 respectively.[3390] AFRC troops also abducted civilians and used them as forced labour and used children illegally recruited for military purposes in the attack on Freetown, as charged under Counts 13 and 12 respectively.[3391] Finally, AFRC troops engaged in widespread looting, as charged under Count 14, terrorised the civilian population, as charged under Count 1, and committed collective punishments, as charged under Count 2.[3392]

2048. The Trial Chamber has found that AFRC troops killed an unknown number of civilians at Fourah Bay in retaliation for the alleged murder of a soldier during the 1999 attack on Freetown.[3401] While witness TF1-334 testified that the Accused Kanu "partook" in the attack, the witness does not further clarify the manner of his participation.[3402]

2049. The Trial Chamber has found that this evidence does not establish that the Accused Kanu personally killed any civilians.[3403]

ii. Kissy Road: "Demonstration" of an amputation to the troops

2050. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused Kanu amputated a civilian near Kissy Old Road during the 6 January 1999 invasion in order to "demonstrate" to his troops how best to carry out amputations.[3404] He explained that there were two types of amputation possible, one called a long sleeve, meaning an amputation of the arms, and the other a short sleeve, meaning an amputation of the arm up to the bicep.[3405] The Indictment does not provide any of the particulars of the incident and is therefore defective in this regard.

2052. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds the Accused Kanu individually criminally responsible for committing an act of physical violence.

iii. Upgun: "Demonstration" of an amputation on a civilian

2053. The Trial Chamber has found that subsequently the Accused Kanu demonstrated how to perform amputations on two other civilians at Upgun during the retreat from Freetown in January 1999.[3406] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that this is a separate incident to the act of physical violence described above. The Indictment does not provide any of the particulars of the incident and is therefore defective in this regard.

2054. The Trial Chamber must determine whether this defect in the Indictment was cured by clear, timely and consistent notice to the Brima Defence. The Prosecution Supplemental Pre-Trial Brief and the Prosecution's Opening Statements do not refer to this incident. The Trial Chamber observes that the relevant information did not come into the Prosecution's possession until March or April 2005, and that on 22 April 2005 it disclosed a statement to the defence in which the witness said that

> Whilst we were at Upgun, 55 came with a commander, Major Mines and Captain Kabila and some people were amputated. 55 demonstrated by amputating two people. From then on the amputations started.[3407]

2055. Thus, the Defence was not put on notice of this allegation until over one month after the trial commenced. The Trial Chamber does not consider that this constitutes timely notice. Nevertheless, the Kanu Defence did not object to the evidence when led and in fact cross-examined the witness on this specific incident during trial. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the failure to give timely notice did not materially impair the ability of the Kanu Defence to prepare its case.

2056. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds the Accused Kanu individually criminally responsible for committing an act of physical violence.

iv. State House: Looting of vehicles

2057. Witness Gibril Massaquoi testified that vehicles were looted by AFRC troops in Freetown and that the Accused Kanu arrived at State House with a stolen vehicle during the 6 January 1999 Freetown invasion.[3408] The Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt on this evidence that the Accused Kanu personally looted at least one vehicle in Freetown. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds the Accused Kanu individually criminally responsible for committing an act of pillage.

i. Order at State House to kill captive Nigerian ECOMOG soldiers 2058. The Trial Chamber found that the Accused Brima ordered the execution of fourteen to sixteen captive ECOMOG soldiers at State House, and that the Accused Kanu then took the soldiers outside, killed one ECOMOG soldier himself, and ordered his soldiers to execute the remaining captives. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the executions were carried out[3409] and that the Accused Kanu ordered the commission of this crime in full awareness that the crime was likely to be committed.

ii. Order to kill civilians at a mosque in Kissy 2059. The Trial Chamber found that the Accused Kanu reissued an order given by the Accused Brima on the day after the troops withdrew from Kissy Mental Home that an unknown number of civilians at a mosque were to be killed. The Accused Kanu is not relieved of criminal responsibility for ordering this massacre simply because he was reissuing an order originally made by his commander, the Accused Brima. The Trial Chamber has found that the executions were carried out.[3410] The Trial Chamber is further satisfied that the Accused Kanu ordered the commission of this crime in full awareness that the crime was likely to be committed.

iii. Order to commit amputations in Eastern Freetown

2060. The Trial Chamber has found that when AFRC troops arrived at Kissy Mental Home, during the retreat from Freetown, the Accused Kanu ordered his fighters to go to Eastern Freetown and amputate 200 civilians and then send them to Ferry Junction. The witness George Johnson was present when the order was given, and saw the troops leave towards Eastern Freetown and return with severed arms and blood covered machetes.[3411] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the amputations were carried out and that the Accused Kanu ordered the commission of this crime in full awareness that the crime was likely to be committed.

2061. The Trial Chamber has found that when the troops reached Upgun during the retreat from Freetown, the Accused Kanu told his commanders, including Col. Mines and Kabila, that it was time for amputations to begin, and that he would begin by demonstrating. Later two civilians were captured and the Accused amputated their arms. The Accused explained that he had begun the amputations as an example to his troops of how to proceed. He then told the victims that they should go to President Kabbah to ask for new hands. Later that day, ten other civilians were captured and amputated by Kabila and Mines in Kanu's presence. Mines repeated Kanu's instruction to the victims to seek new hands from President Kabbah.[3412] The Trial Chamber recalls its finding that the Accused is liable for committing two amputations at Upgun. It additionally finds that he ordered the commission of further amputations which were then carried out. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Kanu ordered the commission of this crime in full awareness that the amputations were likely to be committed. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has proved this particular mode of individual criminal responsibility beyond reasonable doubt.

c. Planning

2062. The Prosecution has not adduced any evidence that the Accused Kanu planned any crimes under Counts 3 through 6, 10 through 11 and 14 in Freetown and the Western Area. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved this mode of individual criminal responsibility against the Accused Kanu for any crimes committed under those Counts. The Accused Kanu's criminal responsibility for Counts 9, 12 and 13, which involve crimes of a continuing nature spanning various districts, will be discussed below.[3413]

d. Instigating

2063. The Trial Chamber recalls that on the eve of the 6 January 1999 invasion of Freetown, the Accused Brima chaired a meeting at which the Accused Kanu reminded the AFRC troops present about orders to burn down police stations and kill "targeted persons"/collaborators.[3414] The Trial Chamber has found that a number of civilians were subsequently killed in Freetown. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Kanu prompted the perpetrators to kill civilians in Freetown. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the Prosecution has proved this mode of liability against the Accused Kanu.

e. Otherwise aiding and abetting

2064. The Prosecution has not adduced any evidence that the Accused Kanu aided and abetted any crimes in Freetown and the Western Area. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not [3413] Responsibility of the Accused, Kanu, para. 2095, infra.

2079. There is no evidence that the Accused Kanu took any measures to prevent the troops under his control in Freetown from committing crimes against or punish the perpetrators of such crimes.

d. Conclusion

2080. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has established beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Kanu is liable as a superior under Article 6(3) for crimes committed in the Western Area.

8. Port Loko District

2081. The Trial Chamber has found that AFRC/RUF troops unlawfully killed a number of civilians in Port Loko District as charged under Counts 4 through 5.[3430] In addition, AFRC troops held persons in sexual slavery as charged under Count 9.[3431] AFRC/RUF troops used abducted civilians for forced labour, as charged under Count 13.

(a) Responsibility of the Accused Kanu Under Article 6(1) of the Statute

(i) Submissions

2082. In its Final Trial Brief, the Prosecution argues only that the Accused in Kanu is liable for the crimes committed in Port Loko District as a principal in a joint criminal enterprise.[3432]

2083. The Kanu Defence makes no specific submissions regarding the alleged liability of the Accused for crimes committed in Port Loko District in its Final Brief.

(ii) Findings

2084. The Prosecution has not adduced any that the Accused Kanu individually committed, ordered, planned, instigated, or otherwise aided and abetted any of the crimes that occurred in Port Loko District. The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has not proved any of these modes of individual criminal responsibility against the Accused Kanu for the crimes committed in Port Loko District.

Chamber will consider the evidence in order to determine whether the Accused Kanu substantially contributed to the planning of these crimes.

2091. The Trial Chamber has found that the Accused Kanu was Chief of Staff and commander in charge of abducted civilians in Bombali District and the Western Area.[3435] As the AFRC troops depended heavily on these civilians for a multitude of tasks, the Accused Kanu's position was a critical one.

2095. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Accused Kanu planned, organised and implemented the system to abduct and enslave civilians which was committed by AFRC troops in Bombali and Western Area. It is further satisfied that the Accused Kanu had the direct intent to establish and implement the system of exploitation involving the three enslavement crimes, namely, sexual slavery, conscription and use of children under the age of 15 for military purposes, and abductions and forced labour.

(a) Responsibility under Article 6(1) for Count 9 (Sexual Slavery)

2096. On the basis of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Kanu is individually criminally responsible under Article 6(1) of the Statute for planning the commission of the crime of sexual slavery in Bombali District and the Western Area.

(b) Responsibility under Article 6(1) for Count 12 (Child Soldiers)

2097. On the basis of the foregoing, the Trial Chamber is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the Accused Kanu is individually criminally responsible under Article 6(1) of the Statute for planning the commission of conscription of children under the age of 15 into the armed group or using them to participate actively in hostilities in Bombali District and the Western Area.

(c) Responsibility under Article 6(1) for Count 13 (Enslavement)

Leonean practice can only be considered as a guide but is not binding on the Trial Chamber.[57] It further refers to the Serushago Trial Chamber's assessment of mitigating circumstances in that case,[58] and cites a number of cases before the ICTY and ICTR in which high ranking officials convicted on numerous counts were given lighter sentences than those proposed by the Prosecutor in the instant case.[59]

30. The Kamara Defence notes that the Kamara was convicted of having ordered the killing of five girls in Karina, Bombali District, and submits that the average sentencing period at the ICTR for the offences of murder and extermination has been between ten and fifteen years.[60] It further argues that Sierra Leonean practice on sentencing for murder is not binding on the Trial Chamber.[61]

31. The Kanu Defence proposes that the Trial Chamber should take into consideration the sentencing practice of the ICTY, as it is a basis for ICTR practice, and may provide the Trial Chamber with additional guidance.[62] The Prosecution would appear to agree as it provided a chart on ICTY sentencing practice in Annex B of its Sentencing Brief. The Kanu Defence contends that in Sierra Leone, a sentence of life imprisonment can be imposed for a range of crimes including "rape, burglary and gilding coinage"[63] while the ICTR has only imposed life sentences on individuals convicted of the crime of genocide.[64] In oral arguments, the Kanu Defence further submitted that Sierra Leonean sentencing practice is only relevant for convictions under Article 5 of the Statute which deals with crimes under Sierra Leonean law, which crimes were not charged in the indictment.[65]

B. Deliberations

(a) Sentencing Practice in Sierra Leone

32. Article 19(1) states that as appropriate, the Trial Chamber shall have recourse to the practice regarding prison sentences in the national courts of Sierra Leone as and when appropriate. This does not oblige the Trial Chamber to conform to that practice, but rather to take into account that practice as and when appropriate.[66] The Trial Chamber finds that it is not appropriate to adopt the practice in the present case since none of the Accused was indicted for, nor convicted of, offences under Article 5 of the Statute.

(b) Sentencing Practice at other International Tribunals

33. Article 19(1) of the Statute provides that the Trial Chamber shall, where appropriate, have recourse to the practice regarding prison sentences in the ICTR in determining the terms of imprisonment. The Trial Chamber will also consider the sentencing practice of the ICTY as its statutory provisions are analogous to those of the Special Court and the ICTR. The Trial Chamber is therefore guided by the sentencing practices at both the ICTR and the ICTY. The Chamber further notes that the pronouncement of global sentences is a well established practice at those tribunals.[67] The mitigating and aggravating factors that the Trial Chamber has considered in the instant case have also been widely considered by the ICTR and ICTY.[68]

V. DETERMINATION OF SENTENCES

34. Brima, Kamara and Kanu have been found responsible for some of the most heinous, brutal and atrocious crimes ever recorded in human history. Innocent civilians – babies, children, men and women of all ages – were murdered by being shot, hacked to death, burned alive, beaten to death. Women and young girls were gang raped to death. Some had their genitals mutilated by the insertion of foreign objects. Sons were forced to rape mothers, brothers were forced to rape sisters. Pregnant women were killed by having their stomachs slit open and the foetus removed merely to settle a bet amongst the troops as to the gender of the foetus. Men were disembowelled and their intestines stretched across a road to form a barrier. Human heads were placed on sticks on either side of the road to mark such barriers. Hacking off the limbs of innocent civilians was commonplace. The victims were babies, young children and men and women of all ages. Some had one arm amputated, others lost both arms. For those victims who survived an amputation, life was instantly and forever changed into one of dependence. Most were turned into beggars unable to earn any other living and even today cannot perform even the simplest of tasks without the help of others. Children were forcibly taken away from their families, often drugged and used as child soldiers who were trained to kill and commit other brutal crimes against the civilian population. Those child soldiers who survived the war were robbed of a childhood and most of them lost the chance of an education.

35. The Trial Chamber cannot recall any other conflict in the history of warfare in which innocent civilians were subjected to such savage and inhumane treatment.

36. It is against this background that Brima, Kamara and Kanu are sentenced for the crimes of which each of them have been convicted.

A. Alex Tamba Brima

1. Gravity of the Offences

(a) Submissions of the Parties

37. The Prosecution submits that Brima was convicted of crimes which involved a very large number of victims.[69]

38. In relation to the role and participation of Brima in the crimes of which he was convicted, the Prosecution submits that he was "not an unwilling participant" but rather "a primary initiator and aggravator of the violence".[70] Most of the crimes were deliberate, unprovoked, brutal and committed against unarmed civilians including men, women and children, the intention of which was to kill, mutilate, abduct or enslave or otherwise terrorise or collectively punish the civilian population and to shock the international community.[71]

39. The Brima Defence concurs that the crimes for which he was convicted were serious, yet submits that the Trial Chamber must consider the context of guerrilla warfare in determining the extent and gravity of the offences, as well as the difficulty in ascertaining the precise number of victims.[72]

(b) Deliberations

40. The Trial Chamber considers that the crimes for which Brima was convicted were heinous, deliberate, brutal and targeted very large numbers of unarmed civilians and had a catastrophic an irreversible impact on the lives of the victims and their families.

41. Brima was convicted under Article 6(1) and under Article 6(3). Specifically, the Trial Chamber found Brima responsible under Article 6(1) for:

1. committing extermination in Karina, Bombali District;
2. committing the murder of five civilians at State House, Freetown, Western Area;
3. committing the mutilation of one civilian in Freetown, Western Area;
4. ordering the terrorisation of the civilian population in:
    a. Karina, Bombali District;
    b. Rosos, Bombali District; and
    c. Freetown, Western Area;
5. ordering the collective punishment of the civilian population in Freetown, Western Area;
6. ordering and planning the recruitment and use of child soldiers in:
    a. Freetown, Western Area; and
    b. Rosos, Bombali District;
7. ordering the murders of civilians at:
    a. Mateboi, Bombali District;
    b. Gbendembu, Bombali District;
    c. State House, Freetown, Western Area;
    d. Kissy Mental Home, Freetown, Western Area; and
    e. Rogbalan Mosque, Freetown, Western Area;
8. ordering and aiding and abetting the murders of civilians in Fourah Bay, Freetown, Western Area;
9. ordering and planning the enslavement of civilians in Freetown, Western Area;
10. ordering the looting of civilian property; Freetown, Western Area;

[72] Brima Defence Sentencing Brief, para. 12.

11. planning the commission of outrages upon personal dignity in the form of sexual slavery in Bombali District and the Western Area;
12. planning the enslavement of civilians in Bombali District.

42. Brima was further found liable under Article 6(3) for crimes committed by his subordinates throughout Bombali District and Freetown and the Western Area.

43. With regards to the crimes for which Brima is responsible under Article 6(1), the Trial Chamber recalls its factual findings that Brima was the primary perpetrator of the murders of at least 12 civilians in a mosque during the attack on Karina,[73] a fact indicative of the particular gravity of this offence.

44. With regards to the recruitment and use of child soldiers, the Trial Chamber recalls that the young victims were abducted from their families, often in situations of extreme violence, often drugged and forcibly trained to kill and to commit crimes against innocent civilians. These children were robbed of their childhood and many lost the chance of an education.

45. With regards to the crimes for which Brima is responsible under Article 6(3) the Trial Chamber has examined the gravity of the crimes committed by subordinates under his effective control. Many of these crimes, detailed in the Trial Chamber's Factual Findings are of a particularly heinous nature. The Trial Chamber recalls in particular that in Karina, Brima's subordinates unlawfully killed children by throwing them into the flames of burning houses.[74] In Rosos, five of Brima's subordinates beat and orally and vaginally gang-raped a civilian[75] and another four raped a civilian so brutally that she was in great pain, could not stand up and testified that "it seem[ed] as though all my guts were coming out".[76] With regards to the sexual crimes in general, the Trial Chamber notes that many of the victims were particularly young and vulnerable, were held in captivity for protracted periods, often coupled with unwanted pregnancy/miscarriages and endured social stigma.

46. The Trial Chamber considers the crime of mutilation was particularly grotesque and malicious. Victims who had their limbs hacked off not only endured extreme pain and suffering, if they survived, but lost their mobility and capacity to earn a living or even to undertake simple daily tasks. They have been rendered dependent on others for the rest of their lives.

B. Ibrahim Bazzy Kamara

1. Gravity of the Offences

(a) Submissions of Parties

68. The Prosecution submits that on account of the Trial Chamber's broad findings of Kamara's liability under Article 6(3), the crimes for which he was convicted involved a very large number of victims, particularly in crimes sites such as Tombodu in Kono District.[98]

69. The Kamara Defence submits that Kamara's convictions under Article 6(1) of the Statute were based on one incident of ordering the killings of five girls in Bombali District and two incidents of aiding and abetting the commission of various crimes in Freetown and the Western Area and, while not denying the seriousness of the crimes for which Kamara has been convicted, submits this should be a relevant factor in determining the gravity of the offences.[99]

(b) Deliberations

70. The Trial Chamber found Kamara responsible under Article 6(1) for:

1. ordering the murder of five civilians in Karina, Bombali District;
2. planning the abduction and use of child soldiers in Bombali District and the Western Area;
3. planning the commission of outrages upon personal dignity in the form of sexual slavery in Bombali District and the Western Area;
4. planning the enslavement of civilians in Bombali and Western Area;
5. aiding and abetting the murder/extermination of civilians at Fourah Bay, Freetown, Western Area;
6. aiding and abetting the mutilation of civilians in Freetown, Western Area.

71. Kamara was further found liable under Article 6(3) for crimes committed by his subordinates at Tombodu, Kono District and throughout Bombali District, the Western Area and Port Loko District.

72. The crimes for which Kamara was convicted were heinous, deliberate, brutal and targeted very large number of unarmed civilians and had a catastrophic and irreversible impact on the lives of the victims and their families.

[98] Prosecution Sentencing Brief, paras 110-113.
[99] Kamara Sentencing Brief, paras 16-19, 22.

1. the vulnerability of many of the civilian victims, especially young children and pregnant women;[108]

2. the heinous nature of the crimes, including the burning alive of civilians in Karina and Tombodu;[109] and

3. the fact that Kamara was a senior government official prior to the commission of the crimes, and a senior commander at the time of the commission of the crimes.[110] In the Prosecution's view, the failure of Kamara to fulfil his duty to prevent or punish "shows a total disregard for the sanctity for human life and dignity".[111]

83. The Kamara Defence contends that Kamara was a "quiet, calm, non-violent and often passive and unrecognised "participant" in the crimes rather than an active and direct participant like Brima.[112] The Kamara Defence accordingly submits that Brima and Kamara should not be viewed as equally liable for the purposes of sentencing.[113]

84. The Kamara Defence submits that Kamara's position as a senior government official prior to the commission of the crimes cannot be used as an aggravating circumstance.[114] The Kamara Defence further argues that, although the offences for which Kamara has been convicted are serious, "they occurred in situations in which [he] lacked clear sufficient command and control".[115]

(b) Deliberations

85. The Trial Chamber agrees that all of the factors submitted by the Prosecution are aggravating factors. Moreover, the Trial Chamber has given consideration to the vulnerability of some of the victims of the crimes for which Kamara was convicted with regards to the gravity of the offence and will not consider this factor additionally as an aggravating circumstance.

86. The Trial Chamber also finds that the killing of civilians deliberately locked in their homes and set ablaze, as was ordered by Kamara and carried out by his subordinates, is a violent and cruel circumstance of the offence amounting to an aggravating factor. Further, this particular incident shows that Kamara was a violent and active participant in the crimes, contrary to the Defence assertions.

87. The Trial Chamber further finds that the prolonged period of time over which the enslavement crimes were committed, the vulnerability of the victims and the targeting of places of worship or sanctuary are all aggravating factors.

88. The Trial Chamber does not consider Kamara's position in the AFRC government prior to the commission of the offences to be an aggravating factor. However, the Trial Chamber considers his position of command authority in relation to the crimes for which he has been found liable under Article 6(1) of the Statute to be an aggravating factor.

4. Mitigating Circumstances

(a) Submissions of Parties

89. The Prosecution submits that no mitigating circumstances exist in respect of Kamara, as he did not at any time cooperate with the Prosecution or express any remorse and there is no evidence that he acted under duress.[116]

90. The Kamara Defence submits that mitigating factors in the case of Kamara include the absence of a prior criminal record; the stressful environment prevailing at the time of the offences; and his responsibilities as an income earner for his large family.[117]

(b) Deliberations

91. The Trial Chamber finds that there are no mitigating circumstances in Kamara's case. In particular, although Kamara chose to address the Trial Chamber at the sentencing hearing, he failed to express any genuine remorse whatsoever for his crimes.[118]

C. Santigie Borbor Kanu

1. Gravity of the Offences

(a) Submissions of Parties

92. The Prosecution submits that the Accused Kanu was criminally responsible under Article 6(1) for crimes involving a number of victims and that the extent of his liability under Article 6(3) is particularly significant as he was found to be responsible for all crimes committed in Bombali and the Western Area.[119]

93. The Kanu Defence submits that the RUF was responsible for the bulk of human rights violations in Sierra Leone and this "historical broader picture [...] should be reflected in the sentencing".[120]

(b) Deliberations

94. The Trial Chamber found Kanu responsible under Article 6(1) for:

i. committing the mutilation of civilians in:
   a. Kissy, Freetown; and
   b. Upgun, Freetown;
ii. committing the looting of civilian property in Freetown;
iii. ordering the murder of persons hors de combat at State House in Freetown;
iv. ordering the murder of civilians at Rogbalan Mosque in Freetown;

vi. planning the abduction and use of child soldiers in Bombali District and the Western Area;
vii. planning the commission of outrages upon personal dignity in the form of sexual slavery in Bombali District and the Western Area;

Many of these crimes, detailed in the Trial Chamber's Factual Findings are of a particularly heinous nature. The Trial Chamber recalls in particular that in Karina, Kanu's subordinates unlawfully killed children by throwing them into the flames of burning houses.[121] In Rosos, five of Kanu's subordinates beat and orally and vaginally gang-raped a civilian[122] and another four raped a civilian so brutally that she was in great pain, could not stand up and testified that "it seem[ed] as though all my guts were coming out"[123] With regards to the sexual crimes in general, the Trial Chamber notes that many of the victims were particularly young and vulnerable, were held in captivity for protracted periods often coupled with unwanted pregnancy/miscarriages and endured social stigma.

97. The Trial Chamber considers the crime of mutilation was particularly grotesque and malicious. Victims who had their limbs hacked off not only endured extreme pain and suffering if they survived, but lost their mobility and capacity to earn a living or even to undertake simple daily tasks.

98. The Trial Chamber dismisses the Defence arguments that the RUF was responsible for the bulk of human rights violations in Sierra Leone and finds that this allegation cannot be a mitigating factor.

99. The Trial Chamber found that Kanu was a direct participant in unlawful killings, mutilations, the recruitment and use of the child soldiers, outrages on personal dignity, and enslavement.

TRIAL CHAMBER II ("Trial Chamber") of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court"), composed of Judge Teresa Doherty, presiding, Judge Richard Lussick and Judge Julia Sebutinde;

SEISED of the Brima-Kamara Application For Leave to Appeal from Decision on the Extremely Urgent Confidential Joint Motion for Re-Appointment of Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel for Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara and Decision on Cross Motion by the Deputy Principal Defender to Trial Chamber II for Clarification of its Oral Order of 12 May 2005, filed 14 July 2005 ("the Motion");

CONSIDERING the Response, filed on 22 July 2005 by the Principal Defender ("the Second Respondent's Response");

CONSIDERING the Response, filed by the Registrar on 22 July 2005 ("the First Respondent's Response");

CONSIDERING the Defence's consolidated Reply to both Responses's ("the Reply");

BEING MINDFUL of the "Decision on the Extremely Urgent Confidential Joint Motion for Re-Appointment of Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel for Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara and Decision on Cross Motion by Deputy Principal Defender to Trial Chamber II for Clarification of its Oral Order of 12 May 2005", dated 9 June 2005 ("the impugned Decision");

BEING MINDFUL FURTHER of the "Dissenting Opinion of the Hon. Justice Julia Sebutinde from the Majority Decision on the Extremely Urgent Confidential Joint Motion for Re-Appointment of Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel for Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara, and Decision on Cross Motion by the Deputy Principal Defender to Trial Chamber II for Clarification of its Oral Order of 12 May 2005", dated 11 July 2005 ("the dissenting Opinion");

NOTING that Rule 73(B) of the Rules provides that > Decisions rendered on such motions are without interlocutory appeal. However, in exceptional circumstances and to avoid irreparable prejudice to a party, the Trial Chamber may give leave to appeal. Such leave should be sought within 3 days of the decision and shall not operate as stay of proceedings unless the Trial Chamber so orders.

NOTING therefore the general rule that decisions are without interlocutory appeal, and that only if the conjunctive conditions of exceptional circumstances and irreparable prejudice to the accused in Rule 73(B) are satisfied, a Trial Chamber may grant leave to interlocutory appeal;

CONSIDERING FURTHER that the Appeals Chamber has recently ruled that

> "In this Court, the procedural assumption is that trials will continue to their conclusion without delay or diversion caused by interlocutory appeals on procedural matters, and that any errors which affect the final judgment will be corrected in due course by this Chamber on appeal".[1]

NOTING therefore that the rationale behind the restrictive nature of Rule 73(B) is that the proceedings before the Special Court should not be heavily encumbered and consequently unduly delayed by interlocutory appeals;[2]

[1] The Prosecutor v. Norman et al., Case No. SCSL-2004-14-AR73, Decision on Amendment of the Consolidated Indictment, 16 May 2005, para. 43.

NOTING AND APPLYING therefore the restrictive application of Rule 73(B) as established by Trial Chamber I stating that > [Rule 73(B)] involves a high threshold that must be met before this Chamber can exercise its discretion to grant leave to appeal. The two limbs of the test are clearly conjunctive, not disjunctive: in other words, they must both be satisfied;[3]

CONSIDERING HOWEVER that in the present case the very nature of the application satisfies the conjunctive test of "exceptional circumstances" and "irreparable prejudice" by Rule 73 (B) since it concerns a fundamental right enshrined in Article 17(4) of the Statute;

FOR THE FORGOING REASONS

TRIAL CHAMBER ALLOWS THE APPLICATION and grants the Defence leave to file an interlocutory appeal against the impugned Decision.

Justice Lussick will give a Separate and Concurring Opinion and Justice Doherty appends a personal comment to this Decision.

COMMENT OF JUSTICE DOHERTY

Having read the Dissenting Opinion of the Hon. Justice Sebutinde from the Majority Decision on the Extremely Urgent Confidential Joint Motion for the Re-Appointment of Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel for Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara, and Decision on Cross-Motion by the Deputy Principal Defender to Trial Chamber II for Clarification of its Oral Order of 12 May 2005 [hereinafter "Dissenting Opinion"] I consider some facts stated are incorrect or misleading. I was not given a copy of the Dissenting Decision prior to publication. I consider Rule 29 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence does not permit any Judge to publish or discuss matters that have been discussed in Chambers however since several matters have been brought into the public arena by the publication of both the Dissenting Opinion and the interoffice memorandum I consider I am entitled to put the following before the Appeal Chamber:

1. At paragraph 29 of the Dissenting Opinion Her Honour states that "Before Ms. Carlton-Hanciles had an opportunity to disclose the contents of a document the Presiding Judge interjected..." thereby implying that this was a sole decision of the Presiding Judge. This implication is erroneous. The document, a copy letter from the accused persons, was given to each of the judges immediately before court was to open on 16 May 2005. We discussed that document, its implications on the ruling of 12 May and the attitude we should adopt. Hon. Justice Sebutinde took a very active part in that discussion and was one of the majority who decided the document should not be read. My notes show three issues were identified by the judges and those three issues are incorporated into the extempore ruling.

2. At paragraph 29 there is a reference to a copy of Ms. Elizabeth Nahamya minute of 17 May 2005 being copied to the Judges. That memorandum was not received by the Judges of Trial Chamber II until the Registrar's annotated copy was given on 18 May 2005 and we had no opportunity to discuss same prior to meeting the Registrar.

3. On 18 May 2005 the Registrar came to Trial Chamber II Chambers at the invitation of the Judges to discuss a matter entirely unrelated to the issues therein. At the end of our discussions he raised the issue of Ms. Nahamya's minute. There was an active discussion and Hon. Justice Sebutinde was there throughout that discussion. The matters recorded in my minute are an ad verbatim record of statements made. Justice Sebutinde did not speak on the matter, neither did she dispute nor resile from the discussions. The Registrar asked for written confirmation the same day as he was leaving for New York.

4. It is correct that I telephoned each of the Judges and read out the draft to each of my judicial colleagues. It was only then that Justice Sebutinde stated she had reservations. I asked her to let me have her views as the Registrar needed a response that day. I waited, sent, then retrieved the minute pending Justice Sebutinde's input. When none was received I again sent the minute prior to Registrar's departure. I dispute the detail Justice Sebutinde gives in paragraph 2 of interoffice memorandum. The detailed memorandum referred to paragraph 30 of the Dissenting Opinion was not received until 19 May 2005 and it was not sent solely to me as Presiding Judge but also disseminated to others. It is correct that, as stated at paragraph 31 that I did not distinguish Justice Sebutinde's views. I did not have those views.

5. I stress that the decision of 16 May 2005 and discussion of 18 May 2005 involved all three judges of the Trial Chamber. We had no knowledge of the pending motion filed on 24 May 2005 and cannot be said to have contributed to controversy as implied in paragraph 41.

6. It is correct I gave Justice Sebutinde a copy of the minute to the Registrar when she asked me for it. I did so stating twice it was a chambers matter subject to Rule 29 and could not be published.

I- Introduction:

I respectfully dissent from the Majority Ruling of my learned colleagues, Hon. Justice Teresa Doherty and Hon. Justice Richard Lussick on the Extremely Urgent Confidential Joint Motion for the Reappointment of Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel for Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara pursuant to Articles 17(4)(c) and 17(4)(d) of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone and Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence and the Inherent Jurisdiction of the Court (herein referred to as "the present Motion") and the Principal Defender's Cross-Motion Filed Pursuant to Articles 17(4)(c) and 17(4)(d) of the Statute of the Special Court and Rules 45 and 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence and Inherent Jurisdiction of the Court for Clarification on the Decision on the Confidential Joint Defence Application For Withdrawal by Counsel for Brima and Kamara and on the Request for Further Representation by Counsel for Kanu (herein referred to as "the Cross-Motion").

Firstly, I am not persuaded that the present Motion by the Accused persons Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara is either frivolous or vexatious or some kind of a sinister conspiracy between the Accused persons, their former Counsel Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris and the Deputy Principal Defender "to go behind" the Trial Chamber's earlier Decision on the Confidential Joint Defence Application for Withdrawal by Counsel for Brima and Kamara and on the Request for Further Representation by Counsel for Kanu (herein referred to as "the earlier Decision"). I find absolutely no grounds or justification for drawing such an inference or conclusion. Nor do I understand the present Motion to be asking the Trial Chamber indirectly or underhandedly, "to review its said earlier Decision". In my opinion the present Motion filed solely by the Accused persons Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara pursuant to Article 17 (4) (c) and (d) of the Statute of the Special Court is fundamentally concerned with the statutory rights of Accused persons to be tried without delay and to choose their Counsel and is clearly distinct and different from an earlier application filed solely by their former Defence Counsel seeking leave to withdraw from the AFRC trial pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence (herein referred to as "the Rules"). In my opinion, the interests of justice and a fair trial would best be served if the Trial Chamber perceived, treated and determined the two applications as separate and distinct from each other and if the Trial Chamber examined and determined the present Motion upon its merits rather than treating it with suspicion and summarily dismissing it as frivolous and vexatious or as a backdoor attempt by the Applicants to undermine a court Order.

In my opinion the pursuit of the statutory rights of Accused persons should never be described or treated as "frivolous" or "vexatious". The reasons for my dissent are articulated in the ensuing paragraphs. Before examining the merits of the present Motion and Cross-Motion I wish to highlight a number of statements in the Majority Decision with which I fundamentally disagree. I propose to indicate the statements as they appear in the various paragraphs of the Majority Decision and to briefly indicate alongside each statement the reasons for disagreement. These comments form an integral part of the ensuing dissenting opinion and are without prejudice to the detailed reasoning contained therein. The preliminary comments will be followed by an in-depth consideration of the merits of the Motion and Cross-Motion.

II-Preliminary comments on Majority Decision:

1. I disagree with the statements in paragraph 25 of the Majority Decision in relation to the Defence prayer that the Motion and all subsequent responses and replies thereto be made public and heard in open court, that "Counsel have made an application for further relief in a Reply" and that "there has been no submission to support or explain this application for a public hearing". In my opinion the Defence request for "an open and public hearing" is not a request for "further relief" against the First or Second Respondents as such. The Accused persons are merely asserting their statutory right to a public hearing as guaranteed by Article 17 (2) of the Statute and asking the Trial Chamber not to apply the exception to the rule provided in Rule 73 (A) of the rules. As I understand it, the right to a public trial is the norm under the Statute, while Rule 73 (A) of the Rules which empowers the Trial Chamber to adjudicate on motions "based solely on written submissions" is the exception to the norm. In my view Rule 73 (A) is not intended to override the right to a public trial as such but is merely intended generally to expedite the proceedings of the Trial Chamber. In any event, there is nothing in the Statute of the Special Court or the Rules or the Practice Direction on Filing of Documents before the Special Court[1] that expressly or impliedly prohibits a party from applying for "additional relief" in a reply, if the interests of justice so require. After all, Rules of procedure are merely handmaidens of justice and are not meant to fetter the court's discretion where the interests of justice otherwise require. The proper remedy for a party prejudiced by a belated prayer for such "additional relief" is for that party to apply to the Trial Chamber for leave to respond appropriately to such prayer. Since neither of the Respondents herein has applied for leave to respond to the application for a public trial and neither of them has indicated that a public hearing is likely to be prejudicial to or in conflict with any measures ordered by the Court for the protection of witnesses or victims, the Trial Chamber ought not in my opinion, to assume or infer the existence of such prejudice or to penalise the Accused persons for containing the application in their Reply rather than their Motion. The Trial Chamber ought instead, to consider the merits of that application, as I will endeavour to do later on in this opinion. In this regard I am persuaded by the approach taken by the Honourable Justices of Trial Chamber I in the Prosecutor v. Brima, et al, SCSL-2004-16-PT-16[2]. In that Decision Trial Chamber I decided that in order to ensure the protection of the rights of the accused persons under Article 17 (4) (b) and (d) of the Statute, their Lordships would hear Counsel orally "on any new matters which had not already been raised in their submissions or on clarifications relating to the filed submissions". Their Lordships did not consider it to be in the interests of justice to prevent Counsel from raising additional matters not originally included in their written submissions.

2. More significantly, the Accused persons in the present Motion have clearly indicated in their Response to the Registrar's Reply that their application for a public and open hearing "was above all necessitated by the disclosure by the Registrar that both Counsel (Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris) have been removed from the list of eligible Counsel"[3] and by "the Registrar's decision to strike off Counsel from the list of eligible Counsel in the face of a motion and cross motion for their reappointment while claiming to be acting in the best interests of the accused when they have clearly said that they want their Counsel back"[4]. In my opinion, since the Registrar's removal of Counsel from the eligible list and the disclosure of that removal occurred after the filing of the Defence's initial Motion and while that Motion was sub judice, the Trial Chamber cannot reasonably expect the Accused persons to have applied for an open and public hearing any earlier than in their Response to the Registrar's Reply, nor can the Trial Chamber in these circumstances penalise the Accused persons for invoking their Statutory rights in their reply. Their Lordships in paragraph 25 of the Majority Decision also seem to suggest that the Accused persons are estopped from asserting their right to a public hearing in the present Motion simply because their former Counsel in an earlier application to withdraw raised certain personal security concerns that Counsel requested the Trial Chamber to handle as "confidential and under seal". In my opinion the argument is fallacious as it uses the security concerns of former Counsel raised in an application to which neither accused person was party, to deny the Accused persons their rights under the present Motion. Not only must a distinction be drawn between the Accused persons and their Defence Counsel, but a clear distinction ought to be drawn between the earlier withdrawal motion by Counsel and the present Motion by the Accused persons. I will address the merits of the application for a public hearing later on in this opinion.
3. I disagree with the statements in paragraph 26 (in respect of the Defence's failure to include a statement in their Motion that the Court made a ruling on 12 May 2005 granting in full the relief sought by Counsel to withdraw from the case) that "the Motion implies that the Trial Chamber gave orders to withdraw after and despite a letter from the Accused asking for Counsel to be maintained. Such an implication that the Court acted without giving any consideration to the wishes and statements of the Accused is improper". It is a fact that the Court's Oral Order of 12 May 2005 together with the reasoned Ruling of 23 May 2005 are both matters of public record that speak for themselves and that need not be recited by either party in their pleadings. Accordingly I see no need for the Trial Chamber or any of the parties to read into the Motion any views or implications that are contrary to the public court record. In any event, even the Registrar who was not a party to the proceedings that led to the Court Order and Reasoned Ruling of 12th and 16th May 2005 is well aware of the Court's "Decision on the Confidential Defence Application for withdrawal by Counsel for Brima and Kamara and on the Request For Further Representation by Counsel for Kanu" and quotes extensively from it in the Registrar's Reply to Extremely Urgent Motion[5] and in the Registrar's Reply to the Principal Defender's Cross-Motion[6], thereby proving that he has suffered no prejudice by the failure of the Accused persons to recite the Decision in their Motion.
4. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statement in paragraph 28 to the effect that "the Deputy Principal Defender's submissions omitted to cite the Trial Chamber's Ruling of 16 May 2005 and a Memorandum from the Deputy Principal Defender to the Registrar on 17 May 2005 which sought to have Counsel re-assigned. That Memorandum very improperly fails to inform the Registrar of the Court's Ruling of 16 May 2005". I reiterate my earlier comments above with regard to the Court's Ruling of 16 May 2005 being a matter of public record that speaks for itself. Furthermore, the Deputy Principal Defender's Memorandum to the Registrar of 17 May 2005 although copied to the Honourable Justices of Trial Chamber II on an earlier occasion, is not annexed to the Defence Office's Response to the Motion and therefore does not form part of the Principal Defender's case in these proceedings. I disagree with the view taken by their Lordships that the Deputy Principal Defender was under some kind of legal obligation to include certain facts in her pleadings. In my opinion it is improper for the Trial Chamber to dictate to the parties what they ought or ought not to include in their pleadings. To do so would be tantamount to the Trial Chamber "descending into the arena". In my view, where the Trial Chamber considers certain facts to be relevant in the determination of this Motion, the Trial Chamber has the option to narrate those facts in its decision, even if the parties have not recited them in their pleadings. This in my view is the proper course to take.

5. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraph 29. The views expressed in that paragraph are premised upon the presumption that the Trial Chamber has power to dictate to the parties the content of their pleadings, which presumption I have described above as being tantamount to the Trial Chamber "descending into the arena". By imputing or implying "mala fides", "untruthfulness" and "vexatious ness" on the part of the Deputy Principal Defender simply because she chose to omit certain facts from her pleadings (which facts are in any event public) or because she omitted to included certain facts that the Trial Chamber would have wanted or expected her to include in her pleadings, their Lordships are once again, "descending into the arena" that is the province of the disputants. Furthermore I cannot see how the Deputy Principal Defender who herself is one of the Respondents obligated to respond to the Motion, can be said to be "vexatious" in her Response, much less "vexatious to the Trial Chamber".
6. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraph 30. I shall comment on this in greater detail later.
7. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraph 31. There is no indication that in the Accused in their Motion question or challenge the Registrar's powers to consult the Trial Chamber pursuant to Rule 33B of the Rules. Instead the Accused persons indicate in paragraphs 31 to 33 of the Motion that they object to and challenge the manner in which the Trial Chamber responded to the Registrar's consultation pursuant to Rule 33B.
8. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraphs 32 and 33. I shall comment on this in greater detail later.
9. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraphs 34, 35 and 36 on the grounds that those statements and view are premised upon the perception that the earlier application[7] by Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris to withdraw from the conduct of the Defence case for Brima and Kamara respectively, and the subsequent withdrawal of Counsel pursuant to the Trial Chamber's Ruling thereon, act as an estoppel or bar to the current application by the Accused persons Brima and Kamara to subsequently apply to have the same Counsel "re-appointed" as their chosen Counsel pursuant to Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute. With the greatest respect to their Lordships I think that such a perception is mistaken and legally unjustified. In particular I disagree with the statements that "the accused have decided to frustrate the hearing by withdrawing instructions and then, when it suits them, giving instructions. There is no undertaking or clear indication that this pattern of behaviour will not be repeated to avoid interfering with a fair and expeditious hearing. In our earlier decision permitting Lead Counsel to withdraw, we found that the accused were merely boycotting the trial and obstructing the course of justice. In our view, that is exactly what they are seeking to do in bringing the present Motion. We do not believe that they genuinely wish to be represented by those particular Counsels. We believe that their real motive is to cause as much disruption to the trial as possible". Apart from prematurely speculating about the future conduct or behaviour of the Accused persons, the statements are premised upon the presumption that the Trial Chamber has power to dictate the relationship between an Accused person and his Counsel and to demand certain "undertakings" of "good behaviour or conduct" from the Accused persons with regard to that relationship. In my opinion the Trial Chamber has no such power under the law. In the same vein, I am of the opinion that the Trial Chamber has no power to question the "genuineness" or otherwise of the Accused persons' choice of Counsel, whether that choice is in favour of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris or any other Counsel. Under the Statute and Rules the choice of Defence Counsel is entirely the prerogative of the concerned Accused persons. Lastly I am of the opinion that without having examined the merits of the present application, it is unjust for the Trial Chamber to disparage the motives of the Accused persons purely on the basis of an earlier application by their Counsel, to which application the Accused persons were not party. This is precisely the crux of my departure in opinion from their Lordships in the Majority Decision. In my opinion the two applications are separate and distinct from each other and should be handled as such.

10. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraphs 36 to the effect that, "Rule 45 (E) provides that the appointment must be of "another" Counsel. There is no provision for reassignment of former Counsel in the event that they or their clients or both, have changed their mind." Again this statement is based upon the presumption or perception that the Accused persons are in their present application asking the Trial Chamber to reverse or review its earlier decision permitting their Counsel to withdraw. The present application is clearly not a Rule 45 (E) application by any stretch of imagination, nor do the Accused persons claim it to be so. Furthermore although there is nothing in the Rules providing expressly for "re-assignment of former Counsel" there is nothing in the Rules, the Statute or the Directive on assignment of Counsel that prohibits such re-assignment either, if the interests of justice so require and the Accused persons and concerned Counsel are agreeable to it.
11. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraph 37 to the effect that, "we do not have the power to interfere with the law relating to privity of contract." The Trial Chamber's duty is not limited to ensuring that the trial is "fair and expeditious". There is ample authority to the effect that the Special Court's inherent jurisdiction does extend to the control and supervision of officers of the Court and to subject questionable administrative acts to Judicial scrutiny and review in order to protect the rights of the Accused persons and to promote a fair and just trial[8].
12. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraph 38 to the effect that, "In the absence of the Principal defender, certain obligations to carry out duties fall upon the Registrar." There is ample authority to the effect that "in view of the very nature and functioning of public or private services, it is and should always be envisaged that the substantive holder of the position is not always expected to be there at all times. In order to ensure a proper functioning and a continuity of services with a view to avoiding a disruption in the administrative machinery, the Administration envisages and recognises the concept of "Acting Officials" in the absence of their substantive holders. Where an official is properly appointed or designated to act in a position during the absence of the substantive holder of that position, the Acting Official enjoys the same privileges and prerogatives as those of the substantive official and in that capacity, can take the decisions inherent in that position."[9]
13. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraphs 39 to 52. The Accused persons Brima and Kamara have in the present Motion not requested the Trial Chamber to review or reverse its earlier decision in the withdrawal motion by Defence Counsel. It appears to me that their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraphs 39 to 52 are in tantamount to a review of that earlier motion and decision. The present Motion filed by the Accused persons pursuant to Rule 54 and Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute is clearly separate and distinct from that earlier motion for withdrawal filed by Defence Counsel pursuant to Rule 45 (E). In my opinion the present Motion is so fundamental to the rights of the Accused persons as envisaged under Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute that it would not be in the interests of justice or a fair trial for the Trial Chamber to simply and summarily dismiss the Motion as a veiled attempt by the Accused persons "to reverse an earlier decision of the Trial Chamber". Furthermore I find no grounds or justification whatsoever for imputing insincerity, ill motive or alacrity on the part of the Accused persons who are simply pursuing their statutory right to choose Counsel. Equally, I find no grounds or justification whatsoever for accusing Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris who are not party to the present Motion, of conniving with the Accused persons to "go behind an earlier order of the Trial Chamber" or to "delay or obstruct" the conduct of a trial from which they have already withdrawn. Equally, I find no ground or justification whatsoever for imputing insincerity, ill motive, alacrity on the part of the Deputy Principal Defender who herself a Respondent in these proceedings, nor do I find any grounds or justification for accusing her of connivance with the Accused persons or with Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris to "go behind an earlier order of the Trial Chamber" or to "delay or obstruct" the conduct of the trial. The fact of the matter is that the AFRC trial has never been adjourned or delayed even for a single day on account of the Accused persons or their former Counsel or the Deputy Principal Defender. Therefore I cannot subscribe to the view or statement in paragraph 50 that "the accused have seriously delayed and obstructed this trial" nor do I subscribe to the view that there is some kind of backdoor conspiracy between the Accused persons, their former Counsel and the Deputy Principal Defender to delay and obstruct the AFRC trial.

14. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraph 51 to the effect that "Counsel are not eligible to be reappointed since they are no longer on the list of qualified counsel required to be kept under Rule 45 (C)." With the greatest respect, the view and statement fails to take into account the fact that the removal of Counsel from the said list was done by the Registrar who is the first Respondent to the present Motion while the Motion was under judicial consideration (i.e. sub judice). In my opinion it would not be in the interests of justice or a fair trial if the Trial Chamber merely turned a blind eye to this pertinent fact and failed to properly evaluate and adjudicate upon the effect of such removal on the rights of the Accused persons, as my colleagues appear to have done. It does not appeal to my sense of justice and fairness to question the motives of the Applicants or of the Second Respondent while being completely oblivious to those of the First Respondent.
15. I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed with regard to the Deputy Principal Defender's Cross Motion. Having concluded in paragraph 62 that "the Cross Motion sought clarification only and that having made those clarifications no orders are required" it is contradictory to describe the Cross Motion in paragraph 53 as "a vehicle that seeks further relief".
16. Lastly, I disagree with their Lordship's view and statements expressed in paragraph 61. I find no ground or justification whatsoever in accusing the Deputy Principal Defender of "having gone out of her way to undermine an order of the Trial Chamber" or of "being unwilling to do her job or to follow the directions of the Registrar". In my opinion, the views expressed in paragraph 61 of the Majority decision presuppose that there are certain fixed time frames within which the Trial Chamber expects the Principal Defender to have assigned new Counsel to the Accused persons. In fact this is not the case. In its earlier Decision the Trial Chamber did not stipulate any time frames within which they expected the Principal Defender to assign new Counsel for the Accused Brima and Kamara, even though the Trial Chamber had the option to do so. In the premises it is inconceivable that the same Trial Chamber that did not order time frames now accuses an officer of the court of having "undermined its order". It is a fact that under the Statute and Rules it is the Defence Office (headed at the material time by the Deputy Principal Defender in the absence of the Principal), that is vested with the power and responsibility of assigning Counsel to the Accused persons. There is nothing in the Rules or the Directive on Assignment of Counsel to suggest that the Principal Defender when carrying out that duty is obligated to do so "under the direction of the Registrar". On the contrary, the office of the Principal Defender was designed to act autonomously and independently when handling issues related to assignment of Counsel, as I shall endeavour to show later on in this opinion. It is also a fact that many of the lawyers who serve as assigned Counsel at the Special Court are also practitioners in foreign jurisdictions and are not readily available at the drop of a hat to take up their duties when the need arises or when called upon. It may well be that the consultative process between the foreign lawyers and the office of the Principal Defender takes considerable time. It is also a fact that the Defence Office in assigning Counsel or new Counsel to the Accused persons is under statutory obligation to liaise with the Accused persons and to ensure as much as possible that their choice of Counsel is respected. In my assessment, the assignment of new Counsel to the Accused persons is a process that necessarily takes time, careful consideration and consultation of all parties involved. As matters stand, the Trial Chamber is simply not in possession of any or sufficient information as to how the Deputy Principal Defender has been going about the issue of replacing Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris. As such I do not think that the Trial Chamber is in a position to make a fair assessment of her "willingness or otherwise to do her job" or to draw conclusions that the Defence Office "has made no attempts to appoint new lead Counsel" or that the Deputy Principal Defender has "gone out of her way to undermine an order of the Trial Chamber." It is also note worthy that the Registrar in his written submissions himself makes no such claims or accusations against the Deputy Principal Defender, even though it is he that is in disagreement with the Deputy Principal Defender over this issue! In the circumstances, I find absolutely no justification for the statements made about the Deputy Principal Defender in paragraph 61 of the Majority Decision.

After my preliminary comments on the majority Decision I will now go on to discuss the merits of the present Motion in the ensuing paragraphs.

III- The Merits of the Present Motion and Cross-Motion:

17. The present Motion principally challenges the extent of the powers of the Registrar (the First Respondent) and of the Deputy Principal Defender (the Second Respondent) acting as Head of the Defence Office, to assign Counsel on the one hand, and on the other hand, the rights of the Accused persons (Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara) to choose their assigned Counsel as guaranteed and enshrined in the provisions of Article 17 (4) (c) and (d) of the Statute.
18. The present Motion also raises issues related to the extent to which the rights of the Accused persons, in particular those pertaining to the right to choose assigned Counsel, should be protected, upheld and ensured by the Deputy Principal Defender (the Second Respondent) as acting Head of the Defence Office established under Rule 45 of the Rules, under the authority and supervision of the Registrar (the First Respondent), in their application of the provisions of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel promulgated by the Second Respondent on 3 October, 2003 pursuant to Article 17 of the Statute.
19. The Motion also raises related questions of conflict of interest in particular whether the Honourable Justices of the Trial Chamber, having advised the Registrar on 19 May 2005 pursuant to Rule 33

(B) not to re-appoint Mr. Kevin Metzger or Mr. Wilbert Harris as assigned Counsel for the Accused persons after their withdrawal, are now in a position to fairly and objectively adjudicate upon the present Motion or should recuse themselves. The present Motion also raises the more fundamental question of whether this Trial Chamber is competent to entertain and adjudicate upon a dispute arising from an administrative decision of the Registrar and Deputy Principal Defender emanating from the application of the legal instruments referred to above. In particular the Motion raises the question whether the Trial Chamber has power to review the decision of the Registrar not to re-appoint Mr. Kevin Metzger or Mr. Wilbert Harris as assigned Counsel for the Accused persons and further his decision of 25 May 2005 to remove them from the list of qualified Counsel.

20. The Principal Defender's Cross-Motion raises questions relating to the rights of the Accused persons (Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara) to choose Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as their assigned Counsel respectively, even after those Counsel have been permitted by the Trial Chamber to withdraw and have withdrawn from defending the Accused persons pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules.
21. In my opinion, the present Motion and Cross-Motion raise the following issues for consideration and determination.

    (i) Whether or not there are substantial grounds for casting doubt on the impartiality of the Honourable Justices of the Trial Chamber when adjudicating upon the present Motion and Cross-Motion.

    (ii) Whether or not the present Motion and Cross-Motion should be heard in open court.

    (iii) Whether or not the Trial Chamber has jurisdiction to entertain the present Motion and Cross-Motion.

    (iv) Whether or not the Accused persons Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara are entitled under Article 17 (4) (c) and (d) of the Statute of the Special Court to choose Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris respectively, as assigned Counsel, after each of those Counsel withdrew from representing the respective accused persons in the AFRC Trial pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules. Alternatively, whether or not Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris are ineligible for reassignment as Defence Counsel for the respective Accused persons, by reason of Counsel having withdrawn from representing the respective accused persons in the AFRC Trial pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules.

    (v) Whether the Registrar acted within his powers in directing the Deputy Principal Defender not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as Defence Counsel for the respective Accused persons and in subsequently removing their names from the Principal Defender's list of eligible Counsel.

    (vi) Whether the Deputy Principal Defender was bound to comply with the directives of the Registrar relating to the non-assignment of Counsel and their removal from the list of qualified Counsel.

    (vii) Whether the Trial Chamber has power to review the Registrar's decision not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as assigned Counsel, and his decision to remove their names from the list of qualified Counsel.

22. Before examining the merits of the Motion and Cross-Motion, I consider it necessary therefore, to reproduce here the relevant provisions of these legal instruments: The provisions pertaining to the right of the accused to choose Counsel are contained in Article 17 (4) of the Statute and Article 2(A) of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel.

Article 17 (4) of the Statute provides as follows:-

"17 (4) In the determination of any charge against the accused pursuant to the present Statute, he or she shall be entitled to the following minimum guarantees, in full equality:

(a) To be informed promptly and in detail in a language which he or she understands of the nature and cause of the charge against him or her;
(b) To have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his or her defence and to communicate with Counsel of his or her own choosing;
(c) To be tried without undue delay;
(d) To be tried in his or her presence, and to defend himself or herself in person or through legal assistance of his or her own choosing; to be informed, if he or she does not have legal assistance, of this right; and to have legal assistance assigned to him or her in any such case where the interests of justice so require and without payment by him or her in any such case if he or she does not have sufficient means to pay for it..."

Article 2 (A) of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel provides as follows:-

"2 (A) Any person detained on the authority of the Special Court has the right to Counsel, in terms conclusively defined in Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute."

23. The provisions pertaining to the assignment and withdrawal of Counsel by the Principal Defender are contained in Rule 45 (A), (C) and (D) as well as Articles13 (A), (B), (E) and (F) and Articles 24 (B), (C) and (F) of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel.

Rule 45 (A), (C) and (D) provide as follows:-

"The Registrar shall establish, maintain and develop a Defence Office, for the purpose of ensuring the rights of suspects and accused. The Defence Office shall be headed by the Special Court Principal Defender.

(A) The Defence Office shall, in accordance with the Statute and Rules, provide advice, assistance and representation to

i. Suspects being questioned by the Special Court or its agents under Rule 42 including non-custodial questioning;
ii. Accused persons before the Special Court.

(B)....

(C) The Principal Defender shall, in providing an effective defence, maintain a list of highly qualified criminal defence counsel whom he believes are appropriate to act as duty counsel or to lead the Defence or appeal of an accused. Such counsel, who may include members of the Defence Office, shall:

i. Speak fluent English;
ii. Be admitted to practice law in any State;
iii. Have at least seven years' experience; and
iv. Have indicated their willingness and full-time availability to be assigned by the Special Court to suspects or accused.

(D) Any request for replacement of an assigned counsel shall be made to the Principal defender. Under exceptional circumstances, the request may be made to a Chamber upon good cause being shown and after being satisfied that the request is not designed to delay the proceedings.

Article 13 (A), (B), (E) and (F) of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel provide as follows:-

"(A) Any person may be assigned as Counsel if his name appears on the list maintained by the Principal Defender in accordance with Rule 45 (C) and the Principal Defender has determined that he is and remains available to deal with the case of a particular Accused or Suspect.

(B) To be eligible to be included by the Principal Defender in the list of Qualified Counsel an individual must have the following qualifications:

i. Speak fluent English;
ii. Be admitted to the practice of law in any State;
iii. Have at least seven years of experience as Counsel;
iv. Possess reasonable experience in criminal law, international law, international humanitarian law or international human rights law;
v. Having indicated their willingness and availability to be assigned by the Special Court to an Accused or Suspect; and
vi. Have no record of professional or other misconduct, which may include criminal convictions.

(C) .....
(D) .....
(E) Where the Principal Defender refuses to place the name of an applicant Counsel on the List of Qualified Counsel or removes the name of Counsel from the List of Qualified Counsel, the Principal Defender shall notify the applicant Counsel of his decision in writing and briefly set out his reasons for refusing to include the name of the applicant Counsel on the List, or for removing the name of Counsel from the List.
(F) Where the Principal Defender refuses to place the name of an applicant Counsel on the List of Qualified Counsel or removes the name of Counsel from the List of Qualified Counsel, the concerned Counsel may seek review, by the President, of the Principal Defender's refusal. An application for review shall be in writing and the Principal Defender shall be given the opportunity to respond to it in writing."

Article 24 (B), (C) and (F) of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel provide as follows:-

"(B) The Principal Defender shall withdraw the assignment of Counsel or nomination of other Counsel in the Defence Team:

i. In the case of a serious violation of the Code of Conduct;
ii. Upon the decision by a Chamber to refuse audience to Counsel for misconduct under Rule 46 of the Rules;
iii. Where the name of the Assigned Counsel has been removed from the list kept by the Principal Defender under Rule 45(C) and Article 13 of this Directive.

(C) The Accused, the Counsel concerned and his respective professional or governing body shall be notified of the withdrawal.

(F) Where the assignment of Counsel or nomination of other Counsel in the Defence Team is withdrawn by the Principal Defender, pursuant to paragraph (B) (i) and (iii), Counsel affected by withdrawal may seek review of the decision of the Principal Defender by the presiding Judge of the appropriate Chamber."

IV-Deliberation and Determination of the issues:

(i) Whether or not there are substantial grounds for casting reasonable doubt on the impartiality of the Honourable Justices of the Trial Chamber when adjudicating upon the present Motion and Cross-Motion:

24. The Accused Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara applied that "the Justices of Trial Chamber II who reconfirmed the order not to re-appoint Counsel as indicated in the letter from the Registrar's Legal Adviser[10] should recuse (disqualify) themselves from adjudicating upon the present Motion and Cross-Motion". The Accused seem to glean the grounds in support of their application for recusal from the Memorandum written by myself on 19 May 2005 in response to the Registrar's consultations, and copied to the Deputy Principal Defender's Office[11]. The Accused persons argue that "the substantive legal issues of ultra vires, perceived judicial impropriety, potential bias and conflict of interest, and the potential compromise of the fair and impartial conduct of the trial are so palpable in the circumstances as to compel the Defence to respectfully request that the Justices referred to in the letter from the Registrar's Legal Adviser recuse themselves from hearing this present Motion." The Accused persons maintain that the Honourable Justices having previously ordered that Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris are not to be re-appointed as Defence Counsel, would not be in a position to fairly or impartially adjudicate upon the present Motion and Cross-Motion. The Accused persons further argue that in the absence of duly proven misconduct or incompetence on the part of Mr. Kevin Metzger or Mr. Wilbert Harris, the Trial Chamber has no power or authority to stipulate who should or should not represent an Accused person or to express a preference of one assigned Counsel over the other. The applicants further argue that for the Trial Chamber to do so would amount to or give the impression of bias and interference with the statutory rights of the Accused persons to choose assigned Counsel under Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute.

25. The Registrar (First Respondent) submitted that the Defence application for voluntary withdrawal (recusal) is unfounded and should be denied. He argued that under Rule 33 (B) of the Rules he was entitled to consult or liaise with the Trial Chamber on the implementation of its earlier Decision. He argued further that the Trial Chamber was entitled to and acted within its powers when it expressed the view that Counsel who had withdrawn from the case should not be reappointed or re-assigned, and that to re-assign them would not be in the interests of a fair trial. The Registrar further argued that in expressing their opinion the Trial Chamber was merely giving the Registrar advice pursuant to Rule 33 (B) and was not "directing him" as to what he should do. Their Lordships in their Majority Decision appear to agree with the Registrar's arguments and reasoning. I however, beg to disagree for the following reasons.

26. There is no doubt that the Accused persons on trial before the Special Court are entitled to be heard by an impartial tribunal. The charges that they face as well as the consequences of conviction are of an extremely serious nature that they warrant the highest standards of fairness, transparency and impartiality on the part of the Tribunal at every step of the trial. Although the Statute of the Special Court does not define the term "impartiality" the principle of impartiality lies at the heart of the concept of a fair trial and demands that each of the judges of the Trial Chamber before whom the Accused persons appear be unbiased, has no interest or stake in the matter under consideration and does not have pre-formed opinions about it. Actual impartiality as well as the appearance of impartiality are both fundamental for maintaining the integrity and fairness of the trial and respect for the administration of justice by the Court. (Justice must not only be done but must be seen to be done.) Impartiality implies that judges must not harbour pre-conceived views about the merits of the matter before them, and that they must not act in ways that promote the interests of one of the parties[12]. While the appearance of partiality is considered as important as actual partiality, there is a general presumption that a judge is personally impartial unless one of the parties raises proof to the contrary. Under Rule 15 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Special Court, it is sufficient for a party to show that "substantial grounds exist for reasonably doubting the impartiality of a judge". Once that has been established the impugned judge is disqualified from sitting on the panel considering the matter and is obligated to withdraw.

27. While the Statute of the Special Court is silent as to the issue of recusal or disqualification of a judge from sitting at a trial on grounds of bias, under Article 13 thereof "impartiality" is one of the hallmarks or qualifications for appointment as a Judge of the Special Court. It is the Rules of Procedure and Evidence that deal with the issue or judicial disqualification. Under Rule 14 every Judge of the Special Court is required before taking up his or her judicial duties to undertake a solemn declaration to serve "with out fear or favour, affection or ill-will, honestly, faithfully, impartially and conscientiously." It follows logically from that solemn undertaking that where a matter arises in which a judge's impartiality might reasonably be doubted upon any substantial ground, that Judge is expected under Rule 15 (A) and (C) of the Rules to voluntarily withdraw from adjudicating upon such matter in the interests of justice and a fair trial. In my view, the voluntary withdrawal of a judge from a proceeding in the circumstances envisaged under Rule 15 (A), is often a matter of judicial conscience and should not in any way reflect negatively on the integrity of the judge concerned. However, as earlier indicated Rule 15 also envisages situations where a judge will not voluntarily withdraw from a proceeding on grounds of impartiality. In such a case, Rule 15 (B) empowers an aggrieved party to apply to the Chamber of which the judge is a member, to have the said judge disqualified on grounds that "substantial grounds exist for reasonably doubting the impartiality of a judge". Clearly this Rule does not envisage that the impugned judge will sit on the panel that will hear and determine the disqualification motion against him or herself, for that would have absurd consequences! Rule 15 (B) envisages that the disqualification motion should be heard by the remaining judges of the Trial Chamber, excluding the impugned judge. Furthermore Rule 15 (F) requires that "at each stage, the challenged judge shall be entitled to present his comments on the matter but shall not take part in the deliberations and in the decision thereof" (emphasis added). The Rule also envisages that the issue of disqualification should be resolved apart from and prior to the issues in the main Motion, otherwise the whole purpose of recusal may be defeated! I note however, that in the present Motion, the applicants not only shied away from naming the Justices that they wanted to see disqualified but also filed the application for disqualification as an integral part of the present Motion. This has put their Lordships of the Trial Chamber in the awkward position firstly, of having to deduce from the facts who is impugned and secondly, of having to go against the well-known principle embodied in the maxim "Nemo Judex in sua Causa" (You cannot be a judge in your own cause!) in determining the issue of bias, thereby clearly violating the provisions of Rule 15 (F). Be that as it may I will endeavour at this stage, to examine this issue as best as I can.

28. I must admit that upon the initial reading of Rule 15, it would appear by implication that disqualification or recusal of a judge is envisaged only with respect to either the main trial or the main appeal and does not apply with respect to interlocutory applications or motions such as the present one. However, such a narrow interpretation of Rule 15 would in my view, lead to undesirable and unjust results consequences especially where issues affecting the rights of Accused persons or the conduct of a fair trial arise in the course of an interlocutory application or motion such as the present one. Accordingly I would adopt a more liberal interpretation of Rule 15 which permits the recusal or disqualification of a judge at any stage of the trial (including Motions), whenever it appears that "his or her impartiality might upon any substantial ground, be reasonably doubted." That interpretation is in my view, compatible with the solemn undertaking of a judge to serve honestly, faithfully, impartially and conscientiously, not only during the main trial, but at all times. It is also compatible with the practice pertaining in other international Tribunals such as the ICTR and ICTY. If I understand the applicants correctly, they assert that the Honourable Justices of the Trial Chamber having openly declared to the Defence Office and Registrar on 16th and 18th May 2005 that the Trial Chamber would not countenance the reassignment of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as Defence Counsel respectively for the Accused persons Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara, the same judges cannot bring a fair and impartial mind be seen to adjudicate upon the present Motion and Cross-Motion fairly or impartially because they would have already set their minds against such reassignment. A proper determination of this issue requires a full disclosure and examination of the facts surrounding the allegation that there are substantial grounds for doubting the impartiality of the Honourable Justices of the Trial Chamber.

29. The following facts are in my view, relevant. The Trial Chamber orally delivered its earlier Decision granting Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris leave to withdraw as Defence Counsel on 12 May 2005 and published its reasoned Ruling in respect thereof on 23 May 2005. On 16 May 2005 Ms. Carlton-Hanciles of the Defence Office orally submitted in open court that "she had received a communication from two of the detainees with regards to a decision which was rendered by this honourable court with instructions that a copy be served on Chambers". Before Ms. Carlton-Hanciles had an opportunity to disclose the contents of the document[13] or the identity of its authors, the Presiding Judge interjected and pronounced that "before she (Ms. Carlton- Hanciles) goes any further, this Court read an Order on application. The application was an application to withdraw. That Order was made and any letters, correspondence or documents that seek to go behind that decision cannot be countenanced in this court. The decision has been made."[14] On 17 May 2005 Ms. Elizabeth Nahamya the Deputy Principal Defender wrote a Memorandum to the Registrar which she copied to the Honourable Justices of Trial Chamber II to the effect that although the Trial Chamber had granted Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris leave to withdraw from the AFRC Case as assigned Counsel and had ordered that new Lead Counsel be assigned to represent the Accused persons Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara, the two accused persons wished to retain the two gentlemen as their chosen Counsel in the interests of continuity and a speedy and fair trial. The Deputy Principal Defender indicated in her Memo that she agreed with the views and concerns of the accused persons and that since both Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris had expressed willingness to be reassigned, she was inclined to re-appoint them as Lead Counsel for the accused persons instead of assigning the accused persons new Counsel. Given the provisions of Rule 45 giving the Principal Defender power to assign Counsel, it is not clear from the wording of this Memorandum whether the Deputy Principal Defender was merely notifying the Registrar and the Trial Chamber of her decision to reassign Counsel or whether in fact she was seeking the approval of the Registrar before doing so. It is also not clear why she copied her Memorandum to the Trial Chamber, given the argument that the Trial Chamber should not at this early stage be involved in issues of assignment of counsel. On 18 May 2005 the Registrar sent a copy of the Deputy Principal Defender's Memorandum to the Presiding Judge of Trial Chamber II with a note that read,

"Justice Doherty, as promised, this is the formal update by the Defence Office as to the present position on Metzger and Harris. As I have mentioned to you, as a matter of expediency, there are reasons which would support their return. But from the long term conduct of the trial, and considering both Counsels' performance and demeanour, my view is that it would be counter-productive to reassign them. One point I would like to put to you for your advice is the issue of who, ultimately, has the final word on this. Whilst it is clear from the Directive on Assignment of Counsel that the Principal Defender and I have a major role, I cannot believe that a Trial Chamber does not have at least a say if not the final say."

The Registrar maintains that in addressing the above comments to Justice Doherty he was acting in exercise of his powers under Rule 33 (B) of the Rules seeking the views of the Trial Chamber pursuant to that Rule.

30. On the same day the Presiding Judge circulated the Registrar's Memo and note referred to above to the Justices of Trial Chamber II and orally sought their comments there on. I immediately indicated to the Presiding Judge that I had a number of reservations on the idea of the Trial Chamber expressing an "administrative" or extra-judicial opinion (i.e. outside of court) on an application by the Accused persons to the Principal Defender which application was not officially before us as a court and wrote a detailed Memorandum to the Presiding Judge articulating my reservations. That Memorandum appears as Annex D to the present Motion but is for ease of reference, also appended to this opinion. I further indicated to the Presiding Judge that due to those reservations I would not participate in giving any opinion or advice to the Registrar in that regard, and further requested her to ensure that any communication or opinion emanating from Trial Chamber II in that regard should clearly indicate that it was not an opinion of the Bench but rather that of the individual Justices giving it.

31. On 18 May 2005 and in response to the Registrar's request or query referred to above, the Presiding Judge wrote an inter-office Memo to the Registrar that read as follows:

"Re- Appointment of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel:

This matter was already brought orally to the Court and the following order made on 16th May 2005:

"This Court read an order on an application. The application was an application to withdraw. That order was made and any letters, correspondence or documents that seek to go behind that decision cannot be countenanced in this Court. The Decision has been made."

That ruling stands and the order stands. The Court will not give audience to Counsel who make an application to withdraw on one day on various grounds, particularly security and then come back the day after and basically say they retract. They cannot make fools of the Court like this, nor can they do it in a "back door" way through the Principal Defenders and the Registrar's power to appoint Counsel."

The Presiding Judge did not make the distinction that Justice Sebutinde requested to the effect that this was not the view of the full Bench or Trial Chamber. Justice Sebutinde was not privy to this letter nor was she given a copy of this letter until much later when she asked for it. The Registrar argued in paragraph 19 of his submissions that following his representations pursuant to Rule 33 (B) the Trial Chamber was not only acting in the interests of a fair trial but was well within its rights and indeed exercised its responsibilities when it expressed its view quoted above on the reassignment of Counsel. From these submissions it is clear that the Registrar was under the mistaken impression that what he received was the unanimous view of "the Trial Chamber" pursuant to Rule 33 (B) of the Rules rather than a view of individual judges. Their Lordships agree in paragraph 60 of the Majority Decision with the Registrar's submissions. I on the other hand, respectfully disagree with such a view. This is on the grounds that not only are the above-quoted comments ultra vires the powers of the Trial Chamber but they did not constitute the opinion of the Trial Chamber as such but rather the opinion of the individual judges who wrote or subscribed to the Presiding Judge's Memorandum to the Registrar. It is one thing for the Trial Chamber to permit Counsel to withdraw from a case pursuant to an application properly brought before the Trial Chamber under Rule 45 (E) of the Rules. It is quite another for individual judges who are not seized with a formal application for reassignment of counsel, to subsequently make an out of court declaration that "they will not give audience to such counsel or countenance any letters, documents or correspondences, (and applications)" that seek to have them reassigned and more so to pass off that declaration as a view of the Trial Chamber, with a view to influencing the final decision of the Registrar and Deputy Principal Defender on the issue. Secondly, whilst I recognise the Registrar's powers to consult the Trial Chamber on the implementation of its decisions under Rule 33 (B), I do not agree that that is what transpired between the 17th and 18th May 2005 for the following reasons. That Rule empowers him to make representations to the Trial Chamber as a Bench of three Judges rather than seek the individual opinions of some of the judges. Clearly, this is not what happened. I also note that whilst the Registrar in his submissions refers to the fact that "the Trial Chamber was entitled to express its views regarding the re-assignment of counsel pursuant to Rule 33 (B)", he also does not make the distinction that the views he received were not from the Trial Chamber but rather from individual judges even though he too had received a copy of Justice Sebutinde's Memorandum of 19 May 2005. Furthermore he seems to suggest that the Trial Chamber acted properly and legally pursuant to Rule 33

(B) which empowers the Trial Chamber to consult with the Registrar "in the implementation of judicial decisions." Here I can only point out that the Trial Chamber's Decision permitting Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris to withdraw did not expressly or impliedly deal with issues of reassignment of counsel pursuant to an application by an accused person, nor did the Trial Chamber order that counsel be removed from the list of qualified counsel. Any additional views, directives or pronouncements by individual judges that tend to modify or go beyond what the Trial Chamber ordered on 12 May 2005 are, in my view ultra vires. If I am correct then the Registrar's argument that the Trial Chamber acted within its judicial mandate pursuant to Rule 33 (B) cannot hold water. By the same token it can be argued that while Rule 33 (B) empowers the Registrar to consult the Trial Chamber on "the implementation of judicial decisions", in the present case the Trial Chamber had not yet rendered any judicial decision in respect of the Accused persons' application for reassignment of Counsel (i.e. the present Motion). It was therefore premature for the Registrar to pre-empt an opinion in that regard from the Trial Chamber. In my humble opinion it was equally fallacious for the Trial Chamber to purport to advise the Registrar on an application that was not yet officially before the Trial Chamber. In that regard, I maintain the views expressed in my Memorandum annexed to this opinion.

32. Furthermore, it is evidently clear from the Transcript of 16 May 2005 that contrary to the Presiding Judge's Memorandum to the Registrar, the matter of the reassignment of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel was never "orally brought before the court" on that day nor was there a "Decision or order made in respect thereof" that day. There was no oral application before Court made by or on behalf of the accused persons Brima and Kamara on 16 May 2005 to have their former Counsel reappointed. Perhaps that was what Ms. Carlton Hanciles of the Defence Office wanted to do but was not given a chance to finish what she had come to tell the court. The record shows that she wanted to address the Trial Chamber on a letter written by two of the accused persons but was not permitted to either explain the contents of that letter nor its authors and was interrupted by the Presiding Judge before she could do so. Furthermore, as the Transcript clearly shows, the comments of the Presiding Judge addressed to Ms. Carlton Hanciles on 16 May 2005 referred to an earlier application by Counsel seeking leave to withdraw from the AFRC case and to the Trial Chamber's earlier Decision in respect thereof. I do not see any connection or relationship between that application and Ms. Carlton Hanciles' undisclosed letter or the present Motion filed by the accused persons on 24 May 2005. I maintain in this dissenting opinion, that the earlier withdrawal motion should be treated as separate and distinct from the present Motion. It does not appeal to my sense of justice to take the orders in the earlier motion to automatically apply them to the present Motion, and to do so without having heard the merits of the present Motion. Such a stance would in my view, not only be fallacious but would be prejudicial to the statutory rights of the accused persons.
33. Although their Lordships state in paragraphs 32 and 33 of the Majority Decision that "there was no determination of the issue of reappointment of Counsel" and further that "there was no order made in this Trial Chamber refusing reappointment of Counsel per se" and further that "the (Registrar's) orders for appointment of other Lead Counsel were based on the mandatory provisions of Rule 45 (E)", the fact of the matter is that the text of the Transcript quoted above[15] and the Presiding Judge's Memorandum of 18 May 2005 to the Registrar give the impression (however unintended) that the Trial Chamber had as early as 16th and 18th May 2005 made its mind up "not to give audience to Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris if reappointed as Lead Counsel" and that based on the Trial Chamber's earlier Decision and orders made pursuant thereto, "the Trial Chamber would not countenance any letters, correspondence or documents contrary to those earlier orders". It is also clear from the Registrar's note addressed to Judge Doherty that he believed that the Trial Chamber had "the final say" on the issue of reassignment of counsel. Accordingly, his submissions that he was merely "advised" and not "directed" by the Trial Chamber also don't hold water. In the circumstances the Accused persons would appear justified under Rule 15 (A) in reasonably casting doubting the impartiality of the Justices of the Trial Chamber in adjudicating upon the present Motion and Cross-Motion. Be that as it may, the issue remains whether in the circumstances the Honourable Justices of the Trial Chamber could each be trusted to bring an impartial and unprejudiced mind to the issues in the present Motion and Cross-Motion, and not to decide the issues in the same way as they previously exhibited. This is the test to be applied to the judges who are ordinarily presumed to be objective and fair-minded professionals capable of making a reasonable judgement[16]. Perhaps at this stage the question is merely academic as the Majority Decision is already made and published! However, suffice it to say in conclusion that the manner in which the application for recusal or disqualification was made an integral part of the present Motion, coupled with the failure of the applicants to name the impugned Justices, render impossible the resolution of this issue in a fair and impartial manner, and my conclusions on the matter perhaps merely of academic interest.

(ii) Whether or not the present Motion and Cross-Motion should be heard in open court:

34. The accused persons submitted in their Joint Defence Response to the First Respondent's Reply filed on 3 June 2005 that "In reliance upon the above arguments, the Registrar's indication of security concerns as a ground for non-reappointment of Counsel and, above all, recent disclosure by the Registrar that both Counsel, Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris, have been removed from the list of eligible Counsel for the Special Court for Sierra Leone, the Defence further prays that its Motion of 24th May 2005 together with all subsequent responses and replies thereto be made public and heard in open court." The First and Second Respondents did not respond to this submission.
35. The right to a public trial is one of the statutory rights guaranteed to an accused person on trial before the Special Court[17]. Although the Statute does not define the right to a public hearing there is a wealth of jurisprudence on the subject, which has its roots in the English Common Law. The principle of "publicity" presupposes that a trial is "a public event" and that what transpires in the courtroom is "public property". The principle also embodies the common law notion that "justice must not only be done but must be seen to be done." A public trial is recognised as a safeguard against any attempt to employ the court as an instrument of persecution. The knowledge that the trial is subject to contemporaneous review in the forum of public opinion is an effective restraint on possible abuse of judicial power[18]. The public trial guarantee ensures that not only judges, but all participants in the criminal justice system are subjected to public scrutiny. In the case of international tribunals like the Special Court, that public includes not only the people and press of Sierra Leone where the court is situated but also the international community. The right of the Accused persons to a fair and public trial is guaranteed by Article 17(2) and the only statutory limitation upon that right is "subject to measures ordered by the Special Court for the protection of victims and witnesses". In my opinion the right of an Accused to a public hearing is not limited to the conduct of the main trial but also to the interlocutory applications and motions filed under the Rules by the parties, such as the present one. Rule 73 (A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence which empowers the Trial Chamber to rule upon motions based solely on written submissions (in order to expedite proceedings) also gives the Trial Chamber the power and discretion to hear motions in open court "where they otherwise decide". The Trial Chamber's discretion in deciding to hear a motion in open court under that Rule is unfettered in as far as the Rule does not stipulate any particular circumstances under which the Trial Chamber may or may not hear a motion in open court. I am averse to attaching an interpretation to Rule 73 (A) whose effect is to curtail or deny the Accused persons their rights as guaranteed under Article 17 of the Statute, one of which is "the right to a public hearing". Such an interpretation would render Rule 73 ultra vires Article 17 (2) of the Statute.

36. The Accused persons submitted that their application for a public and open hearing "was above all necessitated by the disclosure by the Registrar that both Counsel (Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris) have been removed from the list of eligible Counsel"[19] and by "the Registrar's decision to strike off Counsel from the list of eligible Counsel in the face of a motion and cross motion for their reappointment while claiming to be acting in the best interests of the accused when they have clearly said that they want their Counsel back"[20]. It is a fact that Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris were removed from the list of qualified Counsel by the Acting Registrar on the 25 May 2005[21], after the filing of the present Motion seeking their reassignment and while that Motion was under consideration by the Trial Chamber. According to paragraph 1 of the First Respondent's Response to the present Motion, the Acting Registrar directed that they be removed from the List of Qualified Counsel "when it became apparent that they were still on the List, despite the fact that they had withdrawn from the trial and that their security concerns, which were a major reason which caused them to seek to withdraw, had not been addressed by Counsel in any manner with the court Registry." Since the reassignment of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as Defence Counsel for the Accused persons is one of the key issues to be resolved in the present Motion, their removal from the list of Counsel qualified to serve as Defence Counsel while the matter is still under judicial consideration, has the effect not only of pre-empting the Trial Chamber's decision on that issue but is also capable of rendering any relief that the Trial Chamber might grant to the Accused persons in that regard, nugatory. While the Rules provide for the withdrawal of Counsel from representing an accused person[22], they do not contemplate or provide for the removal of Counsel from the Principal Defender's list of eligible Counsel maintained pursuant to Rule 45 (C) of the Rules, once Counsel has qualified for placement and been included on the said list. The provisions pertaining to the removal of Counsel from the Principal Defender's list are only found in Article 13 (E) and (F) of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel. According to Article 13 the power to remove Counsel from the Principal Defender's list is vested in the Principal Defender, subject to review of the President of the Special Court. However, the Directive does not stipulate the grounds or reasons for removal of Counsel from the Principal Defender's list. There is no provision either in the Rules or in the Directive on Assignment of Counsel that expressly or impliedly empowers the Registrar to remove Counsel from the Principal Defender's list of eligible Counsel maintained pursuant to Rule 45 (C) of the Rules. Considering that in the present case it is the Registrar's office and not the Principal Defender that issued the order for removal of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris from the Principal Defender's list of eligible Counsel and considering further that this was done while the present Motion and Cross-Motion for their reassignment were under judicial consideration, the Accused persons are in my view, entitled to question the legality as well as bona fides of the Registrar's administrative decision in that regard, including the grounds for Counsel's removal, and to subject that decision to public scrutiny, through an open hearing. In my opinion the application for an open and public hearing of the present Motion and Cross-Motion should in the interests of justice be granted. I will comment later on the Registrar's decision to remove Counsel from the Principal Defender's list in greater detail under the appropriate issue.

(iii) Whether or not the Trial Chamber has jurisdiction to entertain the present Motion and Cross-Motion:

37. The Accused persons have on the one hand, called upon the Trial Chamber to entertain the present Motion pursuant to Article 17 (4) (c) and (d) of the Statute, Rule 54 of the Rules and to review the administrative decision of the Registrar pursuant to the inherent powers of the court[23]. The Registrar and First Respondent on the other hand questioned the jurisdiction and competence of the Trial Chamber to entertain the present Motion and ultimately to review his administrative decisions. He argued that while "the Trial Chamber was entitled pursuant to the provisions of Rule 33 (B) to express the view that Counsel who have withdrawn from the case are not to be reassigned,"[24] and "entitled pursuant to its inherent powers to ensure that the accused receive a fair trial,"[25] the Trial Chamber "has no power to order anyone to enter into a contract. The process of contract negotiations is a matter for individual parties to reach agreement on the terms of a contract. That is a matter for the parties and should not be constrained by any order to enter into a contract from the Trial Chamber."[26] On her part, the Acting Principal Defender and Second Respondent does not question the Trial Chamber's jurisdiction to entertain the Motion and Cross-Motion and in fact "implores the Trial Chamber to grant the Accused persons' request for reassignment of their former Lead Counsel".[27]
38. Essentially the issue for determination is whether the Trial Chamber is competent and can draw upon its inherent jurisdiction to review the administrative Decisions of the Registrar, firstly in denying the reassignment of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as Lead Defence Counsel, and secondly in removing their names from the Principal Defender's List of eligible Counsel, and whether the Trial Chamber is competent ultimately to grant the orders sought by the Accused persons Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara. I have stated earlier on in this opinion that I do not agree with the views expressed by their Lordships in paragraph 37 to the effect that "the Trial Chamber does not have the power to interfere with the law relating to privity of contract" or in paragraph 49 and 50 to the effect that "it is unclear on what legal grounds this application is made. The application does not say it is founded on Rule 45 (D) and makes no submission that there are exceptional circumstances that would allow the Trial Chamber to exercise its jurisdiction under Rule 45 (D)." In my opinion Rule 45 (D) of the Rules applies to a situation where an accused person is dissatisfied with the services of his current assigned Counsel and wishes for good cause to have him or her replaced. In such a case, Rule 45 (D) permits the accused person to make his request for the replacement of such Counsel either before the Principal Defender or under exceptional circumstances, before the Trial Chamber. Clearly Rule 45 (D) does not cover the present situation where assigned Counsel (Mr. Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris) have already withdrawn from representing an accused person pursuant to a court order under Rule 45 (E) of the Rules and where the accused persons wish to have their former Counsel reassigned to represent them but the Registrar has removed the names of Counsel from the Principal Defender's List of qualified Counsel. For that matter, I am not aware of any other Rule that provides for the present situation. In such situations where the Rules are silent, the Trial Chamber must if called upon, draw upon its inherent powers if it is in the interests of justice to do so.
39. There is a wealth of authorities supporting the principle that an international tribunal such as the ICTY, ICTR and the Special Court can invoke their inherent jurisdiction to entertain a motion alleging a violation or denial of the statutory rights of accused persons, in the overall interests of justice and in order to prevent a violation of those rights. For instance in the Prosecutor v. Tadic[28] the Appeals Chamber held that the Tribunal did have jurisdiction to examine the plea against its own jurisdiction reasoning that such authority "is inherent in every judicial organ". In the Prosecutor v. Blaskic[29] where the validity of a subpoena that Judge Macdonald of Trial Chamber II had issued both to the Republic of Croatia and to its Defence Minister personally, was called into question. On the issue of inherent jurisdiction the Appeals Chamber observed,

"The power to make this judicial finding is an inherent power. The International Tribunal must possess the power to make all those judicial determinations that are necessary for the exercise of its primary jurisdiction. This inherent power inures to the benefit of the International Tribunal in order that its basic judicial function may be fully discharged and its judicial role safeguarded."

40. In the Barayagwiza (Abuse of Process) Decision of the ICTR[30] the central issue was one of alleged abuse of process by the Prosecutor, for which the Appeals Chamber found it necessary to its inherent power to dismiss the Indictment. The Trial Chamber had dismissed the Applicant's motion for orders to review or nullify his arrest and provisional detention. The Applicant appealed against the decision. Allowing the appeal, the Appeals Chamber held that "an International Tribunal had inherent jurisdiction or supervisory powers to curb an abuse of process or travesty of justice." In the Prosecutor v. Momcilo Krajisnik[31] the Registrar who in the ICTY performs the functions of the Principal Defender, arbitrarily and unreasonably assessed the means of Krajisnik an indigent accused, and declared him only partially indigent for legal aid purposes. The Trial Chamber drawing upon its inherent jurisdiction quashed the Registrar's decision. On the Registrar's appeal against the Trial Chamber's decision, the Appeals Chamber observed that "It should be clear from the analysis in the previous section that the incidence of error and unreasonableness in the Registrar's decision is such as to justify an order quashing that decision. The Registrar should reconsider his position in the light of the Chamber decision." I note that our sister Tribunals have not hesitated to invoke their inherent jurisdiction to oversee and supervise Officials of these International Tribunals on the grounds that such oversight and supervision is fundamental to the Court's ability to regulate its own process and to ensure a fair trial. Closer to home, our own Special Court has pronounced itself on the issue. Ironically, less than one year ago, issues similar to the ones now before us arose between the same parties, namely the Accused Alex Tamba Brima versus the Registrar and Acting Principal Defender in the case of the Prosecutor v. Alex Tamba Brima et al, Case No. SCSL-04-16-PT[32]. In that case the Registrar purportedly acting as the Principal Defender refused to enter into a Legal Services Contract with Mr. Terence Michael Terry, then assigned Counsel for the Accused Alex Tamba Brima on two grounds. Firstly the Registrar insisted that before he enters into such contract, Counsel should undergo a medical examination and should be certified medically fit to permanently and at all times be at the disposal of the accused. Secondly the Registrar argued that having represented Ex President Charles Ghankay Taylor Mr. Terry could not under Article 14 (C) of the Directive on assignment of Counsel be permitted to represent the Accused Alex Tamba Brima in the same Trial Chamber. In an application by the Accused Alex Tamba Brima asking the court to review the administrative decision of the Registrar and Acting Principal Defender to deny him assigned Counsel of his choosing, Trial Chamber I said the following:

"We would like to say here that dismissing this Motion either on the merits or on the jurisdictional grounds as the respondents urge us to do, would amount to conceding to the merits of the objections of both the 1st and 2nd Respondents to our jurisdiction and competence to entertain it and in particular, would be approving a judicial endorsement of the 2nd Respondent's submissions, claiming immunity from a judicial review of the 1st Respondent's acts which are palpably arbitrary, ultra vires and offensive to the law. This, in our opinion, would further amount to a total abdication on our part, of our sovereign obligation and judicial responsibility as a court and as Judges, to subject questionable administrative acts to Judicial scrutiny and review in order to check and curb arbitrary acts, conduct, or decisions taken by our Administrative Officials in particular, and by the Executive organs in general. The Applicant and his Counsel in the situation in which they find themselves, certainly deserve the protection of the court, notwithstanding the jurisdictional objections raised by both the 1st and 2nd Respondents which we dismiss as frivolous, unfounded and bereft of any merits. The stand we have taken in this regard is consonant with the justification the Learned Editors of Halsbury's Laws of England advance to justify the utility of the inherent jurisdiction of the court in terms of a residual source of power to enable the court ..."in particular to ensure the observance of the due process of the law, to prevent improper vexation or oppression" such as the Applicant and his Counsel were indeed subjected to by the 1st Respondent in the instant case."

41. In a way it is surprising that less than a year after Trial Chamber I issued the above decision, the Registrar would once again question the competence and jurisdiction of the Special Court to review his administrative decisions over the rights of accused persons and in particular the right of an indigent accused person to choose assigned Counsel. Be that as it may, suffice it to say that I disagree with the views of my colleagues in the Majority Decision which views seem to ignore the established jurisprudential trends in this area. I find that the Trial Chamber is indeed competent to entertain the present Motion and Cross-Motion in the interests of justice and may for the protection of the rights of the Accused persons, draw upon its inherent power to scrutinise, review and nullify the administrative decisions of the Court's Officials whose effect impacts negatively upon those rights.

(iv) Whether or not the Accused persons Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara are entitled under Article 17 (4) (c) and (d) of the Statute of the Special Court to choose Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris respectively, as assigned Counsel, after each of those Counsel withdrew from representing the respective accused persons in the AFRC Trial pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules. Alternatively, whether or not Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris are ineligible for reassignment as Defence Counsel for the respective Accused persons, by reason of Counsel having withdrawn from representing the respective accused persons in the AFRC Trial pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules.

The dispute that has given rise to the present Motion and Cross-Motion essentially centres around the question whether the Applicants can in pursuit of their statutory rights under Article 17 (4) (c) and (d) of the Statute on choose Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as their assigned Lead Counsel, after the Trial Chamber permitted Counsel on the 12 May 2005 to withdraw from the AFRC trial pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules. The controversy is heightened by the fact that before the present Motion was officially filed before Trial Chamber II on the 24 May 2005, certain views were expressed from the Trial Chamber on 16 May 2005 to the effect that "this Court read an Order on application. The application was an application to withdraw. That Order was made and any letters, correspondence or documents that seek to go behind that decision cannot be countenanced in this court. The decision has been made"[33] and on 18 May 2005 to the effect that "This matter was already brought orally to the Court and the following order made on 16th May 2005: This Court read an order on an application. The application was an application to withdraw. That order was made and any letters, correspondence or documents that seek to go behind that decision cannot be countenanced in this Court. The Decision has been made. That ruling stands and the order stands. The Court will not give audience to Counsel who make an application to withdraw on one day on various grounds, particularly security and then come back the day after and basically say they retract. They cannot make fools of the Court like this, nor can they do it in a "back door" way through the Principal Defenders and the Registrar's power to appoint Counsel[34]." The controversy was further heightened by the fact that while this issue was under judicial consideration the Registrar on 25 May 2005 removed the said Counsel from the list of Counsel qualified to serve as assigned Counsel, thereby effectively rendering them ineligible under the Rules to serve as assigned Counsel.

42. The Applicants Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara submitted that notwithstanding the withdrawal of their former assigned Counsel pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules the Accused persons are entitled under Article 17 (4) (c) and (d) of the Statute to request the Principal Defender to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as their respective Lead Counsel on the following grounds:

    (i) That the Accused persons have a right to be consulted regarding their preferred choice and that their choice of Counsel may only be denied upon "reasonable and valid" grounds including proven incompetence, misconduct or serious violations of Counsel's respective Codes of Conduct or instances where Counsel's name has been removed from the Principal Defender's list of qualified Counsel pursuant to Article 13 of the directive on Assignment of Counsel;
    (ii) That the Accused persons have indicated their preference of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris to other qualified Counsel and have full confidence and trust in their abilities and competence as their respective Lead Counsel;
    (iii) That Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris have each indicated their willingness and full-time availability to be reassigned as Counsel for the Accused;
    (iv) That there are no reasonable and valid grounds for not reassigning Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel;
    (v) That the reassignment of Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris as Lead Counsel will promote a fair and expeditious trial as Counsel are already familiar with the case and any new appointments would necessarily result in undue delay on the part the newly appointed Counsel who would require adequate time to effectively represent the Accused persons;
    (vi) That the Trial Chamber has no power or authority to interfere in the statutory right of an Accused person to choose assigned Counsel, by giving directives that are contrary to that choice.

43. The Deputy Principal Defender in her Response fully agrees with the submissions of Accused persons and "implores the Trial Chamber to grant the present Motion". The Deputy Principal Defender submitted further in her Cross-Motion that the wording of Rule 45 (E) relating to assignment of "another Counsel" does not preclude Counsel who has been permitted to withdraw from subsequently being reassigned to defend the same accused person provided that the original reasons for withdrawal no longer exist and both Counsel and the Accused are in agreement about the reassignment. The Deputy Principal Defender argued that since both Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris had indicated to her their willingness and availability for reassignment they should in the interests of justice be reassigned.

44. The Registrar opposes the Accused persons' application for reassignment of Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel and defends his decision not to reassign them, on the following grounds:

    (i) That Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris are no longer eligible for reassignment as the Acting Registrar removed their names from the Principal Defender's List of qualified Counsel on 25 May 2005;

(ii) That Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris have not unequivocally indicated their willingness and availability to serve as Lead Counsel if reassigned;
(iii) That the Registrar is obligated to give effect to the Trial Chamber's earlier Decision that permitted Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris to withdraw from the AFRC trial and ordered that "other Counsel" be assigned to replace them, as well as their subsequent advice pursuant to Rule 33 (B) of the Rules;
(iv) That the Registrar's decision not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel is in the interests of the Accused persons because the Trial Chamber in its earlier decision adjudged Counsel no longer fit to represent the Accused persons by reason of their security concerns;
(v) That the appointment of new Counsel would not unduly delay the trial as the Trial Chamber has in its earlier Decision put measures in place to curb delay including the appointment of co-Counsel to represent the Accused persons in the interim.

45. I have throughout this opinion belaboured the point that the previous withdrawal application by Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules is separate and distinct from the present Motion by the Accused persons Brima and Kamara seeking their reassignment as Lead Counsel. In the absence of hard evidence that the two motions are related in any way, there is no justification for treating the present Motion with suspicion and perceiving it as some kind of vexatious or underhanded scheme by the Accused persons in connivance with their former Counsel (and perhaps the Deputy Principal Defender) to "go behind the Trial Chamber's earlier Decision" or to abuse court process or to avert the course of justice. To do so would in my humble opinion, be a serious error of judgment and would amount to an abdication of our judicial duty to protect and uphold the statutory rights of the Accused persons as guaranteed by Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute. In this regard I reiterate the judicial stand that I took in my Memorandum to their Lordships on 19 May 2005 when the Registrar approached the Trial Chamber pursuant to Rule 33 (B) of the Rules for advice on the issue. Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute guarantees to the Applicants as indigent accused persons, the right to be represented by Counsel of their choosing. I fully agree with the following observations of Trial Chamber I aptly expressed one year ago that, "It should be noted that this provision is mandatory and even though jurisprudential and interpretational evolutions have significantly whittled down this right which is now more qualified than it is absolute. The Chamber will not, given the allegations of serious breaches of the rule of law and the due process, lose sight of the pre-eminently mandatory and defence protective character of the provisions of this Article."[35] The practice pertaining in the ICTR from which the Special Court borrows much of its own, is that the Registry vested with the statutory authority to assign Counsel, permits the accused to select any available counsel from the list of compiled for that purpose and is prepared to add counsel to the list if selected by an accused, provided that such counsel meets the necessary criteria[36]. The ICTR provisions relating to assignment of counsel are similar to those of the Special Court. I agree therefore that although generally the right of an indigent accused to counsel of his choosing may not be unlimited, each case should be considered upon its own merits and the choice of the Accused ought to and should be respected unless there are well founded reasons[37] or reasonable and valid grounds[38] not to assign Counsel of their choice. Can it be said in the instant case that there are well founded reasons or reasonable and valid grounds justifying the Registrar's decision to deny the Accused their choice of Counsel?

46. The placement of counsel on the Principal Defender's list presupposes that counsel has fulfilled the eligibility criteria prescribed under Rule 45 (C) of the Rules. I note that Article 13 (B) of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel purports to modify the eligibility criteria by introducing additional criteria[39]. Once counsel has been placed on the Principal Defender's list, the Rules do not contemplate the removal of counsel from that list. At the most, the Rules simply provide for withdrawal or replacement of counsel from a particular case[40] or denial of audience by the Trial Chamber for misconduct[41] but certainly not removal from the Principal Defender's list. Again the provisions for removal of counsel from the Principal Defender's list are introduced by the Directive on Assignment of Counsel[42], which Directive also purport to modify the provisions for withdrawal of assigned counsel[43]. It is of course debatable whether the provisions of an administrative Directive promulgated by the Registrar can operate to amend, modify or replace a Rule or Rules promulgated by the Plenary of Judges pursuant to Article 14 of the Statute[44]. Be that as it may, it has been suggested by the Accused persons and the Deputy Principal Defender that once Counsel have been included on the Principal Defender's list pursuant to Rule 45 (C) of the Rules the only "reasonable and valid" grounds for rejecting an indigent accused person's choice of a particular counsel from that list is where that counsel has been found guilty of misconduct or a serious breach of the Code of Conduct or where the Principal Defender has removed his name from the list of qualified Counsel pursuant to Article 13 of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel. The Accused and the Deputy Principal Defender further argued that the voluntary withdrawal of counsel pursuant to Rule 46 (E) of the Rules does not lead to automatic removal of that counsel from the Principal Defender's list, nor does it act as an estoppel against his reassignment if the Accused person chooses to have Counsel back. They maintain in other words, that the withdrawal of counsel pursuant to Rule 45 (E) of the Rules does not constitute "reasonable and valid grounds" for denying an accused person's choice of counsel. Their Lordships in the Majority Decision disagree with those arguments and perceive the Accused persons' choice of counsel as simply "an attempt by the accused persons acting in concert with Mr. Metzger, Mr. Harris and the Deputy Principal Defender, to go behind the earlier order of the Trial Chamber, which their Lordships will not countenance". Their Lordships further perceive the voluntary withdrawal of Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris as an estoppel to their reassignment and perhaps a justification for their removal by the Registrar from the Principal Defender's list, since they do not challenge that removal in their Decision. As such they perceive the right of each of the Accused persons Brima and Kamara as being limited to choice of "another counsel" (other than Mr. Metzger or Mr. Harris). For this conclusion their Lordships rely on the wording of Rule 45 (E) of the Rules.

47. As earlier stated in this opinion, I respectfully do not share the views of their Lordships on this issue on the grounds that the present Motion is not an application by Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris for review of the Trial Chamber's earlier Decision. I also do not share the beliefs of my colleagues expressed in paragraph 35 of the Majority Decision to the effect that "the Accused persons do not genuinely wish to be represented by those particular Counsel and that their real motive is to cause as much disruption to the trial as possible". I believe that the Trial Chamber simply does not possess sufficient information or grounds suggesting mala fides or bad motives on the part of the Accused persons. For me to draw such conclusions would be nothing short of judicial recklessness on my part. While it is true that the Accused persons have on past occasions "given Counsel limited instructions to represent them during the trial" it is also true that this was not on account of any alleged misconduct or incompetence on the part of assigned Counsel nor on any alleged loss of confidence by the Accused in their assigned counsel. On the contrary the Accused persons have on every such occasion reiterated the fact that have confidence in and high regard for their Counsel. The reasons for the Accused limiting their instructions to counsel have in the past related to the manner in which the Trial Chamber has dealt with certain issues in the trial such as the contempt proceedings[45], but not to the conduct or competence of assigned counsel. It is therefore not true or fair to accuse the applicants of inconsistent behaviour in this regard. Secondly, although one of the grounds put forward by Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris in their withdrawal motion was that the withdrawal of instructions by their clients had made Counsel's work impossible, the Trial Chamber quite rightly observed and ruled that "the inability of Counsel to obtain instructions from his client does not constitute "the most exceptional circumstances" within the meaning of Rule 45 (E).[46]" In other words the Trial Chamber did not recognise the inability of Counsel to obtain instructions from his client as constituting a valid impediment to Counsel continuing to represent that client. Since that precedent has been set, it should not matter to the Trial Chamber if a similar situation should arise in future between the Accused and their assigned Counsel and it is not necessary n my opinion, to require the Accused persons to make an undertaking or commitment that the situation would not arise again in the future, as suggested in paragraph 35 of the Majority Decision. For now, it is sufficient that the Accused persons have indicated that they would prefer their former counsel to any others that might be chosen for them.

48. Then there is the issue of whether or not the "security concerns" that initially caused Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris to withdraw from this case, still exist and whether those security concerns now operate either as a bar to their reassignment or a justification for removal of their names from the Principal Defender's list. It will be remembered that in their withdrawal motion Counsel stated then that "there was a significant threat of danger to their persons or family in the conduct of the Defence case, and that undisclosed sources had informed Counsel that all Court Appointed Lawyers who work for the Special Court are deemed to be party to a conspiracy to subvert the sovereignty of the Laws of Sierra Leone. In consequence whereof they and their families would be called upon to answer for their decision to accept Special Court appointment"[47]. Counsel also alluded to incidents where a potential Defence witness and clerk to one of the other Defence Counsel were detained and intimidated in separate incidents. Counsel also alluded to a telephone call that one of them received from abroad containing threats. It is also a fact that at the time of the withdrawal motion, Counsel had not taken any formal steps to have their alleged threats investigated by the relevant departments of the Special Court. None the less, the Trial Chamber ruled that these "security concerns" constituted "most exceptional circumstances" under Rule 45 (E) of the Rules warranting the withdrawal of Counsel. The Accused persons have in paragraph 34 of the present Motion indicated that "their respective Defence teams have met with the Principal Defender's Office and share a common view that these threats could be investigated by the Registry and reasonable steps taken to ensure the safety of Counsel, if and when necessary, and that both Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris have indicated that they are agreeable to this arrangement and are willing to continue representing the accused persons once reassigned." In support of their submissions the Accused persons attached a copy of a letter from Mr. Metzger E-mailed to the Defence Office in which he indicated that both he and Mr. Harris were willing and available to be reassigned as Defence Counsel for the Accused persons, provided that their initial security concerns were duly investigated. Furthermore, the Accused persons submitted that in the interests of continuity of their case and a speedy trial, they would prefer to be represented by their former counsel who are already acquainted with the trial rather than be represented by new counsel who would require time to get acquainted with the case. The Deputy Principal Defender agreed with the submissions of the Accused persons and submitted in addition that in her opinion since both Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris have indicated their willingness and availability to serve as reassigned Counsel and none of them has hitherto been found guilty of proven misconduct, there is no legal impediment to their reassignment as Lead Counsel, as requested by the Accused persons. For the same reason she maintained that there are no legally justifiable reasons for the Registrar to remove their names from the Principal Defender's list.

49. Although the Registrar did not contradict the above submissions he submitted that in his opinion it is not enough for Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris to indicate their willingness to be reassigned. They must, in his opinion, directly apply to be reassigned[48]. Clearly the Registrar makes no distinction between the present Motion made solely by the Accused persons in pursuit of their statutory rights, and an application by Counsel for inclusion on the Principal Defender's list, nor does he indicate under what Rule Counsel may apply for "reassignment". It is clear that the Statute and Rules of Procedure and Evidence primarily guarantee the rights of Accused persons, in particular the right to choose counsel, and further ensure that assigned counsel fulfil the minimum requirements for defending accused persons. The matter of assignment or reassignment of counsel to defend a particular accused person is not one over which counsel is expected "to apply" but rather is the sole prerogative of the Principal Defender in consultation with the accused persons. Accordingly the issue of Counsel "applying for reassignment" does not arise. The Registrar further expresses concerns that "to date there has been no approach to court to discuss the security concerns of Counsel nor any determination made that the court is even able to meet those security concerns, and if it could, how long it would take to investigate and implement any recommended security measures. There is no evidence that Counsel have reassessed their security concerns so it can be presumed that the conditions upon which they sought to withdraw from the trial still exist. " Clearly the Registrar's concerns are all purely speculative and are only capable of ascertainment once Counsel are reassigned and are back on board. As regards the Registrar's submissions that Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris are no longer eligible for reassignment, I am strongly of the view that the Registrar only removed their names from the Principal defender's list precisely in order to render them ineligible for reassignment. I will deal with this issue in greater detail below. Suffice to say here that the removal of Counsel's names from the Principal Defender's list was, in my view, not done in good faith and therefore cannot be used as a ground to thwart the Accused persons' choice of counsel. I would conclude this issue by stating that I agree with the submissions of the Accused persons and the Deputy Principal Defender on this issue. I acknowledge the fact that both Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris if reassigned would in future have to be more diligent in expeditiously addressing their security concerns to the relevant departments of the Special Court. For now it is sufficient that they have indicated their readiness and willingness to defend the accused persons, notwithstanding their earlier security concerns. I should perhaps add that in my opinion, the feelings of "fear" and "insecurity" are a personal and subjective affair and that the Trial Chamber should not only listen when Counsel express their feelings of fear and insecurity but should also listen when Counsel say that those feelings have subsided or no longer prevent them from efficiently performing their duties. I resolve this issue in the affirmative.

(v) Whether the Registrar acted within his powers in directing the Deputy Principal Defender not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as Defence Counsel for the respective Accused persons and in subsequently removing their names from the Principal Defender's list of eligible Counsel.

50. The Registrar submitted that "Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris were directed to be removed by the Acting Registrar from the List of Qualified Counsel suitable for assignment on 25 May when it became apparent that they were still on the List. This was despite the fact that they had withdrawn from the trial and that the security concerns, which were a major reason which caused them to seek to withdraw, had not been addressed by Counsel in any manner with the court Registry. In the circumstances the Accused persons have no basis upon which to make their application because the Counsel they request are not on the list from which they can choose."[49] The Registrar further maintained that in refusing to reappoint Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris as Lead Counsel for the Accused persons Brima and Kamara respectively, he was "upholding the statutory rights of the Accused persons under Article 17 (4) (d) of the Statute and in the interests of justice".[50] He further submitted that the Trial Chamber in permitting Counsel to withdraw found them unfit to continue representing the Accused persons and ordered that other counsel be assigned to replace them. The Registrar submitted that when he rejected the Accused persons' choice of former Counsel for reassignment he was simply implementing the Trial Chamber's earlier Decision that ordered the assignment of new Counsel, as well as the view expressed by the Hon. Justices pursuant to Rule 33 (B) that they would not accept reassignment of Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris as Lead Counsel for the Accused persons.[51] The Registrar further argued that "the Deputy Principal Defender as Acting head of the Defence Office acted contrary to the order of the Trial Chamber in being willing to reappoint Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris as Lead Counsel for the Accused persons"[52] and that consequently the Registrar acted legally and within his powers under Article 16 of the Statute in directing the Deputy Principal Defender to assign new counsel for the Accused persons. The Registrar argued that "the position of Principal Defender is not recognised under the Statute therefore the office of the Principal Defender has no statutory authority and that title comes under the authority of the Registrar and staff are subject to his administrative direction including ensuring that court orders are implemented. It therefore cannot be said that the Registrar is therefore illegally interfering with the role of the Acting head of the Defence Office when he directs her to assign other Counsel to represent the Accused persons. These directions and action to appoint Counsel are administrative matters within the authority of the Registrar."[53] Lastly the Registrar argues that "the Trial Chamber has no power to order anyone to enter into a contract. The process of contract negotiations is a matter for individual parties to reach agreement on the terms of a contract. That is a matter for the parties and should not be constrained by any order to enter a contract from the Trial Chamber."[54] Their Lordships in the Majority Decision agree with the Registrar's submissions in their entirety.

51. In reply to the Registrar's submissions the Applicants maintained that the Registrar's direction for the removal of Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris from the List of Qualified Counsel was arbitrary, ultra vires and had no legal justification. They argued further that under Article 13 (E) of the Directive on Assignment of Counsel the power to remove Counsel from that list is vested solely in the Principal Defender and that in any event, at the time the accused filed the present Motion on 24 May 2005 the names of Counsel were still on that list. The Accused argue that the Registrar had a duty to investigate the security concerns of Counsel and in the absence of proven misconduct or breach of the Code of Conduct, Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris should never have been removed from the List. The Accused further argued that the circumstances that caused them to withdraw instructions from Counsel including the issue of the contempt proceedings, no longer exist. On her part the Deputy Principal Defender argued that under the Rules and Directive on Assignment of Counsel, the power to assign and replace counsel and to include and remove from the list of qualified counsel is solely vested in the Principal Defender's Office. She argued further that although the Defence Office is administratively and financially accountable to the Registrar, his role with respect to matters concerning the rights of accused persons is limited to giving support to that office and does not extend to review or usurpation of the Principal Defender's decisions with regard to the rights of accused persons. The Deputy Principal Defender further argued that in the absence of the substantive office holder, she served in an acting capacity as head of the Defence Office and by virtue of that capacity exercised the full powers of the Principal at the material time. She also argues that since both Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris have no record of misconduct and have indicated their willingness and availability for reassignment, the Accused persons should be permitted to choose them as their reassigned counsel.

52. The resolution of this issue requires a prior understanding of the genesis of the Defence Office of the Special Court as well the inter-relationship between Defence Office and the Principal Defender on the one hand and the office of the Registrar of the Special Court on the other. The traditional practice appertaining in international tribunals like the ICTY, ICTR (and until January 2003 the Special Court for Sierra Leone), has been that there was no independent professional section or department of the international tribunal charged with looking after the rights of accused persons appearing before the Tribunal. For example, while the ICTY and ICTR have administrative offices that handle the affairs of the Defence, neither of the ad hoc international tribunals a permanent institution entrusted with "ensuring the rights of suspects and accused persons" appearing before them. Prior to April 2002 the office of the Registrar handled all aspects of the Defence. This practice has however, been the subject of much international criticism as it does not provide for effective representation of the Defence and has led to significant inequalities between the Defence and Prosecution. In her "Report on the Establishment of a Defence for the Special Court for Sierra Leone"[55] Sylvia de Bertodano observes:

"One of the principal guarantees of the right to a fair trial is the provision of adequate facilities for an accused person's defence. Trials can only achieve this legitimacy if there is equality of arms between the defence and prosecution. The prosecution of crimes under international law requires not only an effective prosecution office, but also an effective defence. If this is not provided, trials will not be regarded as having been fair, and their verdicts will not be regarded as legitimate. The forthcoming trials before the SCSL will be subjected to a high degree of national and international scrutiny. The court cannot afford to give the impression that the process is overloaded in favour of the prosecution. Defence is often overlooked in the early stages of planning for international trials. The ICTY in its early stages made no proper provision for the defence, and in the preliminary months of its first case was employing only one defence lawyer. The Special Panels for Serious Crimes in East Timor were planned without any regard to the need for defence, and began their operation with only one junior overseas lawyer acting as a public defender, along with newly qualified national public defenders. The spectacle of nervous newly qualified lawyers facing up to experienced international prosecutors before the Special Panels in East Timor was not an edifying one. Although attempts have been made to improve the situation, there has never been any real recovery from this position. On the other hand, other institutions have given rise to grave concerns at the unmanageable costs of providing defence representation. These have surfaced in relation to both ad hoc tribunals, in particular the ICTR, where over-billing, dishonest practices and lack of proper caps and controls has resulted in a grossly inflated defence budget. The Registry of the SCSL expresses concern that both these extremes should be avoided, and that a system should be instituted which succeeds in improving a high standard of representation for defendants at a proportionate and manageable cost."

53. In January 2003 the Management Committee reached the conclusion that a Defence Office should be created and headed by a Principal Defender, with a Defence Advisor and three Duty Counsel together with administrative support. Prior to the establishment of the Defence Office the role of the Defence had been essentially ignored through all the early stages of the creation of the court. The "bare bones" of Article 17 of the Statute, which provides for rights and minimum guarantees of an accused person does not stipulate how those rights and guarantees were to be secured. Thus although not originally provided for in the Statute of the Special Court, the Defence Office became an innovation incorporated into Rule 45 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, and entrusted with "ensuring the rights of suspects and accused persons". Commenting on the newly established Defence Office of the Special Court, Rupert Skilbeck[56] writes:

"If the Special Court is judged a success, the Defence Office is likely to be a structure that is repeated in other countries. If that is the case, then the unique model of the Defence Office is clearly one that should be adopted. It has to be acknowledged that it is absolutely essential for the defence to be considered on an equal basis to the prosecution from the very start, in terms of legal capacity, administrative support, investigations, public relations, media coverage and outreach. Without this there cannot be a fair trial."

54. It is clear from its genesis that the Defence Office was established to "ensure the statutory rights of suspects and accused persons", which role the Management Committee and Plenary of Judges reckoned could no longer be adequately performed by the Registrar's Office. With the promulgation of Rule 45 of the Rules, that role was solely vested in the Defence Office and no longer lies with the Registry. The fact that the Defence Office was provided for in the Rules rather than the Statute does not, in my opinion, detract from the important role and mandate of that office. What is of paramount importance is that the establishment of the Defence Office was commissioned by both the Management Committee and the Plenary of Judges, the two legislative arms of the Special Court. Against that background the Registrar's submission that "the position of Principal Defender is not recognised under the Statute therefore the office of the Principal Defender has no statutory authority" is inconceivable. Under Rule 45 of the Rules the Registrar is charged with the responsibility of establishing, maintaining and developing the Defence Office. The Registrar is not charged with the running or operations of the Defence Office. That responsibility lies solely with the head of the Defence Office, namely the Principal Defender. In carrying out its mandate under Rule 45 of "ensuring the rights of suspects and accused persons" the Defence Office headed by the Principal Defender is expected to carry out the functions stipulated in Rule 45 (A), (B), (C) and (D), including compilation and maintenance of a list of qualified criminal defence counsel, as well as assignment and / or replacement of counsel to indigent suspects and accused persons. Again these important functions are vested solely in the Defence Office and performed by or under the supervision of the Principal Defender. The Directive on Assignment of Counsel sets out further guidelines for the Principal Defender's role of assignment of counsel as well as maintenance of the list of qualified counsel. There is nothing in the Directive remotely suggesting that the Principal Defender should perform those functions in consultation with or subject to the direction of the Registrar. It would appear to me on the reading and interpretation of Rule 45 and the Directive on Assignment of Counsel, that the Defence Office in the performance of its functions, was deliberately envisaged to act with a high degree of autonomy and independence from any other body. It is precisely the autonomous and independent nature of the defence Office that calls for the highest calibre and professionalism of its officials, subject only to judicial review. Thus while the Registrar is expected to exercise administrative and financial oversight over the Defence Office and to give it logistical and other administrative support, he is not expected to take over the functions of the Defence Office or to veto the decisions of its officials made in pursuance of their mandate. That in my opinion, would appear to be an accurate statement of the law on this issue.

55. If I am right, it logically follows that where the Defence Office generally or the Principal Defender in particular has taken a certain stand or decision on matters falling within their mandate (i.e. ensuring the rights of suspects and accused persons), any purported interference or veto of that stand or decision (other than by way of judicial review) is clearly ultra vires and null and void. Given that in this case the Acting Principal Defender had in exercise of her mandate taken a stand to reappoint Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris as Lead Counsel for Brima and Kamara respectively, the Registrar's decision directing her not to reappoint them and instead to appoint other counsel, is clearly ultra vires and null and void. By the same token the Registrar's unilateral decision to remove the names of Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris from the Principal Defender's list, against the advice of the Acting Principal Defender was also clearly ultra vires and null and void.

56. Regarding the argument that the Deputy Principal Defender acted without proper authority since she had not substantively been appointed "Acting Principal Defender", the law is already settled on this matter. In the Brima Decision referred to earlier, Trial Chamber I dealt with the issue of court officials serving in an acting capacity and said the following:

"In view of the very nature and functioning of public or private services, it is, and should always be envisaged, that the substantive holder of the position is not expected to there at all times. In order to ensure a proper functioning and a continuity of services with a view to avoiding a disruption in the administrative machinery, the Administration envisages and recognises the concept of "Acting Officials" in the absence of their substantive holders."

The Trial Chamber went on to observe that,

"Where an official is properly appointed or designated to act in a position during the absence of the substantive holder of that position, the Acting Official enjoys the same privileges and prerogatives as those of the substantive official and in that capacity can take the decisions inherent in that position. The trial Chamber would like to observe that to perform such functions which would give rise to far reaching and contentious confrontations as has happened in the instant case, the concerned official should have been regularly, clearly and expressly be appointed or designated as Acting Principal Defender whilst waiting for the recruitment of the substantive holder of the position. We say this because the exercise of administrative duties, functions or discretions, is founded on the notion of empowerment to exercise the duties that go with that office or the discretions that relate to it. This empowerment is conferred on the official purporting to so act, by a legislative, statutory, regulatory or administrative instrument which clearly defines his competence, and on which the substantive holder of the position functions and takes decisions."

57. In the instant case it is a fact that at the time of filing of the present Motion there was no substantive holder of the Office of Principal Defender as Ms. Simone Monasebian the former Principal defender had left the Special Court and Mr. Vincent Mnehielle the new Principal Defender had not yet reported for duty. It was during this administrative "vacuum" that the present Motion was filed as "extremely urgent". Consequently Ms. Elizabeth Nahamya the Deputy Principal Defender found herself in the unenviable position of having to choose between waiting for the new Principal Defender to arrive or simply assuming his powers in order to handle an emergency. This was because the Registrar had not officially designated anyone to serve in an "acting capacity" pending the arrival of the new Principal Defender. Ideally, such a vacuum should never be allowed to occur as it may compromise the rights of the accused persons. Rather than jeopardise the rights of the Applicants it was expedient that the next most senior official of the Defence Office, namely the Deputy Principal Defender should step into the shoes of an "Acting Principal Defender", as Ms. Nahamya did. I find therefore that she acted diligently and lawfully. In concluding this issue I find that the Registrar's decision directing the Deputy Principal Defender not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as Defence Counsel for the respective Accused persons and in subsequently removing their names from the Principal Defender's list of eligible Counsel were ultra vires his powers and are null and void. This brings me to the pen ultimate issue.

(vi) Whether the Deputy Principal Defender was bound to comply with the directives of the Registrar relating to the non-assignment of Counsel and their removal from the list of qualified Counsel.

58. Having found as I did above that the Registrar's decision directing the Deputy Principal Defender not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as Defence Counsel for the respective Accused persons and in subsequently removing their names from the Principal Defender's list of eligible Counsel were ultra vires his powers and are null and void, I find also that the Deputy Principal Defender was not bound to comply with those directives. I would add here that I find the issues raised in the Deputy Principal defender's Cross-Motion superfluous as they have already largely been addressed in the present Motion.

(vii) Whether the Trial Chamber has power to review the Registrar's decision not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as assigned Counsel, and his decision to remove their names from the list of qualified Counsel.

59. I have earlier on in this opinion examined the inherent jurisdiction of the Trial Chamber in reviewing the actions of administrative Officials of the court in order to check and curb their arbitrary acts, conduct or decisions. It logically follows from those earlier findings that the Trial Chamber has not only the inherent jurisdiction but also the power to review the Registrar's decision not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as assigned Counsel, and his decision to remove their names from the list of qualified Counsel. I sum up the role of the First Respondent in this matter as that of an official who acted in excess of his statutory and administrative powers. It is therefore my considered opinion that the Trial Chamber should have allowed the present Motion and that the arguments advanced to support it are founded as against those of the First respondent which are both factually and legally unconvincing.

Conclusion:

60. Finally, recognising that the Majority Decision unquestionably prevails , I would allow the present Motion and declare the Registrar's decision directing the Deputy Principal Defender not to reassign Mr. Kevin Metzger and Mr. Wilbert Harris as Defence Counsel for the respective Accused persons and in subsequently removing their names from the Principal Defender's list of eligible Counsel, ultra vires and are null and void. I would further order that the Principal defender immediately reinstates the names of M. Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris on the list of qualified Counsel. I would further order that the Principal Defender complies with the choice of counsel that the Accused persons Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara have made.

TRIAL CHAMBER II ("Trial Chamber") of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court"), composed of Justice Teresa Doherty, presiding, Justice Richard Lussick and Justice Julia Sebutinde;

SEISED of the Extremely Urgent Confidential Joint Motion for the Re-Appointment of Kevin Metzger and Wilbert Harris as Lead Counsel for Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara, Pursuant to Articles 17(4)(C) and 17(4)(D) of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone and Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence and the Inherent Jurisdiction of the Court, filed on 24 May 2005 ("Motion") on behalf of the Accused Brima and Kamara;

NOTING that the Motion names the Registrar as First Respondent and the Acting Principal Defender as Second Respondent; DECIDES AS FOLLOWS.

I. THE SUBMISSIONS OF THE PARTIES

MOTION

1. Counsel for Alex Tamba Brima and Brima Bazzy Kamara seek the following orders:

   i. "In the first place, based on the foregoing arguments, the Defence herewith respectfully prays the Trial Chamber to order the Registrar to ensure that Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris are re-assigned as Counsel for Accused persons Brima and Kamara.

   ii. In the second place, an order to the Acting Principal Defender to immediately enter into a legal services contract with Mr. Metzger and Mr. Harris.

   iii. In the third place, that the Justices that re-confirmed the order not to re-appoint as indicated in the letter from the Registrar's Legal Advisor recluse (sic) themselves from hearing this present Motion.

iv. In the fourth place, an order to declare as null and void the decision of the Registrar not to re-assign Counsel as the decision was made without legal or just cause and therefore ought to be quashed accordingly and set aside.

v. In the fifth place, any other relief the Trial Chamber may deem fit and appropriate in the circumstance".

2. The Motion purports to set out a chronology of events leading up to this application. Reference is made to the application filed on May 5, 2005, by Lead Counsel for Brima and Kamara wherein the Trial Chamber was requested to: (a) approve the withdrawal of Counsel as Counsel for the accused, (b) not order that Counsel hitherto on record be made Court Appointed Counsel and (c) make any order that the Trial Chamber deems appropriate. Although the responses are recited, no mention is made of the order of the Trial Chamber of 12 May 2005 when the Trial Chamber by a majority decision granted leave to both Counsel to withdraw.

3. The Motion refers to a letter dated May 12, 2005 written by the Accused to the Principal Defender and to subsequent meetings held between the Defence Office and the Accused, but fails to mention that the said letter was not revealed to the Trial Chamber until 16 May 2005, on which day the Trial Chamber ruled:

> "This Court read an order on an application. The application was an application to withdraw. That order was made and any letters, correspondence or documents that seek to go behind that decision cannot be countenanced in this Court. The decision has been made".

4. The Defence submits that the decision of the Registrar refusing the re-appointment of the two Lead Counsel is in breach of the rights of the Accused persons to have counsel of their "own choosing" as provided for in Article 17(4)d of the Statute of the Special Court.

5. The Defence further submits that in matters relating to the assignment of defence counsel, an accused has a right to be consulted regarding his wishes and that the Registrar may only refuse those wishes "on reasonable and valid grounds". It submits that reasonable and valid grounds are those which may occasion withdrawal, non-appointment or reinstatement of Counsel, including proven incompetence or misconduct, serious violation of the Code of Conduct, or where the name of the Assigned Counsel has been removed from the list kept by the Principal Defender under Rule 45(C) and Article 13 of the Directive on the Assignment of Counsel. The reasons stated in the Registrar's letter, it is submitted, do not constitute reasonable and valid grounds for not reinstating Lead Counsel.

6. The Defence goes on to argue that, in the absence of duly proven misconduct or incompetence, it is not for the Trial Chamber to stipulate who should represent an accused person. It submits that the former Lead Counsel are familiar with the case and appointment of other Counsel will result in delay.

7. The Defence further submits that an expression of preference or otherwise for Counsel by the Trial Chamber, gives the impression however unintended, of bias and interference with the statutory rights of the Accused persons.

8. The Defence subscribes to the observations and opinions stated by the Hon. Justice Sebutinde in her Memorandum dated 19 May 2005 and claims that the substantive legal issues of ultra vires, perceived judicial impropriety, potential bias and conflict of interest, and the potential compromise of fair and impartial conduct of the trial are so palpable that the other two judges of this Trial Chamber ought to recuse themselves from hearing the present Motion.

9. Finally, the Defence seeks judicial review of the Registrar's decision not to re-assign the two Counsel who withdrew from the case to ensure the observance of due process of law, and prevent improper vexation and oppression in the administration of justice.

DEFENCE OFFICE'S RESPONSE

10. In reply the 2nd Respondent – the Deputy Principal Defender – argues that the Directive on the Assignment of Counsel and Rule 45 imply the Principal Defender's lead role in assigning and replacing counsel and his independent and autonomous decision-making authority. She points out that the Registry is not mentioned in the provisions governing assignment and replacement of counsel, but rather in provisions dealing with administration and servicing. She submits that the Registrar's delegation of the defence duties to the OPD limits the Registrar's role in assigning counsel and he does not have explicit power to review determinations of the Principal Defender. Alternatively, if the Registrar does have implicit power to review the Principal Defender's appointment decisions, then such power is subject to a "reasonable and valid grounds" test.

PRINCIPAL DEFENDER'S CROSS-MOTION

11. The Cross-Motion seeks clarification of the meaning of the word "permit" used in the majority order of the Trial Chamber of 12 May 2005, and whether counsel must actually withdraw if he has only been "permitted to withdraw". The Deputy Principal Defender also seeks guidance on the meaning of "another" as in the phrase "appoint another counsel". She also makes a submission that there is no Rule or Directive disqualifying counsel who has previously withdrawn from the case, and so any disqualification may be perceived as a penalty for complying with the clients' wishes and their local code of ethics.

REGISTRAR'S RESPONSE TO THE MOTION

12. The 1st Respondent, the Registrar, notes that the Counsel in question were, on the 25th. May 2005, removed from the List of Qualified Counsel suitable for assignment as Lead Counsel when it was noticed that they were still on the list despite the fact that they had withdrawn from the trial and that the security concerns, which were a major reason which caused them to seek to withdraw, had not been addressed by Counsel in any manner with the Registry.

13. Accordingly, the Registrar submits that there is no basis for the Motion since the Counsel requested by the Accused are not on the List of Qualified Counsel from which they can choose.

14. The Registrar further submits that while the position of Registrar is recognised under Article 16 of the Statute, the position of Principal Defender has no statutory authority and therefore that title and the Defence Office come under the statutory authority of the Registrar and they are subject to his administrative direction, and that includes ensuring that court orders are implemented.

15. Hence the Registrar states that he has sought to ensure that the decision of the Trial Chamber on 12 May wherein it directed another Counsel be appointed by the Principal Defender to represent the accused is complied with. He submits that his action in refusing to allow the acting head of the Defence Office to re-appoint Counsel, is within the responsibility and powers the Registrar has to direct staff under his authority and to ensure that court orders are complied with.

16. The Registrar further submits that the Motion, by seeking to allow the acting head of the Defence Office to re-appoint Counsel in contravention of the Trial Chamber's decision of 12 May, is in reality seeking to ignore and "go behind" the order of the Trial Chamber which allowed Counsel to withdraw from the case, and therefore constitutes an abuse of process.

17. He also submits that statements from the accused that they are now prepared to provide full instructions should be disregarded as they have withdrawn instructions before and may do so again.

18. The Registrar states that the right of the Accused to be assigned Counsel of their choice is not absolute and that he must take into account all surrounding circumstances before deciding whether to accept a request by an accused for counsel. He sees the decision of the Trial Chamber in allowing the two Lead Counsel to withdraw as being based on the fact that Counsel were no longer in a position to properly defend the Accused, and regards the decision as an important matter to take into account to ensure that the Accused are properly represented. In support, he cites para. 60 of the decision:

> "We are of the view that Lead Counsel, with their present difficulties, would not be capable of acting in the best interest of their clients. We doubt that they would be able to represent their clients to the best of their ability when, apart from everything else, they are concerned for their own safety and that of their families. Although we are loath to come to a decision which possibly may adversely affect an expeditious trial, we are of the view that the rights of the Accused to be represented by counsel would best be served by appointing counsel able to carry out their duties free of the constraints inhibiting present Lead Counsel".

19. The Registrar argues that the Motion seeks to impose upon him a test of refusal on "reasonable and valid grounds" but that no such test is provided in the Rules or the Directive. However, he submits that if there is such a test, then he relies on the decision of the Trial Chamber allowing Lead Counsel to withdraw because they could not properly represent the Accused.

20. With reference to the Defence submission that there was extra judicial interference in the question of the re-appointment of Counsel, the Registrar states that he has the right under Rule 33(B) to make oral or written representations to Chambers on any issue arising in the context of a specific case which affects or may affect the discharge of such functions, including that of implementing judicial decisions. Pursuant to this right, his representations to the Trial Chamber were to seek clarification of its order; he was not seeking to be directed by the Trial Chamber.

21. He refers to the overall authority of the Registrar over the administration and servicing of the Special Court and argues that he is entitled to direct the Principal Defender on the assignment of counsel, which is an administrative matter.

JOINT DEFENCE REPLY TO REGISTRAR'S RESPONSE

22. The Defence reply, which is very strongly worded and, in our view, amounts to a personal attack on the Registrar, restates the Defence argument that the Registrar's direction not to reassign counsel is arbitrary and without legal foundation. The Reply also contains a further prayer for relief that the:

> "Motion of 24 May 2005 together with all subsequent responses and replies thereto be made public and heard in open court".

REGISTRAR'S RESPONSE TO CROSS-MOTION

23. The Registrar submits that the cross-motion is being used to extend the arguments of the Deputy Principal Defender and attempts to redefine the clear order of the Trial Chamber of 12 May 2005.

DEFENCE OFFICE'S REPLY TO REGISTRAR'S RESPONSE TO CROSS-MOTION

24. The Defence Office reiterates its mandate under Rule 45 to ensure the rights of the Accused. The new Principal Defender states that he is in a dilemma as to what to do in order to secure the best interests of the accused persons and in the interests of fair trial and justice, and that ultimately, the Defence Office will await the directive of the Trial Chamber in view of the multifarious motions, responses and replies already filed.

II. DELIBERATIONS

Further relief sought in Joint Defence Reply to Registrar's Response that the motions be heard in open Court.

25. We again note that Counsel have made an application for further relief in a Reply. We repeat what was stated by this Trial Chamber in the Decision on Joint Defence Motion on Disclosure of all Original Witness Statements, Interview Notes and Investigators' Notes Pursuant to Rules 66 and/or 68 (4 May 2005): "This is a practice that must be discouraged. A Reply is meant to answer matters raised by the other party in its Response, not to claim additional relief to that sought in the Motion. Obviously the other party, having already filed a Response to the Motion, has no way under the Rules to answer the new prayer, except to apply to the Trial Chamber for leave to do so. In future, the Trial Chamber will not hear claims for additional relief contained in a Reply".

Furthermore, we observe that there has been no submission to support or explain this application for a public hearing. Counsel refers to "security concerns" but ignores the fact that the Lead Counsel, in their original application to withdraw from the case sought to have the facts under seal and ex-parte as well as confidential. In the circumstances, we consider this application vexatious.

Relief sought in the substantive Motion

26. As recited above, the applicants seek four substantive orders. We again note that the chronology recited by the applicants omits fundamental facts, e.g. the order of the Trial Chamber of 12 May 2005, the ruling of 16 May 2005 and a letter of the 17 May 2005 from the Deputy Principal Defender to the Registrar. Without a clear statement that the Court made a ruling on 12 May 2005 granting in full the relief sought by Counsel to withdraw from the case, the Motion implies that the Trial Chamber gave orders to withdraw after and despite a letter from the accused asking for Counsel to be "maintained". Such implication that the Court acted without giving any consideration to the wishes and statements of the accused is improper.

27. Further, the submission fails to recite that the Court on 16 May 2005 recorded that its order had been made and letters, correspondence and documents that sought to go behind the order would not be countenanced.

28. Instead, the submission refers to consequential orders made on 13 May 2005, then to a letter from the Registrar on 19 May 2005 omitting both the ruling of 16 May 2005 and a memorandum from the Deputy Principal Defender to the Registrar on 17 May 2005, (which sought to have the Counsel re-assigned). That memorandum, very improperly in our view, fails to inform the Registrar of the Court's ruling of 16 May 2005.

29. The impression that the Registrar wrote on 19 May 2005 on his own volition or in a vacuum is misleading. We remind Counsel of their duty to the Court to be truthful. We cannot accept that failure to recite these 3 important matters was an oversight. Failure to be truthful is misleading and vexatious.

30. Further, Counsel submits that there was an expression of preference or otherwise for Counsel by Justices of the Trial Chamber. There is no evidence that the Justices made any statement of preference or otherwise and to imply impropriety by the Justices in this way is itself improper.

31. If Counsel seek to base their submission on the reference to the Registrar consulting with the Trial Chamber, then the submission fails to take account of the powers to the Registrar, pursuant to Rule 33B, to make oral or written representations to the Chamber on any issue arising in the context of a specific case which may affect the discharge of his functions. These functions, as the Deputy Principal Defender and the Registrar submit, include the duty to maintain a Defence office pursuant to Rule 45.

Specific Relief

32. (1) We consider it appropriate to first deal with the prayer for relief seeking the following: "That the Justices that reconfirmed the order not to re-appoint as indicated in the letter from the registrar's legal adviser recluse (sic) themselves from hearing this present Motion".

This prayer appears based on a premise that there was:

a. an order that Counsel not be re-appointed and;

b. that order was reconfirmed.

There was no order made in this Trial Chamber refusing re-appointment of Counsel per se. The orders sought in the original application were for leave for Counsel to withdraw from the case. The orders were granted in full as sought and additional orders for, inter alia, appointment of Lead Counsel were made.

The orders for appointment of other Lead Counsel were based on the mandatory provisions of Rule 45(E) obliging the Principal Defender to "assign another Counsel".

33. Since there was no determination of the issue of re-appointment of counsel, there are no grounds for submitting that any Judge recuse him/herself.

34. (2) That the Trial Chamber order the Registrar to ensure that Mr.Metzger and Mr. Harris are re-assigned as Counsel for Accused persons Brima and Kamara. The Lead Counsel Metzger and Harris applied to withdraw for various reasons of which their personal safety and that of their families was emphasized in oral submission. The Court is, in our view, entitled to assume that in keeping with professional ethics, they informed their respective clients of this decision to apply to withdraw.

35. The statement by the accused Kamara that he "did not know it would force my lead counsel to withdraw" (see Motion, Annex F, para.4) casts doubt upon that basic assumption. This and the statement from the accused Kamara that "I have deemed it fit to give him full instructions to come back and work on my case with my full support and continued cooperation" (see Motion, Annex F, para. 4) shows the Court that the accused have decided to frustrate the hearing by withdrawing instructions and then, when it suits them, giving instructions. There is no undertaking or clear indication that this pattern of behaviour will not be repeated to avoid interfering with a fair and expeditious hearing. In our earlier decision permitting Lead Counsel to withdraw, we found that the Accused were merely boycotting the trial and obstructing the course of justice. In our view, that is exactly what they are seeking to do in bringing the present Motion. We do not believe that they genuinely wish to be represented by those particular counsel. We believe that their real motive is to cause as much disruption to the Trial as possible.

36. As the Deputy Principal Defender has correctly stated, the duty to assign Counsel in the event of a withdrawal rests in the Principal Defender. However, we do not consider this entirely relevant as Rule 45(E) provides the appointment must be of "another" Counsel. There is no provision for re-assignment of former Counsel in the event that they or their clients, or both, have changed their mind.

37. (3) An Order to the Acting Principal Defender to immediately enter into a legal contract with Messrs Metzger and Harris:

We repeat the foregoing points and stress that there is no provision for re-appointment under Rule 45(E). Whilst the Trial Chamber has a duty to ensure that a trial is fair and expeditious, we do not have the power to interfere with the law relating to privity of contract.

38. (4) An Order to declare the decision of the Registrar not to re-assign Counsel null and void as it was made without legal or just cause.

As the Deputy Principal Defender has conceded in the absence of the Principal Defender, certain obligations to carry out duties fall upon the Registrar. He has a further overall duty to act as principal administrator of the Court.

39. In exercising his duty, the Registrar sought to uphold an order of the Trial Chamber allowing Counsel's application to withdraw and ordering that another Counsel be assigned in accordance with Rule 45(E).

40. To argue that upholding and implementing a Court Order, made on the application of the parties concerned, is "without legal or just cause" is fallacious.

41. The applicants have stressed the right of the accused to Counsel of their "own choosing" as provided by Article 17(4)(d) and have argued this allows them to have the Counsel they previously refused to instruct and co-operate with re-assigned to them. They submit the Trial Chamber must "ensure that the right [...] is not arbitrarily interfered with [...]"

42. This provision has been considered by various courts, both the International Tribunals and, as stated in the brief by Mr. Knoops, by the European Courts when interpreting Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

43. The accused in this case have declared themselves indigent and have, in accordance with Article 17(E)(d), a right to have legal assistance assigned.

44. However, the right to have legal assistance does not carry with it an absolute right to any Counsel.

45. As was held in the Prosecutor v. Martic by ICTY:

> "the jurisprudence of the International Tribunal and of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda indicates that the right of the indigent accused to counsel of his own choosing may not be unlimited but that, in general, the choice of any accused regarding this Defence Counsel in proceedings before the Tribunals shall be respected; that, in the view of the Chamber, the choice of all accused should be respected unless there exist well-founded reasons not to assign Counsel of choice".[1]

And in ICTY Prosecutor v. Knežević:

> "Contrary to the submission of the Accused and Mr. Drasko Zec, the right of indigent accused to counsel of his own choosing is not without limits; that the decision for the assignment of counsel rests with the Registrar, having to take into consideration the wishes of the accused, unless the Registrar has reasonable and valid grounds not to grant the request."[2]

46. And as stated by Ms. Knoops in paragraph 2 of his brief, the right of an accused to counsel "can be subject to certain restrictions, such restrictions should of course be interpreted in the perspective of the overall right of the accused to have a fair trial."

47. Mr. Knoops in his brief, does not resile from this restricted right of an accused but instead stresses the concept of equality of arms. However, we repeat our view in the decision on the Confidential Defence Application, quoted above, "that Lead Counsel with their present difficulties would not be capable of acting in the best interests of their clients".

48. We note the Defence reply that the "circumstances where Counsel previously withdrew his services for stated reasons and circumstances, some of which have changed" (paragraph 8). We have no direct evidence from Counsel that their circumstances have changed, and given that this application emanates from a letter from the accused purportedly written on the same day as the Trial Chamber's order, we question the bona fides of that statement.

The only change since our decision is that the accused are apparently now willing to give instructions to counsel, but all the other factors we considered in arriving at our decision are still in existence. We cannot escape the conclusion that the two lead counsel were not sincere in their reasons for bringing their motion to withdraw from the case and that they never expected it to succeed.

49. Further, it is unclear on what legal grounds this application is made. The application does not say it is founded on Rule 45(D) and makes no submission that there are exceptional circumstances that would allow the Trial Chamber to exercise its jurisdiction under Rule 45(D).

50. It appears that this application in reality is simply an application to reverse a majority decision given by the Trial Chamber on 12 May 2005 because in that decision all relief prayed for was granted to Counsel. A decision upholding the submissions made and granting the relief prayed for could hardly be appealed. Given the alacrity with which the accused and their Counsel and the Deputy Principal Defender sought to go behind that order and seek to reverse it, causes us to doubt the sincerity of the application to withdraw. By not giving instruction to their Counsel leading to withdrawal of counsel from the case, coupled with an immediate application to re-instate the same Counsel, the accused have seriously delayed and obstructed this trial.

[2] The Prosecutor v. Knežević, Case No. IT-95-4-PT, IT-95-8/1-PT, Decision on Accused's request for Review of Registrar's Decision as to Assignment of Counsel, 6 September 2002.

51. Moreover, since the Accused had not been coming to court and were not giving instructions to their counsel (although those were not the only reasons why counsel sought to withdraw from the case), we directed under Rule 60(B) that the Accused be represented by Court-appointed counsel (who were already part of the Defence team) and that the Principal Defender assign another lead counsel to each of the Accused. We were satisfied that these were the proper measures to protect the rights of the Accused, in particular their right to be tried without undue delay as enshrined in Article 17(4)(c). We do not have the jurisdiction to revisit that decision, nor do we see any good reason to re-appoint the counsel concerned. In any event, it appears that the said Counsel are not eligible to be reappointed since they are no longer on the list of qualified counsel required to be kept under Rule 45(C).

52. Having held that this Motion is not founded on bona fide motives and seeks to reverse an order granting relief which the Defence itself sought, we consider this Motion to be frivolous and vexatious and for this and the foregoing reasons, we dismiss the motion and refuse the relief prayed for therein.

Cross Motion

53. The Deputy Principal Defender has filed a Cross-Motion in response to the Defence Motion. We again repeat, a response or reply should not be used as a vehicle to seek further relief. The Acting Principal Defender seeks clarification of the majority order of 12 May 2005 and asks if "permit to withdraw" means Counsel are required to withdraw and if "another" Counsel means Counsel other than those who withdrew.

54. The application then argues that there is no provisions disqualifying counsel who have previously withdrawn and suggests the "disqualification may be perceived as a penalty". In our opinion, this is a speculative statement implying an unspecified party has been subjected to some form of penalty and is made without foundation.

55. The then Principal Defender, Ms. Monasebian, sought clarification of the order and appointment of other Counsel in open Court on 12 May 2005 and accepted the replies of Hon. Justice Lussick and the Presiding Judge. For the benefit of the Deputy Principal Defender, when the Trial Chamber permits counsel to withdraw from the case, it is the duty of the Principal Defender under Rule 45(E) to assign another counsel to the indigent accused. The word "another" is defined in the Paperback Oxford English dictionary as meaning: "1. one more. 2. different from the one already mentioned".

56. If the Deputy Principal Defender is still in doubt as to the meaning of the orders we made in court on the 12 May 2005, we would draw her attention to the transcript of that date, page, 4 lines 11 to 21, where the following exchange took place:

> "JUDGE LUSSICK: We'll be relying on you, Ms. Monasebian, to appoint two new lead counsel in accordance with the order. But we are very confident that the co-counsel can carry the case in the meantime, as they have been doing for long sessions in any event.
> Ms. MONASEBIAN: And they are permitted to, that's right.
>
> JUDGE LUSSICK: Certainly, yes. We are well aware they are permitted to do that.
> Ms. MONASEBIAN: Yes, yes. Thank you for that clarification and that just leads me to know that we have to assign other people in due course. Thank you for that, Your Honours."

57. We have added emphasis in places in the hope that it will aid the Deputy Principal Defender's understanding. Certainly, the Principal Defender at the time had no difficulty in knowing what her duty was and accepted that new lead counsel would need to be appointed.

58. The other matter raised in the Deputy Principal Defender's Cross-Motion is as follows:

> "The Defence Office seeks an order offering guidance as to the application of the word "permit" to withdraw used in the majority Order of the Court of 12 May 2005 and its subsequent Decision dated 20 May 2005. Must Counsel necessarily be required to withdraw if he is only "permitted to withdraw"?

59. If the Deputy Principal Defender is putting this to the Trial Chamber as a hypothetical question then we would inform her that the Trial Chamber does not make findings on hypotheses. If, on other hand, she is suggesting that the two lead counsel brought a Motion to withdraw from the case when they had no intention of doing so if the motion were granted, then we would view that as a serious impropriety.

60. We refer to the Registrar's Reply to the Motion and agree with his submissions on the law. We find that in implementing the orders of this Trial Chamber, the Registrar has acted within his authority and power.

61. Looking at the history of this case since we made our order on the 12 May 2005, it seems to us as though the Deputy Principal Defender has gone out of her way to undermine our decision. Almost a month has gone by and she has not made any attempt to appoint new lead counsel. It appears she is unwilling to do her job, and unwilling to follow the directions of the Registrar, who has overall authority over the administration of the Special Court and, in particular, over the assignment of counsel, which is an administrative matter.

62. We noted the Cross Motion sought clarification only and having made those clarifications no orders are required.

FOR ALL THE ABOVE REASONS

the Trial Chamber dismisses the Motion.

Hon. Justice Julia Sebutinde will deliver a separate dissenting opinion.

light of the several challenges to the indictment raised by the Defence, this Trial Chamber deems it necessary to recall, with emphasis, its major judicial focus as regards defects in the form of indictments in the context of international criminality. The Trial Chamber's focus is that:

> where the allegations relate to ordinary or conventional crimes within the setting of domestic or national criminality, the degree of specificity required for pleading the indictment may be much greater than it would be where the allegations relate to unconventional or extraordinary crimes for example, mass killings, mass rapes and wanton and widespread destruction of property (in the context of crimes against humanity and grave violations of international humanitarian law) within the setting of international criminality.[19]

20. The Trial Chamber wishes to observe that the same general judicial focus is shared by our sister tribunals ICTY and ICTR. Admittedly, how each tribunal applies this judicial approach to individual cases of alleged defects in the form of the indictment must, and will, necessarily vary with the particular context, specific parameters of the criminal activities forming the substrata of the allegations charged in the indictment, and the totality of the circumstances as alleged.

21. Given the frequent citation before the Trial Chamber of ICTY and ICTR case-law authorities for the Chamber's guidance as the interpretation of general principles of law in the context of international criminal adjudication, largely due to the nascent character of the Special Court's evolving jurisprudence, this Trial Chamber deems it necessary to comment on this forensic trend.

22. In this connection, the Trial Chamber emphasises that its application of the ICTY and ICTR jurisprudence is not due to a statutory imperative predicated upon a binding relationship of these UN Security Council-established International Criminal Tribunals on the Special Court; indeed, the Statute of the Special Court specifies that the Appeals Chamber of the Special Court shall be "guided" by, and not bound by, decisions of the Appeals Chamber of the two International Tribunals.[20] There is, however, a special relationship envisioned between the Special Court and the magnitude on which the acts or events allegedly took place, (iv) the circumstances under which the crimes were allegedly committed, (v) the duration of time over which the said acts or events constituting the crimes occurred, (vi) the time span between the occurrence of the evenrs and the filing of the indictment, (vii) the totality of the circumstances surrounding the commission of the alleged crimes."

[19] Sesay Decision, para. 9.

[20] Article 20(3) of the Statute of the Special Court. See also, Report of the Secretary-general on the establishment of a Special Court for Sierra Leone, S/2000/915, 4 October 2000 ("Report of the Secretary-General on Special Court"), paras 40-46 (on the proposal of sharing one Appeals Chamber between the International Tribunals and the Special Court). Paragraph 41 is particularly instructive: "While in theory the establishment of an overarching Appeals Chamber as the ultimate judicial authority in matters of interpretation and application of international humanitarian law offers a guarantee of developing a coherent body of law, in practice, the same result may be achieved by linking the jurisprudence of the Special Court to that of the International Tribunals, without imposing on the shared Appeals Chamber the financial and administrative constraints of formal institutional link."

International Tribunals, as each institution is established to permit prosecutions for inter alia "serious violations of international humanitarian law". As such, the International Tribunals, the Special Court and the International Criminal Court belong to a unique, and still emerging, system of international criminal justice.

23. This special relationship is reflected not only in Article 20 of the Statute but also through the fact that, under the Statute of the Special Court, the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the ICTR applied mutatis mutandis to the conduct of legal proceedings before this Court.[21] It can therefore be concluded that the drafters of the Statute of the Special Court not only envisioned that this Court would follow the procedures established by the ICTR – with necessary modifications – but furthermore, that the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the ICTR can be construed as reflective of the general principles of law applicable to criminal proceedings in which the principles of international criminal law and international humanitarian law are applied.

24. Like the Special Court,[22] the ICTY and the ICTR are bound to apply customary international law,[23] and their decisions do, as a matter of principle, apply customary international law. It is for this reason that this Court applies persuasively decisions taken at the ICTY and ICTR. While noting that the obligations upon the ICTY and ICTR, as well as the Special Court, in relation to the application of customary international law and respect for the principle of nullum crimen sine lege are specifically related to the subject-matter of these institutions, the Trial Chamber finds that the two Tribunals also apply general principles of law on matters related to evidence and procedure.[24] The Trial Chamber [21] See, Article 14 of the Statute of the Special Court.

[22] See Report of the Secretary-General on Special Court, para. 12: "In recognition of the principle of legality, in particular nullum crimen sine lege, and the prohibition on retroactive criminal legislation, the international crimes enumerated, are crimes considered to have the character of customary international law at the time of the alleged commission of the crime."

[23] See, Report of the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraph 2 of the Security Council Resolution 808(1993), S/25704, 3 May 1993 (on the Statute of the ICTY), para. 34 (on subject-matter jurisdiction): In the view of the Secretary-General, the application of the principle nullum crimen sine lege requires that the international tribunal should apply rules of international humanitarian law which are beyond any doubt part of customary law so that the problem of adherence of some but not all States to specific conventions does not arise. This would appear to be particularly important in the context of an international tribunal prosecuting persons responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law; and Report of the Secretary-General pursuant to paragtaph 5 of Security Council Resolution 955(1994), S/1995/134, 13 February 1995 (on the Statute of the ICTR), para. 12 (on subject-matter jurisdiction): "...the Security Council has elected to take a more expansive approach to the choice of the applicable law that than the one underlying the statute of the Yugoslav Tribunal, and included within the subject-matter jurisdiction of the Rwanda Tribunal international instruments regardless of whether they are consideted part of customary international law or whether they have customarily entailed the individual criminal responsibility of the perpetrator of the crime. [...]"

[24] The Trial Chamber notes that Rule 89 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of both the ICTR and the ICTY provides, in relevant part: "(A) A Chamber shall apply the rules of evidence set forth in this Section, and shall not be bound by national rules of evidence. (B) In cases not otherwise provided for in this Section, a Chamber shall apply rules observes that decisions of both Tribunals are based on recognised sources of law consistent with Article 38 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice.[25]

25. Accordingly, as stated in some of its major decisions so far,[26] the Special Court will apply the decisions of the ICTY and ICTR for their persuasive value, with necessary modifications and adaptations, taking into account the particular circumstances of the Special Court.[27] The Trial Chamber will, however, where it finds it necessary or particularly instructive, conduct its own independent analysis of the state of customary international law or a general principle of law on matters related to inter alia evidence or procedure. Additionally, in cases where the Trial Chamber finds that its analysis of a certain point or principles of law may differ from that of either the ICTY or ICTR, it shall base its decisions on its own reasoned analysis.

26. It is against the background of this preliminary analysis as to the applicable jurisprudence that the several challenges advanced by the Defence would be examined on their merits. Before embarking on that exercise, however, it is necessary to dispose at this stage of the preliminary issue raised by the Prosecution, which is that the Motion, in accordance with Rule 72(A), is time-barred.

B. On the Time Limits for Filing the Motion

27. The records show that the Prosecution made disclosures of witness statements or summaries to the Defence in November 2003 and February 2004, on various dates. Based on the facts and circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that disclosure was done pursuant to Rule 66(A)(i).

of evidence which will best favour a fair determination of the matter before it and are consonant with the spirit of the Statute and the general principles of law."

[25] Article 38(1) of the Statute of the International Court of Justice states: "1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply: a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states; b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law; c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations; d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law."

[26] See, e.g., Prosecutor v. Issa Hassan Sesay, Case No. SCSL-03-05-PT, Decision on the Prosecutor's Motion for Immediate Protective Measures for Witnesses and Victims and for Non-Public Disclosure, 23 May 2003, paras 11-12. See also, Joinder Decision, paras 26-28.

[27] The Trial Chamber is cognisant of the fact that the temporal jurisdiction of each of the International Criminal Tribunals may impact upon the applicability of certain of their findings of the state of customary international law at the time relevant to those Tribunals, as opposed to the temporal jurisdiction of the Special Court.

28 The Prosecution further alleged a number of errors of law and of fact: (i) in relation to the Trial Chamber's acquittal of Fofana and Kondewa (on Count 6) of terrorism as a war crime (Ground 6) and (ii) in refusing to consider acts of burning for the purposes of the war crime of pillage as charged under Count 5 of the Indictment (Ground 7).

29 In Grounds 8 and 9 the Prosecution alleged mixed errors of law and fact and of procedure, respectively, in that the Trial Chamber denied leave for the Prosecution to amend the Indictment in order to add four new counts of sexual violence (Ground 8) and in preventing the Prosecution from "leading, eliciting or adducing" evidence of sexual violence (Ground 9).

30 Finally, in its Ground 10, the Prosecution, in respect of its appeal against sentence, complained that the Trial Chamber erred in law and in fact and committed a procedural error, "in that there has been a discernible error in the exercise of the Trial Chamber's sentencing discretion" in the sentencing of Fofana and Kondewa.

D. Some Guiding Principles on Appellate Review

31 Before the Appeals Chamber embarks on a detailed consideration of the Parties' Grounds of Appeal, it is expedient to state at the threshold, albeit in general terms, some of the principles of appellate review that will guide it.

32 In regard to errors of law: On appeal, pursuant to Article 20 of the Statute and Rule 106 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules"),[60] only arguments relating to errors in law that invalidate the decision of the Trial Chamber would merit consideration. Some International Criminal Tribunals hold the view that in exceptional circumstances, the Appeals Chamber may consider legal issues raised by a party or proprio motu although such may not lead to the invalidation of the judgment if it is nevertheless of general significance to the Tribunal's jurisprudence.[61]

[60] Rules of Procedure and Evidence, Special Court for Sierra Leone, 12 April 2002 (as amended 19 November 2007), Rule 106 [Rules].

[61] See e.g., Prosecutor v. Galić, IT-98-29-A, International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, Appeals Chamber, Judgement, 30 November 2006, para. 6 [Galić Appeal Judgement]; Prosecutor v. Stakić, IT-97-24-A, International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, Appeals Chamber, Judgement, 22 March 2006, para. 7 [Stakić Appeal Judgement]; Prosecutor v. Kupreškić et al., IT-95-16-A, International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, Appeals Chamber, Judgement, 23 October 2001, para. 22 [Kupreškić Appeal Judgement]; Prosecutor v.

33. In regard to errors of fact: On appeal where errors of fact are alleged also pursuant to Article 20 of the Statute and Rule 106 of the Rules, the Appeals Chamber will not lightly overturn findings of fact reached by a Trial Chamber. Where it is alleged that the Trial Chamber committed an error of fact, the Appeals Chamber will give a margin of deference to the Trial Chamber that received the evidence at trial. This is because it is the Trial Chamber that is best placed to assess the evidence, including the demeanour of witnesses. The Appeals Chamber will only interfere in those findings where no reasonable trier of fact could have reached the same finding or where the finding is wholly erroneous.[62] The Appeals Chamber applies the same reasonableness standard to alleged errors of fact regardless of whether the finding of fact was based on direct or circumstantial evidence.[63]

34. The Appeals Chamber adopts the statement of general principle contained in the ICTY Appeals Chamber decision in Kupreškić, as follows:

> ". . . the task of hearing, assessing and weighing the evidence presented at trial is left primarily to the Trial Chamber. Thus, the Appeals Chamber must give a margin of deference to a finding of fact reached by a Trial Chamber. Only where the evidence relied on by the Trial Chamber could not have been accepted by any reasonable tribunal of fact or where the evaluation of the evidence is wholly erroneous may the Appeals Chamber substitute its own finding for that of the Trial Chamber."[64]

35. In regard to procedural errors: Although not expressly so stated in Article 20 of the Statute, not all procedural errors vitiate the proceedings. Only errors that occasion a miscarriage of justice would vitiate the proceedings. Such are procedural errors that would affect the fairness of the trial. By the same token, procedural errors that could be corrected or waived or ignored (as immaterial or inconsequential) without injustice to the parties would not be regarded as procedural errors occasioning a miscarriage of justice.

[63] See Galić Appeal Judgement, para. 9, fn. 21; Stakić Appeal Judgement, para. 219; Prosecutor v. Delalić et al., IT-96-21-A, International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, Appeals Chamber, Judgement, 20 February 2001, para. 458 [Ćelebići Appeal Judgement]. Similarly, the standard of proof at trial is the same regardless of the type of evidence, direct or circumstantial.

[64] Kupreškić Appeal Judgement, para. 30.

36. In regard to appellate review of the exercise of discretionary powers by the Trial Chamber: The guiding principles can be succinctly stated. The Trial Chamber's exercise of discretion will be overturned if the challenged decision was based: (i) on an error of law; or (ii) on a patently incorrect conclusion of fact; or (iii) if the exercise of discretion was so unfair or unreasonable as to constitute an abuse of the Trial Chamber's discretion. The scope of appellate review of discretion is, thus, much limited: even if the Appeals Chamber does not agree with the impugned decision, it will stand unless it was so unreasonable as to force the conclusion that the Trial Chamber failed to exercise its discretion judiciously [65] Where the issue on appeal is whether the Trial Chamber correctly exercised its discretion in reaching its decision the Appeals Chamber will only disturb the decision if an appellant has demonstrated that the Trial Chamber made a discernible error in the exercise of discretion.[66] A Trial Chamber would have made a discernible error if it misdirected itself as to the legal principle or law to be applied, took irrelevant factors into consideration, failed to consider relevant factors or failed to give them sufficient weight, or made an error as to the facts upon which it has exercised its discretion.[67]

II. ISSUES ARISING IN BOTH APPEALS

A. Prosecution's Third and Fourth Grounds of Appeal and Kondewa's Fourth Ground of Appeal: Individual Criminal Responsibility Pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute

1. Introduction

37 The Prosecution's Third and Fourth Grounds of Appeal and Kondewa's Fourth Ground of Appeal concern the individual criminal responsibility of Fofana and Kondewa pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for crimes in Tongo Town, Koribondo, Bo District and Kenema District in

"encouragement" and "moral support" are two forms of conduct which may lead to criminal responsibility for aiding and abetting a crime.[156]

72. The Appeals Chamber agrees that "encouragement" and "moral support" may constitute the actus reus and that acts of aiding and abetting can be made at a time and place removed from the actual crime.

73. In regard to the actus reus for aiding and abetting, the Trial Chamber found that Kondewa's speech at the First Passing Out Parade had a substantial effect on the perpetration of the crimes in Tongo.[157] The Appeals Chamber recalls that the Trial Chamber found that at the First Passing Out Parade Norman instructed the Kamajors "to kill captured enemy combatants and 'collaborators' to inflict physical suffering or injury upon them and to destroy their houses."[158] After Norman and Fofana spoke "all the fighters looked at Kondewa, admiring him as a man with mystic powers, and he made the last comment saying that the time for surrender of the rebels had long been exhausted and that they did not need any surrendered rebels."[159] The Trial Chamber then found that in uttering these words Kondewa effectively supported Norman's instructions and encouraged the Kamajors to execute Norman's unlawful orders.[160] The Trial Chamber also noted that no fighter would go to war without Kondewa's blessing because they believed that Kondewa transferred his mystical powers to commit such acts.[161]

74. In addition to his spiritual responsibilities, Kondewa was, together with Norman and Fofana, the three people regarded as what was referred to as the "Holy Trinity" at Base Zero; the three of them were the key and essential components of the leadership structure[162] and were the three people commission of unlawful acts during the "all-out offensive."[231] The fact that Kondewa held a position of responsibility as High Priest and that he spoke at the Second Passing Out Parade and attended Commanders' meetings is not sufficient to conclude that this evidence alone does prove beyond reasonable doubt that Kondewa encouraged or supported the criminal conduct which took place in Koribondo, Bo District and Kenema District.

110. The Appeals Chamber agrees with the findings of the Trial Chamber that giving "words of moral support and encouragement to the Kamajor fighters who were about to conduct military operations on the junta-held territories"[232] or blessings, as well as providing medicine which the Kamajors believed would protect them against the bullets does not constitute aiding and abetting in the planning, preparation or execution of the criminal acts in Bo District.[233]

111. The Appeals Chamber finds that the Trial Chamber was correct in finding Kondewa not liable for aiding and abetting the commission of crimes in Koribondo, Bo District and Kenema District. Consequently, the Prosecution's Third and Fourth Grounds of Appeal fail in this respect.

5. Summary of Findings

112. In relation to the attacks on Tongo, the Appeals Chamber, Justice King dissenting, upholds the Trial Chamber's convictions of Kondewa and Fofana, pursuant to Article 6(1), of aiding and abetting violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder and cruel treatment punishable under Article 3.a. of the Statute (Counts 2 and 4 respectively).

113. In relation to the attacks on Koribondo, Bo District and Kenema District, the Appeals Chamber upholds the Trial Chamber's acquittals of Kondewa and Fofana, pursuant to Article 6(1), of violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder and cruel treatment, punishable under Article 3.a. of the Statute (Counts 2 and 4, respectively) as well as pillage, a violation of Article 3.a. common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3.f. of the Statute (Count 5).

114. The Appeals Chamber dismisses the Prosecution's Third and Fourth Grounds of Appeal and dismisses, Justice King dissenting, Kondewa's Fourth Ground of Appeal.

[233] Ibid at paras 799-800.

199. Kondewa's reliance on ICTY and ICTR case law for the proposition that the ad hoc Tribunals "have disregarded uncorroborated hearsay evidence related to an accused's participation in murder because such evidence is seen as unreliable"[394] is noted. However, although the jurisprudence from other Courts is of great assistance in determining a question of law, whether a particular Trial Chamber erred in its application of the law to the facts, should be determined on the facts of each case. Further, the Appeals Chamber notes that, as a matter of law, a Trial Chamber may convict an accused on the basis of a single witness, although such evidence must be assessed with the appropriate caution, and care must be taken to guard against the exercise of an underlying motive on the part of the witness.[395] Corroboration of evidence is not a legal requirement, but rather concerns the weight to be attached to the evidence.[396] Any appeal based on the absence of corroboration must be against the weight which a Trial Chamber attaches to the evidence in question.[397]

200. It is common place that a criminal tribunal may convict on circumstantial evidence provided that the only reasonable inference to be drawn from such evidence leads only to the guilt of the accused. When such evidence is capable of any other reasonable inference it is not reliable for the purposes of convicting an accused.

201. Witness TF2-096 testified that she saw Kondewa shoot one of the town commanders and that he fell. Immediately after witnessing this incident, the witness ran away. The Appeals Chamber finds that the fact that she did not herself witness that the town commander was dead, leaves the possibility open that someone else may have killed the town commander. The Trial Record does not contain any evidence corroborating the veracity of Witness TF2-096's testimony that the Kamajors identified the graves of the two people dancing. Furthermore, no evidence indicates the identity of the Kamajors or whether they were present during the incident during which Witness TF2-096 saw Kondewa shoot the town commander. In addition, no further evidence concerned whether the town commander died. No nexus exists between Kondewa's act and the death of the town commander. The evidence that the town commander died is insufficient and, therefore, the offence of murder has not been proved.

circumstances be cured by timely, clear and consistent information detailing the factual basis underpinning the charges against him or her.[723]

364. The Appeals Chamber finds that paragraph 28 of the Indictment is clear in establishing that the material facts supporting criminal responsibility under Count 6 are the material facts pleaded in relation to Counts 1 to 5 of the Indictment. These include "threats to kill, destroy and loot." The Trial Chamber, therefore, erred in stating it would only consider crimes "charged and found to have been committed under Counts 1-5 in the Indictment."[724] The Trial Chamber should have considered all conduct that was adequately pleaded in the Indictment irrespective of whether such conduct satisfied the elements of any other crimes under Counts 1-5.

365. Whether the Trial Chamber's error invalidates the decision is discussed below as it is dependent on whether the Trial Chamber erred in its determination of the mens rea requirement for acts of terrorism. In particular, Fofana's and Kondewa's liability for acts of terrorism under Article 6(1) and Article 6(3) of the Statute depends on whether they had the requisite mens rea for liability as aiders and abetters or superiors. Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber will examine whether a reasonable tribunal of fact could have found, as the Trial Chamber did, that neither Fofana nor Kondewa had the requisite mens rea.

(b) Fofana's and Kondewa's Responsibility for Aiding and Abetting Acts of Terrorism in Tongo

366. The Appeals Chamber has previously endorsed the following statement of the mens rea for aiding and abetting:

> "The mens rea required for aiding and abetting is that the accused knew that his acts would assist the commission of the crime by the perpetrator or that he was aware of the substantial likelihood that his acts would assist the commission of a crime by the perpetrator. However, it is not necessary that the aider and abettor had knowledge of the precise crime that was intended and which was actually committed, as long as he was aware that one of a number of crimes would probably be committed, including the one actually committed."[725]

367. The person aiding and abetting a specific intent crime need not possess the principal's intent to commit the crime, but must at least have knowledge of the principal's specific intent.[726]

368. In regard to the acts of terrorism committed in Tongo, the Appeals Chamber is not persuaded by the Prosecution's submission that no reasonable tribunal of fact could have found that Fofana and Kondewa may not have been aware of the specific intent to commit acts of terrorism in Tongo. The Prosecution argues that the Trial Chamber's error resulted from its "exclusive reliance on the instruction given by Norman at the December 1997 Passing Out Parade to determine whether the perpetrators of the proven acts of violence had the specific intent to terrorise the civilian population."[727] Contrary to the Prosecution's assertion, the Trial Chamber used evidence of Norman's statements at the December 1997 Passing Out Parade to determine whether Fofana and Kondewa were aware of his specific intent to spread terror. While the instructions given by Norman are inherently illegal, they are ambiguous with respect to his intent to spread terror, and therefore a reasonable tribunal of fact could have determined that Fofana and Kondewa were not aware of the specific intent with respect to any acts of terrorism in Tongo.

369. The Prosecution further argued that Fofana must have known of the specific intent to commit acts of terrorism because he was aware "that the Kamajors who operated in the towns of Tongo Field had previously engaged in criminal conduct."[728] A similar argument was advanced in relation to Kondewa.[729] However, the Prosecution makes no submission as to how knowledge of past general intent crimes would provide Fofana or Kondewa with knowledge of the principal's specific intent to spread terror.

370. The Prosecution's argument with respect to Fofana's and Kondewa's liability for aiding and abetting acts of terrorism in Tongo must be rejected.

also provides that in determining the term of imprisonment the Trial Chamber shall have recourse to the practice regarding prison sentences in the ICTR and the national courts of Sierra Leone, as appropriate. According to Rule 101 of the Rules, aggravating and mitigating circumstances shall, inter alia, be taken into account.[899] Rule 101(c) of the Rules provides that the Trial Chamber shall indicate whether multiple sentences shall be served consecutively or concurrently.

466. Appeals against sentence, as appeals from a judgement of a Trial Chamber, are appeals stricto sensu. They are not trials de novo.[900] Trial Chambers are vested with broad discretion in determining an appropriate sentence due to their obligation to individualise the penalties to fit the circumstances of the accused and the gravity of the crime.[901] The Appeals Chamber will not lightly overturn findings relevant to sentencing by the Trial Chamber.[902] As a general rule, the Appeals Chamber will not revise a sentence unless the Appellant demonstrates that the Trial Chamber has committed a "discernible error" in exercising its discretion or has failed to follow the applicable law.[903]

467. In the AFRC Appeal Judgment, the Appeals Chamber explained that to demonstrate that the Trial Chamber committed a discernible error in exercising its discretion:

[899] In addition, Trial Chambers are obliged to take into account the extent to which any penalty imposed by a court of any State on the convicted person for the same act has already been served, as referred to in Article 9(3) of the Statute and in Rule 101(B)(iii).

> "the Appellant has to demonstrate that the Trial Chamber gave weight to extraneous or irrelevant considerations, failed to give weight or sufficient weight to relevant considerations, made a clear error as to the facts upon which it exercised its discretion, or that the Trial Chamber's decision was so unreasonable or plainly unjust that the Appeals Chamber is able to infer that the Trial Chamber must have failed to exercise its discretion properly."[904]

3. Alleged Refusal to Consider Sentencing Practices of the National Courts of Sierra Leone

(a) Trial Chamber Findings

468. Article 19(1) of the Statute states: "the Trial Chamber shall, as appropriate, have recourse to the practice regarding prison sentences in the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the national courts of Sierra Leone."[905]

469. The Trial Chamber held that it would not give consideration to the sentencing practice in Sierra Leone because Fofana and Kondewa had not been convicted of any crime under Sierra Leone law and because the sentencing practice of Sierra Leone for the convictions in this case would indicate either sentence of death or life imprisonment.[906]

(b) Submissions of the Parties

470. The Prosecution submits that the Trial Chamber erred in law in holding as above.[907] The Prosecution argues that it is immaterial that Fofana and Kondewa were not convicted pursuant to Article 5 of the Statute (regarding certain crimes under Sierra Leone law) in light of the practice at the ICTY and ICTR to take into account the sentencing law and practices in the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, respectively, despite not having jurisdiction over any violations of domestic law.[908]

471. The Prosecution also submits that the purpose of referring to national sentencing practice is that the punishment must reflect the victim's sense of justice and the needs of the affected communities.[909] The Prosecution further argues that the Statutory language instructing that the Trial Chamber "shall, as appropriate, have recourse to the practice regarding prison sentences in . . .

(c) Discussion

475. The Appeals Chamber notes that at the time the ICTY Statute took effect, the former Yugoslavia had domestic legislation criminalizing "acts against humanity and international law."[919] Similarly, at the time the ICTR Statute took effect, Rwanda had domestic legislation criminalizing war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide.[920] In contrast, Sierra Leone has not criminalized war crimes and crimes against humanity as such, and consequently there is no specifically relevant sentencing practice for a Trial Chamber to refer to.

476. The Special Court has jurisdiction over crimes defined in Sierra Leone law in addition to certain international crimes. Bearing this in mind, the Appeals Chamber is of the view that the best interpretation of the word "appropriate" is that a Trial Chamber is to have recourse to the practice of the ICTR for convictions for war crimes and crimes against humanity and is to have recourse to the national courts in Sierra Leone for convictions under Sierra Leone law contained in Article 5 of the Statute.

477. In the result, the Appeals Chamber concludes that the Trial Chamber did not err in holding that it will not consider the sentencing practice of Sierra Leone.

4. Alleged Error in Considering Mitigating Factors

(a) Fofana's and Kondewa's Statements at the Sentencing Hearing

(i) Trial Chamber Findings

478. Under the heading "Remorse," the Trial Chamber stated the following:

Akayesu*, ICTR-96-4-T, International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Trial Chamber, Sentencing Judgement, 2 October 1998, para. 16 [Akayesu Sentencing Judgement]. Under Rwandan law, genocide and crimes against humanity carry the possible penalties of death or life imprisonment, depending on the nature of the accused's participation. See Prosecutor v. Simba, ICTR-01-76-T, International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Trial Chamber, Judgement and Sentence, 13 December 2005, para. 434 [Simba Judgement and Sentence].

because it considered the sentence inadequate and remitted it for revision.[1043] The ICTY Appeals Chamber held that the Trial Chamber's sentencing discretion "must be exercised by reference to the fundamental . . . consideration . . . that the sentence to be served by an accused must reflect the totality of the [convicted person's] criminal conduct" and that "a person who is convicted of many crimes should generally receive a higher sentence than a person convicted of only one of those crimes."[1044]

544. Fofana responds that the Statute and Rules are "sufficiently liberally worded" to allow the Trial Chamber to "impose a concurrent sentences or global sentence."[1045] Fofana argues that the Trial Chamber has the discretion to choose between concurrent and consecutive sentences, and that the "overarching goal in sentencing must be to ensure that the final or aggregate sentence reflects the totality of the criminal conduct and overall culpability of the offender."[1046] Fofana submits the Prosecution has not shown how the Trial Chamber violated the totality principle.[1047]

545. Kondewa submits that the Trial Chamber acted within its discretion in imposing separate sentences to run concurrently.[1048] Kondewa argues that contrary to the Prosecution's submission, the Trial Chamber only imposed multiple sentences to be served concurrently after analyzing all the aggravating and mitigating circumstances and after considering the gravity of the offences for which Kondewa was found guilty.[1049]

(c) Discussion

546. Rule 101(c) of the Rules states "[t]he Trial Chamber shall indicate whether multiple sentences shall be served consecutively or concurrently." The discretion conferred upon the Trial Chamber to choose between consecutive and concurrent sentences is not unchecked, because the Trial Chamber ultimately must impose a sentence that reflects the totality of the convicted person's culpable conduct. The totality principle is, in fact, recognized by all Parties and firmly supported in the case law of the international criminal tribunals. The totality principle requires that a sentence must reflect the inherent gravity of the totality of the criminal conduct of the accused, giving due consideration to the particular circumstances of the case and to the form and degree of the participation of the accused.[1050]

547. The following examination of several legal traditions demonstrates that Trial Chambers typically enjoy broad discretion to choose between concurrent and consecutive sentences. However, as at the other tribunals, this discretion is restricted by the requirement that the sentence reflect the gravity of the crime and the culpability of the convicted person.

548. In Australia, courts have generally held that it is "impracticable and undesirable to attempt to lay down comprehensive principles according to which a sentencing judge may determine, in every case, whether sentences should be ordered to be served concurrently or consecutively."[1051] Australian courts have recognized that "[t]he practice of imposing either concurrent or consecutive sentences cannot avoid creating anomalies, or apparent anomalies, from time to time. What must be done is to use the various tools of analysis to mould a just sentence for the conduct of which the prisoner has been guilty."[1052] Generally, courts consider that consecutive sentences are appropriate when there are "truly two or more incursions into criminal conduct."[1053] However, where, "whatever the number of technically identifiable offences committed, the prisoner was truly engaged upon one multi-faceted course of criminal conduct, the judge is likely to find concurrent sentences just and convenient."[1054]

549. In the United Kingdom (England and Wales), courts consider the "sentencer [is] entitled in his discretion to follow the course of imposing concurrent sentences, provided that the gravity of the criminal conduct . . . [is] properly reflected in the principal sentence."[1055]

550. Likewise, in Canada, courts give the sentencing judge discretion to set the duration and type of sentence due to his or her first-hand knowledge of the case.[1056] The decision to impose

> 58. Furthermore, with respect to his liability under Article 6(3), the Chamber finds, as it did with Fofana, that given his leadership role as a superior who failed to prevent his subordinates from committing crimes, the gravity of the offence committed by Kondewa is greater than that of the actual perpetrators of the crimes. The Chamber finds that in this case, the fact that Kondewa's failure to prevent was ongoing, rather than an isolated occurrence, had the implicit effect of encouraging his subordinates to believe that they could commit further crimes with impunity, and therefore increases the seriousness of the crimes for which he has been convicted.

> 60. The Chamber considers that, given his role as a former Chiefdom Speaker, a community elder and the CDF National Director of War, Fofana breached a position of trust in committing the offences for which he has been convicted."
> 62. The Chamber finds that given the cultural context, Kondewa, in his role as High Priest who blessed the CDF/Kamajors before they went to battle, and as someone widely respected for his mystical powers and abilities to immunize people against harm, held a unique and prominent position in the community. The Chamber therefore finds that he also breached a position of trust in committing the crimes for which he was convicted.
> 85. In executing this legitimate mission however, at a later stage that appears in the Indictment, and instead of limiting themselves and directing these attacks on legitimate military targets and objectives where collateral damage, if any ensued at all, could be perceived as justifiable, the Accused Persons and their Kamajors, as has been elucidated in the factual and legal findings of the Judgement, went beyond these acceptable military and legal limits and carried out killings and other atrocities against unarmed civilians who they characterised and designated as 'rebel collaborators'. We find that these atrocities were perpetrated, even though the evidence clearly established, and we so found, that the victims in fact, were disarrayed Sierra Leoneans including children fleeing for their lives and for safety from the bloody exchange of enemy fire, and further, that these civilian captives or fugitives, were unarmed and were not in the least, participating in hostilities. In fact, we note here that the crimes for which they have been found guilty were perpetrated by the Accused Persons and CDF/Kamajor fighters when combat activities and operations against the enemy AFRC forces were already over."

559. Notwithstanding these findings and the significant finding that the accused persons and their subordinates went beyond "acceptable military and legal limits" the Trial Chamber, importing a consideration of "just cause" and "civic duty" into the exercise of its discretion concluded that their sentences deserved to be reduced.

560. The Appeals Chamber has already decided that these were inappropriate considerations and will now review the sentences, taking into consideration the gravity of the offences as found and described by the Trial Chamber and taking note of legitimate mitigating circumstances which the Trial Chamber has taken note of and the fact that in the case of Kondewa, the Appeals Chamber, Justice Winter dissenting, had not found any allegation of "committing" established against him.

561. In exercising its sentencing discretion, the Appeals Chamber re-emphasizes that it is an international court with responsibility to protect and promote the norms and values of the international community, expressed not only as part of customary international law but also, in several international instruments.

562. Shortly after the Special Court was established, the Appeals Chamber had occasion to pronounce on its character and decided, without hesitation, that it is an international court. In the Decision of Constitutionality and Lack of Jurisdiction,[1066] the Appeals Chamber stated that the Special Court "is an international tribunal exercising its jurisdiction in an entirely international sphere and not within the system of the national courts of Sierra Leone . . ."[1067] The Appeals Chamber came to the same conclusion in the Decision on Immunity from Jurisdiction.[1068]

563. The Appeals Chamber here emphasizes that the crimes of which the accused have been convicted are international crimes and not political crimes, in which consideration of national interest may be a relevant issue. What has to be paramount are international interests in protecting humanity. Such offences as Fofana and Kondewa have been convicted of are of the nature of such "offences that do not affect the interests of one State alone, but shock the conscience of mankind."[1069] They are not political offences. The Appeals Chamber gratefully adopts the opinion of the Supreme Military Tribunal of Italy quoted in Tadic (Jurisdiction) as follows:

> Crimes against the laws and customs of war cannot be considered political offences, as they do not harm a political interest of a particular State, nor a political right of a particular citizen. They are, instead, crimes of lese-humanite (reatu di lesa umanita) and, as previously demonstrated, the norms prohibiting them have a universal character, not simply a territorial one. Such crimes, therefore, due to their very subject matter and particular nature are precisely of a different and opposite kind from political offences. The latter generally, concern only the States against whom they are committed; the former concern all civilised States, and are to be opposed and punished, in the same way as the crimes of piracy, trade of women and minors, and enslavement are to be opposed and punished, wherever they may have been committed . . ."[1070]

564. What should be one of the paramount considerations in the sentencing of an accused person convicted of crimes against humanity and war crimes is the revulsion of mankind, represented by the international community, to the crime and not the tolerance by a local community of the crime; or lack of public revulsion in relation to the crimes of such community; or local sentiments about the persons who have been found guilty of the crimes. In describing what it described as the "Justice Phase" of the armed conflict that took place in Sierra Leone, the Appeals Chamber stated this in "Decision on Immunity from Jurisdiction": The Justice Phase is that phase in which participants in the armed conflict have to answer for crimes committed in the course of the armed conflict. The Justice Phase itself involves separating what is in the exclusive domain of the municipal authority to be resolved under municipal law from what is in the concurrent jurisdiction of that authority and of the international community to be resolved by application purely of international law."[1071] The Appeals Chamber had earlier stated in that Decision that: "The parties, whether from the Government side or the insurgents, were . . . subjected to the obligations imposed by international law in a situation of internal armed conflicts."[1072]

565 In assessing the appropriate sentence, the obligation of the Appeals Chamber is, therefore, to impose sentences that reflect the revulsion of the international community to such crimes as those for which the accused persons have been convicted, after taking into consideration all factors that may be considered, legitimately, in mitigation as well as in aggravation.

566 In revising the sentences, the Appeals Chamber, Justice King and Justice Kamanda dissenting, takes into consideration those factors that the Majority of the Trial Chamber have, legitimately, taken into consideration. It also takes note of the opinion of the Majority of the Trial Chamber that Fofana and Kondewa have been found responsible mainly as aiders and abettors and the gravity of their respective responsibility as superiors in respect of some of the crimes.

565. Having taken all the circumstances of the case into consideration, the Appeals Chamber, Justice King and Justice Kamanda dissenting, revises the sentences on Fofana and Kondewa in

NOTES that Ground Two has been abandoned;

DISMISSES Ground Three and does not enter convictions for Fofana and Kondewa for the crimes committed in Kenema District;

DISMISSES Ground Four and does not enter additional convictions for Kondewa for instigating crimes committed in Tongo Fields or for aiding and abetting crimes committed in Koribondo, Bo District and Kenema District; and does not enter additional convictions for Fofana for instigating and planning the crimes in Tongo Fields or for planning or aiding and abetting the crimes committed in Koribondo, Bo District and Kenema District;

DISMISSES, Justice Winter dissenting, Ground Five and does not enter additional convictions for Kondewa and convictions for Fofana for enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups and/or using them to participate actively in hostilities;

DISMISSES Ground Six and does not enter convictions of Fofana and Kondewa for acts of terrorism;

DISMISSES Ground Seven and HOLDS that destruction of property not amounting to appropriation does not constitute the crime of pillage;

DISMISSES, Justice Winter dissenting, Ground Eight and HOLDS that the Prosecution has not showed that the alleged error relating to the amendment of the Indictment constitutes an error of law invalidating the decision;

ALLOWS, Justice King dissenting, Ground Nine and HOLDS that the Trial Chamber erred in denying the hearing of evidence of acts of sexual violence;

ALLOWS Ground Ten and HOLDS, Justice King dissenting, that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that "just cause" can be a mitigating factor, although rejecting all other arguments raised by the Prosecution, Justice Winter dissenting with respect to accepting the expression of remorse and the purpose of reconciliation in mitigation;

CONSEQUENTLY REVISES, Justice King and Justice Kamanda dissenting, the sentences in respect of Counts 2, 4, and 5 as follows:

In respect of Moinina Fofana the sentences of six (6) years imposed by the Trial Chamber on each of Counts 2 and 4 are increased to fifteen (15) years imprisonment on each of those Counts, and the sentence of three (3) years imposed on Count 5 is increased to five (5) years imprisonment;

In respect of Allieu Kondewa, the sentences of eight (8) years imposed by the Trial Chamber on each of Counts 2 and 4 are increased to twenty (20) years imprisonment on each of those Counts, and the sentence of five (5) years imposed on Count 5 is increased to seven (7) years imprisonment;

CONSEQUENTLY;

FINDS in respect of Moinina Fofana;

impact of the crime on the immediate victim, as well as its effect on relatives of the victim,[50] and the vulnerability and number of victims.[51]

34. In assessing the role of the Accused in the crime, the Chamber has taken into account the mode of liability under which the Accused was convicted, as well the nature and degree of his participation in the offence. In particular, the Chamber has considered whether the Accused was held liable as an indirect or a secondary perpetrator.[52] In assessing the gravity of offences for which the Accused was convicted as a superior, the Chamber has considered the gravity of the underlying offence and the gravity of the conduct of the Accused in failing to prevent or punish the crimes committed by the subordinate.[53]

35. The Chamber is of the opinion however, that the factors it has taken into account in assessing the gravity of the offence, cannot, in addition, be taken into account as aggravating circumstances.[54] Similarly, the Chamber takes the view that factors which it considers and accepts to lessen the gravity of the offence, cannot be taken into account as mitigating circumstances.

3.2. Aggravating Factors

36. Aggravating factors must be shown to have been established by the Prosecution beyond a reasonable doubt.[55] Only circumstances directly related to the commission of the offence charged, and for which the Accused has been convicted, can be considered to be aggravating.[56] If a tribunals is instructive, and has considered these practices where appropriate. However, it is also aware of the limitations of the use that can be made of the sentencing practices of these tribunals. In particular, it notes that the practice of imposing global sentences at both tribunals makes it difficult to ascertain the sentence imposed for each individual crime. Moreover, the Chamber notes that many of the sentences at the ICTR were imposed in relation to the crime of genocide, which is not an offence within the jurisdiction of the Special Court.

The Chamber notes that the Prosecution has discussed some of these factors, including the vulnerability and age of victims and the humiliating and degrading nature of the acts, as aggravating factors (Prosecution Sentencing Brief, para 56). The Chamber is of the view that these are more appropriately considered in relation to its determination of the gravity of the offence.

5. Sentencing Practice of Sierra Leonean Courts

42. Article 19(1) authorizes the Trial Chamber to consider, where appropriate, the sentencing practices of Sierra Leonean domestic courts. The Prosecution contends that in determining the gravity of the offence, the Chamber should consider that the offences for which the Accused have been found guilty, would attract the death penalty or life imprisonment under Sierra Leonean law.[74] Both Fofana and Kondewa submit that given that the Accused were not convicted of any offences under Article 5 of the Statute which incorporates offences under Sierra Leonean legislation, the court should not consider Sierra Leonean sentencing practice.[75]

43. In this regard, the Chamber notes that the Accused were neither indicted nor convicted for any of the offences enumerated under Article 5 of the Statute. Furthermore, the Statute of the Special Court does not provide for either capital punishment or imposition of a "life sentence", which are the punishments that the most serious crimes under Sierra Leonean law attract. For these reasons, the Chamber finds that it would be inappropriate to rely on the sentencing practices of Sierra Leonean Courts in determining the punishment to be imposed on either Fofana or on Kondewa.

V. DELIBERATIONS

44. The Chamber has considered both the Parties' written briefs and their oral submissions, made in court during the Sentencing Hearing, as they relate to the gravity of the offence, as well as any aggravating or mitigating circumstances. Only those factors that the Chamber has found to be relevant in the determination of sentence, however, have here been explicitly discussed by the Chamber.

1. Gravity of the Offence

1.1. Fofana

45. Fofana was convicted on the basis of Article 6(1) and Article 6(3). Specifically, the Chamber found him guilty of the following:

1. Aiding and abetting pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for Counts 2, 4 and 7 for the Tongo Crime Base;
2. Failure to prevent pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute for Counts 2, 4 and 7 for the Koribondo Crime Base; and
3. Failure to prevent pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute for Counts 2, 4, 5 and 7 for the Bo District Crime Base.[76]

46. With respect to the crimes for which Fofana was found liable under Article 6(3), the Chamber has examined the gravity of the crimes committed by subordinates under his effective control. Many of these crimes, as described in the Judgement, were of a very serious nature, and were committed against innocent civilians. The Chamber considers actions such as the mutilation and the targeted killing of Limba civilians[77] and the killing and mutilation of Chief Kafala (whom the CDF/Kamajors considered a collaborator) in Koribondo,[78] to be indicative of the brutality of the offences committed by Fofana's subordinates. The Chamber also notes the gruesome murder of two women in Koribondo who had sticks inserted and forced into their genitals until they came out of their mouths. The women were then disembowelled, and while their guts were used as checkpoints, parts of their entrails were eaten.[79]

47. The Chamber also finds that many of the offences for which Fofana was convicted under Article 6(1) were committed on a large scale and with a significant degree of brutality. In particular, the Chamber notes the murder of 150 Loko, Limba and Temne tribe members in to death by machetes or shot, and who was himself hacked with a machete and rolled into a swamp on top of the dead bodies in the belief that he was dead.[88]

50. With respect to the form and degree of Fofana's participation, the Chamber notes that he was found liable for the crimes in Tongo Field as an aider and abettor under Article 6(1) of the Statute. The jurisprudence of the ICTY and ICTR indicates that aiding and abetting as a mode of liability generally warrants a lesser sentence than that to be imposed for more direct forms of participation.[89] The Chamber also notes that while Fofana was found liable for aiding and abetting, he was not present at the scenes of the crimes and that the degree of his participation amounted only to encouragement.[90]

51. With respect to the crimes for which Fofana was convicted under Article 6(3), the Chamber has considered the gravity of Fofana's conduct in failing to prevent the crimes. It finds that the gravity of the offence committed by Fofana given his leadership role as a superior who failed to prevent his subordinates from committing crimes, is greater than that of the actual perpetrators of the crimes.[91] In this case, the fact that Fofana's failure to prevent was ongoing, rather than an isolated occurrence, had the implicit effect of encouraging his subordinates to [89] Vasiljevic Appeal Judgement, para 182. See also Prosecutor v. Muhimana, ICTR-95-1B-T, Judgement and Sentence (TC), 28 April 2005, para 593 and Prosecutor v. Krstic, IT-98-33-T, Judgement and Sentence (TC), 2 August 2001 [Krstic Trial Judgement], para 714. The Prosecution has submitted that "the fact that an accused is found liable as an indirect co-perpetrator does not entitle him to a lower sentence (Prosecution Sentencing Brief, para 40), citing the Stakic Appeal Judgement. In Stakic, while the ICTY Appeals Chamber did claim that "the fact that an accused is found guilty as an 'indirect co-perpetrator' does not necessarily lead to a lower sentence" (para 380), it discussed this specifically in relation to Stakic's case, where he was a crucial member of a joint criminal enterprise, and had a "uniquely pivotal role in co-ordinating the persecutory campaign carried out by the military, police and civilian government in Prijedor" (para 380). The Chamber stressed the need to consider the form and degree of participation of the Accused in the crime. Stakic's role was thus very different than the type of "indirect co-perpetration" (i.e. aiding and abetting) that Fofana was held liable for.

[91] Prosecutor v. Blaskic, IT-95-14-T, Judgement (TC), 3 March 2000 [Blaskic Trial Judgement], where the Court held that if a commander "fails in his duty to prevent the crime or punish the perpetrator thereof he should receive a heavier sentence than the subordinates who committed the crime insofar as the failing conveys some tolerance or even approval on the part of the commander towards the commission of crimes by his subordinates and thus contributes to encouraging the commission of new crimes" (para 789). In the Blaskic Appeal Judgement, the Appeals Chamber reduced Blaskic's sentence on the basis of factual errors made by the Trial Chamber, but did not comment on this aspect of the law.

believe that they could commit further crimes with impunity. This factor therefore, in our opinion, increases the seriousness of the crimes for which he has been convicted.[92]

1.2. Kondewa

52. Kondewa was convicted under Article 6(1) and under Article 6(3). Specifically, the Chamber found him guilty of the following:

4. Aiding and abetting pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for Counts 2, 4 and 7 for the Tongo Crime Base;
5. Failure to prevent pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute for Counts 2, 4, 5 and 7 for the Bonthe and Moyamba Crime Bases;
3. Commission (murder) pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for Count 2 for the Talia/Base Zero Crime Base;
4. Commission (enlisting child soldiers) pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for Count 8.

53. With respect to the crimes for which Kondewa was found liable under Article 6(3), the Chamber has examined the gravity of the crimes committed by the subordinates under his effective control. Many of these crimes, as described in the Judgement, were of a serious nature. The Chamber notes, in particular, that the CDF/Kamajors in Bonthe stripped Lahia Ndokoi Koroma naked and tied him,[93] a particularly humiliating and degrading act. With respect to Kondewa's liability under Article 6(1), he was convicted for the same crimes as Fofana in the Tongo area; the scale and the barbaric nature of such crimes has been described above.[94]

54. As is the case with Fofana, the Chamber notes that many of the victims of these crimes were young children and women, and were therefore particularly vulnerable. It notes, in particular, the two incidents involving children in the Tongo area described above with respect to Fofana,[95] and the killing of a boy called Bendeh Battiama by Rambo Conteh in Bonthe.[96]

55. With respect to the offence of the enlistment of child soldiers for which Kondewa was convicted, the Chamber notes the particular vulnerability of TF2-021, who was eleven years old when he was captured by the CDF/Kamajors and forcibly trained to kill and to commit crimes against innocent civilians.[97] At the age of eleven, Witness TF2-021 was initiated into the Kamajor society and, at the age of thirteen, he was initiated by Kondewa into the "Avondo Society", a notorious group of Kamajors.[98] The Chamber notes the commentary of the ICRC that "child soldiers are deprived of a family, deprived of an education and all the advantages that would otherwise help them be children and prepare them for adulthood [...] In the end, child soldiers will suffer deep trauma, which persists long after the fighting has stopped".[99]

56. Further, as noted by the Chamber with respect to Fofana, it considers these crimes to have had a significant physical and psychological impact on the victims of such crimes, on the relatives of the victims, and on those in the broader community.[100]

57. With respect to the form and degree of Kondewa's participation in the crimes committed, the Chamber finds that while he was held liable on the basis of aiding and abetting under Article 6(1) and as a superior under Article 6(3), he was also held liable for the direct perpetration of some acts, including the shooting of a town commander in Talia/Base Zero, and for committing the offence of the enlistment of child soldiers.

58. Furthermore, with respect to his liability under Article 6(3), the Chamber finds, as it did with Fofana, that given his leadership role as a superior who failed to prevent his subordinates from committing crimes, the gravity of the offence committed by Kondewa is greater than that of the actual perpetrators of the crimes. The Chamber finds that in this case, the fact that Kondewa's failure to prevent was ongoing, rather than an isolated occurrence, had the implicit effect of encouraging his subordinates to believe that they could commit further crimes with impunity, and therefore increases the seriousness of the crimes for which he has been convicted.

97. The Chamber notes that both the Prosecution and the Fofana Defence recommended that a global sentence be imposed, rather than a separate sentence for each crime.[136] It further notes that while the Kondewa Defence submitted that separate sentences should be imposed, it recommended a single sentence.[137] While the Chamber recognizes that it has the discretion to impose a global sentence,[138] it has chosen to impose separate sentences for each of the crimes for which Fofana and Kondewa have been convicted because it is our view that this better reflects the culpability of the Accused for each offence for which they were convicted, given that distinct crimes were committed by each Accused in discrete geographical areas.[139]

VII. DISPOSITION

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, THE CHAMBER:

SENTENCES Moinina Fofana to the following:

For Count 2 - Violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder, a Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF SIX YEARS;

For Count 4 - Violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular cruel treatment, a Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF SIX YEARS;

For Count 5 - Pillage, a Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF THREE YEARS;

For Count 7 - Collective Punishments, a Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF FOUR YEARS;

ORDERS that these sentences shall run and be served concurrently.

SENTENCES Allieu Kondewa to the following:

For Count 2 - Violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder, a Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF EIGHT YEARS;

For Count 4 - Violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular cruel treatment, a Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF EIGHT YEARS;

For Count 5 - Pillage, a Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF FIVE YEARS;

For Count 7 - Collective Punishments, a Violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF SIX YEARS;

For Count 8 - Enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups and/or using them to participate actively in hostilities, an other serious violation of international humanitarian law, a TERM OF IMPRISONMENT OF SEVEN YEARS;

ORDERS that these sentences shall run and be served concurrently;

ORDERS that for both Fofana and Kondewa, the sentences shall run from the date each was taken into custody; and, in this regard,

ORDERS that Moinina Fofana shall serve a TOTAL TERM OF IMPRISONMENT of SIX YEARS, and that this takes effect from the 29th of May 2003, when he was arrested and taken into the custody of the Special Court; and further, ORDERS that Allieu Kondewa (also known as Allieu Musa) shall serve a total TOTAL TERM OF IMPRISONMENT of EIGHT YEARS and and that this takes effect from the 29th of May, 2003, when he was arrested and taken into the custody of the Special Court.

Hon. Justice Bankole Thompson appends a Dissenting Opinion to this Judgement, in which he has indicated that he makes no pronouncement as to the sentence and reaffirms that the defence of Necessity is valid in the peculiar circumstances of this case. The said Opinion is attached to this Judgement as Annex A.

INSTRUCTS the Court Management Section to accept the filing of the present Judgement and to serve it after 5:00 p.m. today.

229. The Chamber is of the opinion that the actus reus of aiding and abetting requires that the Accused carries out an act specifically directed to assist, encourage or lend moral support to the perpetration of a certain specific crime and that this act of the aider and abettor must have a substantial effect upon the perpetration of the crime.[292] "Proof of a cause-effect relationship between the conduct of the aider or abettor and the commission of the crime, or proof that such conduct served as a condition precedent to the commission of the crime, is not required."[293] Further, taking into account the specific wording of Article 6(1) of the Statute that "[a] person who [...] aided and abetted in the planning, preparation or execution of a crime referred to in articles 2 to 4 of the present Statute shall be individually responsible for the crime", this Chamber is of the opinion that the actus reus of aiding and abetting a crime may occur before, during, or after the principal crime has been perpetrated and at a location geographically removed from the location of the principal crime.[294] The Chamber reiterates, however, that the act of the aider and abettor must have a substantial effect upon the perpetration of the crime.

230. Mere presence at the scene of a crime will not usually constitute aiding and abetting. Where, however, such presence provides encouragement or support to the principal offender, that may be sufficient. For example, the presence of a person with superior authority at the scene of a principal crime may be probative to determining whether such person encouraged or supported the principal perpetrator.[295] The Chamber also notes that a superior's failure to punish for past crimes might result in acts that would constitute instigation or aiding and abetting for further crimes.[296] internal armed conflict.[305] The Chamber further concurs with the finding of the Appeals Chamber of the Ad Hoc Tribunals that the principle of individual criminal responsibility of superiors is applicable, albeit not exactly in the same way, to both civilian and military superiors.[306]

231. The Chamber recognises that the mens rea of aiding and abetting is the knowledge that the acts performed by the Accused assist the commission of the crime by the principal offender.[297]

234. The Chamber is of the opinion that the nature of responsibility pursuant to Article 6(3) is based upon the duty of a superior to act, which consists of a duty to prevent and a duty to punish criminal acts of his subordinates.[307] It is thus the failure to act when under a duty to do so which is the essence of this form of responsibility.[308] It is responsibility for an omission[309] where a superior may be held criminally responsible when he fails to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the criminal act or punish the offender.[310]

235. The Chamber takes the view that the following three elements must be satisfied in order to invoke individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(3) of the Statute:

> (i) the existence of a superior-subordinate relationship between the superior and the offender of the criminal act;
> (ii) the superior knew or had reason to know that the criminal act was about to be or had been committed; and
> (iii) the superior failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the criminal act or punish the offender thereof.[311]

[309] Halilovic Trial Judgement, para. 54: "The Trial Chamber finds that under Article 7(3) command responsibility is responsibility for an omission. The commander is responsible for the failure to perform an act required by international law. This omission is culpable because international law imposes an affirmative duty on superiors to prevent and punish crimes committed by their subordinates. Thus "for the acts of his subordinates" as generally referred to in the jurisprudence of the Tribunal does not mean that the commander shares the same responsibility as the subordinates who committed the crimes, but rather that because of the crimes committed by his subordinates, the commander should bear responsibility for his failure to act. The imposition of responsibility upon a commander for breach of his duty is to be weighed against the crimes of his subordinates; a commander is responsible not as though he had committed the crime himself, but his responsibility is considered in proportion to the gravity of the offences committed. The Trial Chamber considers that this is still in keeping with the logic of the weight which international humanitarian law places on protection values."

II. APPELLATE REVIEW

A. Standard of Review on Appeal

30. Before the Appeals Chamber embarks on a detailed consideration of the Parties' Grounds of Appeal, it is expedient to recall at the threshold, albeit in general terms, some of the principles of appellate review that will guide it.[58]

31. In regard to errors of law: Where the appellant alleges an error of law pursuant to Article 20 of the Statute and Rule 106 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules"), only arguments relating to errors in law that invalidate the decision of the Trial Chamber would merit consideration. The appellant must provide details of the alleged error and state with precision how the legal error invalidates the decision.[59] In exceptional circumstances, the Appeals Chamber may consider legal issues raised by a party or proprio motu although they may not lead to the invalidation of the judgment, if they are nevertheless of general significance to the Special Court's jurisprudence.[60]

32. In regard to errors of fact: On appeal where errors of fact are alleged also pursuant to Article 20 of the Statute and Rule 106 of the Rules, the Appeals Chamber will not lightly overturn findings of fact reached by a Trial Chamber; the error of fact must have resulted in a miscarriage of justice.[61] The appellant must provide details of the alleged error and state with precision how the error of fact occasioned a miscarriage of justice. A miscarriage of justice is defined as "[a] grossly unfair outcome in judicial proceedings, as when a defendant is convicted despite a lack of evidence on an essential element of the crime."[62] For an error to be one that occasioned a miscarriage of justice it must have been "critical to the verdict reached."[63] Where it is alleged that the Trial Chamber committed an error of fact, the Appeals Chamber will give a margin of deference to the Trial Chamber that received the evidence at trial.[64] This is because it is the Trial Chamber that is best placed to assess the evidence, including the demeanour of witnesses.[65] The Appeals Chamber will only interfere in those findings where no reasonable trier of fact could have reached the same finding or where the finding is wholly erroneous.[66] The Appeals Chamber has adopted the statement of general principle contained in the ICTY Appeals Chamber decision in Kupreškić et al., as follows:

> [T]he task of hearing, assessing and weighing the evidence presented at trial is left primarily to the Trial Chamber. Thus, the Appeals Chamber must give a margin of deference to a finding of fact reached by a Trial Chamber. Only where the evidence relied on by the Trial Chamber could not have been accepted by any reasonable tribunal of fact or where the evaluation of the evidence is 'wholly erroneous' may the Appeals Chamber substitute its own finding for that of the Trial Chamber.[67]

The Appeals Chamber applies the same reasonableness standard to alleged errors of fact regardless of whether the finding of fact was based on direct or circumstantial evidence.[68]

33. The same standard of reasonableness and deference to factual findings applies when the Prosecution appeals against an acquittal,[69] however, the Appeals Chamber endorses the view that:

> Considering that it is the Prosecution that bears the burden at trial of proving the guilt of the accused beyond reasonable doubt, the significance of an error of fact occasioning a miscarriage of justice is somewhat different for a Prosecution appeal against acquittal than for a defence appeal against conviction. A convicted person must show that the Trial Chamber's factual errors create a reasonable doubt as to his guilt. The Prosecution must show that, when account is taken of the errors of fact committed by the Trial Chamber, all reasonable doubt of the convicted person's guilt has been eliminated.[70]

34. In regard to procedural errors: Although not expressly so stated in Article 20 of the Statute, not all procedural errors vitiate the proceedings. Only errors that occasion a miscarriage of justice would vitiate the proceedings. Such are procedural errors that would affect the fairness of the trial. By the same token, procedural errors that could be waived or ignored (as immaterial or inconsequential) without injustice or prejudice to the parties would not be regarded as procedural errors occasioning a miscarriage of justice.

35. In regard to appellate review of the exercise of discretionary powers by the Trial Chamber: The guiding principles can be stated succinctly. The Trial Chamber's exercise of discretion will be overturned if the challenged decision was based: (i) on an error of law; or (ii) on a patently incorrect conclusion of fact; or (iii) if the exercise of discretion was so unfair or unreasonable as to constitute an abuse of the Trial Chamber's discretion. The scope of appellate review of discretion is, thus, very limited: even if the Appeals Chamber does not agree with the impugned decision, it will stand unless it was so unreasonable as to force the conclusion that the Trial Chamber failed to exercise its discretion judiciously.[71] Where the issue on appeal is whether the Trial Chamber correctly exercised its discretion in reaching its decision the Appeals Chamber will only disturb the decision if an appellant has demonstrated that the Trial Chamber made a discernible error in the exercise of discretion.[72] A Trial Chamber would have made a discernible error if it misdirected itself as to the legal principle or law to be applied, took irrelevant factors into consideration, failed to consider relevant factors or failed to give them sufficient weight, or made an error as to the facts upon which it has exercised its discretion.[73] Provided therefore that the Trial Chamber has properly exercised its discretion, its decision will not be disturbed on appeal even though the Appeals Chamber itself may have exercised the discretion differently.

B. Defective submissions

36. The Appeals Chamber has the inherent discretion to find that any of the Parties' submissions do not merit a reasoned opinion in writing and summarily dismiss arguments that are evidently unfounded. In particular, the Appeals Chamber cannot effectively and efficiently carry out its mandate without focused submissions by the Parties. In order for the Appeals Chamber to assess a Party's arguments, the Party is expected to set out its Grounds of Appeal clearly, logically and exhaustively.[74] Accordingly, submissions that are obscure, contradictory, vague or suffer from other formal and obvious insufficiencies may be, on that basis, summarily dismissed without detailed reasoning.[75]

37. In the instant proceeding, the Appeals Chamber has identified the following seven types of deficiencies in the Parties' submissions.

544. The Appeals Chamber notes that all that remains is Gbao's argument that the actions on which the Trial Chamber based its findings as to his actus reus and mens rea took place after the crimes were committed. It is helpful to reproduce, at the outset, the key findings of the Trial Chamber:

> 2263. ... the Chamber finds that Gbao deliberately fomented an atmosphere of hostility and orchestrated an armed confrontation at the Makump DDR camp and that Gbao's actions in arming himself with an AK-47 amounted to tacit approval of Kallon's conduct. We therefore find that Gbao's conduct before and during the attacks on Salahuedin and Jaganathan had a substantial effect on their perpetration.
> 2264. The Chamber further finds that the only reasonable inference to be drawn from the evidence is that Gbao possessed the requisite mens rea as he took up arms and stood by while the attacks were carried out and in so doing he intended to assist Kallon in their commission.[1392]

545. In relation to both the actus reus and the mens rea, the actions of Gbao considered crucial by the Trial Chamber are his taking up of arms and his standing passively by. The taking up of arms took place at some point during the period in which Kallon was inside the camp, as did the start of Gbao's passive behaviour; the exact moment has not been determined. Given that Kallon proceeded to enter the camp after an exchange with Gbao, Kallon would have been aware of Gbao's presence outside the camp. However, there is no indication that Kallon was aware of Gbao having taken up arms until after he left the camp. The question is, then, whether Gbao's presence outside the camp can be said to have had a substantial effect on the perpetration of the crime. The Appeals Chamber takes the view that it is within the discretion of a reasonable trier of fact to hold that such presence did have a substantial effect on the perpetration of the offence.

546. The Appeals Chamber recalls that the mens rea for aiding and abetting is that:

> the accused knew that his acts would assist the commission of the crime by the perpetrator or that he was aware of the substantial likelihood that his acts would assist the commission of a crime by the perpetrator. However, it is not necessary that the aider and abettor had knowledge of the precise crime that was intended and which was actually committed, as long as he was aware that one of a number of crimes would probably be committed, including the one actually committed.[1393]

547. The Appeals Chamber notes that there is no indication in the Trial Judgment that, prior to Kallon's entry into the camp, Gbao knew that any attacks might take place or any crimes might be committed by Kallon or Kallon's forces. It does not follow from Gbao's knowledge of Kallon's collective punishment and terrorism; therefore, the Prosecution argues "it is not possible to hold that any of the other war crimes are 'lesser included offences' of collective punishment and terrorism."[3299]

1189. Kallon and Gbao made no additional submissions in reply.

3. Discussion

(a) Applicable law

1190. The jurisprudence on cumulative convictions has been thoroughly addressed at the international tribunals. The test to determine the permissibility of cumulative convictions was set out in the Čelebići Appeal Judgment, which stated:

> Having considered the different approaches expressed on this issue both within this Tribunal and other jurisdictions, this Appeals Chamber holds that reasons of fairness to the accused and the consideration that only distinct crimes may justify multiple convictions, lead to the conclusion that multiple criminal convictions entered under different statutory provisions but based on the same conduct are permissible only if each statutory provision involved has a materially distinct element not contained in the other. An element is materially distinct from another if it requires proof of a fact not required by the other.
> Where this test is not met, the Chamber must decide in relation to which offence it will enter a conviction. This should be done on the basis of the principle that the conviction under the more specific provision should be upheld. Thus, if a set of facts is regulated by two provisions, one of which contains an additional materially distinct element, then a conviction should be entered only under that provision.[3300]

1191. The test applied is therefore two-part: first, it is permissible to enter cumulative convictions under different statutory provisions for the same criminal act if each statutory provision has a "materially distinct element" that is not contained in the other statutory provision.[3301] Second, if this is not the case then the conviction for the criminal act should be upheld under the "more specific provision."[3302] It is the legal elements of each statutory provision, and not the acts themselves that

101(c) of the Rules provides that the Trial Chamber shall indicate whether multiple sentences shall be served consecutively or concurrently.[3330]

1202. Appeals against sentence, as appeals from a judgment of a Trial Chamber, are appeals stricto sensu. They are not trials de novo.[3331] Trial Chambers are vested with broad discretion in determining an appropriate sentence due to their obligation to individualise the penalties to fit the circumstances of the accused and the gravity of the crime.[3332] The Appeals Chamber will not lightly overturn findings relevant to sentencing by the Trial Chamber.[3333] As a general rule, the Appeals Chamber will not revise a sentence unless the Appellant demonstrates that the Trial Chamber has committed a "discernible error" in exercising its discretion or has failed to follow the applicable law.[3334]

1203. In the Brima et al. and Fofana and Kondewa Appeal Judgments, the Appeals Chamber explained that to demonstrate that the Trial Chamber committed a discernible error in exercising its discretion:

> the Appellant has to demonstrate that the Trial Chamber gave weight to extraneous or irrelevant considerations, failed to give weight or sufficient weight to relevant considerations, made a clear error as to the facts upon which it exercised its discretion, or that the Trial Chamber's decision was so unreasonable or plainly unjust that the Appeals Chamber is able to infer that the Trial Chamber must have failed to exercise its discretion properly.[3335]

C. Sesay's appeal against sentence (Sesay Ground 46)

1. Trial Chamber's findings

1204. The Trial Chamber convicted Sesay for:

(i) Committing by participating in a joint criminal enterprise pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute crimes under:

i. Count 1 in relation to events in Bo, Kenema, Kono and Kailahun Districts;

ii. Count 2 in relation to events in Kenema, Kono and Kailahun Districts;

3. Discussion

(a) The form and degree of Sesay's participation in the crimes

1229. A Trial Chamber must ultimately impose a sentence that reflects the totality of the convicted person's culpable conduct.[3420] This principle, the totality principle, requires that a sentence must reflect the inherent gravity of the totality of the criminal conduct of the accused, giving due consideration to the particular circumstances of the case and to the form and degree of the participation of the accused in the crimes.[3421]

1230. Sesay contests the Trial Chamber's evaluation of his role in the crimes. To do so, he draws comparisons with the criminal conduct of others, but he does not directly challenge or address the Trial Chamber's numerous findings of the specific roles that he played. For example, Sesay contends that the Trial Chamber should have considered that his role was "remote" and "minimal," but he fails to address the extensive findings of his direct participation in crimes, such as his liability for planning enslavement and the use of children under the age of 15 to participate actively in hostilities, his superior responsibility for enslavement, attacks against peacekeepers and murder of peacekeepers. He also ignores the Trial Chamber's findings that at all relevant times he was an influential senior RUF commander and that during the JCE he was a member of the Supreme Council who furthered the Common Criminal Purpose by securing revenues, territory and manpower for the Junta government and by using criminal means to reduce or eliminate the civilian opposition to the Junta regime.

1231. The Appeals Chamber endorses the view of the ICTY Appeals Chamber that a Trial Chamber is not required to assess the participation of an accused in a JCE relative to the participation of other perpetrators when determining the overall level of the accused's participation.[3422] Sesay's reliance on the Krstić Appeals Judgment for this proposition is inapposite. The ICTY Appeals Chamber in Krstić held that:

> Radislav Krstić's guilt should have been assessed on an individual basis. The Appeals Chamber further agrees that the comparative guilt of other alleged co-conspirators, not adjudicated in this case, is not a relevant consideration.[3423]

[3420] Fofana and Kondewa Appeal Judgment, para. 546.
[3421] Fofana and Kondewa Appeal Judgment, para. 546.
[3422] Babić Appeal Judgment, para. 40.
[3423] Krstić Appeal Judgment, para. 254.

1232. The ICTY Appeals Chamber in Krstić merely allowed that the Trial Chamber there "was entitled" to consider the accused's guilt "in context of the conduct of any alleged co-perpetrators."[3424] In the present case, the Trial Chamber specifically addressed Sesay's role with respect to Bockarie and Sesay's role in relation to others within the JCE and to his subordinates who committed the crimes for which he was convicted under Article 6(3) of the Statute. It noted Sesay's "very high position of authority within the RUF" and considered that he was "effectively the second highest senior RUF officer after Sam Bockarie."[3425] It further recalled its findings that:

> Sesay was a member of the AFRC Supreme Council, and participated in the meeting[s] of this body throughout the Junta regime. Within the RUF, Sesay, together with Bockarie, approved the appointment of senior RUF commanders to deputy ministerial positions within the Junta government, in order to integrate the RUF into the AFRC regime. The Chamber concluded that given his power, authority, and influence, including his role, rank, and relationship with Bockarie, Sesay contributed significantly to the JCE."[3426]

1233. The Appeals Chamber, therefore, finds no error in the Trial Chamber's assessment that Sesay's "level of participation was key to the furtherance of the objectives of the JCE" and that "his culpability reaches the highest level."[3427]

(b) Double-counting the mens rea of acts of terrorism and collective punishments

1234. We endorse the ICTY Appeals Chamber's holding that with respect to alleged errors concerning the gravity of the offence or aggravating factors, an appellant must demonstrate that the Trial Chamber impermissibly double counted the factor in question.[3428]

1235. A Trial Chamber must ensure that they do not allow the same factor to detrimentally influence the Appellant's sentence twice. In the present case the Trial Chamber stated:

> The Chamber, Justice Itoe dissenting, is of the view that, where a particular act amounting to criminal conduct within the jurisdiction of the Court, such as murder or rape as a crime against humanity has also, because of the additional element of intent necessary for a conviction for acts of terrorism or collective punishments as a war crime, amounted to a crime as alleged in Counts 1 and 2 of the Indictment, for purposes of sentencing we will consider such acts of terrorism or collective punishment as factors which increase the gravity of the underlying offence.[3429]

[3424] Krstić Appeal Judgment, para. 254.

[3427] See Sentencing Judgment, para. 215.
[3428] Deronjić Appeal Judgment, para. 107.
[3429] Sentencing Judgment, para. 106.

1236. The Trial Chamber thus considered that the additional mens rea of specific intent which transformed an underlying offence into an act of terrorism or collective punishments increased the gravity of the underlying offence and it took this additional gravity of the offence into account for the purposes of determining the appropriate sentences under Counts 3-11, 13 and 14. In addition, the Trial Chamber entered a sentence for the convictions under Counts 1 and 2. By so doing, the Trial Chamber double-counted the specific intent of the offences of acts of terrorism and collective punishments: first, as increasing the gravity of the underlying offences, and second, as part of the offence of acts of terrorism and collective punishments. Both are reflected in the sentences imposed. Where a factor is not an element of a crime, that factor may be considered in aggravation of sentence. However, where a factor is an element of an offence for which a sentence is imposed, it cannot also constitute an aggravating factor for the purposes of sentencing.[3430]

1237. Having found that the Trial Chamber impermissibly double-counted the specific intent of acts of terrorism and collective punishments as increasing the gravity of the underlying offences, the Appeals Chamber will revise the sentences as appropriate.

(c) Sesay's contribution to the peace process

1238. Sesay argues that the Trial Chamber erred in law in failing to attach any noticeable weight to Sesay's post-conflict conduct. Sesay contends that the test of whether his post-conflict conduct warranted mitigation is whether his contribution to the peace process amounted to a considerable contribution. If this considerable contribution standard was met, then, Sesay asserts, the Trial Chamber was required to attach weight to this factor in mitigation of his sentence. According to Sesay, the fact that he was convicted under Counts 15 and 17 for a failure to prevent and punish the perpetrators of attacks against UNAMSIL peacekeepers is irrelevant to the Trial Chamber's consideration of how much weight to attach to Sesay's post-conflict conduct as a mitigating factor. Sesay contends the Plavšić case indicates he is entitled to mitigation, notwithstanding his role in the UNAMSIL attacks.

1239. The Trial Chamber found that Sesay "proved mitigating circumstances on the balance of the probabilities in relation to Sesay's real and meaningful contribution to the peace process in Sierra Leone following his appointment as interim leader of the RUF."[3431] The Trial Chamber's circumstances found to exist then, [and therefore] it should not be given undue weight in mitigation."[3443] Sesay fails to show error in this regard.

[3431] Sentencing Judgment, para. 228.

(e) Alleged coercive treatment by the Prosecution

1244. The Appeals Chamber is of the view that, contrary to Sesay's argument, the Trial Chamber took into account Sesay's argument that the Prosecution's "coercive conduct" during his arrest and "interview process" denied him of the real possibility of cooperation with the Prosecution. These circumstances were the subject of the "lengthy voir dire process," and Sesay's submissions were noted in paragraph 72 of the Sentencing Judgment.[3444] In the context of considering "Substantial cooperation" with the Prosecution, the Trial Chamber found that Sesay's treatment by the Prosecution during the six day period after his arrest did not preclude him from cooperating with the Prosecution at any point since that episode, and thus it did not warrant additional relief beyond that already afforded to Sesay, namely, that the Trial Chamber expunged from the record the statements obtained by the Prosecution during this six day period.[3445] On appeal, Sesay has not shown any error and, therefore, his submission is untenable.

(f) Likelihood of serving sentence abroad

1245. The Trial Chamber found that:

> [W]hilst it seems more likely than not at this stage that the convicted persons in this trial will serve sentences outside Sierra Leone, this is a decision that ultimately lies within the discretion of the President of the Court, based upon agreements concluded by the Registrar. The Chamber is unable to speculate on the result of these negotiations and decision-making processes, upon which it has no conclusive information, which lie outside of its control. It therefore notes for purposes of record that it has not given any weight to this factor in the consideration of the sentences of any of the convicted persons in this case.
> The Chamber, however, wishes to recognize that, in general terms, sentences served abroad, where family visits are likely to be few, may be harder to bear. Such circumstances would normally amount to a factor in mitigation.[3446]

1246. The Appeals Chamber finds no error in the Trial Chamber's decision not to mitigate the Appellants sentences as a consequence of the fact that they will likely be served outside of Sierra Leone. As discussed in the Mrđa case, which is relied upon by Sesay, it is common practice that convicted persons from international criminal tribunals serve their sentences in foreign countries.[3447] Sesay does not refer to any case in which serving the sentence in a foreign country has been considered as a mitigating factor for sentencing purposes.[3448]

(g) Statement of remorse

1247. Although the Trial Chamber found Sesay's statements of remorse were generally "not sincere," it accepted that his expression of empathy toward the victims of the conflict were in fact sincere.[3449]

1248. With regard to any further mitigating weight, Trial Chamber exercised its discretion to find that Sesay's statements, apart from his empathy toward victims of the conflict, did not show any real remorse.[3450] Sesay, however, relies on the ICTY Trial Chamber case of Brđanin to assert that in order to constitute a mitigating circumstance "it is sufficient for the accused to extend his sympathy for victims of the conflict."[3451] The Appeals Chamber finds that this is a mischaracterisation of the law. In Fofana and Kondewa, the Appeals Chamber observed that only in a minority of cases have Trial Chambers found that an accused's expressions of regret or empathy for victims, without acknowledgement of responsibility for the crimes, constituted a mitigating factor. The Appeals Chamber acknowledged that it is:

> aware of only two cases at the ad hoc Tribunals in which the Chamber considered whether an accused's expressions of regret or empathy for victims without acknowledgement of responsibility for the crimes could constitute a mitigating factor. In Vasiljević, the ICTY Appeals Chamber opined that an accused can express sincere regrets without admitting his participation in a crime, and that this could be a factor taken into account by the Trial Chamber.[3452] However, in Vasiljević, the Appeals Chamber declined to consider Vasiljević's expressions of regret to be a mitigating circumstance.[3453]
> The ICTY Trial Judgment in Orić is the only case in which a convicted person received credit for expressions of empathy for the victims without acknowledging responsibility.[3454] In Blaškić, the accused attempted to express remorse while denying the Trial Chamber did not, and need not have, relied upon findings that he was "the senior RUF commander" (i.e., as Gbao states, the most senior RUF commander[3596]) with "the largest number of fighters" at the Makump DDR camp in order to find that his conduct amounted to aiding and abetting.

1314. Gbao's contention that the Trial Chamber erred by taking into account his leadership role rather than any abuse of that role as an aggravating factor is similarly unavailing. The relevant passage of the Sentencing Judgment must be read in conjunction with the Trial Chamber's findings on Gbao's role in the attack on Jaganathan in paragraphs 2261 through 2265 of the Trial Judgment.

1315. In the Sentencing Judgment, the Trial Chamber noted that Gbao was convicted of aiding and abetting the attacks directed against Jaganathan at the Makump DDR camp "where he was the senior RUF Commander present at the time of Kallon's arrival and he remained the RUF Commander with the largest number of fighters present." As the senior RUF Commander until Kallon's arrival representing the RUF, a signatory to the Lomé Accord, he had a duty to support UNAMSIL personnel who were tasked with bringing peace to the population of Sierra Leone. Thus, it was reasonable for the Trial Chamber to find that Gbao had abused his position of authority, including by (i) demanding, with the support of thirty to forty armed RUF subordinates, that UNAMSIL give him back his five fighters, (ii) fomenting an atmosphere of hostility and (iii) orchestrating an armed confrontation at the Makump DDR camp.[3597]

(f) Serving sentence in a foreign country

1316. The Appeals Chamber recalls its holding that the Trial Chamber did not error in declining to mitigate the sentences of the Accused in light of its finding that they will likely serve their sentences in a foreign country.[3598] Gbao does not extend the argument made previously by Sesay, and therefore the Appeals Chamber dismisses his argument for the same reasons.

(g) Disproportionate sentence for aiding and abetting an attack against a UNAMSIL peacekeeper

1317. We endorse the view of the ICTY Appeals Chamber that sentences of like individuals in like cases should be comparable.[3599] The relevance of previous sentences is however often limited as a

The Appeals Chamber affirms the sentence of forty (40) years imprisonment under Count 15 and thirty-five (35) years imprisonment under Count 17;

In respect of Gbao, taking into account the Grounds of Appeal which have been allowed, the particular circumstances of this case as well as the form and degree of the participation of Gbao in the crimes, and the seriousness of the crimes, the Appeals Chamber finds that the effective sentence imposed by the Trial Chamber reflects the totality of Gbao's culpable conduct for the crimes under Counts 1, 3 through 11 and 13. The Appeals Chamber, Justices Winter and Fisher dissenting, therefore imposes a global sentence for Counts 1, 3 through 11 and 13 of twenty-five (25) years imprisonment. Taking into account that Gbao's Ground 16 has been allowed, in part, the sentence of twenty-five (25) years imprisonment under Count 15 is decreased to twenty (20) years imprisonment;

I. INTRODUCTION

1. On 25 February 2009 the Trial Chamber I of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Chamber") handed down its verdict in this case, delivered in summary form in open court.[1] On 2 March 2009, the Chamber filed its Judgement.[2]

2. The Chamber hereby renders its Sentencing Judgement.

II. CONVICTIONS AND FORM OF LIABILITY

1. Issa Hassan Sesay

3. Issa Hassan Sesay was found guilty of the crimes, set out below, by participating in a joint criminal enterprise, pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute:

(i) Acts of Terrorism, punishable under Article 3(d) of the Statute (Count 1), for crimes set forth in Counts 3 to 11 and Count 13 in relation to events in specified locations in Bo, Kenema, Kono and Kailahun Districts;

(ii) Collective Punishments, punishable under Article 3(b) of the Statute (Count 2), for crimes set forth in Counts 3 to 5 and Count 10 to 11 in relation to events in specified locations in Kenema, Kono and Kailahun Districts;

(xiii) Pillage, punishable under Article 3(f) of the Statute (Count 14), in relation to events in specified locations in Bo and Kono Districts.

10. Additionally, Augustine Gbao was found guilty, pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute, in relation to events in Bombali District, of aiding and abetting attacks on peacekeepers, an other serious violation of International Humanitarian Law, punishable under Article 4(b) of the Statute (Count 15).

III. APPLICABLE LAW

1. Applicable Provisions

11. Article 19 of the Statute and Rules 100 and 101 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules") provide as follows:

> Article 19– Penalties
>
> 1. The Trial Chamber shall impose upon a convicted person, other than a juvenile offender, imprisonment for a specified number of years. In determining the terms of imprisonment, the Trial Chamber shall, as appropriate, have recourse to the practice regarding prison sentences in the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the national courts of Sierra Leone.
>
> 2. In imposing the sentences, the Trial Chamber should take into account such factors as the gravity of the offence and the individual circumstances of the convicted person.
>
> Rule 100 - Sentencing Procedure
>
> (A) If the Trial Chamber convicts the accused or the accused enters a guilty plea, the Prosecutor shall submit any relevant information that may assist the Trial Chamber in determining an appropriate sentence no more than 7 days after such conviction or guilty plea. The defendant shall thereafter, but no more that 7 days after the Prosecutor's filing submit any relevant information that may assist the Trial Chamber in determining an appropriate sentence.
>
> (B) Where the accused has entered a guilty plea, the Trial Chamber shall hear submissions of the parties at a sentencing hearing. Where the accused has been convicted by a Trial Chamber, the Trial Chamber may hear submissions of the parties at a sentencing hearing.
>
> (C) The sentence shall be pronounced in a judgement in public and in the presence of the convicted person, subject to Rule 102(B).
>
> Rule 101 - Penalties
>
> (A) A person convicted by the Special Court, other than a juvenile offender, may be sentenced to imprisonment for a specific number of years.
> (B) In determining the sentence, the Trial Chamber shall take into account the factors mentioned in Article 19 (2) of the Statute, as well as such factors as:

23. The Chamber is cognisant of the impermissibility of "double-counting", meaning that the factors considered in assessing the gravity of the offence, cannot be used or considered as aggravating circumstances.[27] The Appeals Chamber has however endorsed the view that there is no double-counting merely because a Trial Chamber considers the impact of the crimes on the victim in one section and the vulnerability of the victims in the other section.[28] In this regard, this Chamber takes the view that factors which it considers and accepts as lessening the gravity of the offence, cannot be taken into account as mitigating circumstances.

3.2. Aggravating Factors

24. The Chamber opines that it is an accepted practice that aggravating factors should be established by the Prosecution beyond a reasonable doubt[29] and that only circumstances directly related to the commission of the offence charged, and for which the Accused has been convicted, can be considered to be aggravating.[30] Hence, when a particular circumstance is an element of the underlying offence, it cannot be taken into account as an aggravating factor.[31]

25. The Chamber acknowledges that the Statute and the Rules do not provide an exhaustive enumeration of the circumstances that the Trial Chamber may consider to be aggravating. Based on the established jurisprudence, factors considered as aggravating in other international criminal jurisdictions, however, include the leadership role of the Accused,[32] premeditation and motive,[33] a willing and enthusiastic participation in the crime,[34] the length of time during which the crime was committed,[35] the location of the attacks – attacks committed in traditional places of civilian sanctuary such as churches, mosques, schools and hospitals being generally considered as more serious,[36] sadism and a desire for revenge,[37] abuse representatives from Ghana, Guinea, Libya, Sierra Leone, Canada, UK, USA, the then Organisation of African Unity (now African Union) and UNAMSIL.[305]

202. It was of utmost international interest that all the UNAMSIL peacekeepers were safely returned, those detained, wounded or injured, death or alive and all the missing peacekeepers.[306] The political effort to assist the Sierra Leonean people should be supplemented by a credible military force. The UK decided to deploy their spearhead battalion to restore relative calm in Freetown, Lungi and the Peninsula areas.

203. The objective of the international community was to assist in creating conditions for the establishment of lasting peace. At the 4139th meeting of the Security Council on 11 May 2000, many member states advocated that UNAMSIL should be given a strong peace enforcement mandate under Chapter VII of the Charter.[307] The Under-Secretary-General deemed it essential for the international community to show the necessary will and resolve to sustain such a commitment to impose peace in Sierra Leone and called on member states with ready capacity and necessary resources to assist.

1.8.6. Conclusion

204. Having carefully considered the instances of crimes against UNAMSIL personnel as we have found in the Judgement (Counts 15 and 17 of the Indictment) the Chamber concludes that the inherent gravity of the criminal acts in question is exceptionally high.

2. Individual Circumstances of the Accused

2.1. Applicable to all accused

2.1.1. Sentence possibly to be served outside of Sierra Leone

205. Having considered the submissions of the Parties in relation to serving a sentence in a foreign country,[308] as well as the submissions of the Registrar in this regard,[309] the Chamber

[305] Ibid. para. 78.
[306] Ibid. para. 94.

[309] SCSL-04-15-T-1248, Submission of the Registrar Pursuant to Rule 33(B) Regarding the Conclusion of Agreements for the Enforcement of Sentences, 25 March 2009 ("Registrar's Submission") notes that whilst it seems more likely than not at this stage that the convicted persons in this trial will serve sentences outside of Sierra Leone,[310] this is a decision that ultimately lies within the discretion of the President of the Court, based upon agreements concluded by the Registrar.[311] The Chamber is unable to speculate on the result of these negotiations and decision making processes, upon which it has no conclusive information, and which lie outside of its control. It therefore notes for purposes of record that it has not given any weight to this factor in the consideration of the sentences of any of the convicted persons in this case.

206. The Chamber however wishes to recognise that, in general terms, sentences served abroad, where family visits are likely to be few, may be harder to bear. Such circumstances would normally amount to a factor in mitigation of sentence.

2.1.2. References in submissions to evidence adduced during trial

207. Although both the Prosecution and the Defence teams referred to evidence adduced at trial in support of their arguments on sentencing, the Chamber has not given this evidence substantial consideration unless such evidence resulted in a finding of fact in the Judgement. The Chamber had determined that some of the evidence adduced at trial was found to be not credible and therefore attached no probative value to it. In making its findings on the individual circumstances of the Accused for the purposes of sentencing, the Chamber has relied upon the findings in the Judgement, the arguments of the parties including any information adduced specifically in support thereof and the procedural history of the case.

2.2. Sesay

2.2.1. Convictions and form of liability

208. The Chamber recalls the crimes for which Sesay has been convicted, and the form of liability for each crime, as set out above in Section II of this Sentencing Judgement.

[310] Registrar's Submission, Annex B, Letter to the Special Court from the Republic of Sierra Leone.
[311] Rule 103(B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence.

legitimately so. We are therefore of the opinion that challenging the Court's jurisdiction is always a justiciable issue and cannot be considered an aggravating factor in sentencing because it is a fundamental legal right of an accused to raise any legal issue he considers valid to ensure his defence. The Chamber would therefore be contravening his universally accepted fundamental right if we were to uphold the Prosecution's thesis in this respect because such submission is clearly misconceived and fundamentally flawed in law.

276. In the same vein, the Chamber opines that Gbao's refusal at one stage to attend trial cannot be considered an aggravating circumstance. Rule 60 empowers the Chamber to continue the proceedings in the absence of an accused. Indeed, the Chamber proceeded in his absence when Gbao exercised his right own not to attend the proceedings.

2.4.4. Mitigating Circumstances

2.4.4.1. Remorse

277. The Chamber is unable to conclude that Gbao has demonstrated genuine remorse for the crimes for which he has been convicted, and thus gives no weight in mitigation of sentence in this respect.

2.4.4.2. Advanced age

278. The Chamber does not accept the Defence's submission that life expectancy is a relevant factor in sentencing;[394] however it does accept that a lengthy sentence can be harder to bear in older age. Gbao's age of 60 years has thus been taken into account as a relevant factor in mitigation of sentence.

2.4.4.3. Lack of prior criminal conduct

279. The Chamber has duly noted that it has not been demonstrated that Gbao has any prior criminal convictions, and that the Chamber is obliged to consider this as a factor in mitigation of sentence. The Chamber has done so, however we are of the opinion that only very limited credit for this factor can be given where the crimes committed are of a very serious nature, such as in this case.

4. Law on the Modes of Liability Charged

244. In order to assess and determine the culpability of each Accused, it is necessary for the Chamber to examine the criminal responsibility of each Accused on all the modes of liability which have been alleged against them in the Indictment, either collectively or individually. In this regard, it is alleged that the Accused are responsible, pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute, for planning, instigating, ordering, committing or otherwise aiding and abetting the planning, preparation, or execution of the crimes charged in the Indictment.[435] "Committing" would include committing through participation in a joint criminal enterprise.[436] In addition or in the alternative, the Accused are also alleged to be criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute, as superiors of members of the RUF.[437]

245. The relevant paragraphs of Article 6 of the Statute provide as follows:

> 1. A person who planned, instigated, ordered, committed or otherwise aided and abetted in the planning, preparation or execution of a crime referred to in articles 2 to 4 of the present Statute shall be individually responsible for the crime. [...]
> 3. The fact that any of the acts referred to in articles 2 to 4 of the present Statute was committed by a subordinate does not relieve his or her superior of criminal responsibility if he or she knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the superior had failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof. [...]

246. The Chamber considers that the principle of legality demands that the Court shall apply the law which was binding upon individuals at the time of the acts charged.[438] The application of the law of Sierra Leone to the forms of liability within the jurisdiction of the Special Court is restricted to the crimes envisaged in Article 5 of the Statute and no Accused providing that the basic elements of aiding and abetting as set out below are satisfied.[492]

277. The actus reus of aiding and abetting requires that the Accused perpetrates an act or an omission specifically directed to assist, encourage or lend moral support to the perpetration of a certain specific crime and that this act or omission of the aider and abettor must have a substantial effect upon the perpetration of the crime.[493] The provision of material or physical assistance can also constitute the actus reus of aiding and abetting. "[P]roof of a cause-effect relationship between the conduct of the aider or abettor and the commission of the crime, or proof that such conduct served as a condition precedent to the commission of the crime, is not required."[494]

278. Further, taking into account the specific wording of Article 6(1) of the Statute that "[a] person who [...] aided and abetted in the planning, preparation or execution of a crime referred to in articles 2 to 4 of the present Statute shall be individually responsible for the crime", this Chamber is of the opinion that the actus reus of aiding and abetting a crime may occur before, during, or after the principal crime has been perpetrated and at a location geographically removed from the location of the principal crime.[495] If the aiding and abetting occurs after the crime, it must be established that a prior agreement existed between the principal and the person who subsequently aided and abetted in the commission of the crime.[496] The Appeals Chamber has confirmed that acts of aiding and abetting "can be made at a time and place removed from the actual crime."[497] The Chamber reiterates, however, that the act of the aider and abettor must have a substantial effect upon the perpetration of the crime.

279. Mere presence at the scene of a crime, without more, will not usually constitute aiding and abetting. There may be situations, however, in which the physical presence at the crime scene of the Accused, combined with his or her position of authority, "allowed the inference that non-interference by the accused actually amounted to tacit approval and encouragement" case may be.[514]

284. The Chamber is satisfied that superior responsibility encompasses criminal conduct by subordinates under all modes of participation under Article 6(1) of the Statute.[515] "It follows that a superior can be held criminally responsible for his subordinates' planning, instigating, ordering, committing or otherwise aiding and abetting a crime."[516]

285. The Chamber opines that the following three elements must be satisfied in order to invoke individual criminal responsibility under Article 6(3) of the Statute:

(i) The existence of a superior-subordinate relationship between the superior and the offender of the criminal act;

(ii) The superior knew or had reason to know that the criminal act was about to be or had been committed; and

(iii) The superior failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the criminal act or punish the offender thereof.[517]

4.2.1. Superior-Subordinate Relationship

286. Under Article 6(3) of the Statute, a superior is someone who possesses the power or authority in either a de jure or a de facto capacity to prevent the commission of a crime by a subordinate or to punish the offender of the crime after the crime has been committed.[518] This Chamber considers that it is thus this power or authority of the superior to control the actions of his subordinates which forms the basis of the superior-subordinate relationship.[519]

287. The Appeals Chamber has confirmed that the "effective control" test must be applied in determining whether a superior–subordinate relationship exists.[520] According to this test, the superior must possess the "material ability to prevent or punish criminal conduct".[521] The indicators of effective control are more a matter of evidence than of substantive law[522] and must be determined on a case-by-case basis.[523] Mere substantial influence that does not meet the threshold of effective control is not sufficient under customary international law to serve as a means of exercising superior criminal responsibility.[524]

288. The power or authority of the superior to prevent or to punish does not arise solely from a de jure status of a superior conferred upon him by official appointment.[525] Someone may also be considered to be a superior based on the existence of de facto powers or degree of control. This may often be the case in contemporary conflicts where only de facto armies and paramilitary groups subordinated to self-proclaimed governments may exist.[526]

289. Moreover, while possession of de jure powers may "suggest a material ability to prevent or punish criminal acts of subordinates, it may be neither necessary nor sufficient to prove such ability[...]" The possession of de jure authority, without more, provides only some evidence of effective control.[527] In other words, while the de jure authority may be evidentially relevant to such a determination,[528] the Prosecution will still bear the burden of proving effective control beyond reasonable doubt.[529]

290. The necessity of proving that the principal perpetrator was the subordinate of the Accused "does not require direct or formal subordination. Rather the Accused has to be, by virtue of his position, senior in some sort of formal or informal hierarchy to the perpetrators."[530] Hierarchy, subordination and chains of command need not be established in the sense of a formal organisational structure as long as the test of effective control is met.[531] Further, "there is no requirement that the superior-subordinate relationship be immediate in which they do not:

> Considering the fact that minor inconsistencies commonly occur in witness testimony without rendering it unreliable, it is within the discretion of the Trial Chamber to evaluate it and to consider whether the evidence as a whole is credible, without explaining its decision in every detail. If the Trial Chamber did not refer to the evidence given by a witness, even if it is contradiction to the Trial Chamber's finding, it is to be presumed that the Trial Chamber assessed and weighed the evidence, but found that the evidence did not prevent it from arriving at its actual findings.[915]

485. Adopting this approach, it should be understood that where the Chamber has not discussed the evidence of witnesses who gave testimony at variance with that found as established in the factual narrative, the Chamber has nevertheless fully considered the evidence of each and every witness in light of the evidence of the case as a whole. The Chamber has however determined that such evidence does not meet the threshold of reliability and credibility necessary to draw a factual conclusion upon it.

2. Evidence of Witnesses

2.1. Credibility and Reliability of Oral Testimony

486. In assessing the credibility and reliability of oral witness testimony, the Chamber has considered factors such as the internal consistency of the witnesses' testimony, its consistency with other evidence in the case; any personal interest witnesses may have that may influence their motivation to tell the truth; and observational criteria such as the witnesses' demeanour, conduct and character.[916] In addition, the Trial Chamber has considered the witnesses' knowledge of the facts on which they testify and the lapse of time between the events and the testimony.[917]

487. The Trial Chamber has also kept in mind that "the fact that a witness gives evidence honestly is not in itself sufficient to establish the reliability of that evidence. The issue is not merely whether the evidence of a witness is honest; it is also whether the evidence is objectively reliable."[918]

488. The Chamber may accept or reject the evidence of a witness in whole or in part, and may find a witness to be credible and reliable about certain aspects of their testimony and not credible or reliable with respect to others.[919]

2.2. Inconsistencies

489. The Chamber is of the view that the "mere existence of inconsistencies in the testimony of a witness does not undermine the witness's credibility."[920] The Chamber accepts that since the events in question took place many years ago, some details may be confused and some may be forgotten. The Chamber may accept such evidence as long as the witnesses have "nevertheless recounted the essence of an incident charged in acceptable detail, without undermining the fundamental features of their evidence."[921] Where there are material inconsistencies in the evidence of a witness, the Chamber has taken great care to address those issues and to assess, in light of all of the evidence, whether or not to rely on competing accounts of pertinent events.[922]

490. The Chamber is of the view that while inconsistency is certainly a factor to take into consideration when relying on evidence, this alone does not mean that the whole of the witness's testimony is unreliable.[923] Even if some aspects of a witness's testimony are not believed by the Chamber, the Chamber may still accept other portions of the evidence presented provided they are credible in their context and particularly where they are corroborated.[924] Further, the Chamber is of the opinion that where a witness' explanation is insufficient to place reliance on that witness' testimony, "[d]oubts about a testimony can be removed with the corroboration of other testimonies."[925]

493. During the course of the trial, some witnesses have been asked to identify one or more of the Accused in the courtroom. The Chamber is aware that it may be possible for a witness to point out an Accused person due to their physical placement in the courtroom and, in a multi-Accused trial, to pick out the Accused person who most closely resembles an individual they previously saw.[931]

494. The Chamber considers identification by a witness of someone previously known to be more reliable than identification of someone previously unknown.[932]

2.4. Hearsay Evidence

495. The Chamber followed the operative principle in the sphere of international criminal adjudication that hearsay evidence is admissible.[933] The Chamber is aware that hearsay evidence has inherent deficiencies. It cannot be tested by cross-examination, its reliability may be affected by compounded errors of perception and memory, its source and content can neither be confirmed nor is it subject to solemn declaration.[934] We are conscious of the fact that where such evidence is admitted to prove the truth of its contents, a tribunal ought to be satisfied that it is reliable for that purpose, in the sense of its being voluntary, truthful, and trustworthy, and that both its context and the circumstances under which it arose should be considered.[935]

496. Consistent with the Statute, the Rules of Procedure and Evidence and established international criminal jurisprudence, we acknowledge the fact that evidence which is hearsay in character does not necessarily deprive it of its probative value. In general, however, the weight or the probative value to be attached to such evidence will usually be less than that attributed to the testimony under oath of a witness who has been subjected to cross-examination.[936] Factors that influence the probative value of hearsay evidence include whether the evidence given was first-hand or further removed, the opportunity to cross-examine the person who made the statement, the potential for errors of perception and memory and the circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness surrounding the statements.[937]

2.5. Accomplice Evidence

497. The Chamber has heard considerable evidence from "insider witnesses" – that is, persons who were former members of the RUF or the AFRC and who, even though they were not, could also have been indicted for these same offences whose commission they themselves openly and voluntarily admitted in the course of their testimony. These witnesses, as the Appeals Chamber has also observed, are, in law, considered as accomplices.[938]

498. The Chamber has approached the assessment of the reliability of the evidence of accomplice witnesses with caution and has always considered whether or not an accomplice has an ulterior motive to testify such as assurances of a quid pro quo from the Prosecution that they will not be prosecuted. Where possible, the Chamber has looked for corroboration of the evidence of accomplice witnesses.[939]

2.6. Circumstantial Evidence

499. Circumstantial evidence is evidence of circumstances surrounding an event or incident from which a fact at issue may be reasonably inferred.[940] Although the individual ingredients of circumstantial evidence may be insufficient to establish a fact, taken conjunctively and cumulatively their effect may be revealing and sometimes decisive.[941] As a matter of law, where events. The Chamber has carefully analysed the entirety of the evidence and has set out below its findings on the material facts that we find have been established.

879. In the early hours of 6 January 1999, the AFRC entered Freetown. The troops were divided into two flanks and ordered to take different routes through Ferry Junction to converge on the ECOMOG troops at Upgun. The AFRC forces overwhelmed ECOMOG at Upgun and continued towards the central part of Freetown. At approximately 7:30am, the fighters secured State House, the seat of Government.[1723]

880. Gullit then dispatched a group of AFRC troops to Pademba Road Prison, where they released the inmates, including former President JS Momoh and RUF members Gibril Massaquoi and Steve Bio.[1724] The troops searched for Sankoh, but were informed by one of the prisoners that he had been moved to another location.[1725]

881. Gullit contacted Bockarie from State House and informed him that his troops were in control of Freetown.[1726] In the afternoon of 6 January 1999, Bockarie made an announcement on Radio France International that Gullit's troops had captured Freetown and would continue to defend it.[1727] While the AFRC were at State House, Bockarie also announced over BBC Radio that he was reinforcing the troops in Freetown and that he had ordered that strategic positions, including Government buildings, be burned.[1728]

882. Throughout 6 and 7 January 1999, the AFRC forces attempted to advance into the western part of Freetown, but ECOMOG engaged the rebels in heavy fighting and they were unable to penetrate further across the city.[1729]

Accordingly, in the absence of more detailed evidence, the Chamber is not satisfied that the witness's observations prove that Bazzy made a distinct radio call to Bockarie.

883. On the afternoon of 7 January 1999, Gullit sent a radio message to Bockarie to inform him that the AFRC were pulling back to State House and were unable to advance further. Bockarie advised Gullit that if ECOMOG forced them to retreat further, the troops should burn the central part of Freetown, including all key buildings, to the ground.[1730] Gullit ordered that petrol be distributed to the Commanders at State House and troops were dispatched to burn buildings.[1731]

1.8.5. The AFRC Retreat From Freetown

884. On 9 January 1999, under pressure from ECOMOG, the AFRC abandoned State House and began retreating through the eastern part of the city. Gullit again radioed Bockarie and requested him to send RUF reinforcements. Bockarie promised to do so and the two men arranged that AFRC fighters would meet the RUF reinforcements at a factory near Wellington on the eastern edge of Freetown. A group of AFRC fighters were dispatched to Wellington and a group of RUF troops led by RUF Rambo and Superman moved from Lunsar to the Waterloo area. However, ECOMOG controlled Kossoh Town, Hastings and Jui, which are situated between Wellington and Waterloo. There appears to have been no communication between Gullit's fighters and Rambo's group and ultimately the RUF troops were unable or unwilling to break through the ECOMOG position to meet the AFRC fighters.[1732]

885. Subsequently, a small group of around 20 fighters led by AFRC Commander Rambo Red Goat broke away from the RUF contingent and managed to join the AFRC forces in

Although TF1-334 testifies that the communication was between Gullit and RUF Rambo, the Chamber is satisfied from the consistent evidence of other witnesses that Gullit spoke to Bockarie and Rambo was the Commander sent to lead the reinforcements. See also Transcript of 18 July 2005, TF1-361 pp. 62-63 (CS) where the witness testifies that Bockarie deliberately withdrew the RUF reinforcements due to suspicions that Gullit was planning to maintain the ground gained in Freetown exclusively for AFRC troops.

near Port Loko, on 5 January 1999 and moved from there to Waterloo on 6 January 1999.[1743]

892. However, the contingent of Guinean ECOMOG troops stationed at Jui and Kossoh Town blocked the path of the RUF troops from Waterloo to Freetown. The RUF attacked the ECOMOG soldiers but were unable to pass through to Freetown. In addition, in-fighting persisted between Superman and Rambo.[1744] After about two weeks of heavy fighting, ECOMOG reinforcements arrived from Port Loko and opened a passage to secure the safe retreat of the Guinean ECOMOG troops to Port Loko.[1745] The removal of the ECOMOG troops appears to have facilitated the retreat of the AFRC from Freetown to Waterloo.[1746]

893. The Chamber finds that the RUF had no control over the AFRC forces in Freetown during the attack and further finds that the RUF did not form part of a common operation with the AFRC forces for this attack on 6 January 1999.

1.8.7. The AFRC and the RUF Meet at Waterloo

894. After the AFRC retreated from Freetown, Sesay chaired a meeting of AFRC and RUF Commanders including Kallon, Rambo and Superman at which the two groups planned to cooperate in a second attack on Freetown. This second attack failed because RUF fighters had seized from the retreating AFRC fighters the property, money and ammunition looted by the AFRC in Freetown, resulting in animosity between the two groups.[1747]

895. After the joined operation to capture Freetown failed, Sesay returned to Makeni and Kallon travelled to Magburaka. Superman retreated to Lunsar with fighters loyal to him. AFRC humanity and war crimes as set out in the Applicable Law section above clearly each contain a materially distinct element that does not exist in the other. As a result, the Chamber is satisfied that it is permissible to enter convictions for the same conduct under Article 2 (Crimes against humanity) and Article 3 (Violations of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II).[3986]

2303. Therefore, it is permissible to enter convictions in relation to the same conduct as found under Counts 6, 7 and 8. Similarly, it is permissible to enter convictions in relation to the same conduct under Count 5, 10, 15 and under Counts 4, 11, 16 respectively.

2.2. Cumulative Convictions on separate Crimes Against Humanity

2.2.1. Murder and Extermination

2304. The Chamber considers that is impermissible to convict for both murder and extermination under Count 4 and 3 based on the same conduct.[3987] However, the Chamber finds that it is permissible to convict on both counts if each count is based on distinct conduct.[3988]

2.2.2. Rape and Sexual Slavery

2305. The Chamber considers that the crime charged under Count 7 (sexual slavery) requires a distinct element from the crime of rape (Count 6). The offence of rape requires sexual penetration, whereas sexual slavery requires the exercise of powers attaching to the right of ownership and acts of sexual nature. As the acts of a sexual nature do not necessarily require sexual penetration, and rape does not require that the right to ownership is exercised, the Chamber finds that sexual slavery is distinct from rape. Where the commission of sexual slavery, however, entails acts of rape, the Chamber finds that the act of rape is subsumed by the act of sexual slavery. In such a case, a conviction on the same conduct is not permissible for rape and sexual slavery.

Count 14: Pillage, a Violation of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(f) of the Statute: GUILTY, of committing Pillage by participating in a joint criminal enterprise, pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute, in [3999] In this, and in other counts, the Accused have been convicted under both Article 6(1) and Article 6(3) of the Statute in relation to the same count. However, the Chamber notes that in each such case, the conduct for which the Accused have been held liable under Article 6(1) is distinct from that for which they been held liable under Article 6(3). As noted previously in the Cumulative Convictions Section, the Chamber considers that convictions may be entered under Article 6(1) and 6(3) in relation to the same count if the convictions under each mode of liability are based on different sets of conduct: supra para. 2313. In cases in which the Accused have been convicted under both Article 6(1) and Article 6(3) in relation to the same count, the Chamber has clearly specified the incidents for which they have been held liable under each mode of liability.

17. The Chamber acknowledges that Rules 94(B) of the ICTY and ICTR are virtually identical to Rule 94(B) of the Rules of the Special Court.[28] Accordingly, guidance can be sought, persuasively, from the jurisprudence of those ad hoc Tribunals interpreting Rule 94(B).

1. The Legal Effect of Judicially Noticing an Adjudicated Fact

18. It is the Chamber's considered view that the rationale behind Rule 94 is two-fold. First, and foremost, Rule 94 aims to promote judicial economy by dispensing with the need for the parties to lead evidence in order to prove supplementary facts or allegations already proven in past proceedings. Second, Rule 94 aims to harmonise judgements in relation to certain factual issues that arise in multiple cases before the Special Court.[29]

19. Further, on a plain and ordinary interpretation of Rule 94, a Trial Chamber may take judicial notice of facts either pursuant to Rule 94(A) or pursuant to Rule 94(B). Facts judicially noticed under Rule 94(A) cannot be challenged during trial.[30] Under Rule 94(B), however, the facts in question must have been adjudicated in a different proceeding, between different parties, based on the evidence presented by those parties. The Chamber recognises that it is settled law that the proposed

> At the request of a party or proprio motu, a Trial Chamber, after hearing the parties, may decide to take judicial notice of adjudicated facts or documentary evidence from other proceedings of the Tribunal relating to the matter at issue in the current proceedings.

Rule 94(B) of the ICTY Rules of Procedure and Evidence Provides:

> At the request of a party or proprio motu, a Trial Chamber, after hearing the parties, may decide to take judicial notice of adjudicated facts or documentary evidence from other proceedings of the Tribunal relating to matters at issue in the current proceedings.

adjudicated facts must relate "to a matter at issue in the current proceedings."[31] Since the party not seeking judicial notice of proposed adjudicated facts did not have the chance to introduce evidence or make arguments in relation to the factual conclusions reached in a different case and their connection to the evidence heard in the present case, trial fairness requires that the opposing party be given the opportunity to challenge the accuracy of any facts admitted under Rule 94(B).[32] Consistent with the reasoning of the ICTY Appeals Chamber, this Chamber holds that Rule 94(B) creates a "well-founded presumption for the accuracy of this fact, which therefore does not have to be proven again at trial, but which, subject to that presumption, may be challenged at that trial."[33]

2. Factors to be Considered in Determining whether an Adjudicated Fact may be Admitted in Evidence

9. The Chamber notes that Rule 94(B) does not define what constitutes an "adjudicated fact". Given that judicially noticing such an adjudicated fact has the effect of creating a well-founded presumption as to the accuracy of that fact, trial fairness requires that this term be defined and delimited. Based on settled international jurisprudence, the Chamber therefore opines that the following legal criteria must be met for a proposed fact to be considered an adjudicated fact susceptible of being judicially noticed at the discretion of a Trial Chamber:

a. The fact must be distinct, concrete and identifiable;[34]

b. The fact must be relevant and pertinent to an issue in the current case;[35]

2. The Defence submits that the evidence that Dr. White used Prosecution funds during "FBI vetting" discloses a symbiotic relationship between the OTP and the FBI which would be inconsistent with the Prosecution's obligation pursuant to Article 15 to maintain its independence.[3] The Defence also states that the evidence of General Tarnue suggests that Dr. White played an integral role in the relocation and in the granting of asylum to General Tarnue.[4] The Defence submits that the above evidence raises serious questions about the integrity of the investigations[5] in this matter in that the Prosecution has violated Article 15 of the Statute of the Court in that it has not acted independently.

3. The Defence further avers that a prima facie breach of Article 15 raises issues which relate to an evaluation of the evidence and to an assessment of whether the Prosecution has complied with its disclosure obligations pursuant to Rule 68 of the Rules.[6]

4. The Defence submits that the Chamber will not be able to properly evaluate the veracity and reliability of the evidence of General Tarnue and other witnesses without a clear indication from the Prosecution as to the extent of the relationship between Dr. White acting for the OTP on the one hand, and the American Government and the FBI on the other since the involvement of the latter may have affected the evidence obtained.[7] The Defence further asserts that Dr. White's involvement with the outside agencies in assisting in the relocation of General Tarnue and his family must be disclosed since this assistance is capable of being an inducement and might have influenced General Tarnue's willingness to implicate the Accused.[8]

5. The Defence submits that the Prosecution must disclose anything that reveals the untruthfulness of General Tarnue's evidence pursuant to its obligation to disclose exculpatory evidence under Rule 68.[9] The Defence also asserts that General Tarnue's evidence, and in particular a statement made during his interview with Dr. White in April 2003, suggest that there were previous interviews with Dr. White and the FBI that have not been disclosed.[10]

6. In conclusion, the Defence requests that the Prosecution be required to disclose:

II. APPLICABLE LAW

(A) Authority, Autonomy and Independence of the Office of the Prosecutor

20. The law applicable to the subject-matter of the instant Motion is embodied in five key statutory provisions of the Court, to wit, Article 15(1) of the Statute, Section 15 of the Special Court Agreement, 2002 Ratification Act, 2002 ("Special Court Agreement") and Rules 8, 39, and 68 of the Rules.

21. Underscoring the centrality of the prosecutorial role within the Special Court's adversarial system for the adjudication of criminal cases, Article 15(1) of the Statute of the Court sets up an autonomous and independent machinery for the prosecution of crimes against humanity and war crimes in these terms:

> The Prosecutor shall be responsible for the investigation and prosecution of persons who bear the greatest responsibility for serious violations of international humanitarian law and crimes under Sierra Leonean law committed in the territory of Sierra Leone since 30 November 1996. The Prosecutor shall act independently as a separate organ of the Special Court. He or she shall not seek or receive instructions from any Government or from any other source. (emphasis added)

22. In the Chamber's opinion, it is absolutely clear that Article 15(1) reinforces, in unambiguous terms, an internationally accepted norm governing the exercise of prosecutorial authority, in International Criminal Tribunals namely, autonomy and independence. To this end, the Chamber acknowledges that it is imperative not only in preserving the integrity of the administration of criminal justice in international law but also to ensure the confidence of the international community in mechanisms set up to ensure accountability for war crimes against humanity, that the Office of the Prosecutor enjoys an unfettered functional and investigative discretion, subject only to recognised and accepted judicial controls in respect of the functions conferred on it by the Statute of the Special Court.

(B) Statutory Obligation on Sierra Leone to Provide Assistance to the Court.

23. The Chamber acknowledges that it was in recognition of the need for co-operation between the Court, the relevant Sierra Leone authorities and other states to fulfil the Court's mandate that Article 15(1) of the Statute, Section 15 of the Special Court Agreement and Rule 39 of the Court's certain key information allegedly arising out of the relationship between General Tarnue, Dr. White and the United States Government as set out in paragraph 6 herein.

(A) Alleged Breach of Article 15(1)

40. The Chamber notes that both the Defence and the Prosecution agree that within the proper context and interpretation of the Statute and the Rules, Article 15(1) does vest on the Prosecution, the autonomy and independence in the discharge of its functions, and that the Office of the Prosecutor must act as an independent body that does not take instructions from any other entity.

41. It seems clear to the Chamber that the arguments and submissions of the Defence as regards the alleged breach of Article 15(1) are predicated upon the assumption that the Office of the Prosecutor has taken instructions from another entity. The Prosecution submits that it has not. The crux of the matter, from the Chamber's perspective, is whether there is, at this point in time, any evidentiary basis or factual foundation for the allegation put forward by the Defence, to warrant a conclusive finding of fact that there has in law been a breach of Article 15(1). The Defence assert that the evidence from which such inference should be drawn is that of General Tarnue that Dr. White's actions were, according to Dr. White, to be based upon a decision of the State Department of the Government of the United States.

42. Does this piece of evidence irresistibly sustain the Defence contentions, even if given a liberal evaluation? In other words, does it necessarily follow that because General Tarnue stated that Dr. White told him that the latter's actions were to be based on a decision of the State Department of the U.S. Government, the Office of the Prosecutor was acting on the instructions 'received' from the U.S. Government? In the Chamber's opinion, an inference of this nature cannot lightly be drawn from such evidence, given its grave implications for the justice process.

43. The Chamber, likewise, emphasises that the suggestion of the Defence that General Tarnue's testimony revealed a relationship between the Office of the Prosecutor and the United States of America, even if it were true, could not in law justify, without more, the inference that the Prosecution was receiving instructions from the U.S Government in breach of Article 15(1). This is so even if the Office of the Prosecutor sought assistance from the U.S. Government as envisaged by Rule 8(C) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence. Certainly, in the Chamber's view, it would do violence to the plain meaning and context of the Statute and the Rules if conceptually the words "instructions" and "assistance" were construed as being synonymous and interchangeable. The contentions of the Defence on this issue, therefore, are legally unsustainable in that, on the whole, the Defence has failed to substantiate, by prima facie proof, the allegation of breach of Article 15(1), on the part of the Office of the Prosecutor. This Chamber does not find any, as the Defence contends, "master-servant" relationship between Dr. White, as FBI agent and the Prosecution which would occasion a breach of Article 15(1).

(B) Discretion to Seek Assistance

44. The Chamber recalls that both the Defence and Prosecution agree that within the framework of the Court's Statute and Rules, the Office of the Prosecutor is vested with some measure of discretionary latitude in seeking assistance from internal and external agencies for the purpose of the conduct of its investigations. We observe that, unlike Article 15(1) of the Statute which is an exclusionary clause designed to protect and preserve prosecutorial independence, there is no similar statutory prohibition for the Prosecution, in the exercise of its prosecutorial discretion, to seek, within the confines of the law, any assistance from other bodies and Institutions in fulfilling the duties conferred on it by the Statute. Clearly, Article 15(2) of the Statute is explicit in its purport and intendment that:

> "The Office of the Prosecutor shall have power to question suspects, victims, and witnesses, to collect evidence and evident on - site investigations. In carrying out these tasks, the Prosecutor shall, as appropriate, be assisted by the Sierra Leone authorities concerned."

45. By parity of reasoning, Rules 8(C), (D) and (E), 39, and 40 of the Court's Rules of Procedure and Evidence cumulatively establish a machinery for co-operation between the Office of the Prosecutor and external agencies or entities, be they States, Governments, Organisations, Bureaus, or related bodies.

46. In this regard, the Defence submissions do not really challenge the authority of the Office of the Prosecutor to seek assistance in the conduct of its investigations. Accordingly, the Chamber concludes that there is clear statutory authority for the Prosecution to seek assistance from both internal and external sources for the purposes of the conduct of its investigations in the course of fulfilling its mandate to bring to justice those who bear the greatest responsibility for crimes against humanity, war crimes and related offences during the hostilities that took place in Sierra Leone at the material times.

47. The complexity, roles, and functions of any such agencies or bodies cannot legally operate as limiting or restricting such authority in the absence of any express statutory provision to that effect.

(C) Disclosure under Rule 68

48. The third key issue relates to whether in the light of the contentions by the Defence about General Tarnue's testimony as to his dealings with Dr. White and the United States Government, Rule 68 is thereby implicated in fact and in law, requiring the Prosecution therefore to disclose certain key information as set out in the Defence Request (reproduced at paragraph 6 herein), the Chamber's findings are set out below in sub-paragraphs (iv) - (ix) of paragraph 64 herein.

49. In arriving at these conclusions, the Chamber notes that the requests made by the Defence in this application are either too broad, too vague, or indeed unspecific.

50. In seeking to establish a breach of Article 15(1) of the Statute, there has been a total lack of specificity on instructions received which the Defence alleges amounts to a breach by the Prosecution of its statutory obligations under Article 15(1). These same comments apply to the application where the Defence seeks to compel the Prosecution to disclose exculpatory evidence under Rule 68 as to the assistance offered by Dr. White to General Tarnue to obtain asylum and a relocation of himself and his family in the U.S.A.

51. In this regard, the Chamber would like to state here that for the Defence to succeed in this Motion, it is not enough to premise its application either on presumptions, on speculations, or on probabilities. If it does, as it seems, seek to establish the subservience of the Prosecutor to a foreign Government or Agency, it must provide concrete proof of those instructions and their contents and not just invite this Chamber, merely on the basis of speculation and without any legal or factual proof, to draw such a conclusion or even such an inference.

52. We are strongly of the opinion that mere evidence of the cooperation between the Prosecution and the FBI or the US Government, without proof that the former received instructions from the latter, including the nature and contents of such instructions, does not, per se, fulfill the test to establish a violation of Article 15(1) of the Statute.

(D) Exculpatory Evidence Under Rule 68

53. In the same vein, a mere speculative assertion without specifying or advancing concrete proof of the nature and content of the exculpatory evidence which the Defence is alleging to be in the

1. On 7 and 10 May 2012, the President of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court"), at the time, Justice Jon M. Kamanda, convened an Emergency Plenary Meeting of Judges pursuant to Rule 15*bis* (B) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Special Court ("Rules"), which mandates the President to refer an allegation of unfitness of a Judge to sit to the Council of Judges. Should the Council determine that (i) the allegation is of a serious nature and (ii) that there appears to be a substantial basis for same, "it shall refer the matter to the Plenary Meeting which will consider it and, if necessary, make a recommendation to the body which appointed the Judge." (Emphasis added)

2. The Plenary was seized of a Complaint, dated 26 April 2012, submitted by Justice Richard Lussick, Presiding Judge of Trial Chamber II, on behalf of the Judges of Trial Chamber II, against Justice Malick Sow, Alternate Judge in that Chamber, alleging misconduct and "Unfitness to Sit" pursuant to Rule 15*bis*.

3. The Complaint before the Plenary was contained in an email dated 26 April 2012 addressed to the President by the Presiding Judge of Trial Chamber II, Justice Richard Lussick, which said Complaint was published to the Judges constituting the Emergency Plenary.

4. Justice Malick Sow responded to the Complaint via email to the President dated 1 May 2012, which said Response was also before the Plenary.

5. At the start of the deliberations on the first day of the Plenary i.e. 7 May 2012, Justice Julia Sebutinde of Trial Chamber II read a written 6 page statement on behalf of Trial Chamber II, which purported to be a Complaint against Justice Malick Sow.

6. The Appeals Chamber Judges of the Emergency Plenary were only apprised of this statement at the time it was read out by Justice Julia Sebutinde, who was not the Presiding Judge of Trial Chamber II.

7. A fortiori, Justice Malick Sow, against whom the allegations in the statement were made was not given prior notice of it and, consequently, had not been given the opportunity to respond.

8. I objected to the procedural irregularity, which patently impinged on Justice Malick Sow's right to be heard, stating that it was against basic principles of natural justice, and submitted that the Emergency Plenary could not deliberate on the matter and that the views and recommendations of the Judges could not be sought when Justice Malick Sow had not been given an opportunity to respond to what were to all intents and purposes 'new' allegations against him. I warned the Teleconference that unless Justice Malick Sow was given time to reply to the sudden and scurrilous allegations made against him by Justice Julia Sebutinde, the refusal to give him time to respond was tantamount to "a perversion of justice". I informed my colleagues that, accordingly, I was not, from that moment, taking any further part in the Emergency Plenary. I then walked out of the conference room and the Emergency Plenary.

9. The statement by Justice Julia Sebutinde was, however, already on the record and in my opinion, subsequent attempts to expunge it did not detract from the fact that it had been published.

10. I did not participate in any further deliberations either on 7 or 10 May 2012 or in any decision taken by the Plenary on the matter.

11. I opine that it is inaccurate and misleading to state in the so-called "Resolution On Complaint by Trial Chamber II against Justice Malick Sow", that

> "THE JUDGES of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ... HAVE REACHED the following conclusions:
> 1. The Plenary DECLARES that Justice Malick Sow's behaviour in Court on the 26th April 2012 amounts to misconduct rendering him unfit to sit as an Alternate Judge of the Special Court.
>
> 2. The Plenary RECOMMENDS to the appointing authority pursuant to Rule 15bis (B) to decide upon the further status of Justice Malick Sow.
> 3. Pursuant to Rule 24(iii), the Plenary DIRECTS Justice Malick Sow to refrain from further sitting in the proceedings pending a decision from the appointing authority."

I was not one of those Judges of the Emergency Plenary who allegedly passed that Resolution and I did not resolve as alleged or at all.

DISPOSITION

12. For the foregoing reasons, I decline to voluntarily withdraw with respect to Defence Grounds 36 and 37 in the Appellate proceedings in Prosecutor v. Charles Ghankay Taylor.

IV. ANALYSIS

20. The Motion presents three issues for determination:

(i) Whether any Judge of the Appeals Chamber believes that he or she individually should voluntarily recuse him/herself with respect to Defence Grounds 36 and 37;

(ii) If every Judge does not individually and voluntarily recuse him/herself, who is empowered to decide on the request for disqualification under the Statute and Rules;

(iii) Whether a reasonable observer would apprehend indicia of bias with respect to Defence Grounds 36 and 37 on the part of the Judges of the Appeals Chamber.

A. Recusal

21. Each Judge of the Appeals Chamber, having considered Article 17(2) of the Statute and Rule 15(A), has declined to voluntarily withdraw with respect to Defence Grounds 36 and 37.

B. Procedure

22. Rule 15(B) plainly provides that a motion for disqualification of a Judge shall be decided by "the Chamber of which the Judge is a member".[58] Neither Rule 15(B) nor any other Rule empowers another person or body to decide on this request for disqualification.

23. The right to a fair trial is enshrined in Article 17 of the Statute and reflects the right to an impartial tribunal.[59] The Statute guarantees this right by providing that the "[J]udges shall be persons of high moral character, impartiality and integrity" and that they "shall be independent in the performance of their functions, and shall not accept or seek instructions from any Government [58] The Defence does not cite any provisions of the Rules in support of its invitation otherwise. No provision is made in the Statute or the Rules to refer the request for disqualification to any other panel of judges.

[59] The right to a fair trial is universally recognized by the international community and the international tribunals. See e.g. Article 10 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; Article 14 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights; Article 6(1) of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms; Article 8(1) of the American Convention on Human Rights; Article 7(1)(d) of the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights. See also Article 67(1) of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court; Article 21(2) of the Statute of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia; Article 20(2) of the Statute of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda; Article 13(1) of the Agreement between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia Concerning the Prosecution under Cambodian Law of Crimes Committed during the Period of Democratic Kampuchea. See also Furundžija Appeal Judgement, para. 177; Galić Appeal Judgement, para. 37.

or any other source."[60] The Judges of the Special Court further make a solemn declaration to serve "honestly, faithfully, impartially and conscientiously."[61]

24. Rule 15 is an instrument to safeguard the impartiality of the Chamber. Rule 15(A) requires each Judge to constantly and faithfully assess whether or not he or she may sit at a matter. Rule 15(B) provides the parties the opportunity to request the disqualification of a judge.

25. A number of national jurisdictions consider that the impartiality of a judge of the highest appellate courts is fully safeguarded by the judge him/herself.[62] The parties may not request another judge or body to disqualify a judge, and the parties cannot appeal the decision of the judge not to recuse him/herself. Likewise, the European Court of Human Rights does not permit the parties to move for the disqualification of a judge or participate in any process for the disqualification of a judge.[63] Among jurisdictions that provide for disqualification by another judge or body, disqualification has been described in some as an "incidental" administrative process[64] – as opposed to an adversarial process – in which the judges concerned have no personal stake.[65]

[60] Article 13(1) of the Statute.

[61] Rule 14(A).

[62] In the United States of America, the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada and Uganda, for example, judges of the highest appellate courts decide on their own whether or not to recuse themselves. The parties may file a motion for disqualification, but the Judge or Judges concerned decide on the motion. See e.g. United States of America, Laird v. Tatum, 409 U.S. 824 (1972) (Rehnquist, J. as single Justice); Cheney v. US District Court, 541 U.S. 913 (2004) (Scalia, J. as single Justice); Canada, Arsenault-Cameron v. Prince Edward Island, 2000 SCC 1; [2000] 1 S.C.R. 3 (January 13, 2000); Australia, Bainton v. Rajski [1992] 29 NSWLR 539; Uganda, Rtd. Col. Dr. Kiiza Besigye & 5 Others v. Attorney General, Constitutional Application No. 7 of 2005, Uganda Constitutional Court; Uganda Polybags Ltd v. Development Finance Company of Uganda, [1999] 2 EA 337. See also R. Matthew Pearson, Duck Duck Recuse? Foreign Common Law Guidance & Improving Recusal of Supreme Court Justices, 62, 4, Wash. & Lee L.Rev. at,1820 (2005). The suggestion that disqualification is a right contained in the Trial Chamber's decision on the disqualification of Justice Thompson is erroneous. Prosecutor v. Sesay et al., SCSL-2004-15-T-909, Trial Chamber, Decision on Sesay and Gbao Motion for Voluntary Withdrawal or disqualification of Hon. Justice Bankole Thompson from the RUF Case, 6 December 2007, para. 41. The Appeals Chamber considers that the Trial Chamber's findings in paras 26-44 must be read and interpreted in the context of the discussion regarding the judicial immunity claimed by Judge Thompson.

[63] Rule 28 of the Rules of Court of the European Court of Human Rights. The issue of a judge's disqualification for determination by other judges will only arise when the concerned judge and the President disagree as to whether the concerned judge should recuse him/herself.

[64] The Italian Constitutional Court has held that the process of disqualification consists of an incidental control of the necessary conditions for a trial to be conducted according to the fundamental principle of impartiality of the Judges. See Corte Cost., Sent. n. 78 del 21 Marzo 2002, para. 4 (Constitutional Court, 21 March 2002, n. 78, para. 4). The Colombian Constitutional Court has held that "[t]his incidental process at no time settles a dispute between the parties, what it resolves is the situation of the administrator of justice within the proceedings in question." See Corte Constitucional de Colombia, Sentencia C-323/06, Referencia D-6008, 24 de abril de 2006, pp. 16 – 17 (Colombian Constitutional Court, Judgment no. C-323/06, Ref. D-6008, 24 April 2006, pp. 16-17). The Internal Regulations of the Brazilian Supreme Court also refer to this process as being incidental in Article 283. Likewise, Spanish legislation refers to this process as an "incidente". See e.g. Articles 62, 62, 65, 67 and 69 of Ley de Enjuiciamiento Criminal (Spanish Criminal Procedure Law). The "incidental" nature of the disqualification process is further demonstrated by the fact that in a number of jurisdictions, the judges responsible for deciding on the disqualification may not themselves be disqualified from such proceedings. See Italy, Art. 40(3) Codice di Procedura Penale (Code of Criminal Procedure); Albania, Art. 21(3) Kodi i Procedurës Penale i Republikës së Shqipërisë (Albanian Code of Criminal Procedure); Moldova, Art. 34(3) Codul de Procedura Penala al Republicii Moldova (Moldovan Code of Criminal Procedure); Mexico, Art. 459(III) Código Federal de los Procedimientos Penales (Criminal Procedure Code); Peru, Art. 309(1)

26. The disqualification process pursuant to Rule 15(B) is a tool to verify a judge's impartiality by providing the parties the opportunity to request a reasoned decision in writing from the concerned Chamber whether the conditions of Rule 15(A) are satisfied in respect of that Judge. Both the plain meaning of Rule 15(B) and the object and purpose of the Rule require the conclusion that the Appeals Chamber is the only body empowered to decide on the request for disqualification under the Statute and Rules.

C. Appearance of Bias

27. Both Parties agree that the Judges of the Appeals Chamber are free from bias with respect to Defence Grounds 36 and 37. The Defence has clarified that it considers the Judges of the Appeals Chamber are not actually biased.[66] The Prosecution concurs.[67] The sole issue presented then is whether a reasonable observer, properly informed, would share the view of the Parties. The Appeals Chamber concludes that a reasonable observer would.

28. It is clear from the resolution entered into the record and the circumstances, and the Appeals Chamber underscores, that the question before the Plenary was whether Justice Sow's behaviour constituted misconduct.[68] Justice Sow's credibility, professional or otherwise, was not before the Plenary and was not judged by the Plenary.

29. The Appeals Chamber recalls that in determining whether "one can apprehend bias", what matters is that the Judge has not taken any position or expressed any view that may be reasonably perceived as prejudging his or her position on the guilt or innocence of the Accused.[69] The Plenary Resolution regarding Justice Sow's conduct did not involve and cannot reasonably be perceived as

[65] Neither the judge whose disqualification is sought nor the judges deciding on the matter are considered to have personal interests in the matter. The judge whose disqualification is sought is seen as the object of the proceedings and not as a subject. See Corte Constitucional de Colombia, Sentencia C390/93, 16 Septiembre 1993, p. 6 (Colombian Constitutional Court, Judgment C390/93, 16 September 1993, p. 6) ("[i]n the disqualification process the Judge whose disqualification is being sought is not a party"). See also Article 152 Código de Procedimiento Civil (Colombian Civil Procedure Code); Morales Molina, Hernando, Curso de Derecho Procesal Civil (Manual of Civil Procedure), Parte General, Décima Edición. involving Charles Taylor's guilt or innocence. The Plenary was not seized of, did not pronounce on nor express any views concerning the guilt or innocence of Mr. Taylor. In the language of the Motion, the Plenary was not seized of, did not pronounce on nor express any views concerning the content of Justice Sow's statement. The Plenary Resolution concerned only "Justice Malick Sow's behaviour in court on the 26th of April 2012".[70] A reasonable observer would not consider these distinctions "artificial"[71] but intrinsically judicial, reflecting the professional skills and responsibilities of Judges.[72]

30. The Appeals Chamber further holds that sanctioning judicial misconduct in a trial does not constitute nor give rise to the appearance of prejudgment of the guilt or innocence of the respective accused. In accordance with Article 17 of the Statute, the Plenary protects the fair trial rights of both parties and the integrity of the proceedings by considering serious allegations of judicial misconduct and taking appropriate action where misconduct is established.[73] The parties' rights would be severely violated were the Plenary to allow judicial misconduct only because sanctioning it could be falsely imagined as benefiting or harming a particular party. In deciding on allegations of judicial misconduct, the Plenary considers only whether such misconduct is established.[74] This Appeals Chamber firmly rejects any suggestion that the Plenary may or should do otherwise.

31. Many of the Defence's submissions do not address the impartiality of the Appeals Chamber, but the consequences of the Plenary Resolution. The Defence suggests that the Plenary Resolution "constitutes an adverse finding on the professional credibility of Justice Sow"[75] and that "the declaratory effect of the [decision] constitutes a particularly severe sanction because it seriously and publicly damages Justice Sow's professional reputation and standing."[76] The Defence proposes that "[i]t is no answer to assert that these findings were objectively correct because such an assertion reflects precisely the perception of pre-judgment claimed by the Defence."[77]

32. This is not pre-judgment nor the appearance of pre-judgment – the independence of judges would be fatally undermined if observers' perceptions of the consequences of judicial acts were considered indicia of bias.[78] Once seized of a complaint of misconduct, the Plenary considered it on its merits alone, without regard to extraneous considerations. Justice Sow's credibility, including as it may bear on any matters involving the guilt or innocence of Mr. Taylor, has not been judged by the Appeals Chamber. In any event, the Defence's characterizations of Justice Sow's credibility, professional reputation and standing are unwarranted and bordering on defamatory.

33. Likewise, the Defence's submissions with respect to the trial record are ill-founded.[79] The hearing of 26 April 2012 officially concluded when it was adjourned by the Presiding Judge of Trial Chamber II.[80] The official transcript accordingly ends with that adjournment, and could not have included further statements made after the hearing was officially closed.[81] On 16 May 2012, the Presiding Judge described for the record Justice Sow's behaviour following the adjournment.[82] The Plenary Resolution regarding Justice Sow's behaviour was further entered into the official record.[83] The Defence is fully aware of the content of Justice Sow's statement.[84] There is no basis to suggest that the official transcript is anything but accurate and transparent.

34. The Plenary did not consider any matters related to Charles Taylor's guilt or innocence nor the content of Justice Sow's statement. A reasonable observer would properly appreciate this fact, as both Parties do. The Appeals Chamber concludes that no reasonable observer, properly informed, would reasonably apprehend bias with respect to the Appeals Chamber's consideration of Defence Grounds 36 and 37. The Motion must therefore be dismissed.

35. In closing, the Appeals Chamber endorses the words of Judge Antonio Cassese, former President of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon, and draws the attention of the Parties and the public to them:

> I firmly believe that, while Judges must be absolutely free and appear to be free from any preconceived beliefs, it is also necessary for them to be sheltered from mere innuendoes as to their professional past or their current attitude. If they were not so safeguarded, they would be unable to discharge their difficult mission with equanimity. Charges of bias unsupported by compelling evidence can only sow confusion and uncertainty in the mind of all those who watch the unfolding of international justice, as well as trouble the conscience of Judges, thereby affecting their serenity. The Tribunal will firmly reject any attempt at guesswork or speculation intended to project onto the Tribunal political motivations that instead are, and shall always remain, extraneous to it, as is fitting and appropriate for any court of law.[85]

CHARLES GHANKAY TAYLOR'S MOTION FOR PARTIAL VOLUNTARY WITHDRAWAL OR DISQUALIFICATION OF APPEALS CHAMBER JUDGES

A. Introduction and Request for Relief

1. During the reading of the summary judgment against Charles Taylor on 26 April 2012, Justice Sow, an Alternate Judge of the Trial Chamber, who had been present throughout five years of trial[1] made an extraordinary and unprecedented declaration. His statement specifically indicates that the Trial Chamber failed to deliberate, and suggests more general, but equally serious, concerns about the propriety of proceedings and/ or deliberations. If true, his allegations would require that the Judgement, in whole or in part, be set aside. Justice Sow has since been found to be unfit to sit as a Judge and sanctioned by the judges of this Court acting in plenary, with the participation of all members of the bench hearing this appeal.

2. It is respectfully requested that, pursuant to Rules 15(A) and 15(B) of the Rules, [2] in respect of the grounds 36 and 37 of Mr. Taylor's Notice of Appeal dated 19 July 2012[3] that arise from the statement made by Justice Sow ("Grounds of Appeal"), that all of the members of the Appeals Chamber voluntarily withdraw from deciding these grounds. It is requested that a separate appeal panel, composed of judges who did not participate in the decision and sanctions against Justice Sow, should determine those Grounds of Appeal. In the event that the Appeals Chamber Judges do not withdraw voluntarily on the basis of the present motion, they are respectfully invited to refer the present request to a separate and impartial panel of judges for a determination as a motion for disqualification.

3. The basis of this motion is that a reasonable observer, properly informed, would apprehend bias on the part of the Judges of the Appeal Chamber, because they have already made an adverse finding in the plenary and therefore pre-judged a critical aspect of the credibility of a source of evidence which is fundamental to the Grounds of Appeal. Thus they are precluded from deciding on these grounds.

B. Applicable Law and Jurisprudence

[1] Justice Sow was designated as an Alternate Judge in the Trial Chamber by Justice Sebutinde pursuant to Article 12 (4) of the Statute. See Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-1-PT-240, Order Designating Alternate Judge, 18 May 2007.

4. Mr. Taylor's right to be tried by an independent and impartial tribunal is integral to his right to a fair trial guaranteed under Article 17 of the Statute.[4] Pursuant to Rule 15(A) a judge may not sit on an appeal in a case in which "his impartiality might reasonably be doubted on any substantial ground." This Appeals Chamber has held that the applicable test under Rule 15(B) is "whether an independent bystander so to speak, or the reasonable man... will have a legitimate reason to fear that [the Judge] lacks impartiality. In other words, whether one can apprehend bias."[5]

5. This Appeal Chamber's test for bias is derived from[6] and consistent with[7] jurisprudence of the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia ("ICTY"), in particular that of the Furundžija case. In that case the Appeals Chamber of the ICTY held that:

> "A. A Judge is not impartial if it is shown that actual bias exists.
> B. There is an unacceptable appearance of bias if:
> i) a Judge is a party to the case, or has a financial or proprietary interest in the outcome of a case, or if the Judge's decision will lead to the promotion of a cause in which he or she is involved, together with one of the parties. Under these circumstances, a Judge's disqualification from the case is automatic; or > ii) the circumstances would lead a reasonable observer, properly informed, to reasonably apprehend bias."[8] (Emphasis added.)

6. The Appeals Chamber of this court has held that, in the case of category B(ii) the applicable standard is "the objective test of whether there is a reasonable apprehension of bias."[9] Numerous

Independence and impartiality are fundamental cornerstones enshrined in the constitutive documents of the court. Article 12(1) of the Statute provides that the chambers shall be composed of independent judges and Article 13(1) of the Statute mandates that judges are impartial and independent.

decisions assessing objective bias have followed the test first enunciated in the Furundžija Appeal Judgment, that is, whether "the circumstances would lead a reasonable observer, properly informed, to reasonably apprehend bias".[10] With respect to the definition of a 'reasonable observer', this Appeals Chamber has held that the "reasonable person must be an informed person, with knowledge of all the relevant circumstances, including the traditions of integrity and impartiality that form a part of the background and apprised also of the fact that impartiality is one of the duties that Judges swear to uphold."[11]

7. Judges enjoy a presumption of impartiality.[12] In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be assumed that professional judges "can disabuse their minds of any irrelevant personal beliefs or predispositions."[13] Accordingly, the party seeking to disqualify a judge bears the burden of adducing reliable and sufficient evidence that the judge is not impartial.[14] Case law from the ICTY and the ICTR has stated that there is a high threshold to reach in order to rebut

Also see Furundžija Appeal Judgement para. 190; Galić Appeal Judgement, para. 40; Rutaganda Appeal Judgement, para. 40; Nahimana Appeal Judgement, para. 50. The specific question to be determined in this context has been expressed by the ICTY and ICTR Appeals Chamber as "whether the reaction of the hypothetical fair-minded observer, with sufficient knowledge of the circumstances to make a reasonable judgement, would be that [the] Judge ...did not bring an impartial and unprejudiced mind to the issues arising in the case"; Celebici Appeal Judgement, para. 683; Galić Appeal Judgement, para. 44; Rutaganda Appeal Judgement, para. 41. This Appeals Chamber has held that a "hypothetically fair-minded observer" is someone from the outside, who, as an observer (and not a party) recognises and understands the circumstances well enough to tell whether or not the public sense of justice would be challenged by the presence of a particular judge on the bench in the case; Justice Winter Disqualification Decision, para. 27.

the presumption of impartiality and this must be firmly established.[15] This Appeals Chamber has held that the evidentiary threshold for establishing the appearance of bias does not rise to the level of requiring proof of actual bias.[16] Importantly, it has held that a judge will be disqualified and the threshold met where there are "some indicia of bias."[17]

C. Facts establishing indicia of apprehended bias

8. Mr. Taylor submits that the following facts establish indicia that are reliable and sufficient to discharge his evidentiary burden to rebut the presumption of impartiality of the Appeals Chamber Judges and to establish circumstances which would lead a reasonable observer, properly informed, to reasonably apprehend bias.

(i) Statement of Justice Sow

9. On 26 April 2012, the Trial Chamber in this case sat to deliver its summary judgment. At the conclusion of the sitting, Justice Sow made a public statement in open court in the presence of the parties. He said:

> "The only moment where a Judge can express his opinion, is during the deliberations or in the courtroom, and pursuant to the Rules, where there is no ^ deliberations, the only place left for me in the courtroom. I won't get - - because I think we have been sitting for too long but for me I have my dissenting opinion and I disagree with the findings and conclusions of the other Judges, because for me under any mode of liability, under any accepted standard of proof the guilt of the accused from the evidence provided in this trial is not proved beyond reasonable doubt by the Prosecution. And my only worry is that the whole system is not consistent with all the principles we know and love, and the system is not consistent with all the values of international criminal justice, and I'm afraid the whole system is under grave danger of just losing all credibility, and I'm afraid this whole thing is headed for failure. Thank you for your attention." ("Justice Sow's Statement" or "Statement"). (Emphasis added.) See Annex A.

[15] Furundžija Appeal Judgement para. 197; Galić Appeal Judgement, para. 41; Celebici Appeal Judgement, para. 707; Akayesu Appeal Judgement, para. 91; Nahimana Appeal Judgement, para. 48 (the presumption "cannot easily be rebutted").

[16] Justice Thompson Disqualification Appeal Decision, para. 9.

[17] Justice Thompson Disqualification Appeal Decision, para. 13. It stated that "'a reasonable apprehension of bias' is a sufficient basis for disqualification. It necessarily flows that where a ...Chamber finds 'some indicia of bias,' the logical and reasonable conclusion must be that the Judge is disqualified."(Emphasis added.)

10. Justice Sow's Statement contains direct evidence of grave breaches of procedure in relation to the proceedings and the judgment against Mr. Taylor. As such it is the fundamental evidentiary basis for the Grounds of Appeal. Accordingly, any consideration of the Grounds of Appeal will necessarily involve an assessment of the Statement and the credibility of its source, Justice Sow.

(ii) Removal of Justice Sow's Statement from the Official Transcript

11. Justice Sow's Statement was transcribed by the court reporters and appeared on the live note transcript contemporaneously. A record of that transcription is contained in Annex A. The live note transcript notes that the sitting on that day ended after Judge Sow's Statement at 1.17 p.m. In contrast, the official transcript of that sitting day does not record Justice Sow's statement.[18] It records the Presiding Judge's last statement that court was adjourned[19] and in the next line states that the hearing was adjourned at 1.17 p.m.[20] Thus both the live note and official transcripts record proceedings ending at precisely the same time, however the transcription of Justice Sow's Statement has been removed from the official record prior to its official publication. It is reasonable to infer that the professional court reporters of the SCSL did not independently decide to remove Justice Sow's Statement from the official transcript prior to its publication and they would only do so if instructed by a court official(s) or organ with authority to issue such an instruction. At a minimum, it may be concluded from the foregoing that Justice Sow's Statement was deliberately removed from the official record of proceedings against Mr. Taylor prior to its publication, by an organ or official(s) of the court empowered to instruct or order such a removal.

(iii) Judicial Misconduct Decision of the Plenary regarding Justice Sow

12. On 16 May 2012, the Trial Chamber conducted a sentencing hearing in the case against Mr. Taylor. Prior to the commencement of the sentencing hearing, the Presiding Judge placed on the trial record the serious judicial misconduct allegations against Justice Sow which were referred by the Council of Judges to a Plenary meeting of the Judges of the Special Court ("Plenary").[21] The basis of these allegations was that in making his Statement, Justice Sow was "in contravention of the agreement, the Statute, and the Rules which govern this Court" and that this "amounted to misconduct".[22]

13. The Plenary met to consider the misconduct complaint against Justice Sow on the 7th and 10th of May, 2012. The Judges of the Plenary considered the response of Justice Sow to the allegations and discussed their views and recommendations on the matter,[23] and on 10 May 2012 resolved that:

> "1. The plenary declares that Justice Malick Sow's behaviour in court on the 26th of April, 2012, amounts to misconduct rendering him unfit to sit as an Alternate Judge of the Special Court.
> 2. The plenary recommends to the appointing authority pursuant to Rule 15 bis (B) to decide upon the further status of Justice Malick Sow.
> 3. Pursuant to Rule 24(iii), the plenary directs Justice Malick Sow to refrain from further sitting in the proceedings pending a decision from the appointing authority." [24] ("Judicial Misconduct Decision" or "Decision"). (Emphasis added.)

14. The Judicial Misconduct Decision against Justice Sow was considered and made by current Judges of the Appeals Chamber sitting as members of the Plenary. The Decision does not contain the names of the Judges that were sitting in the Plenary that made this decision however the record states that "the judges of the Special Court for Sierra Leone"[25] sat on the 7th and 10th of May, 2012. At time that the Decision was considered by the Plenary there were ten (10) Judges sitting at the court: four (4) Judges sat in Trial Chamber II in the case of Mr. Taylor[26] and six (6) Judges sat in the Appeals Chamber.[27] Justice Sow was the subject of the sitting and therefore did not sit in judgment of the misconduct of the allegations made against him. The record states that the remaining three Judges of Trial Chamber II abstained from voting.[28] Thus the remaining Judges that made the Judicial Misconduct Decision were the six (6) current sitting judges of the Appeal Chamber who are presently seized of Mr. Taylor's appeal. There is no indication on the record that any other Judge abstained from the vote or voted against the Judicial Misconduct Decision. Thus a reasonable observer who is properly informed of these circumstances would conclude that all six (6) Judges of the Appeals Chamber participated in the findings and sanctions against Justice Sow contained in the Decision.

15. Even though the Decision was formally reached by the Plenary and not the Appeals Chamber, in this case the Judges making the decision are one and the same, that is, both of these bodies had the same de facto decision-making composition. Therefore, a reasonable observer, who is properly informed, would consider that any purported distinction that is sought to be made on the basis that the Appeal Chamber Judges have not formally made the decision sitting as the Appeals Chamber is artificial and belies the reality of the situation.

16. Judges that have already made an adverse finding on a critical aspect of the credibility of a source of evidence during the trial process should not again consider the credibility of that source of evidence in the same proceeding during the appellate process, as this gives rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias from the perspective of a properly informed reasonable observer.

17. The Judicial Misconduct Decision is directly relevant to and forms a part of the trial record in the proceedings against Mr. Taylor. Justice Sow sat as Alternate Judge in the trial; he made his Statement in the trial proceedings after the reading of the summary judgment; the Judicial Misconduct Decision against him was placed on the trial record; and the sanctions attaching to that decision effectively terminated his participation in the trial and his name was subsequently erased from the trial record.[29] As such, the Judicial Misconduct Decision would be viewed by a properly informed reasonable observer as a decision in the trial proceedings against Mr. Taylor.

18. The Judicial Misconduct Decision constitutes an adverse finding on the professional credibility of Justice Sow. A finding of misconduct is arguably the most serious denunciation that a judge can face in their judicial career. At minimum, it amounts to finding in these circumstances that the judge has extremely poor ability to make professional judgments and was unprofessional in his conduct. In this case, the very basis of the Decision was Justice Sow's professional legal assessment of the serious procedural failings in trial and judgement against Mr. Taylor as expressed in his Statement. The Appeals Chamber Judges having already adversely pre-judged an aspect of the professional credibility of Justice Sow in the Decision during the course of trial proceedings would not be viewed by a properly informed reasonable observer as being able to again assess his credibility as a source of evidence on appeal, with an open mind.

[29] It has been the practice of the Trial Chamber of the Special Court to include Justice Sow's name, as Alternate Judge on each of the transcripts and decisions in this trial. Justice Sow's name appeared on the official transcripts up until the delivery of summary judgement on 26 April 2012. After his Statement and subsequent Judicial Misconduct Decision made by the judges directing him to refrain from sitting, his name has been omitted from the subsequent Trial Transcripts and the written judgment in this case.

19. This Appeals Chamber has found that a previous judicial opinion in a separate case that merely has some general factual connection to a subsequent case before the same judge, does not raise an issue of bias.[30] This situation can be clearly distinguished from the situation before the Judges of the Appeals Chamber in these circumstances as they are potentially being asked to rule on the same evidence a second time in the same proceedings. A reasonable observer properly informed of this circumstance would apprehend bias because they would view the judges as already having pre-judged the evidence. The current circumstance is therefore, more akin to the situation where trial judges, who have previously sat on a trial, and therefore made factual findings assessing the evidence, are asked to sit on the appeal of the same case.

20. The Judicial Misconduct Decision made in the proceedings against Mr. Taylor is not simply a general administrative decision relating to the internal functioning of the court. This decision is expressly made pursuant to Rule 15 bis relating to the unfitness of a judge to sit in proceedings,[31] which amounts to the judicial disqualification and sanction of the judge. Its key operative paragraph 1 and the following paragraph 2 are made pursuant to Rule 15 bis, a rule inherently connected to Rule 15. Reference is also made in this decision to the Plenary exercising its power to decide upon matters relating to the internal functioning of the Chambers and the Special Court pursuant to Rule 24(iii) with respect to paragraph 3 of the Decision;[32] however this flows from the critical substantive findings in paragraphs 1 and 2 made pursuant to the Rule 15 bis.

21. Furthermore, the Decision and the sanctions that flow from it are extremely serious and unprecedented in international criminal law. These sanctions directed Justice Sow to refrain from sitting in further proceedings against Mr. Taylor. However, the Decision goes beyond the court's internal functioning by recommending that the authority that appointed him decide on his further status. This sanction could reasonably be interpreted as a recommendation by the Judges of the Plenary to the United Nations that Judge Sow's appointment be terminated.[33] The finding of misconduct and these two sanctions amounted to the disqualification of Justice Sow from the proceedings against Mr. Taylor and his role in the Special Court. Further, the declaratory effect of the Decision constitutes a particularly severe sanction because it seriously and publicly damages Justice Sow's professional reputation and standing.

22. The Appeals Chamber Judges that have sanctioned a source of evidence for making a statement during the course of trial proceedings would not be viewed by a properly informed reasonable observer as being able to then sit in judgement of the credibility of that source in appellate proceedings where that statement is the fundamental piece of evidence on appeal, without giving rise to a reasonable apprehension of bias.

23. It should be noted that the ICTY Bureau of judges has previously found that judges who make an administrative decision in plenary regarding the general competence of a judge to sit on a court unrelated to the specific question as to whether that judge should be disqualified from sitting a specific case, are not precluded from judicially considering the disqualification of the said judge on appeal.[34] However, the circumstances of the present case are markedly different and therefore this finding does not operate to preclude the appearance of bias. First, the Judges of the Plenary in this case have passed judgement on the specific issue as to whether Judge Sow could continue sitting in the case against Mr. Taylor pursuant to Rule 15*bis* and have effectively disqualified him from doing so. Second, the decision is not simply administrative because it involved serious sanctions going beyond the internal administration of the court. Third, the issue on appeal in this case is not Justice Sow's general competence to sit as a judge or the question of his disqualification, but his credibility as a source of evidence.

[33] See Email dated 11 May 2012 from Judge El Hadji Malick Sow to all of the Judges of the Special Court for Sierra Leone (except Justice Sebutinde), copying lead Defence and Prosecution Counsel. See CONFIDENTIAL ANNEX B.

24. While the issues before the Plenary and the issue before the Appeals Chamber may not formally be expressed in the same way, the specific issue for consideration is overlapping: the credibility of Justice Sow. A reasonable observer, properly informed, would reasonably apprehend bias because the Judges of the Appeal Chamber, sitting in plenary, have already passed an adverse judgement on an aspect of Justice Sow's professional credibility and as such they have pre-judged the issue of his credibility as a source of critical evidence on appeal.

D. Conclusion

33. As previously emphasised by this Appeals Chamber, the apprehension of bias test reflects the "sacred and overriding principle" that "justice must not only be done, but should manifestly and undoubtedly be seen to be done."[35] Ultimately, the decision taken with respect to this motion will reflect on the integrity and standing of the Special Court, and the fair conduct of this appeal. Accordingly, Mr. Taylor respectfully requests the relief sought herein.

Under Rule 100, the parties can provide information relating to factors that affect sentencing, which would include written submissions and testimonials, if any. The extensive judgement summary that is being delivered today will suffice for this purpose, since it is a reasoned opinion of the Trial Chamber which sets out comprehensively the grounds for convicting Mr. Taylor.
Now, secondly, the Trial Chamber considers that this is an appropriate case to fix a sentencing hearing, and fixes such hearing, which will be for additional oral arguments only, for Wednesday, 16th of May, at 9.30 a.m. At the sentencing hearing, the Prosecution shall limit the length of its sentencing submissions to a time not exceeding one hour. The Defence shall limit the length of its sentencing submissions to a time not exceeding one hour.
If Mr. Taylor wishes to address the Court prior to being sentenced, then this will be his opportunity to do so, and he shall limit the length of his address to a time not exceeding 30 minutes.
Thirdly, a sentencing judgement will be pronounced on Wednesday, 30th of May, at 11.00 a.m.
Lastly, the accused is remanded until Wednesday, 16th of May, at 9.30 a.m. for a sentencing hearing.
The Court is hereby adjourned to that date.

101. This error of law invalidates all convictions based on aiding and abetting liability.

IV. ERRORS RELATING TO IRREGULARITIES IN THE JUDICIAL PROCESS

102. For each of the Grounds of Appeal enumerated below in this section, the precise relief sought is the quashing of Charles Taylor's convictions for aiding and abetting and planning the crimes set out in Counts 1 to 11[114] and the vacatur of the Judgement.

103. In respect of the first two Grounds of Appeal enumerated in this section, the Defence shall be filing a Motion for Partial Voluntary Withdrawal or Disqualification of Appeals Chamber Judges, shortly after the filing of this Notice of Appeal. Both of those Grounds of Appeal are set forth herein without prejudice to the said Motion for Disqualification; consequently, their inclusion in this Notice of Appeal should not be read as being inconsistent with the relief sought by the motion.

104. Furthermore, and in respect of the first three Grounds of Appeal enumerated in this section, the Defence intends to file a motion under Rule 115 to present additional evidence before the Appeals Chamber.

i) GROUND OF APPEAL 36: The Trial Chamber erred in law and/ or procedure in that deliberations, as contemplated and required by Rule 87, Rule 16*bis* and Rule 26*bis*, were not undertaken by the Trial Chamber in this case, as was declared in open court by Alternate Judge El Hadji Malick Sow on 26 April 2012 after the oral pronouncement of the Judgement when > he said: "The only moment where a Judge can express his opinion is during deliberations or in the courtroom, and pursuant to the Rules, when there is no ^ deliberations, the only place left for me in [sic] the courtroom. I won't get -- because I think we have been sitting for too long but for me I have my dissenting opinion and I disagree with the findings and conclusions of the other Judges, because for me under any mode of liability, under any accepted standard of proof the guilt of the accused from the evidence provided in this trial is not proved beyond reasonable doubt by the Prosecution. And my only worry is that the whole system is not consistent with all the principles we know and love, and the system is not consistent with all the values of international criminal justice, and I'm afraid the whole system is under grave danger of just losing all credibility, and I'm afraid this whole thing is headed for failure."

105. The irregularities which are the subject of this Ground of Appeal contravene Rule 87, Rule 16*bis*, and Rule 26*bis* of the Rules, as well as fundamental jurisprudential principles of due process. The resulting errors are material and applicable to all findings made, and convictions entered,[115] in the Judgement. Individually or collectively, the errors vitiate the proceedings, occasion a miscarriage of justice and invalidate the decision.

106. The specific remedy requested is the reversal of all adverse findings against Charles Taylor in the Judgment, the quashing of all convictions, and vacatur of the Judgement and Sentencing Judgement.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court" or "Court") was established to prosecute persons who bear the greatest responsibility for serious violations of international humanitarian law and Sierra Leonean law committed in the territory of Sierra Leone since 30 November 1996.[1] It is an international court[2] established under an Agreement between the United Nations[3] and the Government of Sierra Leone ("Agreement"),[4] and independent from the domestic legal system of Sierra Leone. The Statute of the Special Court ("Statute")[5] empowers the Court to prosecute persons who committed crimes against humanity, serious violations of Article 3 Common to the 1949 Geneva Conventions for the Protection of War Victims and of Additional Protocol II, other serious violations of international humanitarian law and specified crimes under Sierra Leonean law.[6] The Special Court is governed by the Agreement, the Statute and by its Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules").[7]

2. This Judgement is rendered by Trial Chamber II of the Special Court for Sierra Leone,[8] pursuant to the mandate granted to the Special Court by the United Nations and the Republic of Sierra Leone and in accordance with Article 18 of the Statute and Rule 88 of the Rules.

Amended Indictment in accordance with Rule 52. The Amended Indictment was disclosed to the public the following day.[15637]

4. The President assigned the proceedings to Trial Chamber II, composed of Justice Richard Lussick, Justice Teresa Doherty and Justice Julia Sebutinde.[15638] Justice El Hadji Malick Sow was later appointed as an alternate Judge on 18 May 2007.[15639]

5. The Accused made his initial appearance and was formally arraigned before Presiding Judge Richard Lussick on 3 April 2006, pursuant to Rule 61. He was represented by the Principal Defender, Vincent Nmehielle, and pleaded not guilty to all counts of the Amended Indictment.[15640]

6. On 29 May 2007, the Prosecution filed a Second Amended Indictment with minor changes to three of the eleven counts.[15641] The Accused was re-arraigned on 3 July 2007 and again pleaded not guilty to the amended charges.[15642] On 3 August 2007, the Prosecution filed an Amended Case Summary. [15643]

(b) Preliminary Objection Based on Lack of Jurisdiction

7. Before the Accused's arrest and as an incumbent President of the Republic of Liberia, on 23 July 2003 the Accused pursuant to Rule 72 moved to quash his indictment and to set aside the outstanding arrest warrant on the grounds that, as incumbent Head of State of the sovereign Republic of Liberia, he was immune from any exercise of the Court's jurisdiction.[15644] The Appeals Chamber, composed of three Appeals Chamber Judges, dismissed the motion on 31 May 2004, holding that the Special Court for Sierra Leone was an international – not a national – court, and that "the principle seems now established that the sovereign equality of states does not prevent a Head of State from being prosecuted

ANNEX B: PROCEDURAL HISTORY

(e) Prosecution Case

(i) Overview

26. After delivering an opening statement on 4 June 2007, the Prosecution called its first witness on 7 January 2008 and rested its case 13 months later on 27 February 2009. During the Defence case, the Prosecution was granted leave to re-open its case to call three additional witnesses,[15689] who testified on 5, 9 and 10 August 2010. Overall, 94 witnesses testified viva voce for the Prosecution, including three expert witnesses.[15690] The prior testimony of one witness, who had testified in other cases before the Special Court, was admitted pursuant to Rule 92*bis* without any cross-examination by the Defence[15691] and the prior evidence of two deceased witnesses was admitted into evidence pursuant to Rule 92*quater*.[15692] The Prosecution tendered five expert reports into evidence,[15693] two of which were uncontested.[15694] A total of 782 documents were admitted as Prosecution exhibits,[15695] including the five expert reports.

27. Following the conclusion of the Prosecution's case, the Accused filed a motion for judgement of acquittal pursuant to Rule 98 of the Rules; the Trial Chamber dismissed the

Annex A

Final Speech Delivered by DahKpannah Dr. Charles Ghankay Taylor in his case

1. Mr. President Justice Lussick; Justice Sebutinde; Justice Doherty; Justice El Hadji Sow; the Registrar; Principal Defender; and members of the Registry; the Prosecutors present and past; members of the Defence present and past; the visiting gallery; the world audience.

2. The last six years have been challenging years for all of us... Judges, Prosecutors, Defence lawyers, victims and their families, me and my family, and the Peoples of Liberia and Sierra Leone. And now this process is at its end and I am grateful that this Court has extended me the opportunity to be heard at this time.

3. The observations which I make today are deeply felt and are not limited exclusively to legal issues and this case. I am aware of my rights and without prejudice to any of those rights, I hereby make the following observations:

4. It seems to me as an Economist and lay person (not a lawyer) that Your Honors were dealt a difficult hand sitting at the helm of a Court whose rules allows a low threshold requirement for the presentation of evidence. The presumption is that everything is admitted into evidence, regardless, in about 98% of the time. Your Honors were also handicapped by not having the benefit of the full contextual picture of why and how I ended up before this Court. That contextual matrix is uniquely political (and not legal) in nature; and having ensnarled Charles Taylor this time around, only time will tell how many other African Heads of State stand to be destroyed in its continued wake.

5. These handicaps were no fault of your Honours', to be sure, in the sense that you could not be asked to know of so much that was never meant to ever see the light of day.

6. Despite obstacles to ascertaining the truth, what was clear beyond a shadow of a doubt, as I understood the summary of the judgment, was that Your Honors critically determined in fact, that I could not be held responsible for the substantial charges of Joint Criminal Enterprise and Superior Criminal Responsibility as had been pleaded by the Prosecution.

7. Following the civil war in Liberia, I stood before the Liberian people and apologized and expressed deep regret and contrition for the loss of lives and limbs, and the overall effects of the civil war. I stated that no words no matter how polished and sincere could heal the scars and pains all suffered.

8. I was not alone as a leader of a faction that fought during the civil war, when I took it upon myself to express those sentiments while aspiring for the Presidency; but I did.

9. There were many like me who owed an expression of sympathy and regret for what happened to the Liberian people. Indeed, none other than the current President of Liberia, Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, was identified in the Liberian Truth and Reconciliation Commission Report as somebody from whom such an expression of regret and sympathy for what happened in Liberia should have been forthcoming, since she was one of the three principal leaders of the NPFL along with me.

10. Additionally, I said that wars were terrible; that there was no good war; that there are no just wars whether carried out by underdeveloped countries whose peoples are still deeply entrenched in tribal, ethnic and cultural conflicts, or by the world's only military super power. President Bush in 2000 tried to play the just war card, a card that goes back to the first century B.C.E., when Rome's Marcus Tullius Cicero theorized on the justified use of armed forces ... (jus ad bellum), and he lost the argument. Scholars still debate the concept today with no clear agreement.

11. As wars are no good, I condemn all atrocities across the world whether by bombs that are dropped by powerful nations from airplanes; or cruise missiles fired from ships, submarines and aircrafts; and/or drones that kill women and children, by blowing off legs, arms, and leaving mangled bodies scattered all over the place; only to be justified as "collateral damage". That, too, is wrong. These are crimes also.

12. Following the verdict of 26 April, the Prosecutor, in a press release, said the following: "Today's historic judgment reinforces the new reality, that Heads of State will be held to account for war crimes and other international crimes... This judgment affirms that with leadership comes not just power and authority, but also responsibility and accountability; no person, no matter how powerful, is above the law". I could not agree more. President George W. Bush not too long ago ordered torture and admitted to doing so. Torture is a crime against humanity. The United States has refused to prosecute him. Is he above the law? Where is the fairness?

13. Terrible things happened in Sierra Leone and there can be no justification for the terrible crimes. During the war in Liberia, I punished people responsible for crimes against others. Factual evidence presented before this Court proved that several N.P.F.L. soldiers were put on trial for various crimes. Some were executed for rape, murder and other serious crimes. Witnesses from both sides testified to that fact.

14. Let me be very, very, clear about one thing: I do not condone impunity in any shape or form. Let me say in the strongest terms: I, DahKpannah Dr. Charles Ghankay Taylor, did not, could not have ever, and would never have knowingly, and, with responsibility and/or authority to prevent, stop or punish someone for carrying out acts of atrocities, fail to do so.

15. I say all of this not just in the context of Sierra Leone and the charges against me, but also in the wider context of impunity whether in Africa or the rest of our global community. There has to be a mechanism which is developed, embraced and perfected by the global community to deal with impunity in a way that is consistent with the history, customs, practices and cultures of their peoples and consonant with their spirit as independent peoples.

16. The Rome Statue is a Western document that does not take into account certain customs, cultures, and other sensitivities, unique to certain regions of the world. The practice of "one size fits all", within the legal context, is unfair and unjust.

17. I say, with respect, that though I disagree with your findings of guilt, it is easy for me to see how the absence of the "contextual framework" in which this case was put together by the prosecution seemingly contributed to your findings. Sadly, I am saddled with those findings today as you consider what sentence to impose.

18. A starting point for the "contextual framework" to which I am referring is the issue of money - the purchasing of witnesses' evidence with money. Money played a corrupting, influential, significant and dominant role in this trial. Money in this case, cumulatively prejudiced my rights and interests in an irreparable way. The Prosecution received millions of dollars from the United States Government outside of the official funding process to the court administration.

19. The Prosecution has never fully accounted for how those monies were spent ... who received how much and for what purpose or purposes. Witnesses were paid, coerced, and in many cases threatened with prosecution if they did not co-operate, only to extract statements and/ or confessions.

20. Families were rewarded with thousands of dollars to cover costs of children school fees, transportation, food, clothing, medical bills and given cash allowances for protected and non-protected witnesses in a country where income is less than a dollar a day. The question then is, what was the Prosecution buying?

21. Abu Keita testified openly and never felt it necessary to demand any type of protective measures from the Court. And yet, within a few weeks of having testified, it became public knowledge that he successfully coerced the Prosecution and the Witnesses and Victims' Section (WVS) to relocate him overseas. The details are sketchy because the Prosecution and WVS have refused to provide any details regarding the extortion by Abu Keita (Exhibit D-468).

22. A more important point for the "contextual framework" to which I am referring is the role politics played. When Regime Change in Liberia became a policy of the US government, George W. Bush in May 2001 signed a second of two Executive Orders, #13213 (Exhibit D-310) in which it was stated: "The Government of Liberia's complicity in the RUF's illicit trade in diamonds and its other forms of support for the RUF are direct challenges to United States foreign policy objectives in the region as well as to the rule-base international order that is critical to the peace and prosperity of the United States. Therefore, I find these actions by the Government of Liberia contribute to the unusual and extraordinary threat to the foreign policy of the United States described in Executive Order 13194 with respect to which the President declared a national emergency". This Executive Order did not say "... the alleged complicity...". It concluded, "The complicity...". The conspiracy was born, all systems put into motion and here I stand today. I NEVER STOOD A CHANCE.

23. This is the broader contextual matrix that regrettably, did not and still has not seen the light of day in these proceedings, despite the gallant efforts by the Defence to unearth and reveal the contextual framework behind the charges against me.

24. With the two Executive Orders, the dogs were let out (so to speak). What followed was the dispatch of the attack pack led by:

    1) Lt. Col. David Crane, Defense Intelligence 30 years. Prosecutor. He, Crane, unlawfully unsealed the court's sealed indictment to his handlers ... senior U.S. Government officials at the U.S. Embassy in Freetown and was never held to account.

The rest of the operational team are:

2) Col. Brenda Hollis, Defense Intelligence, C.I.A., U.S. Air Force. Senior trial counsel and now Chief Prosecutor;
3) James C. Johnson, 20 years U.S. Army, expert on conventional and special operations. Chief of prosecutions for the S.C.S.L.;
4) Allan White, 30 years Defense Intelligence, recalled from retirement to head up investigations as the S.C.S.L.; and
5) Stephen L. Rapp, came on board as Chief Prosecutor for a short time with experience from Capital Hill where he served with a U.S. Senate Judiciary Subcommittee. It came as no surprise to me that as a reward of sorts for Stephen Rapp's diligence in the execution of U.S. foreign policy objectives through these ad hoc tribunals, he was appointed U.S. Ambassador-at-Large for War Crimes Issues.

25. In support of the "contextual framework" of politics, on February 8, 2006, Lt. Col. David Crane appeared before a U.S. Congress Subcommittee on Africa (Exhibit D-404), and spelled out in clear terms the decision taken in support of "Regime Change" in Liberia, and what needed to happen to solidify that process.

26. There was little mention if any, in his testimony about Sierra Leone. His principal focus was as he stated and I quote: "I posit that five years from now when the international community is challenged by other crises, Taylor, in Calabar, under the protection of Nigeria, will make his move. We will wake up one morning and watch on CNN as Taylor rides triumphantly down the main street in Monrovia to the Executive Mansion, daring all of us to come and get him. Unless he is handed over to the Special Court for Sierra Leone, this scenario is not out of the realm of possibility...". He then asked, "How do we assure Liberia's future?", "ultimately, what we do about Taylor in the next several weeks will determine the fate of Liberia and the new administration of its President, Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf…". Crane then sets out several plans of actions: "First, hand Charles Taylor over to the Special Court for Sierra Leone for a fair trial. This takes him out of the local and regional dynamic that is West Africa... Second, tie any financial and political support to good governance in Liberia...". Time does not permit here for the other points.

27. Not even the Nigerian Nation was spared from threats and intimidation, as explained by Femi Fani-Kayode, Press Secretary to President Obasanjo the Nigerian Head of State, who was with him in Washington when George W. Bush promised to: "Bring Nigeria to its knees", if Taylor was not turned over to the Special Court. So Obasanjo buckled and capitulated. This demonstrates the significant pressure that was brought to bear on President Obasanjo, irrespective of his personal and leadership obligations to the West African sub-region. And therein lies the dilemma for current African Heads of State and governments - how to enter into binding commitments and obligations with their African peers and remain steadfast, resolute, and unyielding in their fidelity to those agreements in the face of such unrelenting and punishing pressure from powerful Western leaders.

28. Evidence can be deceiving. The world watched Gen. Colin Powell, a man of honor and respect, mislead the UN Security Council and the world about weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. I believe unintentionally. There were drawings of mobile laboratories for the production of gases and other nerve agents for use in weapons of mass destruction; none of that was true. Intelligence experts, we were told later, had relied on informers that deliberately lied or misinformed experts and analysts. Not even the world's only superpower knew what was actually obtaining on the ground in Iraq.

29. What happened afterward over a period of 10 years under the iron fists of the U.S. and Britain, caused the murder, rape, maiming, torture and mutilation of around 1,500,000 Iraqis; not to mention the 1,000,000 Iraqi babies that lost their lives as a result of crippling sanctions.

30. This tragedy, I believe, is a consequence, not anticipated, by a policy that set out, rightly so, to prevent the development and use of weapons of mass destruction against civilians, but ended up a total disaster costing around a trillion dollars and a massive loss of lives and limbs on all sides, unfortunately.

31. What I did to help bring peace to Sierra Leone was done with honor. Foremost on my mind at all times was to help solve the problem because I was convinced that, unless peace came to Sierra Leone, Liberia would not be able to move forward. I pushed the peace process hard and used known mediating methods in trying to draw the parties close and gain their confidence and trust. This is a strategy used universally in mediation efforts. Indeed, my approach to peace in Sierra Leone was neither unique nor new.

32. All major activities leading to peace in Sierra Leone, except for the final signing of the Lome Peace Agreement, were done in Monrovia. Following that historic signing, we brought Foday Sankoh and Johnny Paul Koroma to Monrovia.

33. When Bockarie threatened the disarmament process, we extracted Sam Bockarie to give the disarmament process a chance to take hold.

34. We invited Issa Sesay to meet my colleagues and me in Liberia to get new leadership to the RUF to advance the peace when Foday Sankoh was arrested in Freetown, putting the whole process under strain.

35. Contrary to how I have been portrayed before this Court and what is now reflected in the summary of the judgment, I was not and could not have been "a two-headed Janus," EVER!, in the context of my efforts for peace in neighboring Sierra Leone. I too, believe in Honor and Integrity. These are seriously complex situations and are not as cut and dry as one may want to make them appear.

36. I was President of Liberia. I was not some petty trader on the streets of Monrovia or in the general market place. Liberia was still recovering from war, where at least five warring parties had come together for peace, but still with divided loyalties. My personal security was still threatened as things were still fluid in the country. For anyone to believe that I had to be everywhere, know or be told everything, and monitor what every little corrupt ex-combatant, crook or petty hustler did at some checkpoint or border post is unfortunate, and disturbing.

37. National security briefings to leaders the world over are brief and intended to inform the leaders on strategic matters and not a journal to occupy the leader's schedule.

38. Right here in this little court building, according to classified documents leaked, an individual or individuals spied for, and reported to, the U.S. Embassy here in The Hague. I suggest Your Honors may still not know who did the spying. How then could any reasonable person suggest that any of what was happening within the frontal view of the President, he had to know? It simply defies logic.

39. I say without stupor that my actions were genuine and done with one thing in mind: helping to bring peace to Sierra Leone, thus providing an enabling environment for progress in both countries; Liberia being my Constitutional responsibility as President. Unfortunately, and as a result of efforts on the part of my government for peace in Sierra Leone, there now appears to have been collateral activities undertaken by some unsavory individuals that led to consequences that I was entirely unaware of, and could not have ameliorated or prevented.

40. As I have done many times before, I do again, Here and Now: "I express my sadness and deepest sympathy for the atrocities and crimes that were suffered by individuals and families in Sierra Leone".

41. I, too, have experienced pain and sadness and know what it is. I lost my father, my oldest brother, my youngest brother and a host of other relatives, friends, and acquaintances during the war in Liberia, as well as Liberian citizens. I am 64 years old and not young any more. I am a father of many children, grandchildren and a great-grand.

42. I am no threat to society. In Liberia, I commenced the process of healing by putting into place a peace and reconciliation commission modeled after that of South Africa. I say with respect, Reconciliation and Healing, not Retribution, should be the guiding principles in Your Honors' task.

"AU leaders had an agreement that facilitated peace in Liberia. It's shameful how Obasanjo threw Charles Taylor under the bus after pressure from the Europeans and America (not a signatory to the so-called UN court). For four years Iraq went through a wave of brutal ethnic cleansing, I don't see the UN Court going after the Iraqi Cleric, Muqtada al-Sadr and Co. as well as those brutal Afghan tribal war lords; all of whom the US States Dcpartmcnt and other foreign powers struck deals. I believe African leaders need to grow more "spine", there will be more ridiculous demands by western countries and the UN to change some part of our constitution in a few years."-- Yele Odofin-Belo.

In many respects Mr Yele Odofin-Belo is absolutely right. This was the betrayal of the century and, in my view, those that should have known better panicked at the last minute and broke ranks. But I do not believe that Obasanjo was amongst those that betrayed anybody. To be fair to President Olusegun Obasanjo he was infact the last man standing and he resisted the pressure until it all came to a head during a state visit to America when George W. Bush refused to see him until Taylor was produced. Ironically the real traitor was not Obasanjo but rather President Sirlief-Johnson of Liberia. The agreement with Taylor was put in place before she was elected but she was fully aware of it it's terms from day one. She was actually the American and Nigerian candidate for that election and she worked very closely indeed with the Americans, Obansanjo and Nigeria before she was elected to power. She was always at the Villa in Abuja in those days and I think that she was one of those people that used to work for the World Bank before she came home for the elections. The deal was simple and clear and the terms were as follows. Taylor would be persuaded to step down as President of Liberia by the ECOWAS leaders and the African Union and he was to be given a safe-haven in Nigeria after doing so. He would not be harassed, he would not face prosecution in Liberia, Sierra Leonne or at the International Court at the Hague andNigeria would not be pressured or harassed by anyone to extradite him anywhere. On his part Taylor was expected to live quietly in Calabar with his relatives, under the direct supervision and care of Donald Duke, the then Governor of Cross Rivers state and he was to stay out of Liberian politics and not in anyway interfere with what was going on over there. All went according to plan and once the African Union endorsed the whole thing no less than around 7 African Heads of State, including Kuffour of Ghana and Obasanjo himself, went to Liberia and physically accompanied Taylor back to Nigeria and to what was to be his new home and final point of destination for many years and possibly the rest of his life. As a consequence of this concession and sacrifice which was made by Taylor the civil war in Liberia came to an immediate end, peace returned to the land and eventually a free and fair election was conducted in which Mrs. Johnson Sirlief emerged as the new President as had been planned all along. However after the lady came to power everything changed. She ditched Obansanjo and Nigeria, turned her back on the ECOWAS leaders and the African Union and she became even closer to Bush and the Americans.

This was a great irony because Nigerian troops were dying in Liberia for many years in an attempt to bring peace to that country whilst the American soldiers were watching the fighting from their ships just off the Liberian coast. I know this because I went there and visited our soldiers with President Obasanjo during the course of the bitter fighting. Anyway Johnson Sirlief forgot all that and she started to talk only to the Americans. And of course the Americans wanted Taylor's blood and his head on a plate. At the end of it all, and as is usually the case with such matters, everything boiled down to money. Johnson needed financial support, aid, grants, loans and funding from the international monetary institutions and from theUnited States directly for her small country and obviously she needed American support to get this. The Americans gave her one condition before any help could come her way.....She was to formally ask for Charles Taylor to be returned to Liberia by Nigeria in order to face allegations of genocide and funding the brutal civil war in Sierra Leone at the International Criminal Court at the Hague. Yes the Americans did a complete u-turn, broke their word, violated the previous agrcement and sought to turn all the African leaders that had guaranteed it. including Nigeria, into a bunch of unreliable and spineless liars. And sadly the lady called President Johnson Sirlief, played along with the Americans, capitulated and did precisely what they wanted to the utter shock and chagrin of virtually every African leader of that day and in total violation of the agreement and understanding that had been originally entered into by all the parties concerned and by all the major players including the Americans. After the formal request was made to Nigeria by Liberia, America now picked up the gauntlet and turned on Obasanjo compelling and threatening us in initially very subtle and eventually very direct tones and ways. The message was simple and clear. We were to release Taylor and send him back to Liberia or Nigeria was to be brought to her knees. President Obasanjo stood firm and resisted their threats for a very long time and took the matter to the other ECOWAS leaders and the AU who of course supported us wholeheartedly because they had been privy to and were indeed part of the original agreement and understanding that had been established between all the relevant parties and stakeholders.

After this there was a long stalemate and eventually the whole matter turned a little nasty and became the subject of a loud and acrimonious spat between our government and the administration of President George W. Bush. And of course I was deeply involved in that public spat as Presidential spokesperson. Things eventually came to a head when Obasanjo went on a state visit to America and a final demand was made for Taylor. President Obasanjo's argument, and it was a good one, was that no-one or no country would ever believe, trust or take Nigeria seriously again if we breached our word to Taylor and that this is not a Nigerian position but rather it is an African Union position. The old man fought the matter out long and hard and I assure you he did his very best. When the pressure got too much and President Johnson-Sirlief made a final and public demand for Taylor to be returned to Liberia by Nigeria, Obasanjo ordered that he should be dropped at some border post and allowed to go wherever he wanted rather than for us to formally hand him over to anyone. He was on a state visit in America at the time and when it was announced to the world that Taylor had suddenly disappeared from the face of the earth and was no longer with the Nigerians all hell broke loose and everyone panicked. It was at that point that George W.Bush pointblank refused to see Obasanjo whilst he remained in Washington unless and until Taylor was traced, found and handed over to the Liberians. Now I believe that this is where President Obasanjo may have made a mistake.

In my view he should have stood his ground, left America immediately and told them all, including George W. Bush, to go to hell especially since at that point and by that time we were engaged in a full-scale verbal war on the international airwaves with the White House and the American government over this issue. Our hand was quite strong then because virtually the whole of Africa was fully behind us with, of course, the exception of President Johnson-Sirlief who in my humble opinion was nothing but an ingrate and an American puppet. Anyway all of a sudden, and very mysteriously, Taylor resurfaced, was arrested and was handed over to the Liberians who I believe flew him to either Liberia or Sierra Leone, from where he was promptly and immediately flown to the International Court of Criminal Justice at The Hague in the Netherlands to face charges of genocide and crimes against humanity. The greatest irony of all of this is that the nation of America herself, who fought for and orchestrated all of this, is NOT a signatory to that Court and therefore no former or serving American President, leader, citizen or even soldier can ever be brought before it to face any charges of crimes against humanity. That tells you just how unfair and ridiculous the whole world system is. My position is that if you want to try the likes of President Charles Taylor for committing atrocities that is fine and by all means go ahead. However it is only right and proper for you to then do the same to all the living American and western leaders who have also done the same thing in various parts of the world. This is especially so given the fact that they, more than any other set of leaders in the history of mankind, have been responsible for the most barbarous crimes against humanity that have ever been committed. The law is surely no respecter of persons. After all it was not an African leader that dropped nuclear bombs on Nagasaki and Hiroshima, with its attendant and horrific consequences, after the Second World War. It was not an African leader that committed terrible atrocities in Iraq by slaughtering hundreds of thousands of defenceless Iraqi women and children when bombing Baghdad, all in the name of regime change and the prosecution of an illegal and barbarous war. It was not an African leader that killed the defenceless Arab women and children of Sabra and Chatilla in Southern Lebanon just a couple of decades ago. It was not an African leader that enslaved a whole continent and pillaged it's resources and sold it's people into slavery for hundreds of years. I could go on and on. I have said this earlier and I repeat it here today, unless and until I see Tony Blair and George W. Bush being prosecuted by that same court at the Hague for their own undeniable and irrefutable acts of genocide and crimes against humanity, I cannot in any way be impressed with what they are doing to Charles Taylor or anyone else there.

And to make matters worse such is their utter desperation that they have now dragged super- model Naomi Campbell into the whole fray in a rather futile and childish attempt to confirm their sordid perceptions of the classical and stereotypical African dictator and warlord who they allege gave "blood diamonds" to a beautiful British model that he couldn't resist at President Mandela's dinner. This is indeed the stuff of which bestsellers and blockbuster films are made. Now the whole thing has backfired on them and blown up in their faces because Naomi Campbell, quite rightly and courageously, has not allowed herself to be used for such a sordid venture and exercise. She has refused to play the game according to their script. For that, I thank God. I watched Charles Taylor closely in the dock and I wondered if he would ever get the chance to tell his story to the world. I thought perhaps he shouldn't even bother with presenting a defence for himself against these terrible charges that have been made against him in court. I thought perhaps he should just spend his last few years in solitary confinement writing a book for posterity and tell the world his own version of events. I say this because the outcome of this so-called "trial" has already been determined by international public opinion and the world powers that be, who of course see themselves as being above that same law. In my candid view Charles Taylor will definitely be convicted for crimes against humanity and his powerful enemies will have their pound of flesh. But that may not be the end of the story. As a matter of fact it may just be the beginning. He was looking dejected, lonely, old and grey in that Court on yesterday (Thursday 5th of August, 2010) and as I looked at him the only words that came to my mind and spirit were: "There sits a man betrayed ". My view? A pox on all their houses, for we live in a truly treacherous world.

Chief Femi Fani-Kayode was the spokesperson to President Olusegun Obasanjo; he subsequently became Minister of Tourism & Culture & later served as Aviation Minister for Federal Republic of Nigeria.

PUBLIC, WITH ANNEXES A–AH AND CONFIDENTIAL ANNEX AI

SENTENCING BRIEF
ON BEHALF OF CHARLES GHANKAY TAYLOR

Office of the Prosecutor:
Ms. Brenda J. Hollis

Counsel for Charles G. Taylor:
Mr. Courtenay Griffiths, Q.C.
Mr. Terry Munyard
Mr. Morris Anyah
Mr. Silas Chekera
Ms. Logan Hambrick

The Chief Detention Officer described Mr. Taylor as "polite" and "respectful" toward the prison officers and other detainees. He also highlights that Mr. Taylor has not been subject to any disciplinary charges. Further, he notes that when Mr. Taylor has concerns about the detention regime, he discusses the issues with the authorities in "a frank but constructive manner, even when the outcomes have not always been favourable".

199. Mr. Taylor has attempted to keep himself mentally, physically and spiritually strong while in detention. Defence counsel attests that he avidly follows current events and has improved his French through interaction with the francophone African detainees. He takes advantage of the opportunities for fresh air and exercise. And he meets regularly with a rabbi, who assists him in his study of the Jewish books of faith. This conduct points toward Mr. Taylor's ability to be rehabilitated and successfully reintegrated into society.

Mitigating Factor or General Consideration for Reduction: Serving Sentence Abroad

200. As a pre-requisite to the Dutch Government agreeing to allow the Taylor Trial to take place in The Hague, the British Government signed a Sentence Enforcement Agreement with the Special Court, in which the British government agreed to host Mr. Taylor in the event that he was convicted and sentenced.[304] Should Mr. Taylor's appeal fail, all indications are therefore that he will serve his sentence in the United Kingdom. That Mr. Taylor should serve his sentence in a prison, culturally and geographically, thousands of miles from home should be considered a factor in mitigation as it in fact amounts to exile.

201. For the last six years, Mr Taylor has experienced difficulties in financing and coordinating visits from friends and family, most of whom have to travel from West Africa. Prohibitive flight costs and a stringent visa regime, even with the assistance of the court, are often prohibitive.

accused was in detention. See Nzabirinda Sentencing Judgement, para. 92; Rugambarara Sentencing Judgement, para. 43.

[304] Annex K, UN Security Council Resolution 1688; Security Council Approves Trial Transfer of Former Liberian President Charles Taylor to Netherlands, Freetown-Based Special Court will Sit in The Hague; Resolution adopted unanimously.

202. These problems will undoubtedly continue unabated after Mr Taylor's transfer to the United Kingdom. Mr. Taylor's de facto exile, to the extent that it affects contact with his friends and family, flies in the face of the spirit, if not the letter, of the Rules Governing the Detention of Persons Awaiting Trial or Appeal before the Special Court for Sierra Leone or Otherwise Detained on the Authority of the Special Court for Sierra Leone. Rule 41(a) in particular states:

> Detainees shall be allowed... to receive visits from their families and others at regular intervals under such restrictions and supervision as the Chief of Detention, in consultation with the Registrar, may deem necessary in the interests of administration of justice or the security and good order of the Detention Facility.

203. An expansive teleological interpretation of Rule 41(a), which itself confers a detainee with a cardinal human right, is very much warranted. Rule 41(a) not only confirms that family visits must be permitted - on a reading of the expression "shall be allowed" in the rule - but that an environment conducive to the meaningful exercise of this right must exist and/or be established; for what other purpose does a right exist than to exercise it.

204. To this end, the Defence reminds the Chamber that international human rights standards must not be relegated to rhetoric. Rather, human rights of detainees are tangible, divisible rights, with corresponding obligations. They are reflected in a variety of instruments,[305] the interpretation of which must be in a manner consistent with current international practices. In this respect, the Defence underscores that a detainee's right to respect for family life explicitly encompasses the 'right to family visits'. The latter is enshrined in international human rights instruments, and is a right owed to both detainees and their family members. Thus, a decision to imprison Mr. Taylor outside of the West African region (and specifically outside of his country of birth, culture, tradition, family and friends), let alone outside of the African continent, is in of itself a restriction on his right to family visits; a wholly excessive and impractical one, we submit.

[305] Articles 18, 27, 29 of the African Charter; Article 17 of the ICCPR; see also Sesay Enforcement of Sentence Decision, paras. 22-27.

205. It is established that serving one's sentence abroad causes an additional hardship. At the ICTY, the Trial Chamber recognized that, the fact that the accused Mrđa would have to serve his sentence in a foreign state may constitute an additional hardship for him and therefore must be taken into consideration when determining the appropriate sentence.[306] Likewise, in the RUF case, Trial Chamber I recognized that "in general terms, sentences served abroad, where family visits are likely to be few, may be harder to bear. Such circumstances would normally amount to a factor in mitigation".[307] Trial Chamber I however did not give any weight to this factor since, in that case, the President had not yet reached a decision (based on the sentence enforcement agreements negotiated and concluded by the Registrar) as to where the RUF convicts would be sent. The paragraphs in the RUF Appeals Judgement relied upon by the Prosecution[308] to suggest that serving a sentence in a foreign country should not be considered in mitigation only states that the RUF Trial Chamber did not err in not considering it in mitigation, not that it could not have properly been considered.

206. That situation is however different from the present case where, even as the President of the Court is yet to make a formal determination, it appears a foregone conclusion that Mr. Taylor will serve his sentence in the United Kingdom. Furthermore, Mr. Taylor would serve his sentence not just in another country, but on another continent. This mitigating factor should thus be given adequate weight.

207. The Defence notes that Mr. Taylor is in a unique position compared to every other individual convicted by an international criminal tribunal. He will be the first convicted person to serve a lengthy sentence on a continent other than that of his origin, thus stripping him of the last vestige of anything familiar. The ICTY convicted persons are all detained in Europe and all but one of the Rwandese ICTR convicted persons are detained in Africa.[309]

[307] RUF Sentencing Judgement, para. 206.
[308] Prosecution Sentencing Brief, para. 44, citing RUF Appeal Judgement, paras. 1246 and 1316.
[309] The only exception is Bagaragaza, who served a short one-and-a-half year sentence in Sweden. See: Annex L, Early Release of Bagaragaza.

208. Besides the constrained family visits, as argued above, the hardships resulting from cultural and other social differences, where one is effectively re-located into another 'world' at such an advanced age and for what might be a long time, should not be underestimated. As Professor Schabas aptly pointed out, international prisoners will "be isolated from their families and probably from other support systems. They may find themselves in relative isolation, in a culturally unfamiliar environment, and unable to communicate and socialize with fellow inmates and prison personnel".[310]

209. This same concern was expressed earlier in the Erdemović case at the ICTY. In the very first Sentencing Judgement at the Tribunal, the Trial Chamber noted that "because persons found guilty will be obliged to serve their sentences in institutions which are often far from their places of origin, the Trial Chamber takes note of the inevitable isolation into which [such prisoner] will have been placed. Moreover, cultural and linguistic differences will distinguish them from the other detainees".[311]

210. In addition to the geographic component, the prisoner accommodation model the United Kingdom uses further compounds the problem of isolation, which Mr. Taylor will face. While African states which have signed Sentence Enforcement Agreements with international criminal tribunals such as the ICTR use the consolidation prison model (where the tribunal's prisoners interact exclusively with each other and receive special accommodation), the United Kingdom uses the dispersion model of incarceration (where tribunal prisoners are intermixed and interact with domestic prisoners).[312] While the consolidation model allows inmates of shared linguistic and cultural backgrounds to remain together, the dispersion model used in the United Kingdom isolates the prisoners, thereby making them more vulnerable to attack by domestic prisoners. The attack on ICTY convict, Krstic, in the British maximum security Wakefield prison,[313] is a lasting example.

211. The Defence therefore requests that the Chamber considers as mitigating the fact that Mr. Taylor will effectively serve his sentence in isolation from all culturally familiar circumstances, and very far removed from family and friends. That we submit is a punishment within a punishment.

VI. SUBMISSIONS ON TIME SERVED

212. Pursuant to Rule 101(D), Mr. Taylor shall be given credit for: "any period during which [he] was detained in custody pending his transfer to the Special Court or pending trial or appeal". Mr. Taylor has been detained in the custody of the Special Court since his arrest in Nigeria and subsequent transfer to Sierra Leone via Liberia on 29 March 2006.[314] There is no dispute that Mr. Taylor must therefore be given credit for the 6 years and one month that he has already served in detention.

213. The Defence submits that Mr. Taylor should also be given credit for the time that he was under de facto house arrest in exile in Calabar, Nigeria, between 11 August 2003 and 29 March 2006.[315] Thus, Mr. Taylor is entitled to an additional 2 year and 7 month reduction of any sentence rendered by the Court. In total, Mr. Taylor should be given credit for 8 years and 8 months for time spent in custody pending transfer to the Special Court or pending trial.

214. The Defence submits that the time Mr. Taylor spent in Calabar constitutes detention, "in custody", as it was a de facto house arrest. Mr. Taylor endured significant loss of liberties and freedom of movement when he left Liberia and took up President Obasanjo's invitation to go to Nigeria. Obasanjo's offer was directly related to the Special Court indictment that had been unsealed on 4 June 2003 in Accra. In Nigeria Mr. Taylor was accommodated in a fenced compound, with several smaller outer apartments and a heavy security presence.[316]

"unprecedented in volume" flown in from Burkina Faso to enable the late 1998 offensive culminating in the Freetown Invasion.[247]

82. Perhaps the most telling example of Mr. Taylor's willing and enthusiastic participation is that, even in the face of the unimaginable cruelty and crimes inflicted upon the people of Freetown during the "January 6" invasion which he planned, Mr. Taylor responded by continuing to support the AFRC/RUF.[248]

3. Mr. Taylor's Leadership Positions and Betrayal of Positions of Trust

83. Throughout the Indictment period, Mr. Taylor held senior leadership roles, both nationally and internationally. He became President of Liberia in August 1997,[249] a position he still held when hostilities ended in Sierra Leone.[250] In addition, Mr. Taylor joined the ECOWAS Committee of Five shortly after his election.[251] As identified by the Trial Chamber, these positions imbued Mr. Taylor with an "inherent authority"[252] and "substantial influence over the leadership of the RUF, and to a lesser extent that of the AFRC."[253]

84. Rather than using his positions for positive change, Mr. Taylor abused his authority and influence. Mr. Taylor gave extensive advice, direction and guidance,[254] and "by virtue of his position", Bockarie deferred to him and generally followed his instruction.[255] The Trial Chamber further found that Mr. Taylor, as "an elder statesman and as president of Liberia," was accorded a certain deference by other AFRC/RUF leadership, which meant "his advice was generally heeded by them."[256] At no time did Mr. Taylor exert this influence over the AFRC/RUF high command to alleviate the suffering of the people of Sierra Leone. Rather, he deliberately used his authority and position to fan the flames of conflict and to continue the perpetration of the crimes.

85. In addition to these general findings, the Chamber made many particular findings on Mr. Taylor's authority and influence relating to the period February 1998 to February 1999, a time that coincides with the perpetration of a significant proportion of the crimes. The Chamber referred to several discrete instances in which Mr. Taylor specifically exercised his influence over the AFRC/RUF.[257] These instances are characterized variously as "ordering", "instructing", "advising", "emphasizing", "communicating", or "telling". Regardless of the characterization, all are demonstrations of Mr. Taylor abusing his position of "inherent authority"[258] in relation to the AFRC/RUF.

86. Mr. Taylor was also a President who demonstrated a disregard for the international community's efforts to protect international peace and security. He deliberately flouted ECOWAS and UN arms embargoes practically from the first moment of their imposition.[259] While "the Junta was perceived by the international community as a threat to peace ... and it was recognised that military support could facilitate the commission of [257] In relation to the immediate period after the Intervention, the Trial Chamber found that "[t]he Accused and his subordinates communicated to the AFRC/RUF forces the imperative to maintain control over Kono" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49639, lines 8-10), Taylor "told Koroma to capture Kono" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49639, lines 15-18), and "[a]fter the first failed attempt, the Accused gave instructions for a second attack" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49639, lines 18-21). The Chamber also found that, once recaptured, "the Accused told Bockarie to be sure to maintain control of Kono" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49639, lines 21-24). Further, the Chamber found that in June 1998 "[t]he accused advised Bockarie to recapture Kono following its loss to ECOMOG" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49639, lines 25-26) and, in relation to the late 1998 offensive and the Freetown invasion, "the Accused emphasised to Bockarie the need to first attack Kono" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49640, lines 11-12) and "told Bockarie to make the operation 'fearful'....as well as use 'all means' to get to Freetown" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49640, lines 12-15). The Chamber also noted that Bockarie's invitation to Musa was "[c]onsistent with discussions with the accused" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49640, lines 22-23) and that "[t]he accused gave advice to Bockarie and received updates in relation to the progress of the operations in Kono and Freetown" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49641, lines 10-12). The Trial Chamber also found that the Accused instructed Bockarie to transfer some of the Pademba Road prisoners to Buedu (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49641, lines 20-21). Other findings bearing out the Accused's authority over the AFRC/RUF during this period include that the Accused "instructed Bockarie in 1998 to open a training base in Bunumbu, Kailahun district" (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49646, lines 4-6), as well as the finding that the decision to incorporate the Scorpion Unit into Bockarie's command was approved by the Accused through his subordinate Daniel Tamba (T. 26 April 2012 p. 49651, lines 4-8).

[259] T. 26 April 2012 p. 49661, lines 28-29 to p. 49662, lines 1-3 ("Following a coup on 29 August 1997, ECOWAS decided to place a total embargo on all supplies of petroleum products, arms and military equipment to Sierra Leone. Similarly on 8 October 1997, the United Nations Security Council decided to impose an embargo on arms and ammunition to Sierra Leone").

the crimes",[260] Mr. Taylor and his subordinates were already busy circumventing the embargoes by facilitating the above mentioned Magburaka arms shipment.[261] In addition, the Trial Chamber found that the "facilitation of road and air transportation of materiel as well as security escorts played a vital role of the operations of the RUF/AFRC during a period when an international arms embargo was in force."[262] As the embargo was in place during the Indictment period,[263] this finding applies equally to all instances where Mr. Taylor either provided or facilitated the provision of arms and ammunition to the AFRC/RUF in defiance of the international ban. Clearly, Mr. Taylor's acts ran directly counter to the purpose of the arms embargo. Rather than shorten the conflict and stabilise the region by denying weapons to those threatening international peace and security, Mr. Taylor sought to deliberately but clandestinely defy the international community and to prolong and exacerbate the war. These actions undertaken by a serving head of State are particularly reprehensible and blameworthy and should be recognised as such when sentencing Mr. Taylor.

87. The most egregious example of Mr. Taylor's abuse of his positions of leadership relates to his role in the Sierra Leone peace process which he actively worked against. As established by the Trial Chamber's findings, from Abidjan to Lomé and at all points thereafter, peace in Sierra Leone was never a genuine goal for Mr. Taylor.[264] While Sierra Leone literally burned, Mr. Taylor paid lip service to peace, deliberately deceiving all those who placed much store in his "considerable influence over the warring factions in Sierra Leone."[265]

88. During his Presidency, Mr. Taylor attempted to play the role of the concerned humanitarian. In a July 1998 statement, he strongly condemned the rebel activities and horrendous atrocities being committed in Sierra Leone.[266] While telling the ECOWAS Chairman and UN Secretary-General that he would "cooperate to promote an end to the fighting in Sierra Leone and to foster peace and security in the sub region",[267] he was in reality a "two-headed Janus".[268] At the same time as making such laudable statements, Mr. Taylor was coldly calculating how to ensure he continued to benefit from Sierra Leone's diamonds.

89. In relation to Mr. Taylor's "active role in the Lomé peace negotiations", the Trial Chamber found that Mr. Taylor "was engaged in arms transactions at the same time that he was involved in the peace negotiations in Lomé, publicly promoting peace ... while privately providing arms and ammunitions to the RUF."[269] As regards Mr. Taylor's participation in the ECOWAS Committee of Five (later Committee of Six) via his Presidency of Liberia, the Trial Chamber found "strong evidence showing that while publicly participating in regional efforts to broker peace in Sierra Leone, the accused was secretly fuelling hostilities between the AFRC/RUF and the democratically elected authorities in Sierra Leone" and was, thus, clandestinely "undermining ... the peace process".[270] Finally, Mr. Taylor's dealings with Issa Sesay in 2000 were also determined by the Trial Chamber to be part of Mr. Taylor's continued efforts to prolong the conflict. In May 2000, the Trial Chamber found that Mr. Taylor "had significant influence over the RUF decision to release the UN peacekeepers and that in his meeting with Issa Sesay, Taylor promised him assistance 'in the struggle.'"[271] Further, in July 2000, when it was proposed that Sesay take over the RUF leadership, the Trial Chamber found that, at a covert meeting held late at night, Mr. Taylor "privately advised Issa Sesay to say that he would disarm but 'not do it in reality.'"[272] The Chamber also found that "[a]t that time, the accused was supplying Sesay with arms and ammunition, and also calling on the RUF to send forces to help him fight his own enemies together with the AFL in Liberia and in Guinea."[273]

TRIAL CHAMBER II ("Trial Chamber") of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court");

SEISED of the "Defence Motion Seeking Termination of the Disciplinary Hearing for Failure to Properly Constitute the Trial Chamber and/or Leave to Appeal the Remaining Judges' Decision to Adjourn the Disciplinary Hearing", filed on 28 February 2011 ("Motion"),[1]

RECALLING that the Disciplinary Hearing was in relation to an incident in court on 8 February 2011, wherein Lead Counsel for the Accused, Mr. Courtenay Griffiths withdrew from the proceedings, despite being ordered by the Presiding Judge to remain;[2]

RECALLING that on 11 March 2011, Mr. Griffiths, Lead Counsel for the Accused apologised for his conduct, thus bringing the matter to an end;[3]

FINDING therefore that the Motion is now moot;

DISMISSES THE MOTION.

Document Dated: 28 FEBRUARY 2011

☐ The Defence submits that this filing is not deficient by exceeding any page limit. Article 6(D)(i) of the Practice Direction states that the motion of a party seeking leave to pursue an interlocutory appeal shall not exceed 15 pages or 4500 words, whichever is greater. The Defence's filing is 12 pages, less the table of authorities, which does not count toward the page limits. The fact that the Defence is seeking leave to appeal as an additional and alternate form of relief does not negate the fact that it is indeed a motion seeking leave to appeal. Thus, the Defence properly filed a pleading in excess of the usual 10 page limit.

7. On 9 February 2011, the Presiding Judge issued a "Direction to Lead Counsel to Appear Before the Trial Chamber"; Justice Julia Sebutinde dissented.[6] The Direction to Appear directed Lead Counsel to attend court on Friday 11 February 2011 and warned that unless he apologized for his behavior on 8 February 2011, then the Trial Chamber may impose sanctions pursuant to Rule 46.[7]

8. On 8 February 2011, Lead Counsel appeared in Court and, through co-counsel Terry Munyard, requested an adjournment of the hearing until Mr. Griffiths could find representation, given the seriousness of the matter.[8] The matter was adjourned for two weeks so that Mr. Griffiths could find representation.[9] On 18 February 2011, the Defence informed the Trial Chamber that Mr. Peter Robinson had agreed to represent Mr. Griffiths in the Parallel Proceedings scheduled for 25 February 2011.[10]

9. Mr. Griffiths and Mr. Robinson duly appeared on 25 February 2011. For the Trial Chamber, only the Presiding Judge (Justice Doherty), Justice Lussick, and the Alternate Judge (Justice Sow) appeared.[11] The Presiding Judge opened by noting that Justice Sebutinde was not present and read the following notification on her behalf:

> "This is to notify you that in view of the recent developments in the Trial Chamber, and consistent with my earlier opinion on this matter, both in Chamber and on the Bench wherein I dissented from the directive to lead counsel, I will on principle not attend Friday's hearing."[12]

10. The Presiding Judge then invited comments "on the question of the constitution of the Court, in light of the matter I have just read, and in light of Justice Sebutinde's absence". Mr. Robinson conferred with the Defence and thereafter invited the Trial Chamber to invite the alternate judge, Justice Sow, to participate so that the Bench could be constituted of three judges.[13] Thereafter, Justice Sow expressed his willingness to participate. He stated, "This bench is regularly composed with three judges sitting, as it shows ... I am a judge. This Bench is regularly composed, as everybody can see".

11. Following Justice Sow's remarks, the Presiding Judge then issued the impugned decision(s):

> "The Articles governing the composition of this Court and the Trial Chamber mandate that it is to be composed of three judges. This is not a situation where Rule 16 applies. Accordingly, in our view, this Trial Chamber is not properly constituted and we consider we have no alternative but to adjourn this hearing today. The matter is adjourned for a date to be fixed".[14]

Appointment of Justice Sow as Alternate Judge

12. A brief history of the appointment of Justice Sow as an alternate judge for Trial Chamber II may be instructive to understanding the underlying purpose of having and utilizing an alternate judge. In December 2006, jurist Antonio Cassese, as part of his independent expert review of the functioning of the Special Court for Sierra Leone,[15] recommended that an alternate judge be appointed for the Taylor Trial. He opined that because it was important for the Taylor Trial to "run smoothly and not falter", he believed that "an alternate Judge should be appointed who could sit through each stage of the trial and step in to replace a Judge if, for any reason, the Judge cannot continue sitting"; Cassese noted that it would be "undesirable to gamble on the continuity of such an important case".[16]

13. Justice Sow was sworn in as an alternate judge for Trial Chamber II on 9 May 2007.[17] According to the Court's official press release of this event, Justice Sow's role was that he should be present at each stage of the trial and that he would replace a Judge if that Judge is unable to continue sitting, in accordance with Article 12(4).[18]

SEISED of the "Defence Motion Seeking Leave to Appeal the Decision on Urgent and Public with Annexes A-N Defence Motion for Disclosure and/or Investigation of United States Government Sources Within the Trial Chamber, the Prosecution and the Registry Based on Leaked USG Cables", filed on 31 January 2011 ("Motion"),[2] wherein the Defence seeks leave to appeal the Trial Chamber's "Decision on Urgent and Public with Annexes A-N Defence Motion for Disclosure and/or Investigation of United States Government Sources Within the Trial Chamber, the Prosecution and the Registry Based on Leaked USG Cables", dated 28 January 2011 ("Impugned Decision"),[3] on the basis that:

1) "exceptional circumstances" exist in that:

   a. The Trial Chamber's denial of the motion overlooks the fundamental and important nature of the request to the Accused's case and the centrality of the issues involved;[4]

   b. the Trial Chamber abused its discretion by refusing to investigate itself/and or members under it in circumstances where there is prima facie evidence that such person(s) are or have been in secret contact with the USG, an external party that has clearly demonstrated its animosity to the Accused, and that mere evidence of contact undermines any perception of judicial independence;[5]

   c. it is in the interests of justice that any issue that, prima facie, raises questions going to the independence and integrity of any of the organs of the court, particularly the Prosecution and Chambers, should be properly investigated;[6]

   d. such allegations also raise an issue of fundamental legal importance;[7]

   e. where the issues raised impacts on the Trial Chamber itself, further decision by the Appeals Chamber on the matter is conducive in the interests of justice;[8]

[1] Noting that Justice Sebutinde has voluntarily withdrawn herself from a decision on this Motion for the same reasons as stated in the Impugned Decision.

2) the Defence would suffer irreparable prejudice if the identity of the persons in the three organs of the Court, and the nature and extent of the interactions of such persons with the USG is not established;[9]

RECALLING the "Order for Expedited Filing", dated 1 February 2011, wherein the Trial Chamber ordered expedited filing schedules for a response and a reply in relation to the Motion;[10]

NOTING the "Prosecution Response to Defence Motion Seeking Leave to Appeal the Decision on Urgent and Public with Annexes A-N Defence Motion for Disclosure and/or Investigation of United States Government Sources Within the Trial Chamber, the Prosecution and the Registry Based on Leaked USG Cables", filed on 4 February 2011 ("Response"),[11] wherein the Prosecution submits that the Motion should be dismissed on the basis that:

1) The Defence has failed to establish "exceptional circumstances" in that:

   a. the mere fact that the Defence has identified possible grounds of appeal does not satisfy the first limb of Rule 73(B) as an erroneous ruling does not of itself give rise to exceptional circumstances;[12]

   b. the Defence argument that decisions concerning the independence and integrity of any organ of the court automatically satisfy the "exceptional circumstances" requirement is untenable as such an interpretation would be tantamount of inserting an alternative ground for leave to appeal into Rule 73(B);[13]

2) The Defence has failed to establish "irreparable prejudice" in that;

   a. the Defence arguments are predicated on its conclusion that it has established a prima facie case, this is a merits based argument which should be dismissed[14]

   b. the issue can be remedied on final appeal, as is evident from the Sesay et. al. case, in which the Appeals Chamber addressed a similar issue at the appeals stage;[15]

NOTING ALSO that the Defence did not file a Reply;

COGNISANT of the provisions of Article 17 of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Statute") and Rule 73 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules");

NOTING that Rule 73(B) provides:

> Decisions rendered on such motions are without interlocutory appeal. However, in exceptional circumstances and to avoid irreparable prejudice to a party, the Trial Chamber may give leave to appeal. Such leave should be sought within 3 days of the decision and shall not operate as a stay of proceedings unless the Trial Chamber so orders.

NOTING therefore that (i) as a general rule, interlocutory decisions are not subject to appeal; (ii) Rule 73(B) involves a high threshold that must be met before the Trial Chamber can exercise its discretion to grant leave to appeal; (iii) a party seeking leave to appeal against an interlocutory decision must show "exceptional circumstances" and "irreparable prejudice"; (iv) the two prong test prescribed under Rule 73(B) is conjunctive and not disjunctive;[16] (v) even where the conjunctive test is satisfied, leave to appeal remains in the discretion of the Trial Chamber;[17]

RECALLING the Appeals Chamber rulings that "[a]s a general principle, interlocutory appeals are a rare exception"'[18] and that "[i]n this Court, the procedural assumption is that trials will continue to their conclusion without delay or diversion caused by interlocutory appeals on procedural matters, and that any errors which affect the final judgement will be corrected in due course by this Chamber on appeal";[19]

RECALLING ALSO that this Court has held that an interlocutory appeal does not lie as of right and that "the overriding legal consideration in respect of an application of this nature is that the applicant's case must reach a level nothing short of "exceptional circumstances" and "irreparable prejudice", having regard to the restrictive nature of Rule 73(B) and the rationale that criminal trials must not be heavily encumbered and, consequently, unduly delayed by interlocutory appeals";[20] and that "exceptional circumstances" may arise "where the cause of justice may be interfered with" or "where issues of fundamental legal importance" are raised;[21]

CONSIDERING that motions relating to the independence and integrity of a court do not per se give rise to exceptional circumstances;

CONSIDERING ALSO that the Motion is more concerned with arguing the merits of an appeal rather than with satisfying the conjunctive test required for leave to appeal to be granted and that merely pointing to alleged errors in law and/or fact does not of itself give rise to exceptional circumstances nor to an issue of fundamental legal importance;

CONSIDERING FURTHER that the Defence submission that it would suffer irreparable prejudice unless the identity of the persons in the Court and their interactions with the USG are established has no foundation or evidentiary basis;

FINDING therefore that the Defence has failed to satisfy the conjunctive test of exceptional circumstances and irreparable prejudice;

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS

HEREBY DISMISSES THE MOTION.

TRIAL CHAMBER II ("Trial Chamber") of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court");[1]

SEISED of the "Urgent and Public with Annexes A-N Defence Motion for Disclosure and/or Investigation of United States Government Sources Within the Trial Chamber, the Prosecution and the Registry Based on Leaked USG Cables", filed on 10 January 2011 ("Motion"),[2] wherein, in light of the publication of two leaked United States Government ("USG") cables and an article in the New Democrat, a Liberian Newspaper ("Newspaper Article"), the Defence seeks, pursuant to Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules") immediate disclosure and/or an investigation into:

(i) the identity of the source(s) within the Trial Chamber, Prosecution and Registry who provided the USG with the information in the Cables;[3]

(ii) the full nature of the respective sources' relationship with the USG, specifically including an explanation of the context and circumstances in which each of the comments recorded in the Cables were made to representatives of the USG;[4]

(iii) information tending to suggest that the Prosecution has sought or received instructions from the USG regarding any aspect of the Taylor trial;[5] and on the basis that the USG Cables and Newspaper Article clearly indicate 1) the USG's desire to ensure that Mr. Taylor does not return to Liberia; and 2) proof that there is and have been contacts between the Trial Chamber, the Office of the Prosecutor and the Registry, and agents of the USG outside the official lines of communication;[7] 3) the only way to remove any doubt about the independence and impartiality of the tribunal is to order the disclosure and/or the investigation into the identity of the sources within the Trial Chamber, Prosecution and Registry and the full nature of their relationship with the USG;[8]

NOTING the "Prosecution Response to Defence Motion for Disclosure and/or Investigation of United States Government Sources Within the Trial Chamber, the Prosecution and the Registry Based on Leaked USG Cables", filed on 20 January 2011 ("Response"),[9] wherein the Prosecution opposes the Motion and submits that it should be dismissed on the basis that;

(i) it is untimely and frivolous, appears to be a deliberate attempt to delay the proceedings, and rehearses the unfounded allegations made in the Sesay et al. case in relation to the Prosecution's link to the USG;[10]

(ii) the Cables do not provide any evidentiary basis or factual foundation for the allegations put forward by the Defence concerning any organ of the Court, and in fact clearly evidence the Court's impartiality and independence;[11]

COGNISANT of the provisions of Articles 13(1), 15(1) and 17 of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Statute") and Rule 54 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules");

NOTING that two United States Government cables, one dated 10 March 2009 ("First USG Cable"),[13] and the other dated 15 April 2009 ("Second USG Cable"), were leaked through Wikileaks, an internet platform which allows anonymous disclosure of leaked information,[14] and published by the Guardian newspaper on 17 December 2010;[15]

NOTING that on 23 December 2010, an article was published in the New Democrat entitled "Sorry for the Leaks; Pres. Sirleaf Acknowledges US Ambassador's Apology";[16]

RECALLING that on 13 September 2010, the Trial Chamber ordered the Defence to file all remaining motions by 24 September 2010;[17]

CONSIDERING that, with respect to the Defence request for a full explanation of the funds provided by the USG to the Prosecution, the Defence relies on statements made by former Prosecutor David Crane in 2006 to the Subcommittee on Africa, Global Human Rights and International Operations of the United States House of Representatives' Committee on International Relations, a statement which is already in evidence in this case,[18] and which has already been used by the Defence in its opening statement and examination-in-chief of the Accused;[19]

HOLDING, therefore, that as the Defence has already had an opportunity to raise this issue prior to the deadline of 24 September 2010, and as this issue is unrelated to the recently leaked USG Cables, this aspect of the Motion is untimely, but that it is in the interests of justice to consider the remainder of the Motion at this time;

NOTING that Article 13(1) of the Statute provides that:

> The judges shall be persons of high moral character, impartiality and integrity [. . .] They shall be independent in the performance of their functions, and shall not accept or seek instructions from any Government or other source;

NOTING that Article 15(1) of the Statute provides inter alia that:

> The Prosecutor shall act independently as a separate organ of the Special Court. He or she shall not seek or receive instructions from any Government or any other source;

NOTING that Rule 54 of the Rules provides that:

> At the request of either party or of its own motion, a Judge or a Trial Chamber may issue such orders, summonses, subpoenas, warrants and transfer orders as may be necessary for the purposes of an investigation or for the preparation or conduct of the trial;

RECALLING that this Trial Chamber has previously held, in relation to Rule 54, that the "test for whether the Trial Chamber should issue an order under the Rule is whether to do so is necessary (not simply useful or convenient) for the purposes of an investigation or for the preparation or conduct of the trial";[20]

RECALLING that Trial Chamber I has held that, in order for a disclosure order to be granted in relation to a breach of Article 15(1), a party must establish a prima facie case that there has been such a breach,[21] and in so doing must determine, whether there is, at this point in time, any evidentiary basis or factual foundation to warrant a conclusive finding of fact that there has in law been such a breach;[22]

CONSIDERING that with respect to a request for disclosure or an investigation in relation to a Judge or a member of the Trial Chamber, a party must specifically identify the information it seeks to have disclosed, and must make a prima facie showing that such information would demonstrate actual bias or the appearance of bias;[23]

CONSIDERING therefore that, in determining whether an order for disclosure and/or an investigation pursuant to Rule 54 is necessary, the Trial Chamber must determine whether a prima facie case has been established that there may have been interference with the independence and impartiality of the Court;

CONSIDERING that the First USG Cable does not indicate that the USG has any influence over any organs of the Court;

CONSIDERING moreover, that as the United States government raises concerns in this cable about the effect on the fragile peace in Liberia should Taylor be acquitted in The Hague or given a light sentence, it is clear that it does not have any influence over the final outcome of the trial;

CONSIDERING that while it is of concern to the Trial Chamber that the United States government may have received information from "contacts" in Chambers,[24] the Registry and the Prosecution, the Second USG Cable does not demonstrate whether these "contacts" have any relationship with the USG capable of interfering with the independence or impartiality of the Court or any organ of the Court;

CONSIDERING FURTHER that, as part of their official functions, the Registry and the Prosecution interact on a regular basis with government officials from a number of countries, and in particular, with member states of the management committee, including the United States of America, about the progress of the trial, including "questions of efficiency" as provided for by Article 7 of the Agreement between the United Nations and the Government between the United Nations and the Government of Sierra Leone on the Establishment of a Special Court for Sierra Leone,[25] which states that:

> It is the understanding of the Parties that interested States will establish a management committee to assist the Secretary-General in obtaining adequate funding, and provide advice and policy direction on all non-judicial aspects of the operation of the Court, including questions of efficiency, and to perform other functions as agreed by interested States. The management committee shall consist of important contributors to the Special Court. The Government of Sierra Leone and the Secretary-General will also participate in the management committee.

RECALLING that Trial Chamber I has held that that "mere evidence of the cooperation between the Prosecution and the FBI or the US Government, without proof that the former received instructions from the latter, including the nature and contents of such instructions, does not, per se, fulfill the test to establish a violation of Article 15(1) of the Statute";[26]

SATISFIED that, while the statements attributed to the sources within the Prosecution Registry, and Chambers in the Second USG Cable indicate that information may have been provided to the USG government by employees within the Court, the statements do not demonstrate that such sources were receiving instructions from the USG;

FINDING therefore that the Defence it has not shown any prima facie evidence that there has been interference with the independence and impartiality of the Court, and therefore has shown no evidentiary basis for either disclosure by, or an investigation of, any organ of the Court;

HEREBY DISMISSES THE MOTION.

[Seal of the Special Court for Sierra Leone]

DECLARATION OF JUSTICE JULIA SEBUTINDE

1. For the reasons set out below, it is my considered opinion that it would be in the interests of justice for me to voluntarily withdraw myself from a decision on this Motion. The USG Code Cable contained in Annex B of the Motion involves a statement that un-named "sources in the Prosecution, Chambers and the Registry" of the Special Court allegedly made certain specific allegations against me.

2. In the Motion, the Defence requests an investigation into the contacts or sources in the Court who made these allegations. Indeed, the Defence has observed that "[t]he only sign of how seriously some members of this Court have taken the matter is through the personal response of Justice Julia Sebutinde to the allegations in one of the cables which impinge on her integrity, as reported in the media".[1]

3. I declare that while I am completely innocent of the allegations contained in the USG Code Cable and consider myself to be impartial and free of bias in relation to the issues at stake in this Motion, it is my considered view that in order for justice to be seen to be done, I should not participate in the deliberations or decision relating to this Motion.

4. Accordingly, I voluntarily withdraw from participating in the deliberations and the Decision on this Motion.

Done at The Hague, The Netherlands, this 26th day of January 2011.

SEISED of the "Urgent and Public with Annexes A-C Defence Motion to Re-Open its Case in Order to Seek Admission of Documents Relating to the Relationship Between the United States Government and the Prosecution of Charles Taylor", filed on 10 January 2011 ("Motion"),[2] wherein the Defence seeks permission to re-open its case for the limited purpose of seeking admission of the following documents ("Defence Documents") into evidence pursuant to Rule 92*bis*:[3]

(a) marked portions of a United States Government ("USG") cable, dated 10 March 2009, which was leaked through Wikileaks and published by the Guardian newspaper ("Guardian") on 17 December 2010 ("First USG Cable");[4]

(b) the entirety of a USG cable, dated 15 April 2009, which was leaked through Wikileaks and published by the Guardian on 17 December 2010 ("Second USG Cable");[5]

(c) the first paragraph of an article from the New Democrat, a Liberian newspaper, entitled "Sorry for the Leaks; Pres. Sirleaf Acknowledges US Ambassador's Apology", dated 23 December 2010 ("Newspaper Article");[6] on the basis that the Defence should be entitled to re-open its case for this limited purpose as:

(i) the evidence could not, with reasonable diligence, have been obtained and presented during its case in chief, as the cables are confidential and classified documents which were obtained by Wikileaks and published in the Guardian on 17 December 2010, five weeks after it had closed its case, and the publication of the Newspaper Article was in consequence of the leak and publication of the cables;[7]

(ii) the probative value of the cables is significant as the cables raise grave doubts about the independence and impartiality of the Special Court's prosecution of Charles Taylor;[8]

(iii) there would be limited delays to the trial proceedings if these documents are admitted;[9]

and submits that the documents are admissible pursuant to Rule 92*bis* on the basis that:

(i) the documents are relevant as they support the Defence position that the prosecution of Mr. Taylor is political and his indictment was deliberately selective;[10]

(ii) the documents are susceptible of corroboration in due course, in regard to each other, and the evidence on record;[11]

(iii) the portions of the USG Cables and Newspaper Article sought to be admitted do not go to the acts and conduct of the Accused and;[12]

(iv) the information contained in the USG Cables are facts as reported by United States diplomatic personnel, as is the apology from the U.S. Ambassador to the Liberian President contained in the newspaper article, and they therefore do not constitute opinion evidence;[13]

NOTING the "Prosecution Response to Defence Motion to Re-Open its Case to Seek Admission of Documents Relating to the Relationship between the United States Government and the Prosecution of Charles Taylor", filed on 20 January 2011 ("Response"),[14] wherein the Prosecution opposes the Motion and submits that the Defence has failed to demonstrate the relevance of the Defence Documents,[15] on the basis that:

(i) the USG Cables refute, rather than support, the Defence allegations that the independence and impartiality of the Special Court is compromised by the involvement of the United States or any other government;[16]

(ii) the Newspaper Article has no relevance to this trial;[17]

(iii) there is nothing in any of the documents that provides any evidentiary basis for an argument that the Prosecution is in breach of its duty of independence under Article 15(1), or has sought or received instructions from the USG in relation to these proceedings;[18]

(iv) the Defence argument that the documents are relevant to the Defence theory of selective prosecution has no merit, as the Prosecution acted squarely within the bounds of its discretion pursuant to Article 1(1) of the Statute in bringing an Indictment against Charles Taylor as one of those who bears the "greatest responsibility";[19]

NOTING that the Prosecution further submits that the documents contain matters of opinion rather than matters of fact, and that they are therefore inadmissible under Rule 92*bis*;[20]

NOTING FURTHER that the Prosecution requests that should the Trial Chamber permit the Defence to re-open its case in order to admit the documents, the entire March 2009 cable should be admitted;[21]

> (A) In addition to the provisions of Rule 92*ter*, a Chamber may, in lieu of oral testimony, admit as evidence in whole or in part, information including written statements and transcripts, that do not go to proof of the acts and conduct of the accused.
> (B) The information submitted may be received in evidence if, in the view of the Trial Chamber, it is relevant to the purpose for which it is submitted and if its reliability is susceptible of confirmation.

> (C) A party wishing to submit information as evidence shall give 10 days notice to the opposing party. Objections, if any, must be submitted within 5 days.

NOTING that the Appeals Chamber has ruled that the effect of Rule 92*bis* "is to permit the reception of 'information' - assertions of fact (but not opinion) made in documents or electronic communications - if such facts are relevant and their reliability is "susceptible of confirmation." This phraseology was chosen to make clear that proof of reliability is not a condition of admission: all that is required is that the information should be capable of corroboration in due course. It is for the trial chamber to decide whether the information comes in a form, or is of a kind, that is "susceptible of confirmation". It follows, of course, from the fact that its reliability is "susceptible of confirmation", that it is also susceptible of being disproved, or so seriously called into question that the court will place no reliance upon it";[23]

RECALLING that the Trial Chamber has previously held that a party seeking to re-open a case must (i) meet the threshold test of establishing that the evidence could not, with reasonable diligence, have been obtained and presented during its case in chief, and (ii) if the first prong of the test is met, the party must demonstrate that the probative value of the evidence is not substantially outweighed by the need to ensure a fair trial;[24]

FINDING, given that (i) the Defence closed its case on 12 November 2010; (ii) the two USG Cables were published in the Guardian on 17 December 2010, and (iii) the Newspaper Article was published on 23 December 2010, that these documents could not, with reasonable diligence, have been obtained and presented by the Defence during its case-in-chief;

FINDING FURTHER that the admission of these documents will not have any bearing on the fairness of the trial since the Defence does not request the calling of any viva voce evidence and since either party may, if necessary, apply for leave to make supplementary submissions in relation to the documents;

FINDING ALSO, in relation to the admissibility of the documents, that:

(i) the two USG Code Cables can be related to submissions made by Defence Counsel as well as sworn evidence by the Accused and that they therefore meet the requirements of Rule 92*bis*(A) & (B) in that (i) they do not go to proof of the acts and conduct of the Accused, (ii) are relevant to the purpose for which they are submitted, and (iii) their reliability is susceptible of confirmation;

(ii) the First USG Code Cable should be admitted in its entirety in order to fully understand its context;

(iii) the Newspaper Article merely reports an apology by the US Ambassador to President Sirleaf and, as such, is not relevant to the present case and thus fails to satisfy the requirements of Rule 92*bis*;

HEREBY ALLOWS the Motion in part; and

GRANTS leave to the Defence to re-open its case for the limited purpose of admitting the following documents into evidence pursuant to Rule 92*bis*:

(a) The United States Government ("USG") cable dated 10 March 2009, contained in Annex A of the Motion, is admitted into evidence as Defence Exhibit D-481;

(b) The USG cable dated 15 April 2009, contained in Annex B of the Motion, is admitted into evidence as Defence Exhibit D-482; and DISMISSES the remainder of the Motion.

DECLARATION OF JUSTICE JULIA SEBUTINDE

1. For the reasons set out below, it is my considered opinion that it would be in the interests of justice for me to voluntarily withdraw myself from a decision on this Motion. The USG Code Cable contained in Annex B of the Motion involves a statement that un-named "sources in the Prosecution, Chambers and the Registry" of the Special Court allegedly made certain specific allegations against me.

2. In the Motion, the Defence requests that this document be admitted into evidence pursuant to Rule 92bis of the Rules. Indeed, the Defence has observed that "[t]he only sign of how seriously some members of this Court have taken the matter is through the personal response of Justice Julia Sebutinde to the allegations in one of the cables which impinge on her integrity, as reported in the media".[1]

3. I declare that while I am completely innocent of the allegations contained in the USG Code Cable and consider myself to be impartial and free of bias in relation to the issues at stake in this Motion, it is my considered view that in order for justice to be seen to be done, I should not participate in the deliberations or decision relating to this Motion.

4. Accordingly, I voluntarily withdraw from participating in the deliberations and the Decision on this Motion.

Done at The Hague, The Netherlands, this 27th day of January 2011.

Sebutinde delaying Taylor trial, says US diplomat

By Talu Butagira (email the author <URL: javascript:void(0);>)
Posted Monday, December 20 2010 at 00:00

Kampala

A senior Ugandan judge has been accused by an American diplomat of delaying the ongoing trial of former Liberian President, Charles Taylor, in the Netherlands, and questioned her motive for slowing down the prosecution.

Justice Julia Sebutinde, speaking to this newspaper by phone yesterday, however, said the allegation contained in a diplomatic cable released by Julian Assange's whistleblower website, WikiLeaks, manifest "ignorance and racism" on the part of the author.

The April 15, 2009, dispatch from one Gallager and classified by Denise Manning, the legal counsellor at the American embassy in the Netherlands, summarises the UN Special Court for Sierra Leone's milestones, including "uncertainty in terms of timing, finances, and (trial) completion".

The diplomat, reportedly drawing from accounts offered by a contact at the court, wrote in the confidential report to Washington that "the Trial Chamber could have accelerated the court's work by excluding extraneous material and arguments".
"Moreover, contacts in Prosecution and Registry speculate that Justice [Julia] Sebutinde may have a timing agenda," the memo reads in part. "They think she, as the only African judge, wants to hold the gavel as presiding judge when the Trial Chamber announces the Taylor judgment."

The document says the delay is messing timing predictions yet the Court Registrar's budget showed the trial should have been concluded by October last year; judgment and sentencing expedited in April 2010, with October set as deadline for handling any appeal.

In yesterday's interview, Justice Sebutinde said the allegations against her are "odd and factually incorrect" since her colleague Richard Lussick, a Samoan, was the presiding Judge in 2009 when the memo was originated. "It's unjustified and I have no idea what the motivation (of the author) could be other than racism," she said, "Perhaps, since I am the only African Judge, some of these racists think it is easier to target the black one."

Together with Northern Ireland's Teresa Doherty, The Hague-based special court has three full-time judges. Senegalese Justice El Hadji Malick, designated as an alternate fourth judge, has no voting power and can, therefore, not practically influence the court's decision.

Justice Sebutinde, who took over as the court's rotational presiding judge on January 18, this year, said she is baffled by how she came to be singled out for attack for slowing Mr Taylor's trial yet "we take decisions on majority basis".
She said: "As a (trial) chamber, we are trying to run the trial in a fair and expeditious manner with due regard to fairness to both sides (prosecution and defence) and without bending to external pressures like those [contained in the diplomatic cable]."

It has emerged that the US, partly concerned about shrinking financing for the court, has quietly been nudging for a speedy conviction of Mr Taylor, 62. He is in the dock over eleven counts of unlawful killings, sexual violence, abductions and forced labour, conscripting child soldiers and terrorising civilians.
The war crimes, according to prosecution, were committed when Mr Taylor, a former warlord, backed the Revolutionary United Front rebel group in the neighbouring Sierra Leone.

An additional month for the court costs international financiers at least $1 nullion (Shs2.3b), according to details in the diplomatic cable. Justice Sebutinde suggested that Washington may be nervy that as an African, she may return favourable judgment for the former Liberian President. "My integrity speaks for itself," said the Lady Justice, remembered in Uganda for her no-nonsense handling of two separate inquiries into corruption in the country's police force and revenue body.

"I did not do such a thing [of delivering manipulated verdict] while a national judge, and why would I do so while in a high-profile position?" she asked.
Her current one-year tenure as presiding judge at the court ends on January 17, 2011, and she will hand over to Justice Doherty.

Mr Taylor, former leader of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia, was indicted in 2003, for allegedly arming and training Sierra Leone rebels. He is also accused of trafficking blood diamonds that fuelled and financed the fighting.
He denies all the charges.

assistance versus the prohibition against receiving instructions – are clear and obvious and must be respected.

Disclosure and/or Investigation

17. The Trial Chamber has the inherent power and duty to ensure that proceedings are fair and impartial. Rule 26*bis* mandates that the Chamber "shall ensure that a trial is fair and expeditious and that proceedings before the Special Court are conducted in accordance with the Agreement, the Statute and the Rules, with full respect for the rights of the accused..." That Rule and others, such as Rule 54 (which vests the Trial Chamber with the power to "issue orders... as may be necessary for the purposes of an investigation or for the preparation or conduct of the trial"), confirm that inherent in the Rules is clear recognition that a Chamber has inherent powers to oversee and regulate the conduct of proceedings before it.
18. Accordingly, this Court has the inherent power to order the Prosecution and the Registry to disclose information which stands to undermine the integrity and impartiality of the proceedings, and/ or to order an investigation into the same. The same applies with equal force to the obligation of the Trial Chamber to investigate, in appropriate circumstances, any one or more of its members.[36]

IV. ARGUMENT

19. The Cables and the Apology clearly indicate, inter alia, two things: 1) the USG's desire to ensure that Mr. Taylor not return to Liberia;[37] and 2) proof that there is and have been contacts between the Trial Chamber, the OTP and the Registry, respectively, and agents of the USG outside the official lines of communication.[38] This, it is submitted, raises serious [36] Compare, for example, the Defence's instant request for the Trial Chamber to investigate the leak within its own quarters, to Defence requests at the ICTR for disclosure from a Judge of material or information in the possession of the Judge which is capable of demonstrating actual bias or the appearance of bias. Karemera et al v Prosecutor, ICTR-98-44-AR73.15, Decision on Joseph Nzirorera's Appeal Against a Decision of Trial Chamber III Denying the Disclosure of a Copy of the Presiding Judge's Written Assessment of a Member of the Prosecution Team, 5 May 2009, para. 11 (deeming such requests appropriate and not frivolous).

[37] March 2009 cable, paras. 11, 13 and 14.
[38] April 2009 cable: communication from a source in the Trial Chamber, para. 7 ("one Chamber contact believes that the Trial Chamber could have accelerated the Court's work by excluding extraneous material and arguments"); communications from sources in the Prosecution and Registry, para. 7 ("contacts in the Prosecution and Registry speculate that Justice Sebutinde may have a timing agenda. They think she, as the only African judge, wants to hold the gavel as presiding judge when the Trial Chamber announces the Taylor judgment. Reportedly, her next stint as presiding judge begins in January").

doubts about the independence and impartiality of the Special Court's prosecution of Charles Taylor. Viewed objectively and reasonably, evidence suggests that the indictment and trial of Mr. Taylor by the Special Court is no more than an extension of U.S. foreign policy interests in West Africa, with there being no connection to any alleged crimes in Sierra Leone.

20. This is even more so when the Cables are considered in the greater context of the operation of the Special Court, which was created and funded in large part by the American Government. As indicated earlier, American personnel have also held very important positions in the Prosecution. The OTP and its Investigations division has been led by five employees of the USG: David M. Crane and Alan White (U.S. Department of Defence), Stephen Rapp (U.S. Attorney and presently U.S. Ambassador at Large for War Crimes), Brenda J. Hollis (U.S. Air Force intelligence officer and judge advocate), and James C. Johnson (U.S. Army and special operations instructor).[39] Furthermore, and most disturbing in view of the USG's stated position that Mr. Taylor must be tried and kept away from West Africa for a long time, the OTP has received, directly and separate from the contributions by the USG to the Special Court as a whole, undisclosed and unaccounted for sums of money from the USG to support Prosecution operations. The Defence is at a loss as to what covert operations the Prosecution runs on such clandestine funding, suffice to say that this casts serious doubts on the independence of the prosecution of the Accused. Lead Defence Counsel has often called the trial political and Taylor's indictment selective, especially when considered against the decision not to indict similarly-situated Tejan Kabbah.[40] This confluence of factors leads to the possible conclusion that Mr. Taylor is a target of selective prosecution[41] and that the integrity of the trial process is irreparably tainted.

21. The only way to remove any doubt about the independence and impartiality of the tribunal is for the Trial Chamber to order the disclosure of and/or an investigation into the identity of the source(s) within the Trial Chamber, Prosecution and Registry and the full nature of their relationship with the USG. Specifically, this must include an explanation of the context and circumstances within which each of the comments recorded in the Cables were made to representatives of the USG. Furthermore, in the interests of justice, the Trial Chamber should order disclosure of any information tending to suggest that the Prosecution has sought or received instructions from the USG regarding any aspect of the Taylor trial, as well as an explanation and an accounting of the money provided by the USG to the Prosecution. If the parties are unwilling or unable to provide such information forthwith, then the Trial Chamber should order an investigation into the same.

[40] Defence Opening Statement, p. 24321.
[41] To demonstrate selective prosecution, the Defence must show: i) an improper or unlawful motive for prosecution and ii) that similarly situated persons were not prosecuted. Prosecution v. Delalic et al, IT-96-21-A, Judgement, 20 February 2001, para. 611.

V. CONCLUSION & RELIEF REQUESTED

22. Given the seemingly compromised impartiality and independence of the Special Court for Sierra Leone in light of its connection to the USG as alleged herein, the Trial Chamber must order disclosure and/or and investigation into the following:
    i. the identity of the source(s) within the Trial Chamber, Prosecution and Registry who provided the USG with the information in the Cables;
    ii. the full nature of the respective sources' relationship with the USG, specifically including an explanation of the context and circumstances in which each of the comments recorded in the Cables were made to representatives of the USG;
    iii. information tending to suggest that the Prosecution has sought or received instructions from the USG regarding any aspect of the Taylor trial; and
    iv. a full explanation of the money provided by the USG to the Prosecution, including the amounts of money given and when; the purpose of the funds; how the funds were used; and who the OTP was accountable to in the distribution and use of the funds.

23. The Defence further requests that the issue be considered on an expedited basis, given the advanced stage of the proceedings.

Respectfully Submitted,

Courtenay Griffiths, Q.C.

SUBJECT: PRO-TAYLOR ELEMENTS STILL A FORCE TO BE RECKONED WITH Classified By: Ambassador Linda Thomas-Greenfield for Reasons 1.4 (b) a nd (d).

Summary

A US ambassador warns that a cash shortfall could jeopardise the case against the former Sierra Leone president, stirring up old resentments in Sierra Leone and Liberia. Key passages highlighted in yellow.

1. (C) Summary: The recent remarks by Special Court for Sierra Leone prosecutor Stephen Rapp suggesting Charles Taylor may go free because of budgetary reasons caused alarm within the GOL and has emboldened Taylor supporters. Communication inside the Taylor camp remains intact, and those in leadership roles continue to be active and unrepentant. Should Taylor be acquitted in The Hague or given a light sentence, his return to Liberia could tip the balance in a fragile peace. The international community must consider steps should Taylor not be sent to prison for a long time. We should look at the possibility of trying Taylor in the United States. End Summary.

RAPP'S COMMENTS RAISE CONCERN WITHIN THE GOL

2. (C) Chief Prosecutor Stephen Rapp's ill considered announcement in the press February 24 that Charles Taylor may walk free because of a supposed budget shortfall for the Special Court for Sierra Leone, where Taylor is presently on trial, made headlines in the local press, and raised anxiety here about Taylor's imminent return. The GOL was alarmed enough that President Sirleaf called Ambassador on February 28 to raise her concerns. Sirleaf pointed out that Liberia's stability remains fragile, and such remarks reverberated throughout the country, as people are still traumatized by Taylor and the war.

3. (C) The press accounts out of The Hague have also emboldened the pro-Taylor factions here, including his extended family members, financiers and National Patriotic Party (NPP) loyalists, raising their hopes that Taylor might be acquitted soon. Despite their rhetoric about "moving on," they have thus far refused to appear before the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) to account for their activities, and those on the UN Sanctions lists continue to request delisting on the basis they have done nothing wrong rather than demonstrating what they have done to provide restitution for their activities.

GOL TREADING CAREFULLY WITH TAYLOR FACTIONS

4. (C) The government itself is caught in the middle. There is quite little the GOL can do legally to arrest, prosecute or freeze assets of those who were close to Taylor, even if the political will were there, which remains an open question. The TRC has recommended a domestic war crimes court be set up, but under statute an Independent National Commission on Human Rights (INHCR) would implement the recommendation, and the Legislature (some of whom had close ties to Taylor) has thus far failed to establish the INCHR. The Legislature has also refused to pass any law that would allow the GOL to freeze assets of those on the UN sanctions list, and the Supreme Court has ruled that any confiscation of property can be done only after a trial.

5. (C) The Accra Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) of August 2003 that ended the 14-year civil war, did not require the NPP to disband and in fact permitted the NPP to participate in the transitional government and in the 2005 elections. The NPP now holds seven seats in the Legislature (which may be one reason the legislation is being blocked). As well, none of Taylor's properties have been seized by the government and they remain in good shape and remarkably free of squatters, as no one dares to take the risk of retribution.

COMMUNICATIONS AMONG TAYLOR SUPPORTERS REMAIN STRONG

6. (C) The pro-Taylor forces still have the ability to organize themselves. An NPP rally in December 2008 gathered a sizeable crowd, and Taylor supporters in June 2008 succeeded in preventing FBI investigators from entering Taylor's residence "White Flower" to obtain evidence for the Chucky Taylor trial in Florida. The most recent example was their effort on March 7 to disrupt the International Women's Colloquium. Taylor remains popular within many rural communities, especially in Bong, Lofa and Nimba counties, and is seen as someone who was able to unite Liberia's different ethnic groups. We also suspect there is some sympathy within the Americo-Liberian population who saw him as their deliverance from their losses following the 1979 coup. While we do not suggest they would want Taylor to return, we are sure that they do no want too many rocks to be turned over.

7. (C) Although we do not have any direct evidence to support the belief that pro-Taylor factions are behind much of the armed robbery on the premise that crime will keep the government weak and the country unstable, the GOL is certainly convinced of this, and has taken steps to counteract the threat. The most recent act was to put Taylor-era head of police Paul Mulbah into the LNP as an "advisor" that some accuse (and the government denies) was in order to placate the Taylor people in advance of the March 7-8 International Women's Colloquium. That the Taylor crowd can still motivate such a reaction in the government is a testament to their influence.

8. (C) Lines of communications within Taylor's faction, the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL) remain intact. To be sure, the disarmament of the factions following the CPA has been extremely successful, and we have thus far been unable to confirm the existence of any large weapons caches, despite the persistent rumors. But the reintegration of the ex-combatants is far from complete. Former NPFL commanders Roland Duo (the only senior Taylor supporter to have testified before the TRC), Christopher "General Mosquito" Vambo and Melvin Sogbandi (none of whom are on the sanctions lists) remain in contact with the ex-combatants, and would have the capability to organize an uprising or even criminal activity.

9. (C) Certainly, the same is true for the other factions, the Liberians United for Reconciliation and Democracy (LURD) and the Movement for Democracy in Liberia (MODEL). While apparently unarmed and not active in Liberia, we continue to receive reports that LURD is recruiting ex-combatants for militias in Guinea and MODEL is doing the same for Cote d'Ivoire.

THREAT OF TAYLOR'S RETURN ADVANCES THEIR CAUSE

10. (C) XXXXXXXXXXXX

11. (C) The threat of a return of Taylor strengthens their hand and for now they see no need to give in at all. However, if Taylor is put away for a long time, the government may feel a bit bolder in recovering assets and bringing Taylor backers who committed war crimes to justice.

12. (C) The international community has just a few tools to pressure the Taylor people into accepting the new reality. The UN sanctions appear to have the intended effect of keeping them somewhat marginalized and fearful of further attempts to strip them of their ill-gotten gains. However, we have regularly heard of travel outside Liberia of those on the travel ban list without prior approval.

NEXT STEPS FOR THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY

13. (C) However, the best we can do for Liberia is to see to it that Taylor is put away for a long time and we cannot delay for the results of the present trial to consider next steps. All legal options should be studied to ensure that Taylor cannot return to destabilize Liberia. Building a case in the United States against Taylor for financial crimes such as wire fraud would probably be the best route. There may be other options, such as applying the new law criminalizing the use of child soldiers or terrorism statutes.

14. (C) The peace in Liberia remains fragile, and its only guarantee is the robust and adaptable UNMIL presence. The GOL does not have the ability to quell violence, monitor its borders or operate independently to fight crime. A free Taylor could tip the balance in the wrong direction. THOMAS-GREENFIELD

US officials wonder why a special court judge might be interested in slowing down the prosecution case against the former Sierra Leonean president. Key passages highlighted in yellow.

-- SUMMARY: SCSL MEETS A KEY MILESTONE, BUT FACES UNCERTAINTY IN TERMS OF TIMING, FINANCES, AND COMPLETION ISSUES --

1. (SBU) On February 27, 2009, the Special Court for Sierra Leone (SCSL or Court) took another step toward completing its work when the Prosecution rested its case against former Liberian President Charles Taylor -- the last SCSL case at the trial stage. The Court could potentially complete its work before the end of 2010. A number of open issues, however, may affect timing, including the start date and length of the Taylor Defense case. Timing may be particularly important given expected funding shortfalls and the possible loss of courtroom space this coming September. Additionally, the current Registrar, Herman von Hebel (Netherlands), has resigned effective June 1, and his successor will inherit a host of difficult issues and a complex transition during the final days of the Court,s operations.

--BACKGROUND: A SMALL COURT WITH SEVERAL FIRSTS --

2. (U) A Trailblazing Court. The hybrid SCSL, created in 2002 through an agreement between the United Nations and the Government of Sierra Leone (GOSL) and funded entirely by voluntary contributions, has jurisdiction over those who bear the greatest responsibility for serious violations of international humanitarian law and Sierra Leonean law committed in Sierra Leone after November 30, 1996. Although established almost ten years after the creation of the International Criminal Tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda (ICTY and ICTR), the SCSL is poised to complete its work before these tribunals. The SCSL has also been the first internationalized criminal tribunal to: 1) issue an indictment for an African head of state (Liberian President Charles Taylor); 2) enter convictions for the crime of recruiting and using child soldiers; and 3) successfully prosecute forced marriage as a crime against humanity and intentional attacks on U.N. peacekeepers as a serious violation of international humanitarian law.

3. (U) Last Trial Standing. In 2003, the SCSL indicted Charles Taylor, the leader of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia from 1989 to 1997 and the President of Liberia from 1997 until the 2003 indictment. The indictment alleges Taylor,s deep involvement in the Sierra Leone conflict including his role in arming, training and acting in concert with the RUF and in trafficking the Sierra Leonean &blood diamonds8 that fueled and financed the fighting. The SCSL charged Taylor with eleven counts, including, inter alia, terrorizing the civilian population, unlawful killings, sexual violence, abductions and forced labor, and conscripting child soldiers.

))TIMING: TAYLOR TRIAL'S LINK TO CLOSING SCSL))

4. (SBU) Status of Trial. As the only ongoing SCSL trial, the Taylor trial is the linchpin to the SCSL completing its work. From April 6-9, 2009, the Court held the &judgment of acquittal8 hearing, with Defense arguing for acquittal on all of the charges. (Comment: In the &judgment of acquittal8 hearing, the Court considers whether Prosecution Qacquittal8 hearing, the Court considers whether Prosecution has presented any evidence that could sustain conviction on the charges, acquitting only if Prosecution has presented &no evidence8 to sustain the charge. End Comment.) In this hearing, Defense acknowledged that crimes had occurred in Sierra Leone but argued that the Prosecution had failed to 1) present evidence linking Taylor to those crimes and 2)establish that Taylor had been part of a joint criminal enterprise (JCE) because, if a JCE existed, it existed before November 30, 1996, the date at which the temporal jurisdiction of the SCSL begins. The Prosecution responded to these arguments by summarizing Taylor,s responsibility for the crimes and pointing to Taylor,s liability for JCE crimes committed after November 30, 1996, even if the planning of the JCE took place before that date. (Comment: The Court will most likely not issue its Rule 98 decision in April, especially since the Judges may recess through May. An acquittal does not seem likely. End Comment.)

5. (SBU) Next Up: Defense Case. A contact in the Registry has indicated that Defense will likely request three months to prepare for trial and four months to present its case. If the Court grants this request, the Defense case may start at the end of August. However, the same Registry source predicts that the Trial Chamber may order Defense to begin its case as early as June, working through July and August with a possible recess in September. One wild-card factor, however, is the Defense,s pending interlocutory appeal arguing that the Prosecution failed to properly plead the JCE theory of liability. The Trial Chamber may not schedule the Defense case before the appeals decision so the Defense knows which mode(s) of liability it must defend against. (Comment: Currently, the Registry,s budget milestone document projects an October 31 trial termination date, a March 2010 judgment, sentencing in April 2010, and the conclusion of appeals in October 2010. If, however, the Defense case starts in August, the timeline could be pushed back by approximately two months. End Comment.)

6. (U) Spill-Over Timing Effects. A delay in the timing for the Taylor trial may create additional challenges. First, the International Criminal Court (ICC), the location of the Taylor trial, has informed the SCSL that it will need its second courtroom as of September 2009. (The ICC scheduled its second trial to start September 24th, and will likely need the courtroom prior to September 24th for pre-trial work). Back-up options explored by the Registry include finding other space or working during gaps in the ICC schedule. Second, according to Registry sources, each additional month of trial time costs approximately one million dollars.

))THE JUDICIAL FACTOR))

7. (C) Judges Slowing Things Down? Further muddying timing predictions, Court employees have intimated that the Trial Chamber could work more expeditiously. The Taylor Chamber consists of three judges who take turns presiding: Justice Richard Lussick (Samoa), Justice Teresa Doherty (Northern Ireland) and Justice Julia Sebutinde (Uganda), along with an alternate judge, Justice El Hadji Malick Sow (Senegal). A couple of Court employees have grumbled that when the last Prosecution witness testified on January 30, 2009, the Court still had 11 outstanding motions, some over a year old. Additionally, one Chamber contact believes that the Trial Chamber could have accelerated the Court,s work by excluding extraneous material and arguments. Moreover, contacts in Prosecution and Registry speculate that Justice Sebutinde may have a timing agenda. They think she, as the only African judge, wants to hold the gavel as presiding judge when the Trial Chamber announces the Taylor judgment. Reportedly, her next stint as presiding judge begins in January.

8. (SBU) Expedited Appeals? The Appeals Chamber, with one empty seat, consists of President Renate Winter (Austria); Vice President Jon Kamanda (Sierra Leone); Justice George Gelaga King (Sierra Leone); and Justice Emmanuel Ayoola (Nigeria). President Winter reportedly has indicated that the Appeals Chamber intends to expedite any Taylor trial Qthe Appeals Chamber intends to expedite any Taylor trial appeals. Up for election in May, Winter may not, however, preside over the Appeals Chamber for any Taylor trial appeals, reportedly she will step down after the RUF appeal if she is not re-elected President.

))DEFENSE STRATEGY: WHO ME?))

finds itself in the midst of identifying and proofing witnesses. All signs indicate that Taylor himself will take the stand as their first witness possibly staying in the box for 6 to 8 weeks, and based on Defense,s actions to date, the Defense team will likely argue that although the crimes may have occurred, Taylor has no link to the crimes.

))AN IMMINENT BUDGET CRISIS))

10. (C) Funding Shortfall. The Registry fears that the Court will run out of money as early as next month, although an expected Canadian USD 6 million contribution would keep the Court financed until early July 2009. In a marathon campaign, Registrar Von Hebel attended 250 meetings in 15 months to drum up funds from potential donor countries, but with, according Von Hebel, little traction, due to donor fatigue, the difficult economic situation, and contributions going to other tribunals (e.g., the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (STL) or the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia). Von Hebel wants to make another run at the Arab countries of Saudi Arabia, Qatar, Kuwait, and the United Arab Emirates. He also believes that a letter from U.N. Secretary General Ban Ki-Moon asking countries to contribute might help open wallets. According to Von Hebel, when Ban sent out a similar letter in 2007, a number of countries made first-time donations. In addition, a couple of traditional donor countries have advised him they may need a similar letter in order to donate this year.

11. (U) Cost-cutting Measures: Concerned about the looming financial crisis, the Registry has undertaken cost-saving measures, reducing staffing costs by downsizing, incorporating liquidation clauses in contracts, and encouraging The Hague staff to use leave during the break between prosecution and defense cases. The Registry also plans to hand over the Freetown facilities to the GOSL in July 2010, reserving some space for its own continued use. Finally, Registry may look to consolidate the Appeals Chamber and the Taylor trial operations in The Hague, after the Appeals Chamber finalizes the RUF appeal.

12. (SBU) Help from Washington. The Registry may also seek USG,s assistance on financial issues. First, it may press the USG not to reduce its FY2009 contribution by 2 million, but to stay at last year,s level of 9 million USD. (Comment: The extra sum would not solve the Court,s immediate financial problem, since the USG generally contributes in the fall. End Comment.) Second, the Registry may ask for USG political support in the form of demarches to Arab countries, impressing upon the targeted Arab countries the critical nature of the SCSL,s financial situation.

))COMPLETION HICCUPS AND ISSUES))

13. (SBU) Registrar Musical Chairs. On April 8, 2009, the Court announced Registrar von Hebel,s resignation, effective as of June 1, 2009. Von Hebel will assume the Deputy Registrar position at the newly established Hague-based STL. (According to Embassy contacts, STL offered Von Hebel the position at the insistence of and to placate the Dutch, who believe the Dutch ICTY Registrar had been treated unfairly when the ICTY President unexpectedly declined to renew his contract). Given that the STL Registrar Robin Vincent (U.K.) recently resigned, Von Hebel may eventually step into Vincent,s shoes. Von Hebel is also tying up as many SCSL loose ends as possible, including signing a sentence-enforcement agreement with the Government of Rwanda. In terms of a successor Registrar, a Registry contact believes that the current Deputy Registrar Binta Mansaray (Sierra Leone) will surface as a strong candidate.

))COMMENT: RESIDUAL ISSUES))

14. (SBU) A Larger Role for The Hague? Although currently headquartered in Freetown, Sierra Leone, the Registry has toyed with the possibility of locating any Residual Mechanism Qtoyed with the possibility of locating any Residual Mechanism) or parts thereof) in The Hague. For instance, Von Hebel believes that the Court may need to move its archives out of Sierra Leone in order to properly maintain and secure them. The City of The Hague has indicated its willingness to provide archiving facilities in connection with the ICTY,s closure. Some have also suggested combining some or part of the SCSL,s residual functions with those of The Hague-based ICTY and the Arusha-based ICTR. A combined residual mechanism might prevent duplication, but it would also face significant hurdles, given SCSL,s structural differences, e.g. funding, oversight mechanism and applicable legal framework. Furthermore, GOSL desires will be key, since a joint GOSL-UN agreement created the Court.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Defence hereby seeks leave to recall four Prosecution witnesses regarding the issue of relocation. The Defence also seeks an order from the Trial Chamber to hear evidence from Saleem Vahidy, Chief of the Witnesses and Victims Section ("WVS"), pursuant to Rule 85(A). In light of new and compelling information, the Defence requests the Trial Chamber allow the Defence to reopen cross-examination of four Prosecution witnesses in relation to the circumstances of their recent or impending relocations and any impact any promise of relocation may have had on the truthfulness of their prior testimony. The Trial Chamber should order Mr. Vahidy to give evidence on this issue, as he is the officer of the court who has the best information pertaining to the circumstances surrounding the relocation of Prosecution witnesses.
2. The extent of the Prosecution's use of relocation (absent any genuine security risk) as an inducement for witness cooperation and/ or testimony and WVS's complicity in that process is becoming increasingly clear. The Defence believes that there was and is no genuine security risk or threat to these witnesses necessitating their relocation.[1] The Defence submits that the Prosecution promised witnesses that they would be relocated after their testimony and WVS and the Prosecution purposefully delayed relocating those witnesses until recently, the assumption being that the Defence would be unable to raise the issue at trial. Furthermore, the Registry is shielding the Prosecution by failing to disclose exculpatory material regarding relocation, despite repeated requests from the Defence.
3. Information pertaining to the relocation of these witnesses was not available to the Defence when they were cross-examined during the Prosecution's case, and the Registry has subsequently refused to disclose the information. The Defence has made the issue of improper inducements to prosecution witnesses, including unwarranted promises of relocation, a mainstay of cross-examination and argumentation. Consequently, this motif bears further interrogation in light of new evidence and unfolding circumstances.
4. The Defence proposes that the following Prosecution witnesses be recalled: TF1-371, TF1-375, Abu Keita (TF1-276) and Varmuyan Sherif (TF1-406). The Defence anticipates that additional cross-examination would take no more than two hours for each witness and not more than a full day would be required for the examination of Mr. Vahidy. The entire exercise could thus be concluded in less than a week (including any possible "re-examination" by the Prosecution).

5. Consequently, and in the interests of justice in the face of these compelling circumstances, the Defence requests that these Prosecution witnesses be recalled for further cross-examination and that Mr. Vahidy be ordered to appear and give evidence before the Trial Chamber.

II. Factual Background

6. TF1-371, TF1-375, Abu Keita and Varmuyan Sherif are all insider, linkage witnesses who testified during the Prosecution's case. Some of them were cross-examined regarding payments made to them by the Prosecution and, to some extent, expenses covered on their behalf by WVS.[2] In recent months, and as detailed in Confidential Annex J, the Defence has been informed by its investigator that these witnesses have been relocated post-testimony.

7. A summary of expenses relating to testifying prosecution witnesses was disclosed to the Defence by WVS in advance of each witness's testimony during the Prosecution's case. This was done as a matter of routine by WVS. However, and since closure of the Prosecution's case, the Defence has diligently sought information from WVS regarding any post-testimonial benefits provided by WVS to Prosecution witnesses to no avail. More specifically, Lead Defence Counsel wrote Mr. Vahidy on 26 January 2009, requesting disclosure (on a continuing basis) of WVS witness expenditures relating to, inter alia, school fees, relocation/ rent, food, money disbursed, health bills, mobile phones, etc., as well as an explanation thereof.[3] Given that there was no response by Mr. Vahidy, the Defence assumed that no relevant WVS expenditures had been made in those regards.

8. On 4 October 2010[4] and 26 October 2010[5], the Defence followed-up on its initial request to WVS. Mr. Vahidy then spoke informally to the Defence and stated that he could not and would not provide the requested information. The Defence subsequently sent Mr. Vahidy an email recapping the conversation and attempting to clarify and narrow down its request.[6] No response was received from Mr. Vahidy for the third time.

9. On 12 November 2010, the Defence brought the request and Mr. Vahidy's lack of response to the attention to the Registrar.[7] The Registrar responded on 17 November 2010 but stated that the Registry did not have a duty to disclose exculpatory information.[8] A further attempt by the Defence to clarify its request[9] was also rejected by the Registrar.[10] It is this set of circumstances, the interests of justice, and the fair trial rights of the Accused that impels this motion.

III. LEGAL PRINCIPLES

Recalling Witnesses

9. Rule 90(F)(i) of the Special Court Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules") mandates that the Trial Chamber exercise control over the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence so as to make them "effective for the ascertainment of the truth."

10. Rule 85(A) sets out the general order for the presentation of evidence, stating that after evidence for the Prosecution, the Defence, and any of the Prosecution in rebuttal,[11] there may be evidence as ordered by the Trial Chamber.

11. While the Rules do not contain a specific provision for recalling a witness, the criteria has been previously been determined by this Trial Chamber. Leave to recall a witness should only be granted in the most compelling of circumstances.[12] The moving party must show good cause as to why the witnesses must be recalled, demonstrating "a substantial reason amounting in law to a legal excuse for failing to perform a required act."[13]

12. When determining whether to recall a witness, a Chamber of the Special Court must consider: (i) The purpose of the proposed testimony; (ii) The party's justification for not offering the evidence when the witness originally testified; (iii) The right of the accused to be tried without undue delay; and (iv) Judicial economy.[14]

Interim and Ancillary Orders

13. The Trial Chamber has the general power to make any order necessary for the conduct of trial, pursuant to Rule 54.

Relocating Witnesses

14. Article 16(4)[15] of the Statute and Rule 34(A)[16] outline the functions of WVS, which operates under the authority of the Registry. The provisions envision that WVS will, inter alia, provide for the security of witnesses in consultation with the parties.

15. The possibility of the relocation of witnesses by WVS is arguably provided for by Article 16(4) and Rule 34(A)(ii) as part of a security arrangement or a long-term plan for a witness' protection and support. The Prosecution does not have the power to relocate witnesses (emphasis added). Rule 39(ii) only allows the Prosecution, as part of its investigative powers, to "take all measures deemed necessary [arguably including relocation] for the purpose of the investigation, including the taking of any special measures to provide for the safety, the support and the assistance of potential witnesses and sources" (emphasis added).

IV. SUBMISSIONS

This Request Does Not Constitute Reopening the Defence Case

16. The witnesses the Defence seeks to recall are Prosecution witnesses and the Defence merely wishes to cross-examine them on matters that have only come to light after they were first made available for cross-examination; accordingly, this does not constitute the re-opening of [14] AFRC Recall Decision, para. 15.

[15] Article 16(4) states "The Registry shall set up a Victims and Witnesses Unit within the Registry. This Unit shall provide, in consultation with the Office of the Prosecutor, protective measures and security arrangements, counseling and other appropriate assistance for witnesses, victims who appear before the Court and others who are at risk on account of their testimony given by such witnesses. [...]".

[16] Rule 34(A) states "[...] in consultation with the Office of the Prosecutor, for Prosecution witnesses, and the Defence Office, for Defence witnesses, shall, amongst other things, perform the following functions with respect to all witnesses, victims who appear before the Special Court and others who are at risk on account of testimony given by such witnesses, in accordance with their particular needs and circumstances:

i. Recommend to the Special Court the adoption of protective and security measures for them;
ii. Provide them with adequate protective measures and security arrangements and develop long- and short-term plans for their protection and support; the Defence case.[17] A similar circumstance arose at the ICTY after the close of the Accused Gvero's case when new information came to light, necessitating that the Accused file a motion to recall Prosecution witnesses for cross-examination on issues relating to the new information, and a further filing by the Accused requesting the re-opening of the Defence case to call new witnesses on issues relating to the new information.[18] Accordingly, the Defence at bar only seeks to recall the relevant Prosecution witnesses.

17. The Defence's request that Mr. Vahidy be ordered to appear and testify before the Trial Chamber, pursuant to Rule 85(A)(iv), is being made at the appropriate stage of the proceedings -- i.e., after the conclusion of the Defence case and/ or any Prosecution rebuttal evidence. The request naturally and necessarily flows from the request to recall the Prosecution witnesses because Mr. Vahidy's evidence would complement theirs and is necessary for completion and the ascertainment of the truth. The Defence intends to cross-examine Mr. Vahidy and its request that he be called does not transform him into a Defence witness, bearing in mind the provisions of Rule 85(A)(iv).[19]

Purpose of the Proposed Testimony

18. The purpose of the proposed testimony is to enable the Trial Chamber to more fully assess the credibility of these insider linkage witnesses, especially how the promise of relocation impacted the truthfulness of their testimony. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber would be better able to understand the Prosecution's modus operandi in relation to the recruitment and inducement of witnesses. Besides the attached declaration which suggests that these witnesses were promised relocation at a time when they faced no genuine security risk and

The Defence notes that the Motion was subsequently denied, but for substantive rather than procedural reasons, Prosecutor v. Popovic et al, IT-05-88-T, Partial Decision on Gvero Motion Seeking the Recall of Certain Prosecution Witnesses and the Reopening of the Case, 15 June 2009.

[19] The Defence wishes to be forthright from the start with its request that Mr. Vahidy be called to testify and be cross-examined. This is to be compared with, for example, the approach taken by the Prosecution in regard to Naomi Campbell, whom the Prosecution called as a prosecution witness during the re-opening of the Prosecution's case and then attempted to cross-examine her and classify her as "Court" witness. See Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T, Trial Transcript, 5 August 2010, p. 45512-4.

prior to testifying for the Prosecution, the affidavits of several potential Prosecution witnesses who were promised the same are worth noting at this juncture.[20]

19. The Defence appreciates that the Trial Chamber has previously determined that there is "nothing inappropriate in providing security measures to a potential witness where threats to his or her security exist"[21] and that "it is standard procedure to assure the witnesses that any fears will be taken seriously."[22] Likewise, the Defence is aware that relocation of a potential witness can properly be undertaken by the Prosecution pursuant to Rule 39(ii) and that relocation of a witness who is going to or has testified can properly be undertaken by WVS pursuant to Rule 34. However, the Defence strenuously rejects the proposition that the Prosecution can promise relocation (either by itself or by WVS) in exchange for a witness' testimony, where no proper security risk assessment has been done to establish that there is a genuine threat to the witness.[23] The Defence submits that the Trial Chamber must hear evidence in relation to such inducements because it impacts the credibility of at least these four Prosecution witnesses whose evidence is crucial to the credibility of the linkage evidence in this case.

20. Recalling a witness in relation to new evidence intended to impeach his credibility is an established practice.[24] Specifically, it is proper to recall a Prosecution witness for further cross-examination in regard to payments or inducements to him because the issue is "relevant and probative for assessing that witness's credibility".[25] In Prosecutor v. Karemera et al., the Trial Chamber held that a Prosecution witness could be recalled and cross-examined about payments made to him "by the Tribunal" which were only disclosed to the Defence after his testimony had concluded, even where the Defence had generally cross-examined him on the basis of payments before.[26] Likewise, and notwithstanding that the Defence has generally cross-examined some of these four Prosecution witnesses in relation to inducements and payments, the Defence should be allowed to conduct further cross-examination on this point, since the issue of relocation has come to the attention of the Defence only after the conclusion of their evidence.

21. In Karemera et al., an ICTR Trial Chamber determined that "[i]nformation concerning the nature of the benefits provided by the witness protection program and their duration could be relevant to the determination of the credibility of the Witness."[27] In Prosecutor v. Martic, an ICTY Trial Chamber found that witnesses' hope of relocation through the assistance of the Prosecution resulted in there being "significant doubt" as to the witnesses' credibility.[28] Thus, the question of inducements vis-à-vis the truthfulness of the witnesses' testimony has significant probative value and should be a matter on the record.

Good Cause: Relocation of these Witness Occurred after their Respective Testimony

22. The ICTR has defined the "good cause" which the Defence needs to demonstrate as being "a substantial reason amounting in law to a legal excuse for failing to perform a required act."[29] The Defence submits that "good cause" exists to recall the witnesses and to call Mr. Vahidy, given that the Defence is in possession of new information pertaining to the recent relocation of these witnesses and could not have obtained it before. Moreover, the Registry's intransigence has undoubtedly left the Defence with little choice than seeking the recall of these witnesses and the testimony of Mr. Vahidy at this time. In Prosecutor v. Katanga and Ngudjolo, an ICC Trial Chamber has ordered that a representative of the Registry appear in court and provide information regarding the amount of money spent on and for the protection of witnesses and intermediaries.[30] The Defence submits it is appropriate for the Trial Chamber to order the Registry to divulge such information to the parties and the Chamber at bar.

The Accused Does Not Consider Recalling these Witnesses Undue Delay

23. There is no concern on the part of the Accused regarding the time that further cross-examination of these witnesses will take. Indeed, the Accused is anxious that their testimony be heard in the interests of the truth. As this Trial Chamber logically noted in the AFRC Recall Decision, since it is the Defence that is making the application, "it must be taken to have accepted any delay that could result from such an application".[31]

Judicial Economy is a Secondary Concern given the Compelling Circumstances

24. The ICTR has previously determined that a Trial Chamber should consider whether the probative value of further cross-examination outweighs the prejudice caused by delaying the proceedings. The Defence does not wish to deplete the admittedly limited financial resources that are available to the Special Court[32] by bringing witnesses back to The Hague for further cross-examination. However, the testimony which the witnesses are likely to give is of significant probative value and is not cumulative in nature, and thus such expenditure must be made in this instance.[33]

25. Bearing in mind the need for judicial economy, the Defence intends to limit the scope of the additional cross-examination to the issue of relocation and any matters arising therefrom. Thus the estimated week of additional court time is not so long such that considerations of judicial economy should force the Trial Chamber to overlook an otherwise serious issue.

No Parties should be Permitted to Contact the Witnesses Prior to Cross-Examination

26. The Defence requests as an interim order that the Trial Chamber prohibit the parties and Mr. Vahidy from communicating (directly or indirectly) with the witnesses regarding the substance of their anticipated testimony upon being recalled. The Defence appreciates that WVS as a unit will have to liaise with the recall witnesses in order to process their travel logistics, etc. However, the Defence requests that the Trial Chamber specifically order that Mr. Vahidy not be allowed to communicate or interact with the recalled witnesses at all, as he has a clear conflict of interest. This is a reasonable, practical, and necessary request, given the alleged malfeasance of the implicated parties. The Trial Chamber has the general power to issue such orders, pursuant to Rule 54. Furthermore, such no-contact orders have previously been made at the ICTR and ICTY for witnesses who are recalled.[34]

27. The Defence requests the Trial Chamber urgently order that the no-contact provision be put in place as an interim measure, pending the final outcome of the decision on this motion, in order to preserve the integrity of the witness' testimony.

V. Conclusion & Relief Requested

28. For all of the foregoing reasons, it is in the interests of justice that the Trial Chamber recall the four prosecution witnesses for further cross-examination on the limited issue of relocation and any issues arising, as well as call Mr. Vahidy to testify, given that his testimony would provide context to the circumstances surrounding the witness relocations. Refusal by the Trial Chamber to hear evidence relating to relocation of these witnesses would be a clear violation of the Accused's right to a fair trial under Article 17 of the Statute. The Defence requests that the Trial Chamber urgently issue an interim order that the parties and Mr. Vahidy not contact any of the recall witnesses before they appear in court, given the contentious nature of their anticipated evidence and the alleged malfeasance of one of the parties.

Mr. Saleem Vahidy
Chief, Witness and Victims Section

RE: Post-Testimony WVS Witness Payments and Benefits

Dear Saleem,

The Defence would like to know if any post-testimony benefits (money, food, relocation/rent, school fees, health bills, top up cards, mobile phones, etc) have been given to any of the witnesses (or their families) who have already testified in Prosecutor v. Taylor at The Hague. The Defence would further like to know if any post-testimony benefits have been promised to past and/or future witnesses.

As the Defence believe the issue of witness payments and benefits affects the credibility of the witnesses' evidence, and thus has a bearing on the Accused's right to a fair trial under Article 17 of the Special Court Statute, the Defence and the Court should have access to this information, which falls under Rule 68.

If any such post-testimony payments or benefits have been or will be given to witnesses by the Witness and Victims Section, the Defence request a copy of the date, amount, and purpose of the payment or benefit given. The Defence request this Rule 68 information on a continuing basis.

We appreciate the cooperation WVS showed throughout the past year as regards the disclosure of witness expenses for upcoming witnesses, and we look forward to your continued cooperation in regard to disclosure of post-testimony witness expenses.

Kind Regards,

Courtenay Griffiths, QC

Dear Saleem --

You will remember that in January 2009 (letter attached) we asked for an accounting of expenses paid to or on behalf of Prosecution witnesses by WVS. Could you please send us an update account in this regard?

Also, could you tell us two specifics:

-- whether WVS has, or is in the process of relocating Abu Keita?
-- whether WVS has rented or bought a house for Varmuyan Sheriff in Kenema or thereabout?

Courtenay has asked me to obtain these records as a matter of urgency, as they are related to various issues before the Trial Chamber.

Kind Regards,
Logan

Dear Saleem --

Following our conversation, can I now make our request more specific in order to assist you to comply with it.

Our primary concern is in relation to linkage witnesses. I will send you a list of their TF1 numbers and names in a separate email. Thus, we are talking about records of approximately 40 witnesses of the 94 witnesses that traveled to give live evidence.

We are not asking for records of money WVS spent in terms of DSA or travel expenses to bring these witnesses to The Hague. We are only asking for money spent on behalf of or given to witnesses after they testified, such as: school fees, medical bills, job packages, rent/housing allowances, security allowances and relocation, etc. We also need to know who requested that such money be paid or such benefits be provided.

We are not asking for disclosure of confidential information such as the name of the country where a person was relocated to, or the type of medical ailment for which a person needed treatment.

It is our position that you have a duty to disclose this information as it is potentially exculpatory.

You have just indicated to Terry and I that by tonight you could at least tell us whether you are willing to provide the requested information, and so we await your response. If we do not hear anything from you by the end of the day tomorrow (Thursday) we will assume you are not willing to comply with our request. If you are willing to comply, could you please indicate a date by which we could expect the requested information.

Best,
Logan

RE: Disclosure of Post-Testimony Benefits and Relocation Facilitated by the Registry's Witnesses and Victims Section in respect of Prosecution Witnesses

Dear Ms Mansaray,

Since January 2009, the Defence has requested from Saleem Vahidy, Chief of WVS, records of payments and benefits and relocation packages provided to Prosecution witnesses upon conclusion of their testimony.[1] No information has been forthcoming. The Defence has recently followed-up on this request in person and via email, and Mr Vahidy has stated that he will not provide the requested information.[2] Mr Munyard brought the issue to the attention of the Deputy-Registrar Fidelma Donlon during her recent mission to The Hague Sub-Office, but still the Defence has not received the requested information.

I bring this to your attention at this point, because if the issue is not soon and satisfactorily resolved, I will have no choice but to ask the Trial Chamber to compel disclosure. The Witnesses and Victims Section is set up by the Registry pursuant to Rule 34(A) and the Registry generally has an obligation to assist the parties in the performance of their functions pursuant to Rule 33(A). Part of the Defence's functions is to test the credibility of Prosecution witnesses, whose credibility can be affected by the provision of benefits which go beyond those reasonably required for their maintenance.

Could you please indicate if and when the requested material will be provided to the Defence.

Re: Defence Request for Disclosure of Post-Testimony Benefits and Relocation Facilitated by the Registry's Witnesses and Victims Section (WVS) in respect of Prosecution Witnesses

Dear Mr. Griffiths,

I am in receipt of your letter dated 12 November 2010 requesting records of alleged payments of post – testimony benefits and relocation packages provided to Prosecution witnesses upon conclusion of their testimony together with accompanying enclosures.

With reference to Enclosure A – your letter addressed to the Chief of the Witness and Victims Section dated 26 January 2009 – there are two important points I wish to clarify. Firstly, you refer to Rule 68 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence entitled "Disclosure of Exculpatory Evidence". However, Rule 68 explicitly regulates the disclosure obligations of the Prosecutor, not the Registrar, concerning exculpatory material. Therefore, please note that the Registrar is under no obligation to disclose information under Rule 68.

Secondly, the Witness and Victims Section does not pay what you refer to as "post-testimony benefits" to Defence or Prosecution witnesses. The payment of allowances to Defence and Prosecution witnesses is guided by the Court's obligation to ensure the welfare of the witnesses in accordance with Rule 34 (A) (ii) and (iii) and the applicable Practice Direction on Allowances for Witnesses and Expert Witnesses Testifying in The Hague of 8 June 2007.

Concerning your request for information regarding the relocation of Prosecution witnesses please note that the Registry as a matter of policy does not disclose information in relation to relocation measures and/or security arrangements set in place for Defence and Prosecution witnesses should such measures be deemed necessary following a threat assessment conducted by the Witness and Victims Section. As you know, the Registrar is obliged by Rule and Statute to provide long-and short-term plans for the protection and support of witnesses. Therefore, you will appreciate that the information related to the care and protection of both Defence and Prosecution witnesses by the Court, following threat assessments conducted by WVS, must be kept strictly confidential and restricted and, as such, will not be shared with the opposing party in order to avoid compromising the security of these witnesses.

Sincerely,

Binta Mansaray

Re: Registrar Response to Defence Reply to Letter Denying Defence Request for Disclosure of Post-Testimony Benefits and Relocation Facilitated by the Registry's Witnesses and Victims Section (WVS) in respect of Prosecution Witnesses

Dear Mr. Griffiths,

I am in receipt of your letter dated 22 November 2010 which elaborates on your 12 November 2010 request for information regarding the relocation of Prosecution witnesses and alleged payments of post-testimony benefits.

In my letter dated 17 November 2010 I advised you that payment of allowances to Defense and Prosecution witnesses is guided by the Court's obligation to ensure the welfare of witnesses in accordance with Article 16 of the Special Court Statute, Rule 34 (A) (ii) and (iii) and the applicable Practice Direction on Allowances for Witnesses and Expert Witnesses Testifying in The Hague of 8 June 2007.

With reference to your request for information regarding the relocation of Prosecution witnesses, as I indicated in my previous letter the Registry does not disclose information in relation to relocation measures and/or security arrangements set in place for Defense and Prosecution witnesses should measures be deemed necessary following a threat assessment conducted by the Witness and Victims Section. This includes all confidential information related to agreements with Governments, the continent of relocation and the timing of relocation. Under Rule 34 (A) (ii) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence the Witness and Victims Section is obliged to provide witnesses with "adequate protective measures and security arrangements and develop long- and short-term plans for their protection and support." To fulfill the obligations set forth in the Special Court's Statute and Rules of Procedure and Evidence and to ensure both the short- and long-term wellbeing of witnesses the Registry does not divulge information related to relocations.

Sincerely,

Binta Mansaray

The U.S. Provides $4.5 Million to Fund Special Court for Sierra Leone Trial of Charles Taylor

Office of the Spokesman
Washington, DC
November 23, 2010

On November 22 the Department of State released a $4.5 million grant for FY2011 to the Special Court of Sierra Leone. This grant demonstrates the U.S. commitment to ensuring that those most responsible for the atrocities committed during the war in Sierra Leone are brought to justice. This grant was expedited due to the financial crisis the Court is currently facing. By all calculations, the Court would have run out of money by early December which could have jeopardized the continuation of the Charles Taylor trial before the Court reached a verdict.

The Special Court for Sierra Leone was set up jointly by the Government of Sierra Leone and the United Nations. It is mandated to try those who bear the greatest responsibility for serious violations of international humanitarian law and Sierra Leonean law committed in the territory of Sierra Leone since November 30, 1996.

The SCSL indicted former Liberian President Charles Taylor and 12 others for war crimes and crimes against humanity in 2003, due to their involvement in and support of some of the worst atrocities in Sierra Leone's civil war. The trials of three former leaders of the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), of two members of the Civil Defense Forces (CDF) and three former leaders of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) have been completed, including appeals, leaving only the trial of Charles Taylor (two indictees died before the trial stage).

On June 16, 2006, the trial of Charles Taylor was transferred to The Hague because Taylor's continued presence and trial in Freetown represented an impediment to stability in the sub-region, a threat to the peace of Liberia and Sierra Leone, and a threat to international peace and security in the region. The trial of Charles Taylor is close to completion; the defense evidence concluded on November 12 and a trial judgment is due in mid-2011 with an appeal to be resolved by early 2012.

The trial of Charles Taylor is of enormous historical and legal significance as he is the first African head of state to be brought before an international tribunal to face charges for mass atrocities and gross violations of international humanitarian law. The Taylor prosecution delivers a strong message to all perpetrators of atrocities, including those in positions of power that they will be held accountable. It is imperative the international community prevents the Taylor trial from being suspended due to lack of financial resources, which is why the United States rushed its FY2011 contribution to the Court. We hope other donor states will follow our lead and find ways to financially support the Court until it has finished its mandate and justice has been served.

As a major donor to the Special Court, the United States serves on the Special Court's Management Committee in New York. To date, the United States has contributed $81,189,445 amount to the Special Court.

40. The Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution has disclosed all payments made to witnesses to the Defence and that the Defence cross-examined those witnesses during the course of the trial.[60] As outlined above,[61] the issue raised does not fall within the ambit of Rule 77 as such. It is instead a question of discretionary payments and a possible abuse of that discretion under Rule 39(ii) in that the payments might not have been necessary for the safety, support or assistance of the potential witnesses and sources. The alleged abuse of any discretion under Rule 39(ii) will however only be considered at the stage of final deliberations, taking into account the evidence adduced and the cross-examination of the witnesses in question. It is not a matter that falls within the ambit of Rule 77.

3) Allegations relating to DCT-192

41. The Defence submits that during the course of questioning DCT-192, Prosecution Investigator Gilbert Morissette physically assaulted DCT-192, a suspect and/or potential witness, in order to elicit his cooperation and confession.[62] It cites in support of this allegation a signed statement of Logan Hambrick, Legal Assistant to the Defence, and an excerpt of Prosecution interview transcripts with Witness DCT-192.[63]

42. In her statement, Hambrick declares that during a proofing session with DCT-192 in 2010, the latter told her that he was taken from the Pademba Road Prison in Freetown in November 2002 where he was being held on charges of subversion, to meet with Prosecution investigators; that during this meeting Morissette accused him of giving an answer that was not "good enough",[64] grew angry and slapped him in the presence of other investigators; that following this interview, the Prosecution continued to solicit his cooperation and suggested that they would not indict him if he would agree to testify against Chief Sam Hinga Norman; that upon his release from Pademba Road, a member of the Sierra Leonean Police who worked for the Prosecution, Tamba Mbeki, made sure he had "clearance" to continue his subversive activities as an operative for LURD; and that "ultimately, due to these benefits and threats, [he] felt pressured to cooperate with the Prosecution and provide them with information, even though he refused to testify against Norman."[65] The 10 pages of interview evidence against Taylor and that they would grant him protection, including relocation. He stated that he gave the Prosecution information on diamond for arms transactions between Taylor and the RUF as well as the political climate in the region, but that he could not vouch for "its entire accuracy." He also stated that he recommended other persons for the Prosecution to speak to.

110. The Trial Chamber notes that the allegations date back to 2005 and 2006. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that there was undue delay in bringing the allegations to the Trial Chamber's attention. The Trial Chamber has already dismissed the Prosecution's submission that DCT-097 was not one of its witnesses, and found that the "evidence strongly suggests that for all intents and purposes [DCT-097] was a potential Prosecution witness."[164] The Trial Chamber notes that the documentation of payments indicates amounts including $ 4,700 provided to the witness for a reason that was redacted by the Prosecution; $ 6,180 for lodging and expenses for the witness and his family as well as smaller instalment amounts ranging from hundreds to thousands of dollars for communication, transportation, meals, subsistence and expenses relating to a trip to Ghana.[165] The Trial Chamber finds that the Defence has not demonstrated how these allegations relate to charges of contempt. There is no indication that the payments were not necessary; rather, both DCT-097 and the Prosecution have provided legitimate reasons for these payments and the Trial Chamber finds that such payments fall within the discretion of the Prosecution pursuant to Rule 39(ii).

111. Further, the Trial Chamber finds that the evidence presented by the Defence does not suggest that the payments were made in exchange for DCT-097's testimony. Rather, the Trial Chamber finds that DCT-097 was exploiting the Prosecution to the point of giving them false information. Given these facts, the Trial Chamber finds no reason to believe that the Prosecution may have knowingly and wilfully interfered with the administration of justice. The Trial Chamber notes that DCT-097 received a total amount of $ 40,441.37 from the Prosecution.[166] The Prosecution explained that these were discretionary payments pursuant to Rule 39(ii). The Trial Chamber finds that the Defence has not demonstrated how this discretion pursuant to Rule 39(ii) has been abused or in which way the payments can be considered as exorbitant. Further, the Trial Chamber finds that the Defence has not demonstrated how the conduct of the Prosecution prevents the Defence from calling DCT-097. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the allegations are not sufficiently credible to provide it with reason to believe that a member of the Prosecution knowingly and wilfully interfered with the administration of justice in the present case.

112. In relation to the Defence allegations of other improper inducements, the Trial Chamber considers that the Prosecution has a legitimate interest in discussing matters relating to witness protection with potential witnesses, including matters relating to relocation. It finds that there nothing to give the Trial Chamber reason to believe that such protective measures were extended to DCT-097 with the intent of interfering with the administration of justice. The Trial Chamber notes further that DCT-097 was not called as a Prosecution witness in this case and that, therefore, there is no link between the allegedly improper inducements and the Prosecution's case against the Accused, nor DCT-097's failure to testify for the Defence. The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the allegations are not sufficiently credible to provide it with reason to believe that a member of the Prosecution knowingly and wilfully interfered with the administration of justice in the present case.

8) Allegations relating to DCT-032

a) Gifts of money

113. The Defence alleges that the Prosecution offered or made payments or inducements to witnesses, potential witness or sources in order to elicit their assistance, cooperation or evidence. It alleges that the Prosecution approached DCT-032 with gifts of money before ever having a substantive conversation with him.[167] The Defence cites in support of this allegation the affidavit of DCT-032.[168]

114. The Prosecution submits that DCT-032 acted as a source for the Prosecution, was never listed as a witness, never given a TFI number nor given protective measures.[169] The Prosecution also submits that DCT-032 is an admitted liar[170] and cites his affidavit wherein he admits to having made up a story relating to the death of Johnny Paul Koroma and knowingly showing a false grave to

TRIAL CHAMBER II ("Trial Chamber") of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court");

SEISED of the "Public with Confidential Annexes A-D Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Information Relating to DCT-032", filed on 24 September 2010" ("Motion");[1]

NOTING the "Prosecution Response to 'Public with Confidential Annexes A-D Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Information Relating to DCT-032'", filed on 1 October 2010 ("Response");[2]

NOTING ALSO the "Public with Confidential Annex A Defence Reply to Prosecution Response to Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Information Relating to DCT-032" filed on 5 October 2010 ("Reply");[3]

COGNISANT of the provisions of Article 17(4) of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Statute") and Rules 66, 68 and 73(A) of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules");

HEREBY DECIDES AS FOLLOWS, based solely on the written submissions of the parties, pursuant to Rule 73(A) of the Rules:

I. BACKGROUND

1. As part of its case against the Accused, the Prosecution has sought to adduce evidence of the actions of the Accused "after the Indictment period", in particular, that he systematically "murdered or eliminated persons who were in his inner circle and who were aware of the crimes perpetrated by the Accused" in order to prevent their turning against him and exposing him during his trial, which conduct the Prosecution maintains, is indicative of "consciousness of his criminal responsibility" for the crimes charged in the Indictment.[4] One such individual who the Prosecution, through its evidence, maintains was murdered by or on the orders of Mr. Taylor in order to silence him is Johnny Paul Koroma, the former head of the AFRC/RUF Junta in Sierra Leone. In this regard, a number of Prosecution witnesses including Moses Blah[5], a former Vice-President of Liberia, Joseph 'Zig Zag' Marzah (TFI-399)[6] and a protected Witness, TFI-375[7], testified regarding the circumstances of Johnny Paul Koroma's alleged murder. While none of the said witnesses actually witnessed the alleged murder or saw the body of Johnny Paul Koroma, they gave evidence implicating a number of alleged subordinates of the Accused in the murder of Johnny Paul Koroma and in particular, the individual referred to in this Motion as Witness DCT-032, as the person or one of the persons who actually carried out the killing in Foya, Liberia, in 2003, on orders of the Accused.

2. As part of its investigations into the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma, the Prosecution contacted and interviewed DCT-032 in May, June, July and October of 2008.[8] DCT-032 provided the Prosecution with information about the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma, and in particular, about his alleged burial site at a location in Lofa County, Liberia. Following information provided by DCT-032, the Prosecution had exhumations carried out at two seperate locations, and DNA tests carried out on the bodies. According to the Defence, the DNA test or tests turned out negative in that the body or bodies were found to be not that of Johnny Paul Koroma. The Defence maintains, based on the information given to them by DCT-032, that Johnny Paul Koroma may in fact not be dead as alleged by the Prosecution. In addition, the Prosecution made certain payments to DCT-032 and wrote him a letter indemnifying him from criminal prosecution. The Defence claims, based on information from DCT-032, that the Prosecution payments and indemnity letter were intended to induce DCT-032 to cooperate with the Prosecution in fabricating evidence against the Accused and that consequently, the details and results of the DNA investigation as well as the Prosecution payments to DCT-032, are exculpatory in that they tend to "suggest the innocence of the Accused or mitigate his guilt or may affect the credibility of the prosecution evidence." As such, the Defence submits, they should have been disclosed by the Prosecution pursuant to Rule 68(B). While the Prosecution did not call or list DCT-032 as a witness or potential witness, the Defence listed him as a Defence witness but did not call him to testify.

II. SUBMISSIONS

Motion

3. The Defence seeks orders for the disclosure pursuant to Rule 68(B), of the following information which it submits is in the Prosecution's possession and is exculpatory:

(i) the details and results of an investigation that was conducted by the Prosecution into the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma, including DNA tests on corpses that were exhumed by the Prosecution during that investigation;

(ii) records of all the disbursements that were made to Defence Witness DCT-032 (estimated at $1500);

(iii) an original duplicate copy of the letter of indemnity against prosecution before the Special Court for Sierra Leone written by Stephen Rapp to Defence Witness DCT-032 or confirmation of such indemnity and the circumstances in which it was given; and

(iv) an explanation of why the above requested information was not disclosed to the Defence;[9]

4. The Defence invites the Trial Chamber, subject to the disclosure requested above, to exercise its discretion and draw adverse inferences against the Prosecution's failure of its disclosure obligations.[10]

5. In support of its application, the Defence submits that it has satisfied the first prong of the applicable legal test for the disclosure of exculpatory information pursuant to Rule 68(B), as it has identified the requested information with sufficient specificity.[11]

6. The Defence submits that the Prosecution contacted DCT-032 between May June and July of 2008[12] and that he gave them information about the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma, in particular regarding his alleged grave site in Foya, Liberia. The Defence claims that based on that information the Prosecution exhumed and conducted DNA tests on two corpses that were separately indicated to them to be the remains of Johnny Paul Koroma and that at least one of the DNA tests turned out negative.[13] The Defence submits that the details and results of the said investigation and in particular the DNA results, are exculpatory in that they refute wholly or in part, the Prosecution's allegation that Johnny Paul Koroma is dead, or that the Accused was involved in his death.[14] The Defence further submits that the Prosecution made payments to DCT-032 in small instalments amounting to approximately $1000, most of which were given to him as an incentive to cooperate with their investigation. The Prosecution paid him an additional $500 for showing them a body and promised him a further $5000 if the body was confirmed to be that of Johnny Paul Koroma.[15] The Defence maintains that the said payments are exculpatory as they were an intended as an inducement for DCT-032 to cooperate with the investigation and were not reasonably incurred while he was involved in the investigation.[16]

7. The Defence submits that in June 2008 DCT-032 received a letter from the Chief Prosecutor of the Special Court, indemnifying him from criminal prosecution.[17] The Defence submits that such indemnity offered to DCT-032 when he was a potential witness, is capable of affecting the credibility of information DCT-032 gave to the Prosecution and the credibility of the Prosecution case as a whole. As such, the indemnity letter is exculpatory.[18] Although the Defence is already in possession of a copy of the indemnity letter, it requires the Prosecution's independent confirmation of the same as well as an explanation of the circumstances in which it was given.[19]

8. Lastly, the Defence requests that the Prosecution provide an explanation for the failure to disclose the requested information and submits that "such information is exculpatory in that non-disclosure of Rule 68 material may result in the Trial Chamber drawing adverse inferences against the Prosecution".[20] The Defence submits that all the exculpatory information sought is or should be in the possession or custody of the Prosecution[21] and that despite earlier requests by the Defence for its disclosure[22] and in breach of Rule 68(B), none of the information was disclosed to the Defence.[23]

Response

9. The Prosecution opposes the Motion and requests that the Trial Chamber to dismiss it on the grounds that the Defence allegations therein are unfounded and the information requested is not exculpatory.[24] The Prosecution submits that it has discharged its disclosure duties in accordance with the relevant Rules and jurisprudence, but that such disclosure obligations do not mean that it must operate an "open files policy".[25] The Prosecution challenges the Motion and makes submissions only in relation to the requirement that the Defence must make a prima facie showing of the exculpatory or potentially exculpatory nature of the materials requested.

10. In relation to the results of the investigations into the death of Johnny Paul Koroma, the Prosecution submits that although it led evidence that Johnny Paul Koroma was killed, it led no evidence suggesting that his remains were buried at a particular location. Consequently, the fact that the remains found at the locations named by DCT-032 were not those of Johnny Paul Koroma does not contradict existing Prosecution evidence and is therefore not exculpatory.[26]

11. In relation to the disbursements made to DCT-032 the Prosecution submits that DCT-032 was never listed as a Prosecution witness or victim or regarded as a potential witness and was only used as source. The Prosecution argues that under the Rules, it has no disclosure obligation in relation to benefits paid or promises made to sources.[27]

12. In relation to the indemnity letter, the Prosecution submits that it is under no obligation to disclose the indemnity letter as DCT-032 was not a witness or potential witness for the Prosecution at the time the letter was written.[28]

[28] Response, para. 12.

13. The Prosecution concludes that as none of the material requested is exculpatory, the Defence request to draw adverse inference against the Prosecution for its failure to disclose the requested material should be refused.[29]

Reply

14. In reply to the Prosecution Response, the Defence submits that the exculpatory nature of the requested information has to be seen in relation to the entire Prosecution case and in particular in relation to the testimony of Moses Blah, Joseph Marzah and TFI-375. Those witnesses implicated subordinates of the Accused, in particular DCT-032, in the murder of Johnny Paul Koroma and suggested that the killing was ordered by the Accused.[30] The Defence argues that any information that might suggest that Johnny Paul Koroma is still alive or that he was not killed on the orders of Charles Taylor as alleged by the Prosecution, is clearly exculpatory regardless of the fact that the Prosecution did not lead evidence of a particular burial site.[31]

15. The Defence asserts that in a summary of information that DCT-032 gave to the Prosecution in May, June July and October of 2008 which was disclosed to the Defence on 4 June 2010 ("Proffer"), the Prosecution purposely left out information regarding the negative results from the exhumation and DNA tests of Johnny Paul Koroma, which information the Prosecution knew to be exculpatory. The Defence asserts that in disclosing this "proffer" the Prosecution merely intended to use it to cross-examine DCT-032 and to discredit his testimony in the event that he was called by the Defence to testify.[32]

16. In relation to the status of DCT-032, the Defence argues contrary to the Prosecution assertion that he was merely a source, that he was more than a source in that he did more than just point the Prosecution towards independent evidence. In this regard, the Defence claims that in the course of several months that the Prosecution interviewed him, DCT-032 was asked substantive questions going to his background, his role in the conflict and his alleged links to the death of Johnny Paul Koroma and that he provided the Prosecution with substantial information, albeit false, going to material allegations in the Prosecution case.[33] The Defence further argues that most importantly, members of the Prosecution told DCT-032 that they would want him to testify if the exhumed body turned out to be that of Johnny Paul Koroma, and that "in the plainest sense of the phrase, this makes him a potential Prosecution witness."[34] The Defence also argues that the fact that the Prosecution issued DCT-032 with a letter indemnifying him from criminal prosecution is further indication that he was a potential witness and not just a source as the Prosecutions claims, and that the letter is exculpatory in that it served as an incentive for DCT-032 to cooperate and to fabricate a story that fed into the Prosecution case.[35]

III. APPLICABLE LAW

17. Rules 66 and 68 of the Rules govern the disclosure of materials by the Prosecutor. Rule 66 provides in relevant part as follows:

> Disclosure of Materials by the Prosecutor
> (A) Subject to the provisions of Rules 50, 53, 69 and 75, the Prosecutor shall:
>
> (i) Within 30 days of the initial appearance of an accused, disclose to the Defence copies of the statements of all witnesses whom the Prosecutor intends to call to testify and all evidence to be presented pursuant to Rule 92*bis* at trial.
> (ii) Continuously disclose to the Defence copies of the statements of all additional prosecution witnesses whom the Prosecutor intends to call to testify, but not later than 60 days before the date for trial, or as otherwise ordered by a Judge of the Trial Chamber either before or after the commencement of the trial, upon good cause being shown by the Prosecution. Upon good cause being shown by the Defence, a Judge of the Trial Chamber may order that copies of the statements of additional prosecution witnesses that the Prosecutor does not intend to call be made available to the defence within a prescribed time.

18. Rule 68 relating to the disclosure of exculpatory materials provides as follows:

> Disclosure of Exculpatory Evidence

[33] Reply, para. 13.
[34] Reply, para. 14.
[35] Reply, paras 18-19.

> (A) The Prosecutor shall, within 14 days of receipt of the Defence Case Statement, make a statement under this Rule disclosing to the defence the existence of evidence known to the Prosecutor which may be relevant to issues raised in the Defence Case Statement.
> (B) The Prosecutor shall, within 30 days of the initial appearance of the accused, make a statement under this Rule disclosing to the defence the existence of evidence known to the Prosecutor which in any way tends to suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or may affect the credibility of prosecution evidence. The Prosecutor shall be under a continuing obligation to disclose any such exculpatory material.

19. The Trial Chamber has reiterated the continuing obligation upon the Prosecution to continuously disclose exculpatory material which in any way tends to suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the Accused or which may affect the credibility of the Prosecution evidence.[36]

20. The Trial Chamber has held that in order to establish that the Prosecution has breached its Rule 68(B) disclosure obligations, the onus is upon the Defence to:

(i) identify the material sought with requisite specificity;

(ii) make a prima facie showing of the exculpatory or potentially exculpatory nature of the materials requested;

(iii) make a prima facie showing of the Prosecution's custody or control of the materials requested;

(iv) show that the Prosecution has, in fact, failed to disclose the targeted exculpatory material.[37]

21. Further, in interpreting the provisions of Rule 68(B), the Trial Chamber has held that "materials or information within the Prosecutor's knowledge concerning any benefits paid to and/or promises made to witnesses and victims beyond that which is reasonably required [for the management of witnesses and victims] has a different character and should therefore be disclosed as evidence which may affect the credibility of witnesses under Rule 68".[38]

22. Rule 68 has been liberally construed to apply to all exculpatory material that is in the custody or control of the Prosecutor, and is not limited to material relating to "Prosecution witnesses".[39]

IV. DELIBERATIONS

1) Status of Witness DCT-032 prior to his listing as a Defence witness

23. As the Motion largely turns of the status of Witness DCT-032 prior to his listing as a Defence witness, the Trial Chamber will start by making a determination on this issue. The Defence maintains that before it spoke to Witness DCT-032, he was in fact a potential Prosecution witness and not just a source as alleged by the Prosecution. As such, the Defence argues, the Prosecution had a duty as soon as it learnt of the true identity of DCT-032 from the Defence on 12 April 2010,[40] to disclose to the Defence "any material within its possession which is relevant to the named witness including but not limited to witness statements and/or disbursement records" and "any exculpatory material in relation to the witness."[41] The Defence assertion that DCT-032 was a potential Prosecution witness and not just a source is based on (a) his role in the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma as described by other Prosecution witnesses; (b) the content of the Prosecution's interview with DCT-032 as summarised in the "Proffer";[42] (c) the payments made and/or promised to DCT-032 by the Prosecution during the course of the investigation;[43] (d) a promise by one of the Prosecution investigators for relocation of [40] According to Confidential Annex D to the Motion, the Defence disclosed the real names of DCT-032 to the Prosecution on 12 April 2010.

24. The Prosecution, while not disputing any of the facts relied upon by the Defence, maintains that DCT-032 has never been listed as a Prosecution witness or potential witness and that he was simply a source. As such, the Prosecution claims it has no disclosure obligation under Rule 68(B) in relation to this individual.[46] Firstly, the Trial Chamber recalls that a number of Prosecution witnesses including Moses Blah[47], a former Vice President of Liberia, Joseph 'Zig-Zag' Marzah (TFI-399)[48] and a protected Witness TFI-375[49], testified regarding the circumstances of Johnny Paul Koroma's alleged murder. While none of the said witnesses actually witnessed the alleged murder or saw the body of Johnny Paul Koroma, they gave evidence implicating a number of alleged subordinates of the Accused in the murder of Johnny Paul Koroma and in particular, the individual referred to in this Motion as Witness DCT-032 as the person or one of the persons that actually carried out the killing in Foya, Liberia in 2003, on orders of the Accused.[50] According to these witnesses, DCT-032 played a key role in the alleged murder of Johnny Paul Koroma, which role would qualify him as a potential Prosecution witness rather than a mere source.

25. Secondly, according to the "Proffer" disclosed to the Defence[51], the Prosecution contacted and interviewed DCT-032 in May, June, July and October of 2008 as part of its investigations into the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma.[52] DCT-032 provided the Prosecution with detailed information about his own role in the conflict, his role and that of other subordinates of the Accused in the alleged murder of Johnny Paul Koroma, and in particular, about the latter's burial site at a location in Lofa County, Liberia.[53] It is clear from the information provided by DCT-032 to the Prosecution that he did not merely provide information pointing the Prosecution to independent evidence. Rather, he went further by providing substantial information (whether true or false) not only corroborating the testimony of other Prosecution witnesses, but also going to material allegations in this trial. In the Trial Chamber's view, the foregoing shows that DCT-032 was a potential witness rather than a source.

26. Thirdly, while the Prosecution describes the payments it made to DCT-032 as "recompense for his services as a source"[54] the Trial Chamber is of the view that these payments cannot be viewed or assessed in isolation but rather must be viewed in the context in which they were made. The Prosecution has not challenged the Defence assertion that these payments were paid to DCT-032 in order to encourage him to cooperate with the Prosecution by providing the required information about the death and burial place of Johnny Paul Koroma and that further payments were promised after the Prosecution confirmed that the body found was indeed that of Johnny Paul Koroma. Based on that information, the Trial Chamber opines that the Prosecution payments were not used to buy information from a source, but rather were given to a potential witness for his own benefit.

27. Lastly, in view of the alleged involvement of Witness DCT-032 not only in the conflict, but also in the alleged murder of Johnny Paul Koroma, the Trial Chamber is of the opinion that the letter from the former Chief Prosecutor of the Special Court, indicating that he did not inrend to lay charges against him, supports the inference that the Prosecution wanted to ensure his cooperation, including his testimony if required. The granting of an indemnity from prosecution in such circumstances is not consistent with DCT-032 being considered to be a mere source. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber holds that prior to his listing as a Defence witness, Witness DCT-032 was for all intents and purposes, a potential Prosecution witness, notwithstanding that he was never listed by the Prosecution as such. The Trial Chamber will now examine the specific Defence requests for disclosure.

2) Disclosure of the results of the Prosecution investigation into the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma

28. The Prosecution, while not disputing that it conducted an investigation into the death of Johnny Paul Koroma, including the exhumation and DNA testing of a body or bodies, submits that nothing in the details or results of that investigation contradicts existing Prosecution evidence. The Prosecution argues that its evidence relates only to the killing and not to the burial of Johnny Paul Koroma. Accordingly, "no evidence is contradicted by the fact that the remains found at a particular location were not those of Johnny Paul Koroma".[55] As stated in the background to this Decision, the Prosecution has as part of its case against the Accused,[56] adduced evidence of the actions of the Accused "after the Indictment period" in particular, that he systematically "murdered or eliminated persons who were in his inner circle and who were aware of the crimes perpetrated by [him]" in order to prevent their turning against him and exposing him during his trial, which conduct the Prosecution maintains, is indicative of "consciousness of his criminal responsibility" for the crimes charged in the Indictment. One such individual that the Prosecution, through its evidence, maintains was murdered by or on the orders of Mr. Taylor in order to silence him is Johnny Paul Koroma. Furthermore, the Prosecution evidence on record specifically implicates DCT-032 as the person or one of the persons that actually carried out the alleged killing on orders of the Accused. The fact that the Prosecution interviewed this alleged murderer and that he led them to a grave site or grave sites that later turned out not to be that of Johnny Paul Koroma is relevant to the issue of whether Johnny Paul Koroma is dead or alive, and may affect the credibility of the Prosecution evidence.

29. The fact that DCT-032 was not able to provide the Prosecution with adequate information in relation to the burial site of Johnny Paul Koroma, despite being promised $5000 and indemnity against criminal prosecution, is potentially exculpatory in that it may affect the credibility of the Prosecution evidence implicated him in the killing. This information with respect to the Prosecution investigation should therefore also have been disclosed to the Defence. The Trial Chamber therefore agrees with the Defence and finds that the details and results of the Prosecution investigation into the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma are potentially exculpatory in nature. The Prosecution neither disputes the fact that it has this material in its possession, nor the fact that it has not disclosed the material to the Defence. The Trial Chamber accordingly holds that this material should be disclosed pursuant to Rule 68(B) of the Rules.

3) Disclosure of Records of all the disbursements made to Defence Witness DCT-032

30. The Prosecution, while not disputing that it made payments to DCT-032, describes the payments as "recompense for his services as a source" and submits that it has no obligation to disclose them under Rule 68(B).[57] The Trial Chamber has previously held that:

> Materials or information within the Prosecutor's knowledge concerning any benefits paid to and/or promises made to witnesses and victims beyond that which is reasonably required [for the management of witnesses and victims] has a different character and should therefore be disclosed as evidence which may affect the credibility of witnesses under Rule 68."[58] [emphasis added]

31. Having found above that DCT-032 was in fact a potential Prosecution witness, the Trial Chamber needs to determine whether or not the said payments were "reasonably required for the management of the witness". According to information provided to the Defence, which information is not disputed by the Prosecution, the funds provided to DCT-032 amounting to $1500 were used for such things as buying a phone, food, rent and school fees. A further $5000 was promised to DCT-032 "if the body exhumed was confirmed to be that of Johnny Paul Koroma". More importantly, DCT-032 admits that he was "making up a story in order to get money from the Prosecution".[59] The Trial Chamber finds that these payments made by the Prosecution to DCT-032 went beyond that which is reasonably required for the management of a witness and assumed a potential exculpatory character. The Prosecution does not dispute that it has the records of these payments and that it has not disclosed them to the Defence. The Trial Chamber accordingly holds that this material should be disclosed pursuant to Rule 68(B) of the Rules.

4) Disclosure of the 'original duplicate copy' of the indemnity letter to DCT-032 or a confirmation of such indemnity

32. The Defence has annexed a photo copy of the letter of indemnity written by the former Prosecutor of the Special Court to DCT-032 on 12 April 2008, submitting that the copy in the possession of DCT-032 is "tattered". The Prosecution, while not denying the existence of this letter, claims that such a letter is not exculpatory within the meaning of Rule 68(B), as DCT-032 was only used as a source and not as a potential witness. The Trial Chamber having already held that prior to his listing as a Defence witness, DCT-032 was a potential Prosecution witness finds that the indemnity letter is potentially exculpatory and is satisfied that it is in the Prosecution's possession and has not been disclosed to the Defence. The Trial Chamber accordingly holds that this material should be disclosed pursuant to Rule 68(B) of the Rules.

5) Request for an explanation as to why information was not disclosed to the Defence, and request to Trial Chamber to draw adverse inferences for the non-disclosure

33. The Trial Chamber notes the submissions of the Prosecution in its Response justifying, albeit wrongly, its non-disclosure of the requested material, namely that the Prosecution considered DCT-032 a source and not a witness or potential witness, in respect of whom it had no Rule 68 disclosure obligation.[60] Consequently, the Trial Chamber considers that no additional "explanation" is warranted. Furthermore, at this stage of the proceedings the potentially exculpatory material has not yet been disclosed, and it is therefore pre-mature to consider whether it is appropriate for the Trial Chamber to "draw adverse inferences" from the Prosecution's non-disclosure. Accordingly, the Trial Chamber declines the fourth Defence request.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS

GRANTS THE MOTION IN PART; and

ORDERS the Prosecution to disclose forthwith to the Defence, pursuant to Rule 68(B):

1. The details and results of an investigation that was conducted by the Prosecution into the alleged death of Johnny Paul Koroma including DNA tests on corpses that were exhumed during that investigation;

2. Records of all disbursements that were made to Defence witness DCT-032; and

3. An original duplicate copy of the letter of indemnity against the prosecution before the Special Court for Sierra Leone written by Stephen Rapp to Defence witness DCT-032;

Justice Julia Sebutinde appends a Separate Concurring Opinion hereto.

SEPARATE CONCURRING OPINION OF JUSTICE JULIA SEBUTINDE

1. I agree with all aspects of the Trial Chamber's reasoning, findings, conclusions and Orders as contained in the Decision to which this Opinion is appended. However, I am judicially compelled to include this Separate Concurring Opinion in relation to the fourth request of the Defence, namely, that the Trial Chamber should in addition to ordering disclosure of the exculpatory material, draw adverse inferences against the Prosecution's failure to disclose the said information.[1] I do so in order to point out and underscore the effect of the Prosecution's non-compliance of its Rule 68 obligations upon the fair-trial rights of the Accused, particularly at this late stage of the trial, which effect is not necessarily cured by any late disclosures that may ensue pursuant to the Trial Chamber's Orders herein. In this regard, it is pertinent to examine the timeline of events leading up to this Motion.

2. Firstly, the Prosecution closed its case on 27 February 2009,[2] while the Defence has indicated to the Trial Chamber on several occasions that it is "unlikely that [it] would call any other live witnesses."[3] It is therefore fair to assume that at this stage of the proceedings, neither party is likely to be calling or recalling any more witnesses. Secondly, it is apparent from the Prosecution Proffer disclosed to the Defence[4] that the Prosecution interviewed Witness DCT-032 as far back as May, June, July and October of 2008; while the record of proceedings has Prosecution Witnesses Joseph 'Zig-Zag' Marzah, Moses Blah and TFI-375 as testifying over two years ago, in March, May and June of 2008, respectively. Thus, despite its continuing disclosure obligations under the Rules, and despite a specific Defence request for disclosure in relation to Witness DCT-032 in April 2010,[5] the Prosecution did not disclose any information in relation to this individual until as late as 4 June 2010, two years after Prosecution witnesses had already testified. Even then, the selected material that the Prosecution chose to disclose to the Defence in its "Proffer" contained little that would put the Defence on notice about the existence of any exculpatory material in relation to DCT-032.

3. The Defence, on the other hand, most probably learnt of the existence of the exculpatory material only after interviewing Witness DCT-032 in September 2010, as is apparent from the information in Confidential Annex A to the Motion, but none-the-less filed this Motion without undue delay in September 2010.[6] In these circumstances, it is clear that in failing to disclose the exculpatory information in a timely manner, the Prosecution not only failed in its duty to assist in the administration of justice, but also clearly violated the fair trial rights of the Accused by denying him the right to use the said exculpatory information in cross-examining the Prosecution witnesses referred to in this Decision. Considering that the disclosures ordered by the Trial Chamber in this Decision come at a very late stage in the proceedings, such a violation should not go without a remedy.

4. In this regard, I am persuaded by the approach of the ICTR Trial Chamber in the Prosecutor v. Ndindiliyimana et. al. Case[7] where, in considering the Prosecution's disclosure obligations under a rule similar to our Rule 68, the ICTR held:

> The Prosecution's obligation to disclose exculpatory material is essential to a fair trial. In determining whether Rule 68 has been violated, considerations of fairness are the overriding factor. According to the Appeals Chamber, the obligation to disclose exculpatory material forms part of the Prosecution's duty to assist in the administration of justice, and is as important as the obligation to prosecute. The duty to disclose exculpatory material under Rule 68(A) is of a positive and continuing nature notwithstanding the public or confidential character of the material. In discharging its obligation under Rule 68(A), the Prosecutor will be presumed to be acting in good faith, unless the moving party adduces prima facie evidence proving otherwise.[8] [....] However, not every violation of the duty to disclose exculpatory material warrants a remedy. Before granting a remedy for a breach of Rule 68 obligations, the Chamber must ascertain that material prejudice has been caused to the accused, amounting to an infringement of his or her right to a fair trial. Likewise the choice of remedy is a matter falling within the Trial Chamber's discretion and must be determined on a case by case basis taking into account the scope and significance of the violation vis-à-vis the allegations in the Indictment, the persistence of the Prosecution's non-compliance, and the timing of any late disclosure in light of the stage of the proceedings. For example where the Prosecution shows persistent disregard or lack of diligence in discharging its Rule 68 obligation to such an extent that he could be deemed to be obstructing the proceedings or the interests of justice, the Trial Chamber may consider imposing sanctions against the Prosecutor. On the other hand, where the Prosecution delays the disclosure of exculpatory material until its case closes, the Trial Chamber may consider recalling some prosecution witnesses for further cross-examination by the Defence based on the lately - disclosed material. In addition, or in the alternative, the Trial Chamber may allow the Defence to submit a list of additional witnesses it wishes to call in order to testify on the specific areas relevant to the lately – disclosed exculpatory material....[a] Trial Chamber may, where the violation of the disclosure is so extensive or occurs at such a late stage of the proceedings that it would violate the right of the accused to trial without delay, or where it would be impossible or impracticable to recall prosecution witnesses without effectively re-opening the case in its entirety, opt to draw reasonable inferences from the disclosed material at the stage of its definitive evaluation of the evidence.[9] Where material requested by the Defence under Rule 68 is known and could be retrieved by the Defence with relative ease, then material prejudice cannot be shown.[10]

5. Taking into account the seriousness of Prosecution allegations implicating the Accused in the alleged murder of Johnny Paul Koroma, the impracticability of recalling the said Prosecution witnesses for cross-examination at this late stage of the proceedings, as well as the right of the Accused to be tried without undue delay, I am of the view that the Trial Chamber not only has the discretion, but also the responsibility at this stage, to secure justice and ensure a fair trial for the Accused by determining a suitable remedy following the late disclosures ordered. The Chamber must consider a remedy that is appropriate in the circumstances; that preserves the integrity of the judicial process; and that assists the Trial Chamber in ascertaining the events surrounding the alleged murder of Johnny Paul Koroma.[11] That said, I do however, agree that at this stage of the proceedings when the potentially exculpatory material has not yet been disclosed, it may not be practicable for the Trial Chamber to "draw adverse inferences" from the Prosecution's non-disclosure of the same without knowing the full content of this material. Rather, it is more realistic to consider the appropriate remedy at the stage of evaluation of the evidence and Judgement deliberations, having taken into account the nature and effect of the exculpatory material disclosed.

1. Noting that there are a number of typographic and administrative errors in the Defence Motion Requesting an Investigation into Contempt of Court by the Office of the Prosecution and its Investigators, filed on 24 September 2010 ("Original Motion").[1]
2. Further noting that "Confidential Annex A – Table of Annexes" when listing attachments to Confidential Annex B should have included the first ten pages, not only the first three pages of the Suspect Statement of DCT-192; the ten pages are properly annexed hereto in Confidential Annex B.
3. Further noting that "Annex M – Prosecution disclosure of payments made to DCT-097" should have included the actual disclosure, not just the cover letter; the disclosure is properly annexed hereto in Annex M.
4. Further noting that "Annex N – Table of Improper Prosecution Payments" was overlooked and not attached at all; the table is properly annexed hereto in Annex N.
5. Further noting that the scanned affidavits and signed statements in Annexes B-J were not not of the clearest quality and therefore replacing them with better copies of the originals.
6. The Defence hereby files a corrigendum to correct those mistakes. For ease of reference, the Defence proposes to substitute the Original Motion with the revised version with annexes attached hereto. The revised parts of the original motion are reflected below.
7. In this corrigendum, the Defence also attaches to the substitute motion, in which the following changes are made:
    a. Para. 12: By the relocation of footnote 22 from the end of the sentence to the middle.
    b. Para. 14: By the substitution of the word "Prosecution" with "Prosecution's".
    c. Para. 16: By the addition of the word "the" before the words "attached affidavits".

d. Para: 17. By the substitution of the word, "the" before the word "ransacked" with the word, "they".

e. Para: 19: By rephrasing, "... inducements that were offered and made by the Prosecution by its Witness Management Unit...", to read "... inducements that were offered and made by the Prosecution's Witness Management Unit...".

f. Para. 27: By rephrasing the phrase: "... earlier an agreement..." to read "...an earlier agreement...".

g. Para. 28: By rephrasing the phrase: "... and/or that the Prosecution could do so", to read "and/or that the Prosecution could have done so" and by correcting "TF1-360" to "TF1-362".

h. Additionally in para. 28, by changing the tenses from the present to the past, in the sentence: "Such displays of power and munificence by the Prosecution poison the pool of potential witnesses and further interfere with the administration of justice in that the credibility of such witnesses who come to testify is severely impacted", to read: "Such displays of power and munificence by the Prosecution poisoned the pool of potential witnesses and further interfered with the administration of justice in that the credibility of such witnesses who came to testify was severely impacted."

i. Para. 31(i) by the addition of "in this case" after "potential witnesses" such that the sentence would end as "...in relation to witnesses and potential witnesses in this case."

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Defence requests the Trial Chamber to direct the Registrar to appoint experienced independent counsel to investigate the Prosecution and its Investigators, whom the Defence have reason to believe have been conducting their investigations in a manner that is an abuse of process, brings the administration of justice into disrepute, and is contemptuous of the Special Court for Sierra Leone.
2. The Defence files this request pursuant to Rules 73, 46(C) and 77 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Rules"). Specifically, under Rule 77(A)(iv), the Defence submit that there is reason to believe that the Prosecution and its Investigators have knowingly and wilfully interfered with the administration of justice by, inter alia, threatening, intimidating, causing injury or offering bribes to, or otherwise interfering with witnesses or potential witnesses. Rule 77(C)(iii) gives the Trial Chamber the discretion to appoint experienced independent counsel to investigate possible instances of contempt.
3. The Defence attaches several affidavits and supporting documentation as Annexes B-J.

II. APPLICABLE LAW

4. The Office of the Prosecutor, which is charged with wide ranging powers of prosecution, is provided for by Article 15 of the Statute of the Special Court ("Statute") and Rule 37. These include powers to investigate crimes within the jurisdiction of the Special Court, as well as the power to question suspects,[1] victims and witnesses, collect evidence,[2] and seize physical evidence.[3] The Prosecutor also enjoys limited powers of arrest and detention,[4] and ultimately, has the power to formally charge and bring a suspect to justice before the court.[5]
5. In exercising these powers, the Prosecution enjoys full autonomy[6] and near absolute discretion.[7] As a result, in exercising these powers, it is important that the Prosecutor conducts himself in a manner that is consistent with the public trust accorded him. Indeed

[2] Article 15(2) of the Statute and Rule 39 of the Rules.
[3] Rule 40(A)(ii) .
[4] Rules 40(A)(i), 40(B) and 40*bis*.
[5] Rule 47.
[6] Article 15(1) of the Statute.
[7] See Hassan Jallow article, Prosecutorial Discretion and International Criminal Justice, Journal of International Criminal Justice, Vol 3, Isl (2005), p. 145-161, at http://jicj.oxfordjournals.org/content/3/1/145.short this requires that the Prosecutor and all his subordinates act with utmost integrity and professionalism.[8]

6. Be that as it may, the working documents of the Special Court recognise that the conduct of the Prosecutor, including all other legal and to an extent non-legal personnel in the Prosecutor's office, is not above reproach and provide for the necessary regulation. Under Rule 46(C),[9] it is an act of misconduct for counsel before the Special Court to act in any manner that in the opinion of the Chamber would constitute an abuse of process. Under Rule 95, the court shall disregard any evidence that would, if admitted, bring the administration of justice into serious disrepute.[10] Rule 95 is thus also a form of sanction against the unbecoming conduct by either of the parties, which could bring the administration of justice into serious disrepute.
7. The Code of Professional Conduct for Counsel with Rights of Audience before the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Code of Conduct") amplifies the conduct expected of all counsel[11] before the court.[12] While breach of the Code would ordinarily attract personal sanctions against the offending counsel,[13] when read in conjunction with the Court's other legal instruments, where the offending conduct of counsel reaches a threshold where it affects the integrity of the proceedings, the Court can also impose other measures.
8. In terms of Rule 77, the Trial Chamber has the inherent power to hold in contempt of court, any conduct by any person who knowingly and wilfully interferes with the administration of justice. Punishable conduct includes interference with witnesses or potential witnesses through threats or other coercive means as well as bribery or other incentives.[14]

[8] Thus, under Article 15(5) of the Statute, the Prosecutor shall, inter alia, be a person of high moral character and possess the highest level of professional competence.
[9] See Rule 46(C) which also applies to the Prosecution per Rule 46(F).

9. The Appeals Chamber has held that the standard for an independent investigation for contempt is:

> "[...] not that of a prima facie case, which is the standard for committal for trial. It is the different and lower standard of "reason to believe" that an offence may have been committed, which is the pre-condition for ordering an independent investigation".[15]

10. An allegation of contempt must therefore only raise a "reason to believe" that a person may be in contempt.[16]

III. SUBMISSIONS

11. The Defence submits that there is reason to believe that the Prosecutor, David Crane and all his successors in title, through their own acts of commission or omission and/or through the acts and conduct of their subordinates and/or agents,[17] have violated the Statute, the Rules and the Code of Conduct in that they have: i) assaulted a suspect and/or potential witness or source;[18] ii) exerted undue pressure by threatening, intimidating, or harassing suspects, witnesses, potential witnesses or sources ("undue pressure");[19] and iii) offered and/or provided improper, unjustifiable or undue payments, benefits or other incentives, including relocation, to witnesses, potential witnesses or sources ("improper inducements").[20]

12. These acts amount to acts of misconduct, abuse of process and most importantly, contempt of court. The Trial Chamber must therefore order a thorough investigation of these instances in order to establish the full extent of the Prosecution's investigatory misconduct.[21] From the outset, the Prosecution approach to this case has not only been overly zealous, it has also been underhanded, malicious and overboard, [22] and this has corrupted its entire investigation and case in the courtroom.

[22] See for instance, the power point presentation at Annex O where the Prosecutor acknowledges deliberately trying to embarrass Charles Taylor; Annexes B and I which allege collusion between LURD forces and the Prosecution and the Testimony of DCT-190 on that same issue.

13. In addition to being ultra vires and contemptuous, the Prosecution's acts also affect the case in two principal ways. Firstly, the Prosecution's conduct casts doubt on the credibility of its entire evidence before this court. An investigation into the manner in which the Prosecution conducted itself in relation to witnesses, potential witnesses or suspects in this case, in view of its tremendous powers and resources, and its veil of secrecy, would assist the Trial Chamber in fully assessing that evidence. As argued above, the Chamber has the discretion to disregard any evidence that would bring the administration of justice into disrepute.
14. Secondly, the Prosecution's misconduct has negatively affected the Accused's fair trial rights in that it has generally poisoned the environment and has made it difficult to for the defence to find witnesses who have not compromised themselves with Prosecution.[23]

Causing an Injury: Assault on a suspect during questioning

15. There is sufficient reason to believe that in the course of questioning a suspect and/or potential witness, Gilbert Morissette of the Prosecution, physically assaulted a suspect and/or potential witness, in order to elicit his cooperation and confession.[24] The Defence submits that this is a knowing and wilful interference by the Prosecution with the administration of justice in order to secure favourable evidence.

Threats, Intimidation and Other Interference

16. Based on the attached affidavits at Annexes B-F, the Defence submits that there are credible reasons to believe that the Prosecution is in contempt for wilfully and knowingly exerting undue pressure through threats and intimidation of witnesses, potential witnesses or sources in order to secure their cooperation and/or their evidence, which interferes with the administration of justice.
17. The acts complained of, included acts and conduct of its direct employees or agents and the acts and conduct of other outside organs that the Prosecution directly worked or cooperated with such as the Sierra Leonean and Liberian Police or Intelligence and UNAMSIL. In Kailahun, for instance the Prosecution, INTERPOL and the Sierra Leonean police used a system called "sweeping" in which those who refused to cooperate

[23] The Defence for instance was forced to withdraw the following witnesses after disclosure of inculpating statements to the Prosecution. In all instances, the witnesses alleged that the information was not accurate and that they had been induced: DCT-023, DCT-032, DCT-133, DCT-192, and DCT-097.
[24] Confidential Annex B: Signed Statement of Logan Hambrick and the first three pages of disclosed Prosecution interview transcripts with DCT-192, which indicate that he was read his suspect rights before commencing the interview.

would be arrested.[25] In Monrovia, the Prosecution passed on false intelligence[26] against a potential witness and got him arrested, only to then twist his arm into cooperating.[27] Furthermore, through an unnecessary show of force[28] they ransacked the Accused's residence in Monrovia. In the course of this search, Alan White of the Prosecution also made unnecessary threats to the caretaker and confiscated his personal items.[29] The next day the caretaker narrowly escaped a kidnap attempt by or involving the Prosecution.

18. The [then] Chief Prosecutor, David Crane also made direct verbal threats and intimidated a potential witness. Crane threatened to imprison DCT-102, like Issa Sesay, if he did not cooperate. [30] DCT-102 even has a souvenir from Crane to corroborate his account.[31] The Prosecution also made up a story that DCT-133's life was in danger from persons associated with Charles Taylor simply intimidate him into cooperating at the back of an offer for protective measures.[32]

Offers of Bribes and Other Inducements

19. Based on all of the affidavits and signed statements attached in Annexes B-J , the Defence submits that there are credible reasons to believe that the Prosecution is in contempt for offering and/or providing monetary bribes and/or other inducements, such as relocation, in exchange for cooperation and testimony. With respect to this question, the Defence takes no issue with any payments that were made to prosecution witnesses by the Witness and Victims Section ("WVS") of the Registry;[33] WVS payments apply to both prosecution and defence witnesses. Rather the Defence takes issue with the inducements that were offered and made by the Prosecution's Witness Management Unit ("WMU")[34]

[25] Confidential Annex F: Affidavit of DCT-102.
[26] The Defence submits that this "intelligence" was based on information gathered from DCT-097, during the time in which DCT-097 was receiving over $40,000 from the Prosecution to, inter alia, provide information. See Confidential Annex J and Annex M.
[27] Confidential Annex D: Affidavit of DCT-133.
[28] Confidential Annex E: Affidavit of DCT-086, and copy of search warrant for White Flower.
[29] Confidential Annex E: Affidavit of DCT-086.
[30] Confidential Annex F: Affidavit of DCT-102.
[31] Confidential Annex F: Affidavit of DCT-102 and "Don Ray" calling card.
[32] Confidential Annex D: Affidavit of DCT-133, and copies of plane tickets to Accra, hotel invoices in Accra, pictures of DCT-133's gate and fence with razor wire, calling cards of various Prosecution investigators and a slip of paper with Brenda Hollis' name and phone number.
[33] The Defence assumes these payments were made in accordance with the "Practice Direction on Allowances for Witnesses and Expert Witnesses", issued by the Registrar on 16 July 2004. The Practice Direction properly provides for a wide range of allowances to be paid to witnesses testifying before the Special Court. These include an attendance allowance as compensation for earnings and time lost as a result of testifying, accommodation, meals, transport, medical treatment, childcare and other allowances.
[34] For some insight into the apparent mandate of the WMU, see attached at Annex L a 2007 Vacancy Announcement for the Chief of the Witness Management Unit.

directly to its witnesses, potential witnesses or sources in relation to expenses that squarely fall within the purview of WVS. The Defence submits that these payments, administered through the opaque Witness Management Unit, are contemptuous.

20. While in terms of Rule 39(ii), the Prosecution may "[t]ake all measures deemed necessary for the purpose of the investigation, including the taking of any special measures to provide for the safety, the support and assistance of potential witnesses and sources" [emphasis added] such discretion is limited in at least two ways. Firstly, by the wording of the Rules itself, and secondly by the limitations in the Statute, Rules and Code of Conduct, as considered above. In terms of Rule 39, any payment must be objectively "necessary" and must be for the safety, the support and assistance of potential witnesses and sources.[35]
21. The specific limitation of the remit to potential witnesses and sources was deliberate as Rule 39 was designed to cover the Prosecution's pre-trial investigative phase whereafter the welfare of the witnesses would be taken over by WVS, which is neutral and independent of the parties. Article 16(4) thus allows the Registrar, through the WVS, to provide "protective measures and security arrangements, counseling and other appropriate assistance for witnesses" and even sources. In terms of Article 2(B) of the Practice Direction,[36] which amplifies the functions of the WVS, the WVS shall "ensure the payment of all allowances". In terms of both provisions, although WVS may act in consultation with the parties, WVS, to the exclusion of both parties, retains sole jurisdiction for the management and payment of witnesses.
22. Even accepting, arguendo, that the WMU's and WVS's functions could overlap with respect to witness payments, it would still be impermissible for the Prosecution to, without justification, duplicate or supplement payments made by the WVS.
23. The Defence submits that in making certain payments to witnesses, potential witnesses or sources, the WMU usurped the role of the WVS, which unlike the Prosecution is an independent organ of the court and therefore less susceptible to abusing the process. Further, by continuing to pay witnesses throughout the life of the trial, the Prosecution is undermining any need for an independent witness section. The Defence submits that this conduct by the Prosecution is deliberate and was designed to influence the cooperation, and consequently, the evidence of potential witnesses, witnesses, suspects or sources.

[35] The latter wording is, it is true, wider than that of the Rules of the ICTY or the ICTR, but it is not as wide as to permit an "unfettered discretion".
[36] Practice Direction on Allowances for Witnesses and Expert Witnesses Testifying in The Hague, 8 June 2007.

24. The Defence further submits that even some of the pre-trial payments to witnesses that were properly within the Prosecution's WMU purview were irregular as they went well beyond the proscribed rationale and were willfully and knowingly designed to interfere with the administration of justice. The exorbitant payments to DCT-097 at the time he was a Prosecution witness, recently disclosed,[37] are a ready example.
25. In Annex N is a list of many smaller but equally improper payments that were made by the Prosecution to witnesses who came and testified before this Court. As the Trial Chamber would observe, these were payments which, according to the witnesses' own evidence, were not justified by the explanations given by the Prosecution.
26. Aside from these, the Prosecution offered or made other payments or inducements to witnesses, potential witnesses or sources in order to elicit their assistance, cooperation or evidence. For instance, the Prosecution approached DCT-032[38] and DCT-133[39] with gifts of money before ever having a substantive conversation with them.
27. The most egregious examples are offers of relocation and/or security protection where none was requested or warranted, or worse yet, where the suggested security threat was actually created by the Prosecution. Abu Keita for instance testified openly before this Chamber at the back of earlier an agreement for relocation.[40] DCT-102 was told he could relocate to America and should open a bank account so the Prosecution could deposit $90,000, as his knowledge of RUF and diamonds was critical to the Prosecution case.[41]
28. Another of the Prosecution's stratagems was inducement by reference. Through this method, the Prosecution would, directly or indirectly try to induce potential witnesses by alluding to benefits or inducements they would have given to other persons known to the targeted witness. DCT-102, for instance, was told by a Prosecution investigator to consider how well off Gibril Massaquoi and Abu Keita were living on Prosecution largess. John Tarnue, listed as a Prosecution witness in this case,[42] called DCT-086 from America and tried to convince him to cooperate. In the case of DCT-032, one Kelvin of the Prosecution alluded to Vamuyan Sheriff's largess (a Prosecution-financed house in Kenema) and even called Sheriff for DCT-032 to confirm. Sheriff tried to persuade DCT-

032 to cooperate with the Prosecution. It is common knowledge amongst RUF ex-combatants that TF1-362 testified and lied before the Special Court and in exchange made approximately $10,000.[43] It is also common knowledge that Foday Lansana and Isaac Mongor both witnesses in this case were released from prison at the behest of the Prosecution, and/or that the Prosecution could have done so.[44] Such displays of power and munificence by the Prosecution poisoned the pool of potential witnesses and further interfered with the administration of justice in that the credibility of such witnesses who came to testify was severely impacted.

IV. CONCLUSION AND RELIEF REQUESTED

29. The Defence submits that for any one or more of the foregoing reasons, and based on other examples abounding within the attached affidavits, numerous members of the Prosecution are in contempt of court. The instances highlighted above are sufficiently credible indicia of a reason to believe that contempt has occurred, warranting the appointment of an independent investigation. The issue at stake not only affects the integrity of the Prosecution, but the entire judicial process.

30. The Trial Chamber should, pursuant to Rule 77(C)(iii) and subject to the necessary protective measures in place and any other measures the Trial Chamber might deem fit, order an independent investigation into:

    i) The conduct of the Prosecution, including all its employees or agents, since the inception of the Court, in relation to witnesses and potential witnesses in this case, that is in breach of the Statute, Rules and Code of Conduct, including but not limited to the acts indicated in the attached affidavits and signed statements in Annexes B-J;

    ii) All payments and benefits, including ongoing payments and relocations, offered and/or paid by the Prosecution to witnesses, potential witnesses or sources in connection with this case. This investigation should explore the full mandate of the Prosecution's Witness Management Unit, the source of its funding, and all disbursements made by that Unit in relation to this case.

Table of Improper Prosecution Payments

TF1-	Transcript Reference	WMU Payment	Impropriety
015	9 Jan 2008, p. 786-9	Money for family welfare	No provision for assistance for family under Rule 39(ii)
406	14 Jan 2008, p. 1123	Money for expenses	Money exceeded legitimate expenses
406[1]	14 Jan 2008, p. 1124	Money for "reactivation of source development"	Witness cannot explain what the money was given for
275	26 Feb 2008, p. 4757-8	Money for meals and drinks and medicine	No interview record disclosed in relation to this meeting with Witness (on 6 Feb 2007) where Witness was given money for food and drink and medicine
275	26 Feb 2008, p. 4758-63	Money for school fees and uniforms for Witness' children	No provision for assistance for family under Rule 39(ii)548
548	13 Feb 2008, p. 3766-2810	Money for "assistance" without any specified purpose	For "assistance" to be legitimate, it must have a clearly stated purpose
362	3 Mar 2008, p. 5148 and 4 Mar 2008, p. 5157-61	Money for children's school fees or "child's care"	No provision for assistance for family under Rule 39(ii)
337	6 Mar 2008, p. 5499-501	Money for lodging and meals	Witness was interviewed for one day but provided lodging for five days
337	10 Mar 2008, p. 5596-8	Money for lost wages	Witness was dealing with a medical emergency, not undergoing interviews with the OTP, so no clear reason for why he was paid for lost wages by the OTP
337	10 Mar 2008, p. 5600	Money for medical assistance for wife	No provision for assistance for family under Rule 39(ii)
399	14 Mar 2008, p. 6138	Money for transportation	Money given ($400) was beyond that necessary to reimburse transportation cost ($130)
532	31 Mar 2008, p. 6264-66	Money for transport and lost wages	Witness did not understand that he was given money for lost earnings
532	1 Apr 2008, p. 6388	Money for lost wages	Money for lost wages paid on a Sunday, and Witness was not clear that he typically worked on a Sunday
532	7 Apr 2008, p. 6706-9	Money provided during "clarification" interviews	A clarification interview would suggest that the Witness is now a witness and not a potential witness and thus WVS, not WMU should be responsible for such expenses
516	11 Apr 2008, p. 7292	Money provided for "taking his time"	No legitimate reason for assistance

[1] The Defence notes that TF1-406 was used both as a Prosecution Witness in this trial and worked for the Prosecution as a source for finding other potential witnesses. See, ex., Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T, Trial Transcript, 14 January 2008, p. 1124-5 and p. 1152. Based on WMU payment records, it seems TF1-360 was also used both as a Prosecution witness and as a source. See, Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T, Trial Transcript, 7 February 2008, p. 3396-3402.

Table of Improper Prosecution Payments

TF1	Transcript Reference	WMU Payment	Impropriety
516	16 Apr 2008, p. 7790	Money for "lost wages" and "time spent"	Money seems to have been paid twice for same purpose
516	16 Apr 2008, p. 7791	Money for "lost wages"	Witness was paid for lost wages but does not remember missing any work
334	29 Apr 2008, p. 8884-7	Money for transport allowance	Witness was in prison at the time and was escorted by prison officers to the SCSL and therefore did not pay for his transportation; Witness said he believed the money given to him was just an "allowance"
334	29 Apr 2008, p. 8889 et seq	Money for transport, meals, communication and lost wages	Witness was given 47 payments to the witness for such expenses in 2006, but there are no corresponding interviews or records of meetings with the Prosecution
571	14 May 2008, p. 9767-8	Money for transportation	Payments were made for transportation, but Witness does not recall going anywhere to meet the Prosecution
561	16 May 2008, p. 10078	Money for family expenses	Witness given $1000 for his family while he went to Ghana to take care of "unpaid receipts". No reasonable connection to Witness' interaction with the Prosecution
561	19 May 2008, p. 10127	Money for medical expenses	Witness was given money to cover his medical expenses, the cost of which he said he could meet on his own; Witness considered this a "goodwill gesture" by the Prosecution
561	19 May 2008, p. 10128	Money for fuel, family assistance, transport and lodging	Witness says he received payments on days he was not interviewed
388	15 July 2008, p. 13680-1	Money from Prosecution	Witness was offered $50 by the Prosecution but rejected it
375[2]	26 Aug 2008, p. 14644-50	Money for transportation	Witness given $50 for a five minute motorbike ride
375	27 Aug 2008, p. 14717-8	Money for family and family security	No provision for assistance for family under Rule 39(ii)
568	15 Sept 2008, p. 16262-3	Money for prepping and lost wages	Witness denies that any prepping was done; if it was done, then expenses should have rightfully been covered by WVS instead of WMU
274[3]	11 Dec 2008, p. 22227	Money for communication, lost wages,	Witness received payments for meeting purposes but

		transport, etc	the Prosecution has not provided records of any such meetings
274	11 Dec 2008, p. 22229	Money for communication	Witness given money for top-up cards which he used on personal business as well as OTP business
274	11 Dec 2008, p. 22237-8	Money for lost wages	There was no interview with this witness during the time the lost wages were supposedly lost
274	11 Dec 2008, p. 22242	Money for one year's house rent	Witness' one-year house rent was paid by the Prosecution at a time when such costs should have been borne by WVS

[3] It appears that TF1-274 was used both as a Prosecution witness and as a source for information, for which he was paid. See, ex., Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T, 11 December 2008, p. 22229-30 and p. 22242-3.

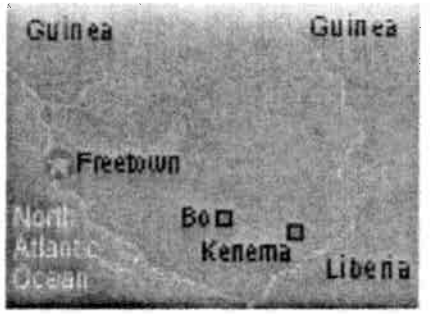
The Conflict in Sierra Leone



Horrific destruction of life and property!

1.2 million murdered, raped, maimed and mutilated.

5 million internally displaced.

2 countries destroyed...Sierra Leone and Liberia.

Sustained by a joint criminal enterprise backed by three heads of state...Libya, Liberia, and Burkina Faso.

Motive was geopolitical influence and personal greed and avarice.

Lasted over 10 years.

The Special Court for Sierra Leone was established to seek justice for the victims.

Ultimately all those who bore the greatest responsibility were accounted for.

I. BACKGROUND

1. "Witness DCT-097" is the pseudonym of a protected Defence witness[6] listed on the Defence Core Witness List.[7] According to the Defence, Alex Yearsley of "Global Witness"[8] interviewed Witness DCT-097 in Abidjan in 2001 or 2002 and recorded a statement from the latter ("Global Witness Statement"), which statement allegedly related to the witness's involvement in trading diamonds for the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) in Monrovia from 2000.[9] Subsequently, the Prosecution contacted Witness-DCT-097 through Yearsley and communicated with him from 2004 until sometime in 2006.[10] The Defence maintains that during this period, the Prosecution made numerous payments to Witness DCT-097 estimated at $ 30,000 in total.[11] The Prosecution in accordance with its disclosure obligations under the Rules disclosed to the Defence certain material in relation to Witness DCT-097 under the pseudonym "TF1-354" although it ultimately did not call Witness DCT-097 as a witness in any case before the Special Court.[12] However, the Prosecution did not disclose the Global Witness Statement nor the payments made to Witness DCT-097.

2. The Defence submits that despite repeated requests from the Defence for disclosure of the statement or statements given by Witness DCT-097 and records of moneys given to the witness, the Prosecution has breached its Rule 68(B) obligations by failing to disclose information relating to:

(i) the existence and substance of a statement given by DCT-097 to Global Witness, which the Prosecution is aware of and which pre-dated Prosecution interviews with DCT-097; and

(ii) an accounting and explanation of money (estimated at almost $ 30,000) paid to or benefits conferred on DCT-097 by the Prosecution from 2004 to 2006.[13]

3. The Defence maintains that the Global Witness Statement is exculpatory in that it states that Charles Taylor was not connected to the RUF diamond trading in Monrovia and clearly suggests the innocence of the Accused.[14] The Defence argues that the Prosecution "must have this statement within its custody or control" or "at the very least, it must have been privy to the contents of the statement".[15] The Defence further maintains that the payments made to Witness DCT-097 by the Prosecution are an exculpatory factor that "necessarily impacts on the credibility and reliability" of the witness's statements disclosed to the Defence. The Defence maintains that by failing to disclose the Global Witness Statement and the said payments, the Prosecution is in breach of its Rule 68(B) obligations in relation to Witness DCT-097 whom the Defence intends to call as a witness[16] and accordingly, requests the Trial Chamber to compel the Prosecution to do so.

II. APPLICABLE LAW

4. The Trial Chamber is mindful of the rights of the Accused as provided for in Article 17(4) of the Statute of the Special Court.

5. The Trial Chamber takes note of the legal provisions governing the disclosure of materials by the Prosecutor as set out in Rule 66, which provides in relevant part that:

> (i) Subject to the provisions of Rules 50, 53, 69 and 75, the Prosecutor shall:
>
> (i) Within 30 days of the initial appearance of an accused, disclose to the Defence copies of the statements of all witnesses whom the Prosecutor intends to call to testify and all evidence to be presented pursuant to Rule 92bis at trial.
> (ii) Continuously disclose to the Defence copies of the statements of all additional prosecution witnesses whom the Prosecutor intends to call to testify, but not later than 60 days before the date for trial, or as otherwise ordered by a Judge of the Trial Chamber either before or after the commencement of the trial, upon good cause being shown by the Prosecution. Upon good cause being shown by the Defence, a Judge of the Trial Chamber may order that copies of the statements of additional prosecution witnesses that the Prosecutor does not intend to call be made available to the defence within a prescribed time.

6. The specific provisions of the law relating to the disclosure of exculpatory materials is embodied in Rule 68 of the Rules, which provides in relevant part as follows:

> (A) The Prosecutor shall, within 14 days of receipt of the Defence case Statement, make a statement under this Rule disclosing to the defence the existence of evidence known to the Prosecutor which may be relevant to issues raised in the Defence Case Statement.
> (B) The Prosecutor shall, within 30 days of the initial appearance of the accused, make a statement under this Rule disclosing to the defence the existence of evidence known to the Prosecutor which in any way tends to suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or may affect the credibility of prosecution evidence. The Prosecutor shall be under a continuing obligation to disclose any such exculpatory material.

III. DELIBERATIONS

Arguments relating to the status of Witness DCT-097

7. The Prosecution maintains that it is under no duty to disclose any materials relating to Witness DCT-097 as the latter is a Defence witness and has never been included on any of the Prosecution's witness lists filed with the Court in this case, nor has he ever testified on behalf of the Prosecution in this or any other case before the Special Court.[17] The Prosecution submits that its disclosure to the Defence on 14 June 2010 of un-redacted materials relating to the witness was "on a bona fide basis and in the spirit of the jurisprudence in this area",[18] rather than out of an obligation under the Rules. The Prosecution maintains that it has strictly complied with its disclosure obligations under the Rules and has "disclosed details of all payments to and benefits conferred on Prosecution witnesses. However, there is no jurisprudence to support the Defence contention that such disclosure must be made in respect of Defence witnesses."[19]

8. The Defence submits that on 21 July 2010 a Defence Lawyer and Defence investigator interviewed Witness DCT-097 who inter alia, disclosed to the Defence (a) that in 2004 the Prosecution approached him through Alex Yearsley of Global Witness; (b) that Witness DCT-097 was subsequently interviewed by various members of the Prosecution (including David Crane, Gilbert Morissette, John Berry, Maggie and an Australian); (c) that the Prosecution wanted him to confirm what they said they had heard from other sources, namely, that Witness DCT-097 was the main RUF person who carried diamonds to Charles Taylor; (d) that the Prosecution paid DCT-097 a "monthly allowance" of approximately $ 1,200 from sometime in 2004 until sometime in 2006 generally for his "upkeep"; (e) that the Prosecution stopped paying this allowance to DCT-097 in 2006 when they met him for the final time and told him that "they were not getting what they needed from him"; and (f) that on this occasion, the Prosecution had been prepared to relocate Witness DCT-097 and his family but that he ultimately refused to cooperate.[20]

9. The Defence further submits that the nine statements and/or correspondences dated between 27 May 2004 and 15 January 2006 disclosed by the Prosecution to the Defence on 14 June 2010 in relation to DCT-097[21] are further proof that the Prosecution was in contact with and/or interviewed the witness from May 2004 to January 2006.[22] The Defence submits further that during the RUF

Case before Trial Chamber I,[23] the Prosecution assigned the witness the pseudonym TF1-354 and obtained protective measures for him as a "Category 1(C) insider witness", including a provision wherein the Defence could not contact TF1-354 without the Court's prior approval[24]. The Defence argues in view of the above, that DCT-097/TF1-354 remains a Prosecution witness and the fact that the Defence now intends to call him as a Defence witness should not relieve the Prosecution of its disclosure obligations under Rule 66 and/or Rule 68.[25] The Defence further submits that the Prosecution's use of Witness DCT-097 as an informant or source rather than as a potential witness is not significant for purposes of a Rule 68(B) disclosure[26]. Rather it is the nature and/or content of the material in relation to the witness that determines whether or not it is exculpatory and therefore should be disclosed.[27]

Findings

10. There is evidence to suggest that between May 2004 and January 2006 the Prosecution interacted with and/or interviewed Witness DCT-097 (otherwise known to the Prosecution as TF1-354), notwithstanding that he ultimately was never called to testify. The Prosecution admits making redacted and un-redacted disclosures to the Defence of nine statements and/or correspondences in relation to these interactions, on 17 May 2006 and 14 June 10, respectively.[28] The fact that the Prosecution obtained protective measures from Trial Chamber I for this individual including the use of the pseudonym "TF1-354" in order to protect his identity as a "Category 1(C) insider witness"[29] further illustrates the Prosecutions' regard of this individual as a potential Prosecution witness. This evidence strongly suggests that for all intents and purposes Witness DCT-097 or TF1-354 was a potential Prosecution witness.

11. The Trial Chamber notes in any event, that the Defence request is for disclosure of potentially exculpatory material pursuant to Rule 68(B) rather than a request for general disclosure pursuant to Rule 66. Under Rule 68(B), the Prosecution is required to continuously disclose to the Defence "the existence of evidence known to the Prosecutor which in any way tends to suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the Accused or which may affect the credibility of the Prosecution evidence". This provision has been liberally construed to apply to all exculpatory material that is in the custody or control of the Prosecutor, and is not limited to material relating to "Prosecution witnesses" as argued by the Prosecution.[30] Accordingly the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution is under an obligation to disclose to the Defence in relation to Witness DCT-097/TF1-354, any exculpatory material in its custody or control, regardless of whether or not the latter was called by the Prosecution to testify.

Arguments in relation to the Disclosure of the Global Witness Statement:

12. Firstly, the Defence requests the Trial Chamber to compel the Prosecution to fulfil its Rule 68 obligations by disclosing "the existence and substance of a statement given by Witness DCT-097 to Global Witness, of which the Prosecution is aware and which predated Prosecution interviews with DCT-097."[31] The Defence submits that in his interview of 21 July 2010, Witness DCT-097 informed members of the Defence (a) that in 2001 or 2002 he was interviewed by one Alex Yearsley of Global Witness who recorded a statement from the witness; (b) that the Global Witness Statement related to the witness's involvement in trading diamonds for the RUF in Monrovia from 2000 (c) that DCT-097 told Global Witness that the RUF were not involved in trading diamonds with Charles Taylor or the Liberian Government but that this was the story Global Witness wanted DCT-097 to confirm; (d) that Alex Yearsley called DCT-097 from the Congo in 2004 to say that a contact of his from the Special Court from Sierra Leone would be in touch with DCT-097 and that he (DCT-097) should cooperate; (e) that a few days later, Gilbert Morissette of the Prosecution called DCT-097 and asked to meet with the latter at a place chosen by DCT-097; (f) that the Prosecution wanted DCT-097 to confirm what they said they heard from other sources, namely, that DCT-097 was the main RUF person who carried diamonds to Charles Taylor; and (g) that DCT-097 was interviewed by various members of the Prosecution including David Crane, Gilbert Morissette, John Berry, Maggie and an Australian.[32] The Defence argues that since the crux of the Prosecution case rests on allegations that blood diamonds were provided by the RUF to Charles Taylor in exchange for his support of their revolution, the information given by Witness DCT-097 in the Global Witness Statement that the [32] Motion, para. 10.

RUF was not involved in trading diamonds with Charles Taylor or the Liberian Government, clearly suggests the innocence of the Accused.[33]

13. Although Global Witness responded to a query from the Defence indicating that "they no longer have the requested information on record and are unable to provide it," [34] the Defence claims that, before the Prosecution decided to contact DCT-097 it is only logical that Global Witness must have given the Prosecution some indication or summary of the substance of its interview with DCT-097 thus knowledge of this exculpatory material should be imputed to them[35] and that the Prosecution must have this Statement within its custody or control, or at the very least, been privy to the contents of the Statement.[36] The Defence further submits that given the demonstrated level of cooperation between Global Witness and the Prosecution the Prosecution is better placed to obtain the Statement and should have obtained and disclosed it[37]. The Defence accordingly requests the Trial Chamber to compel the Prosecution to disclose the extent of its knowledge in regard to the Global Witness Statement as well as a copy the Statement itself or Investigative Notes based on the lead Alex Yearsley gave to Gilbert Morissette in 2004.[38]

14. The Prosecution opposes the Motion on the grounds that it does not have any Global Witness Statement in its possession, nor does it know of the existence of any Rule 68 evidence in such material as speculated by the Defence.[39]

Findings

15. The Trial Chamber has held that in order to establish that the Prosecution has breached its Rule 68(B) disclosure obligations, the onus is upon the Defence to:

(i) identify the material sought with requisite specificity;

(ii) make a prima facie showing of the exculpatory or potentially exculpatory nature of the materials requested;

(iii) make a prima facie showing of the Prosecution's custody or control of the materials requested;

(iv) show that the Prosecution has, in fact, failed to disclose the targeted exculpatory material.[40]

Taylor*, SCSL-03-01-T-770, Decision on Defence Motion Pursuant to Rules 66 and 68 for the Disclosure of Exculpatory Material in redacted

16. Regarding the alleged Global Witness Statement, the Defence has not made a prima facie showing that the Global Witness Statement actually exists; that its content is potentially exculpatory or that it is in the custody or control of the Prosecution. On the contrary, the Defence has provided information showing that Global Witness "no longer has the information requested by the Defence and that they cannot be of assistance".[41] Furthermore, the Trial Chamber is of the view that the Defence's allegation that before the Prosecution decided to contact DCT-097 it is only logical that Global Witness must have given the Prosecution some indication or summary of the substance of its interview with DCT-097[42] and that the Prosecution must have this Statement within its custody or control, or at the very least, been privy to the contents of the Statement,"[43] have no factual basis and are pure speculation or conjecture on the part of the Defence. The Trial Chamber finds that the Defence has not demonstrated on a prima facie basis, the Prosecution's breach of Rule 68(B) obligation with regard to the alleged Global Witness Statement and accordingly dismisses this part of the Motion.

Arguments in relation to the Disclosure of Payments made to Witness DCT-097

17. Secondly, the Defence requests the Trial Chamber to compel the Prosecution to fulfil its Rule 68 obligations by disclosing "an accounting and explanation of money (estimated at $ 30,000) paid to or benefits conferred on DCT-097 by the Prosecution from 2004 to 2006."[44] It argues that the payments made to Witness DCT-097 during this period of cooperation with the Prosecution are "exculpatory" within the meaning of Rule 68(B) as they "necessarily impact on the credibility and reliability" of statements made by the witness to the Prosecution.[45]

18. The Defence submits that in his interview of 21 July 2010, Witness DCT-097 further informed members of the Defence (a) that after meeting with and while being interviewed by various members of the Prosecution (including David Crane, Gilbert Morissette, John Berry, Maggie and an Australian), the Prosecution paid DCT-097 a monthly "allowance" of approximately $ 1,200 a month from sometime in 2004 until 2006; (b) that the Prosecution did not provide this allowance for any

19. In support of the above submissions, the Defence annexed copies of 17 Money Gram receipts to the Motion which, it submits, were provided to the Defence investigators by Witness DCT-097, showing payments being sent via the money transfer service known as Money Gram, from five former or current Prosecution employees (including Mustapha Koroma, Aiah Komeh, Miatta Samba, Prince Sannoh and Umaru Kamara) to DCT-097 in various West African Countries, during the period 8 April 2004 to 19 June 2006 in amounts such as $ 2,000; € 1,552 Euros; 8,989,200 Ghanaian Cedis and 526,269 CFA Francs.[47] The Defence further submits that based on the information from DCT-097, the 17 Money Gram receipts do not represent the sum total of payments made to or benefits conferred upon DCT-097 by the Prosecution and that additional payments were also made in cash.[48]

20. The Prosecution, whilst not denying that it made the alleged payments to DCT-097, submits that "at this stage it is not under an obligation to disclose material relating to payments made to or benefits conferred upon DCT-097 as the latter was not called to testify on behalf of the Prosecution".[49]

Findings

21. The Trial Chamber adopts the view of the ICTR in the Prosecutor v. Karemera et al. where the Trial Chamber in interpreting a rule similar to our Rule 68(B) stated:

> Materials or information within the Prosecutor's knowledge concerning any benefits paid to and/or promises made to witnesses and victims beyond that which is reasonably required [for the management of witnesses and victims] has a different character and should therefore be disclosed as evidence which may affect the credibility of witnesses under Rule 68.[50]

22. With regard to the alleged payments made to or benefits conferred on Witness DCT-097, the Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution has neither challenged the contents of the 17 Money Gram receipts annexed to the Motion nor the fact that the payments were made by five of its staff to Witness DCT-097. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes that some of the "sender names" indicated on the 17 Money Gram receipts are names of Prosecution employees listed on a Special Court telephone directory attached as Annex H to the Motion. In the Trial Chamber's view, these 17 receipts link the Prosecution to the payments made to Witness DCT-097 during the period 8 April 2004 to 19 June 2006. The payments do not appear to have been made by the Witness and Victims Service of the Special Court (WVS) and on the face of it, appear to be beyond that which is reasonably required for the management of witnesses or victims. Accordingly the Trial Chamber holds that they should have been disclosed by the Prosecution as evidence which may affect the credibility of the Prosecution evidence under Rule 68(B). The Trial Chamber is satisfied in relation to the alleged payments, that the Defence has (a) identified the material in question with sufficient specificity; (b) made a prima facie showing of the exculpatory or potentially exculpatory nature of the said payments; (c) made a prima facie showing of the Prosecution's custody or control of the materials requested; and (d) shown that that the Prosecution has, in fact, failed to disclose the said exculpatory material. The Trial Chamber finds that the Defence has discharged its burden of proof under Rule 68(B) in relation to the payments made to Witness DCT-097.

FOR THE ABOVE REASONS, on 7 September 2010 the Trial Chamber in its Oral Decision

GRANTED THE MOTION in part; and ORDERED the Prosecution as follows:

1. To disclose to the Defence forthwith, pursuant to Rule 68:

   (a) An account of all payments made to or benefits conferred upon DCT-097/TF1-354 by the Prosecution for the period 2004 to 2006, or at any time before or after that period;

   (b) All documents relating to such payments, including receipts, vouchers, Money Gram receipts, etc;

2. To provide an explanation for those payments.

DISMISSED the remainder of the Motion.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Defence submits that the Prosecution has failed to comply with its Rule 68 obligations in regard to Witness DCT-097/TF1-354.[1]
2. Despite repeated requests for disclosure of statements given by DCT-097 and records of money given to DCT-097 by the Prosecution, the Prosecution has failed to disclose information relating to the following:

   i) the existence and substance of a statement given by DCT-097 to Global Witness, which the Prosecution is aware and which pre-dated Prosecution interviews with DCT-097 ("Statement"), and

   ii) an accounting and explanation of money (estimated at almost $30,000) paid to or benefits conferred on DCT-097 by the Prosecution from 2004 to 2006 ("Payments").
3. The Defence have established on a prima facie basis that the Prosecution has failed to disclose the Statement and Payments which tend to suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or may affect the credibility of prosecution evidence. Thus the Defence request the Trial Chamber to compel the disclosure of the Statement and Payments forthwith.

II. BACKGROUND

4. On 12 May 2010 the Defence indicated that DCT-097 was on its Core Witness List.[2] DCT-097 is a protected defence witness according to the 27 May 2009 Defence Protective Measures Decision.[3]
5. On 19 May 2010, the Defence disclosed the name of DCT-097 to the Prosecution.[4] In its First Disclosure Letter, the Defence specifically requested:

   "[...] any material, within its possession, which is relevant to the named witnesses including, but not limited to, witness statements and/or disbursement records. The Defence have reason to believe that the Prosecution has previously been in contact with DCT-097 and thus asks specifically for unredacted copies of any statements taken as well [sic] records of any expenses paid to (or on behalf of) this witness through the Prosecution's Witness Management Unit".

6. The Prosecution did not disclose anything. So the Defence followed its First Disclosure Letter with a second, stating that the delay in disclosure was hindering the Defence's progress in preparation asking the Prosecution to clarify whether:

> "[…] you do not have any of the requested material in your possession; you are in the process of disclosing it, and if so, when such disclosure would be made; or you have the requested material in your possession but are not inclined to disclose it".[5]

7. The Prosecution did not immediately disclose anything nor respond directly to the Second Disclosure Request.

8. On 10 June 2010, the Prosecution sent the Defence a letter (in relation to another witness) noting that:

> "[…] when the Prosecution does not reply to your requests for the disclosure of all statements/disbursement records in relation to Defence witnesses, it indicates that there are neither statements nor disbursement records in the Prosecution's possession to be disclosed".[6]

9. On 14 June 2010, the Prosecution disclosed nine statements and/or correspondences in relation to DCT-097,[7] dated: 27 May 2004, 28 May 2004, 11 October 2004, 14 February 2005, 22 February 2005, 28 November 2005, 15 January 2006. One disclosure was undated. The Prosecution did not disclose the existence or substance of the Global Witness Statement nor a record of Payments. The Prosecution has given no explanation to the Defence regarding its lack of disclosure in relation to DCT-097.

10. On 21 July 2010, a Defence lawyer and a Defence investigator met with DCT-097 and interviewed him, partially in respect to his interaction and cooperation with the Prosecution. On this occasion, DCT-097, inter alia, told the Defence the following:[8]

    i) That he was first approached by the Prosecution in 2004 through Alex Yearsley of Global Witness;[9]

ii) That Alex Yearsley of Global Witness had interviewed and taken a statement from him in Abidjan in 2001 or 2002;

iii) That the person who put Alex Yearsley of Global Witness in touch with DCT-097 was [Prosecution Witness TF1-151];[10]

iv) That the statement he (DCT-097) gave to Global Witness in 2001 or 2002 related to DCT-097's involvement in trading diamonds for the RUF in Monrovia from 2000;

v) That he told Global Witness that the RUF were not involved in trading diamonds with Charles Taylor or the Liberian Government, but that this was the story Global Witness wanted DCT-097 to confirm;

vi) That Alex Yearsley of Global Witness called DCT-097 from the Congo in 2004 to say that a contact of his from the Special Court from Sierra Leone would be in touch with DCT-097 and that he should cooperate;

vii) That a few days later, Gilbert Morissette of the Prosecution called DCT-097 and asked DCT-097 to meet with him in a location of his choice;

viii) That the Prosecution wanted DCT-097 to confirm what they said they had heard from other sources – that DCT-097 was the main RUF person who carried diamonds to Charles Taylor;

ix) That after meeting with and while being interviewed by various members of the Prosecution (including David Crane, Gilbert Morissette, John Berry, Maggie, and an Australian), the Prosecution paid DCT-097 a monthly "allowance" of approximately $1200 a month from sometime in 2004 until sometime in 2006;

x) That the Prosecution did not provide this allowance for any specific purpose, but for DCT-097's general "upkeep";

xi) That this allowance would be given to DCT-097 in cash if he was in Freetown or would be sent to him via MoneyGram if he was travelling throughout the sub-region;

[10] DCT-097 referred to the contact by his proper name, but the Defence knows him to be TF1-151.

xii) That this allowance stopped when DCT-097 met with the Prosecution for a final time in Senegal in 2006 and the Prosecution told DCT-097 that they were not getting what they needed from him.

11. DCT-097 has given the Defence color copies of seventeen MoneyGram receipts showing payments being sent from five different Prosecution employees to DCT-097 in various West African countries, during the period of 8 April 2004 to 19 June 2006, in amounts such as $2000, €1552, 8,989,200 Ghanaian Cedis, and 526,269 CFA Francs.[11]

III. APPLICABLE LAW & LEGAL BASIS

12. The plain language of Rule 68(B) states:

> The Prosecutor shall, within 30 days of the initial appearance of the accused, make a statement under this Rule disclosing to the defence the existence of evidence known to the Prosecutor which in any way tends to suggest the innocence or mitigate the guilt of the accused or may affect the credibility of prosecution evidence. The Prosecutor shall be under a continuing obligation to disclose any such exculpatory material.

13. The ongoing nature of the Prosecution's Rule 68(B) disclosure obligations is indisputable.[12]

14. In order to comply with its Rule 68(B) obligations, the Prosecution must disclose to the Defence "the existence of exculpatory material known to the Prosecutor, but that such statement is not required to be in any particular form".[13]

15. This Trial Chamber has previously determined the Defence must satisfy the following before it will issue an order for further disclosure under Rule 68(B):

i) identify the material sought with the requisite specificity;

ii) make a prima facie showing of the exculpatory or potentially exculpatory character of the materials requested;

iii) make a prima facie showing of the Prosecution's custody or control of the materials requested; and

iv) show that the Prosecution has in fact, failed to disclose the targeted exculpatory material.[14]

IV. SUBMISSIONS

Failure to disclose knowledge of the Global Witness Statement, which tends to suggest the innocence of the accused 16. The Trial Chamber should compel the Prosecution to disclose the extent of its knowledge in regard to the Statement DCT-097 gave to Global Witness in 2001 or 2002. The Trial Chamber should also compel disclosure of a copy of the Statement itself or Investigative Notes based on the lead Alex Yearsley gave to Gilbert Morissette in 2004. The Prosecution decided to contact and interview DCT-097 based on the information provided to them by Global Witness. Therefore, the Prosecution must have this Statement within its custody or control. At the very least, it must have been privy to the contents of the statement.

17. Based on information DCT-097 gave to the Defence, the Statement is exculpatory in that it states that Charles Taylor was not connected to the RUF diamond trading in Monrovia. This clearly suggests the innocence of the Accused and has not been disclosed by the Prosecution.

Failure to disclose tens of thousands of dollars of Payments to DCT-097, which may affect the credibility of Prosecution evidence

18. The Trial Chamber should compel the Prosecution to disclose the total amount of money paid to and benefits conferred on DCT-097 during the course of his cooperation with the Prosecution. On the basis of its interview with the witness, the Defence believes this period ranges from 2004 to 2006, but complete disclosure of any payments made or benefits conferred before, during or after this period should be compelled. The Defence has copies of seventeen such payments in the form of MoneyGram receipts, but based on the information DCT-097 gave to the Defence, this is not a complete collection and additional payments were also made in cash.

[14] Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T-770, Decision on Defence Motion Pursuant to Rules 66 and 68 for the Disclosure of Exculpatory Material in Redacted Witness Statements of Witnesses the Prosecution does not Intend to Call, 30 March 2009, para. 13; Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-T-516, Decision on Confidential Defence Motion for the Disclosure of Exculpatory Material Pursuant to Rule 68 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence, 22 May 2008, p. 4.

19. There are five Prosecution employees listed on the attached MoneyGram receipts as senders of the money to DCT-097: Mustapha Koroma, Aiah Komeh, Miatta Samba, Prince Sannoh and Umaru Kamara. The Defence knows all five of these individuals to be former or current Prosecution employees.[15] This is prima facie evidence that the Prosecution has paid money to DCT-097, an accounting of which it has failed to disclose to the Defence, despite being obviously within the Prosecution's custody or control.

20. In a letter to Lead Counsel, former Prosecutor Stephen Rapp has acknowledged that "information about payments made by the WMU [Witness Management Unit] for support of witnesses is evidence that 'may affect the credibility of prosecution evidence' under Rule 68(B)".[16] Former Prosecutor Stephen Rapp further stated that "this information has been and will be disclosed to the Defence".[17]

21. The Defence has indicated its intention to call DCT-097 as a witness. The Prosecution have disclosed several statements taken from DCT-097 by the Prosecution. The fact that Payments were made to DCT-097 during this period of cooperation with the Prosecution necessarily impacts on the credibility and reliability of those statements.

22. The ICTR has ample case law to support the Defence position. In Prosecutor v. Karemera et al, the Trial Chamber stated that:

> "Material or information within the Prosecutor's knowledge concerning any benefits paid to and/or promises made to witnesses and victims beyond that which is reasonably required [for the management of witnesses and victims] has a different character and should therefore be disclosed as evidence which may affect the credibility of witnesses under Rule 68".[18]

[15] Two of the "senders" were still listed on the Special Court for Sierra Leone telephone directory under the Prosecution heading as recently as December 2009. [Confidential Annex H]

[16] See Letter from Stephen Rapp to Courtenay Griffiths, QC, 19 December 2007 [Confidential Annex I] ("Rapp Letter").

Karemera, Ngirumpatse, Nzirorera,* ICTR-98-44-PT, Decision on Defence Motion for Full Disclosure of Payments to Witnesses and to Exclude Testimony from Paid Witnesses, 23 August 2005, para. 6. See also, Prosecutor v. Nzirorera et al, ICTR-98-44-I, Decision on the Defence Motion for Disclosure of Exculpatory Evidence, 7 October 2003, para. 16; and *Prosecutor v. 23. In Prosecutor v. Zigiranyirazo, the Trial Chamber determined that the disclosure of the total cost of such payments and benefits should be made in the interests of transparency and justice.[19]

24. Thus, the Defence submits that the exculpatory nature of the Payments to DCT-097 is incontrovertible and in the custody of the Prosecution and must be disclosed.

V. CONCLUSION

25. For the foregoing reasons, the Defence requests the Trial Chamber to compel the Prosecution to fulfil its Rule 68 obligations and order the immediate disclosure of the substance of a statement given by DCT-097 to Global Witness, of which the Prosecution is aware and which pre-dated Prosecution interviews with DCT-097 ("Statement"), and an accounting and explanation of money paid to or benefits conferred on DCT-097 by the Prosecution from 2004 to 2006, or at any time before or after.

THE APPEALS CHAMBER ("Appeals Chamber") of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court") composed of Justice Renate Winter, Presiding Judge, Justice Jon M. Kamanda, Justice George Gelaga King and Justice Emmanuel Ayoola;

SEIZED of the "Defence Notice of Appeal and Submissions Regarding the Majority Decision Concerning the Pleading of JCE in the Second Amended Indictment", dated 26 March 2009 ("Appeal"), as corrected;[1]

CONSIDERING the "Prosecution Response to Defence Appeal Against Majority Decision on the Pleading of Joint Criminal Enterprise in the Second Amended Indictment", dated 3 April 2009 ("Response") and the "Defence Reply to the Prosecution Response to Defence Appeal Against Majority Decision on the Pleading of Joint Criminal Enterprise in the Second Amended Indictment", dated 7 April 2009 ("Reply");

NOTING the "Decision on Urgent Defence Motion Regarding a Fatal Defect in the Prosecution's Second Amended Indictment Relating to the Pleading of JCE" issued by Trial Chamber II ("Trial Chamber") on 27 February 2009 ("Impugned Decision");

NOTING the "Decision on Defence Application for Leave to Appeal the Decision on Urgent Defence Motion Regarding a Fatal Defect in the Prosecution's Second Amended Indictment Relating to the Pleading of JCE", dated 18 March 2009, in which the Trial Chamber by majority granted the Defence of Charles Ghankay Taylor ("Defence") leave to make the Appeal; HEREBY DECIDES the Appeal based on the written submissions of the Parties.

I. BACKGROUND

1. The dispute giving rise to the Appeal was initiated by the Defence in an urgent motion filed on 14 December 2007 in which it argued that joint criminal enterprise ("JCE") was defectively pleaded in the Second Amended Indictment.[2] The Prosecution filed its response on 7 January 2008,[3] and a reply was filed on 14 January 2008.[4] In light of the Appeals Chamber's judgment in the case of Prosecutor v. Brima et al.,[5] the Trial Chamber, on 6 March 2008, allowed the Parties to file a new round of submissions.[6] These consequential submissions were completed on 15 April 2008.[7] The Trial Chamber dismissed the Defence's motion in an oral decision on 19 February 2009[8] with written reasons following in the Impugned Decision on 27 February 2009. A majority of the Trial Chamber held that the Second Amended Indictment[9] had to be read as a whole. They also held that the Prosecution had adequately fulfilled the pleading requirements of the alleged JCE, and that it had provided sufficient details to put the Defence on notice of the case against him.[10] In his dissent, Justice Lussick opined that the Second Amended Indictment defeetively pleaded JCE as a mode of liability,[11] but that other material provided by the Prosecution nonetheless put the Defence on notice of the alleged JCE.[12]

II. SUBMISSIONS

A. Appeal

2. The Defenee submits that the Majority of the Trial Chamber erred in holding that JCE was properly pleaded in the Second Amended Indictment.[13] The Defence essentially advances four grounds in support of its submission.[14] First, it submits that the Seeond Amended Indictment is defective because it fails to properly plead the "eommon purpose" of the alleged JCE.[15] The Defenee avers that the Majority erroneously discerned the common purpose from paragraphs 5 and 33 of the Seeond Amended Indictment.[16] In its view, paragraph 5 serves solely to particularise

Count 1 (acts of terrorism)[17] and paragraph 33, assuming it contains an implicit allegation of JCE, does not describe the common purpose.[18] The Defence posits that there is no reason, nor was any advanced in the Impugned Decision, why the two paragraphs should be read together.[19]

3. Second, the Defence submits that the Majority erred in only considering some, but not all, of the factors relevant to whether JCE was adequately pleaded in the Second Amended Indictment.[20] It contends that the factors omitted from adequate consideration include (i) by what means the common objective was contemplated to have been achieved; (ii) the legal effect on Taylor's statutory rights of notice resulting from deletion of the paragraphs describing the JCE in the Amended Indictment[21] and the Second Amended Indictment; and (iii) the "fluid, ever-evolving" description of the common purpose in the Prosecution's "secondary accusatory instruments and/or pronouncements".[22] The Defence also argues that the Majority invariably resolved the factors it did consider in favour of upholding the Second Amended Indictment.[23] These errors, the Defence contends, resulted in shifting the burden of showing the sufficiency of pleading of JCE from the Prosecution to the Appellant.[24]

4. Third, the Defence challenges the Majority's finding that the Prosecution "intended to charge" Taylor with having participated in a JCE, because simply showing the Prosecution's "intention to charge" JCE is legally insufficient to put an accused on adequate notice of the material elements of that mode of liability.[25]

5. Finally, the Defence submits that the Majority erroneously considered that paragraph 34 of the Second Amended Indictment served to partially clarify his alleged participation in the JCE.[26] According to the Defence, paragraph 34 is only concerned with Taylor's alleged responsibility under Article 6(3) of the Statute, whereas JCE liability arises under Article 6(1) of the Statute.[27]

6. The Defence requests the Appeals Chamber to grant the following relief:

(i) to hear oral arguments on the Appeal;[28]

(ii) to dismiss the Second Amended Indictment and to release Taylor forthwith from custody;[29] and

(iii) alternatively, to sever the allegation of JCE from the Second Amended Indictment.[30]

B. Response

7. The Prosecution opposes the Appeal.[31] It submits that the Majority of the Trial Chamber correctly concluded that, read as a whole, the Second Amended Indictment fulfils the pleading requirements with respect to JCE.[32] The Prosecution submits that JCE was pleaded as a form of liability in this case[33] and that the Second Amended Indictment, in particular paragraphs 5 and 33, sufficiently pleads the "nature and purpose" of the JCE.[34] The Prosecution contends that the requirements for proving a JCE include "the existenee of a common plan, design or purpose which amounts to or involves the commission of a crime provided for in the Statute" and that the words "plan" or "design" includes the means by which any objective is to be achieved.[35] According to the Prosecution, the Second Amended Indictment states that all the crimes charged amounted to or were involved in a common plan, design or purpose in which Taylor participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable eonsequence thereof.[36]

8. In response to the Defence's argument that the Majority of the Trial Chamber omitted relevant factors from consideration, the Prosecution submits that the Majority provided a sufficiently reasoned opinion.[37] First, it argues that the Second Amended Indictment makes clear that the means to achieve the common purpose consisted of the campaign of terror, which included the crimes charged, and that there was no need for the Majority to address separately how that campaign would be carried out.[38] Second, the Prosecution submits that, as the Second Amended Indictment was found to have put the Defence on sufficient notice, the Majority did not have to discuss the issue of notice any further, nor did it shift the burden of proof.[39] Third, the Prosecution contends that it has consistently alleged that Taylor "participated in a common plan, design or purpose to utilize a campaign of terror, including all the crimes charged in the Indictment, in order to pillage the diamond wealth of Sierra Leone and forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone."[40] The Prosecution refers in this respect to the allegations on JCE in the Original Indictment,[41] the Case Summary accompanying the Amended Indictment,[42] the Prosecution's Pre-Trial Brief,[43] its opening statement, and the Amended Case Summary.[44] Also, assuming arguendo that there were changes in its JCE pleadings, the Prosecution argues that the Defence fails to show how it was prejudiced given that the Amended Case Summary was filed five months before the commencement of the presentation of evidence.[45]

9. The Prosecution further submits that the Majority's reference to the Prosecution's "intention" to charge JCE simply indicates that participation in a "JCE" was being charged despite the fact that the Prosecution did not use that exact terminology.[46] It avers that the full Impugned Decision explains in detail how each of the requirements for pleading JCE was satisfied.[47]

10. Lastly, the Prosecution submits that paragraph 34 of the Second Amended Indictment is relevant to the nature of Taylor's alleged participation in the JCE because an accused in a leadership position may contribute to a JCE by consistently failing to take action to prevent crimes or to punish responsible subordinates.[48] It also argues that the Amended Case Summary links Taylor's alleged leadership position with all the modes of liability charged.[49] In any event, the Prosecution posits that "the superior responsibility aspect" can be severed from the Impugned Decision without impacting its outcome and that, therefore any error in this regard does not invalidate the Impugned Decision.[50]

11. The Prosecution opposes the Defence's request for an oral hearing[51] and the relief sought.[52]

C. Reply

12. The Defence replies that, the Prosecution fails to explain why paragraphs 5 and 33 of the Second Amended Indictment should be read together.[53] The Defence further submits that, contrary to the Prosecution's position, the Impugned Decision does not identify the campaign of terror as the means to achieve an objective. In any event, it continues, the majority of the Trial Chamber erred in failing to identify the objective and the means of the JCE as alleged in the Second Amended Indictment.[54]

13. The Defence also replies that the Amended Case Summary eannot substitute for the pleading of material facts, such as the objective and means of the JCE, in the Second Amended Indictment. Citing Judge Lussick's dissenting opinion, the Defence argues that the Prosecution cannot cure a defective indictment by amending a case summary.[55] The Defence argues that the Prosecution has not provided timely, clear and consistent information in sufficient detail regarding the accusation of Taylor's participation in a JCE.[56] According to the Defence, the Prosecution only first mentioned "campaign of terror" in direct assoeiation with JCE liability in the Pre-Trial Brief, and again in its Opening Statement.[57] The Defenee contrasts these statements of the common purpose with allegedly inconsistent statements made by the Prosecution in the Original Indictment, the Amended Case Summary, the Second Amended Indictment, the Second Amended Case Summary and even the Prosecution's Response, which, taken together, the Defence argues have deprived the Defence notice of the nature of the eharges against Taylor.[58]

III. APPLICABLE LAW

14. In order to guarantee a fair trial, the Prosecution is obliged to plead material facts with enough specificity to inform the accused clearly of the charges against him so that he may prepare his defence.[59] In order to determine whether the Prosecution meets this requirement, the Chamber will read the indictment as a whole[60] and take into consideration the context of the case, in particular, the form of participation alleged against the accused.[61]

15. Where JCE is alleged, the Prosecution must plead, among other material facts, the nature and purpose of the enterprise and the nature of the accused's participation in the enterprise.[62] As the Appeals Chamber has previously ruled, the "purpose of the enterprise" comprises both the objective of the JCE and the means contemplated to achieve that objective.[63]

16. An indictment is defective if it fails to properly notify an accused of the nature and cause of the charges against him. In some circumstances, the defect in an indictment may be cured by timely, clear and consistent information detailing the factual basis underpinning the charges against the accused[64] so that the accused was in a reasonable position to understand the charges against him.[65]

IV. DELIBERATIONS

A. Request for oral hearing

17. As a preliminary issue, the Appeals Chamber considers the Parties' written submissions sufficient to adjudicate the Appeal,[66] and therefore declines to hear oral arguments from the Parties.

B. Alleged errors in the Impugned Decision

18. The Trial Chamber held that taken together, paragraphs 5, 9, 14, 22, 23, 28, 33 and 34 of the Second Amended Indictment fulfilled the pleading requirements for JCE and put the Defence on notice that the Prosecution intended to charge Taylor with having participated in a JCE.[67] In particular, it found: (i) that paragraphs 5 and 33 of the Second Amended Indictment denoted that the alleged common purpose of the JCE was "a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone";[68] and (ii) that Taylor's alleged participation in the JCE was identified in paragraphs 33 and 34 as "'planning, instigating, ordering, committing or aiding and abetting the planning, preparation or execution of the alleged crimes; or alternatively, that 'while holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over [RUF, AFRC, RUF/AFRC Junta and/or Liberian subordinates ...] the Accused is responsible for the acts of his subordinates [...]'".[69] It is these two findings that are the principal subject of the appeal. The Appeals Chamber notes that this appeal pertains only to questions regarding defects in the form of the Second Amended Indictment, and it is without prejudice to any findings regarding the criminal liability of the accused, particularly, in regard to the question whether a joint criminal enterprise has been established or whether the accused participated in such joint criminal enterprise.

19. As a preliminary matter, the Appeals Chamber considers that the Second Amended Indictment charges JCE as a mode of liability. While paragraph 33 of the Second Amended Indictment employs the words "common plan, design or purpose" instead of "joint criminal enterprise", these expressions have been used interchangeably in the practice of both the ICTR and the ICTY. In the present case, paragraph 33 effectively conveyed the concept of joint criminal enterprise to the Appellant, thereby putting him and his Defence on notice that JCE is charged as a mode of liability in this case.[70]

20. Turning to the first impugned finding regarding the alleged common purpose of the JCE, the Appeals Chamber observes that paragraph 5 of the Second Amended Indictment reads as follows:

> 5. Members of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control or, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, burned civilian property, and committed the crimes set forth below in paragraphs 6 through 31 and charged in Counts 2 through 11, as part of a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone.

Paragraph 33 of the Second Amended Indictment reads thus:

> 33. The ACCUSED, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1. of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment, which crimes the ACCUSED planned, instigated, ordered, committed, or in whose planning, preparation or execution the ACCUSED otherwise aided and abetted, or which crimes amounted to or were involved > within a common plan, design or purpose in which the ACCUSED participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose.[71]

[70] Cf. Prosecutor v. Sylvestre Gacumbitsi, ICTR-01-64-A, International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, Judgement, 7 July 2006, para. 165, with further references from both the ICTR and the ICTY.

21. Paragraph 33 alleges that Taylor participated in a JCE, the common purpose of which was to commit the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute. As evident from paragraph 33 itself, and as further reinforced by the repetition of the words "acting in concert" in relation to each Count of the Second Amended Indictment,[72] the alleged JCE encompasses all the crimes charged in the Second Amended Indictment. The only other place in the Second Amended Indictment where all the Counts are mentioned collectively in relation to an allegation of JCE, is in paragraph 5 under Count 1, wherein it is alleged that Taylor, "acting in concert with" others, committed the crimes charged in Counts 2 through 11 "as part of a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone". Therefore, although paragraph 5 appears under the heading "Particulars" under Count 1, charging acts of terrorism, it is clear from a holistic reading of the Second Amended Indictment that the allegations in paragraph 5 complement the allegations in paragraph 33. The Trial Chamber therefore did not err in finding that paragraphs 5 and 33 of the Second Amended Indictment sufficiently plead the alleged common purpose of the JCE. This part of the Appeal is accordingly dismissed.

22. As to the second impugned finding, paragraph 34 of the Second Amended Indictment reads:

> In addition, or alternatively, pursuant to Article 6.3 of the Statute, the ACCUSED, while holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, is individually criminally responsible for the crimes referred to in Article 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment. The ACCUSED is responsible for the criminal acts of his subordinates in that he knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the ACCUSED failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof.

23. The Appeals Chamber has considered the Defence submission that, because JCE arises under Article 6(1) of the Statute, the Trial Chamber erred in law in considering that the allegations on his liability under Article 6(3) of the Statute in paragraph 34 of the Second Amended Indictment serve to clarify his alleged participation in the JCE.[73] The law does not preclude acts from forming both the basis for liability under Article 6(3) and, at the same time, constituting participation in a JCE. Indeed, as held by the ICTY Appeals Chamber, it is "sufficient that the accused 'perform acts that in some way are directed to the furthering' of the JCE in the sense that he significantly contributes to the commission of the crimes involved in the JCE."[74] The Defence's challenge to the Trial Chamber's finding that paragraph 34 clarifies Taylor's participation in the JCE therefore fails.

24. The Appeals Chamber has also considered the Defenee submissions that the Trial Chamber erred in failing to consider (i) by what means the common objective was contemplated to have been achieved; (ii) the legal effect on Taylor's statutory notice rights resulting from deletion of the paragraphs describing the JCE in the Amended Indictment and the Second Amended Indictment; and (iii) the "fluid, cver-evolving" dcscription of the common purpose in the Prosecution's "secondary accusatory instruments and/or pronouncements".[75]

25. The Appeals Chamber reaffirms that the common purpose comprises both the objective of the JCE and the means contemplated to achieve that objective.[76] While the common purpose is a material fact which must be pleaded in the indictment, notice to the accused does not require the objective and the means to be separately plcaded in the indictment as long as the alleged criminality of the enterprise is made clear, as it was in the Second Amended Indictment.

26. The Appeals Chamber also finds no basis for the Defenec's allegations that the Trial Chamber was biased or that it improperly shifted the burden from the Prosecution to the Defence. The Trial Chamber expressly discussed the pleadings and allegations which the Defence suggests it disregarded, therefore the suggestion that these submissions were not considered in relation to the sufficiency of notice to the accused laeks support.[77] Because the Trial Chamber expressly noted in the Impugned Decision the contested pleadings and allegations, there is no indication that the Trial Chamber disregarded them in reaching its deeision.[78]

27. Finally, the Appeals Chamber dismisses the Defence argument that the Trial Chamber examined only whether Prosecution "intended to charge" JCE rather than whether legally sufficient notice had been given to Taylor. The Trial Chamber explicitly stated that "the Prosecution has adequately fulfilled the pleading requirements of the alleged Joint Criminal Enterprise in the

HEREBY DECIDES AS FOLLOWS, based solely on the written submissions of the parties, pursuant to Rule 73 A of the Rules;

I. SUBMISSIONS

1. Defence Motion

1. In its Motion the Defence requests that the Trial Chamber exercise its discretion by taking judicial notice of 15 facts which have been adjudicated upon in the AFRC Trial Judgement in the case of Prosecutor v. Brima, Kamara and Kanu ("AFRC Case") and which the Defence submits are relevant to the modes of liability with which the Accused is charged.[5] The 15 facts are set out in Annex A to the Motion, and some of them have been re-formulated or modified in paragraph 18 of the Reply. It submits that none of the proposed adjudicated facts are contentious or involve legal conclusions.[6] The Defence further contends that admission of the facts would enable the Defence to streamline the evidence it would need to present during the Defence case.[7] Taking judicial notice of these facts would promote judicial economy and the harmonisation of the judgements of the Special Court.[8]

2. Relying on case law of Trial Chamber I, the Defence submits that Rule 94 has a two-fold rationale: (a) to promote judicial economy by dispensing with the need for the parties to lead evidence in order to prove supplementary facts or allegations already proven in past proceedings, and (b) to harmonise judgements in relation to certain factual issues that arise in multiple cases before the Special Court.[9] With regard to Rule 94(B) specifically, it submits that the Rule creates a "well-founded presumption for the accuracy of [the adjudicated] fact, which therefore does not have to be proven again at trial, but which, subject to that presumption, may be challenged at trial."[10]

3. According to the Defence, there is settled jurisprudence on the legal criteria for determining what constitutes an adjudicated fact. These are:

a. The fact must be distinct, concrete and identifiable;
b. The fact must be relevant and pertinent to an issue in the current case;
c. The fact must not contain legal conclusions, nor may it constitute a legal finding;
d. The fact must not be based on a plea agreement or upon facts admitted voluntarily in an earlier case;
e. The fact clearly must not be subject to pending appeal, connected to a fact subjected to pending appeal, or have been settled finally on appeal;
f. The fact must not go to the acts, conduct or mental state of one of the accused persons;

g. The fact must not be sufficient, in itself, to establish the criminal responsibility of an accused person; and

4. The Defence submits that the Trial Chamber would promote fairness and judicial economy if it were to accept the proposed facts and consequently narrow the factual issues in dispute. It avers that the rights of the Accused will be upheld by ensuring that the trial is not unnecessarily long.[12] The Defence adds that the Prosecution would not be prejudiced by any Trial Chamber decision to take judicial notice of the adjudicated facts as it could move the Trial Chamber to call witnesses to challenge any rebuttable presumption that would be created. It notes that an ICTR Trial Chamber took judicial notice of certain facts even after the Defence had presented most of its evidence.[13]

5. The Defence contends that all the proposed facts are distinct, concrete and identifiable; that they are not of a legal character; that they have not been taken out of context; and that they have not been contradicted by any finding of the Appeals Chamber; and that they are relevant to the instant case.[14]

6. The Defence submits that all 15 facts are relevant as they address the relationship between the leaders of the AFRC/RUF and/or the command structure of the two factions, and specifically, the relationship between the AFRC and RUF as it pertains to the Freetown invasion in January 1999,[15] and the fact that the RUF did not come into Freetown as a cohesive organisation between about 21 December 1998 and 28 February 1999.[16]

7. By reference to a Decision in the Krajisnik case, the Defence concludes that as long as the fair trial rights of the accused are respected, the Trial Chamber is under a duty to avoid wasting unnecessary time and resources on undisputed facts.[17]

2. Prosecution Response

8. The Prosecution opposes the Motion and submits that it should be denied,[18] on the grounds that the exercise of the Trial Chamber's discretion to take judicial notice of the proposed adjudicated facts would be contrary to the interests of justice and would not promote judicial economy and that the Defence has failed to satisfy several underlying criteria for judicial notice of adjudicated facts.[19]

9. The Prosecution points out that in contrast to Rule 94(A), according to which judicial notice is mandatory, Rule 94(B) vests the Trial Chamber with a discretionary power to take judicial notice of adjudicated facts.[20] It argues that even if this Trial Chamber were to adopt the legal criteria for taking judicial notice of adjudicated facts as laid out by Trial Chamber I, it would still retain its discretion to refuse to take judicial notice of adjudicated facts where doing so would not serve the interests of justice. It notes that the overriding consideration is whether taking judicial notice of the adjudicated fact will promote judicial economy while ensuring that the trial is fair, public and expeditious.[21]

10. The Prosecution refers to the finding of Trial Chamber I in the Sesay Decision on Adjudicated Facts, stating that the "[...] each criminal case centres on determining the guilt or innocence of a particular accused person or persons. As such, the issues, evidence and factual findings in one case cannot bind the prosecution in a different case."[22] It notes that a central issue in the instant case is the relationship between the AFRC and the RUF, concerted action between them culminating in the attack on Freetown in January 1999, and the relationship that none of the findings from the AFRC Trial Judgement at issue were contested in the parties' notices of appeal in that case, filed on 2 August 2007, and that the Defence has offered no explanation for the delay.[30]

15. The Prosecution submits that any rebuttal exercise would consume additional time and resources which would not be justified by the mere presumption of accuracy accorded to certain facts.[31] The Prosecution, therefore, submits that granting the Defence Motion would clearly disadvantage the Prosecution as it would have "presented its entire case without the knowledge of its burden to overcome a rebuttable presumption as to the veracity of certain now judicially noticed facts." Thus taking judicial notice of the proposed adjudicated facts would be contrary to the interests of justice and would not achieve judicial economy.[32]

16. More specifically, the Prosecution submits that Facts 1, 5, 6, 7 and 8 are not distinct, concrete and identifiable,[33] and that Facts 6, 9, 10, 11 and 12 lack relevance or are only tangentially relevant.[34] The Prosecution further objects to taking judicial notice of the facts at 1, 2, 3, 5, 7, and 8, contending that they include omissions and misstatements and are of a tendentious nature.[35]

3. Defence Reply

17. In reply, the Defence has slightly reformulated or amended Facts 1, 3, 5, 7 and 8 of the proposed adjudicated facts.[36]

18. The Defence contests the Prosecution claim that the adjudicated facts from the AFRC Judgment are "evidence of the Defence," when in fact a review of the AFRC Trial Judgement between the two groups and the Accused.[23] The Prosecution concludes that no interests of justice would be achieved by giving the proposed evidence of the Defence a presumption of accuracy and that the Trial Chamber should base its findings on the evidence before it in the current case.[24]

11. The Prosecution provides examples of the evidence given by a number of its witnesses in the instant trial regarding the relationship between the AFRC and the RUF, and the relationship between the two groups and the Accused, and argues that while some of the issues were not core issues in the AFRC case, they are all clearly central to the charges against the Accused. It concludes that it would therefore be improper to take judicial notice of any of the proposed facts, and in particular Facts 1, 8, 9, 12, 13, 14, and 15.[25]

12. The Prosecution submits that its witnesses in the instant case provided more detail regarding proposed Facts 3 and 7, concerning the AFRC and RUF command structures during the Junta period, and argues that the evidence in this case comes from a variety of perspectives and paints a more complete and nuanced picture than did the evidence in the AFRC case.[26] Further, Facts 2 and 5 go to core issues in the current case and therefore it would not be in the interests of justice to take judicial notice of facts relating to these central issues.[27]

13. The Prosecution, however, refers to an ICTY Decision where a Trial Chamber only took judicial notice of facts which were not the subject of reasonable dispute and not "facts which involve interpretation",[28] but also refers to case law that "[a]s a party may challenge, at trial, a fact that has been judicially noticed, it follows that a Chamber is not restricted to taking judicial notice of facts that are not the subject of disputes between the parties."[29]

14. With regard to the timing of the Defence application, the Prosecution observes that the Defence filed its Motion after the Prosecution had announced that it had called its last witness, suggests that the facts were based primarily on the testimony of Prosecution witnesses.[37] The Defence submits that there would be no harm to the Prosecution's case if the previous testimony of its witnesses, in the AFRC, were granted a presumption of accuracy in the current case.[38] The Defence adds that only one of the purposes of Rule 94(B) is judicial economy; the other is to create consistency of case law. These twin purposes need only be balanced against the right of the accused to a fair trial.[39]

19. The Defence submits that the Prosecution will not be prejudiced by the admission of the proposed facts because, as the Prosecution has conceded, it has already led a certain volume of evidence on the issues in dispute.[40]

20. With regard to the timing of the Defence Motion, the Defence stresses that Rule 94(B) imposes no restriction as to which stage in the proceedings an adjudicated facts motion should be brought. It notes that the Defence case has yet to begin and that these proposed facts will help form the basis of the Defence case. The Defence asserts that it hoped to do a joint filing of adjudicated facts from the AFRC and RUF judgements, but that delays in issuing the judgement in the latter case prevented the Defence from doing so.[41]

21. The Defence submits that the case law cited by the Prosecution supports its position that late filings are acceptable and it notes that in those cases judicial notice was taken regardless of the advanced stage of the proceedings.[42]

22. The Defence submits that the relationship between the AFRC and RUF, and any relationship between either of these organizations and the Accused, is central to the instant case, and that the Prosecution cannot argue both that the proposed facts go to issues central to the present case and lack relevance. The Defence avers that there is no prohibition on taking judicial notice of facts that are central to a case; this is a discretionary issue.[43] The Defence argues that the fact that the relationship between the AFRC and RUF is central to the case is precisely why judicial economy will be promoted by taking judicial notice of the proposed acts, and notes that none of the proposed facts go to the relationship between the factions and the Accused.[44]

23. The Defence refers to Agreed Fact 31 in the "Joint Filing by the Prosecution and Defence Admitted Facts and Law"[45] regarding relations between the AFRC and the RUF during the Freetown invasion, and points out that the fact agreed to by the previous Defence team was simply a factual recognition that elements of the RUF may have participated in the Freetown attack, but says nothing about the RUF as a cohesive organisation.[46]

24. The Defence refutes the Prosecution objection that the proposed adjudicated facts mix principal and accessory facts.[47] Further, it disagrees that the proposed adjudicated facts are purposefully misleading and tendentious, but in light of the Prosecution's objections would be prepared to amend some of the proposed Facts 1, 2, 3, 5, 7 and 8 if the Trial Chamber deems it necessary.

II. APPLICABLE LAW

25. Rule 94 states as follows:

> Judicial Notice (amended 1 August 2003)
>
> (A) A Chamber shall not require proof of facts of common knowledge but shall take judicial notice thereof.
> (B) At the request of a party or of its own motion, a Chamber, after hearing the parties, may decide to take judicial notice of adjudicated facts or documentary evidence from other proceedings of the Special Court relating to the matter at issue in the current proceedings.

26. Whereas Rule 94 does not define what constitutes an "adjudicated fact" this Court has previously held that when deciding whether or not to take judicial notice of a proposed fact as an adjudicated fact, the following criteria must be met:

a. The fact must be distinct, concrete and identifiable;

b. The fact must be relevant and pertinent to an issue in the current case;

c. The fact must not contain legal conclusions, nor may it constitute a legal finding;

d. The fact must not be based on a plea agreement or upon facts admitted voluntarily in an earlier case;

e. The fact clearly must not be subject to pending appeal, connected to a fact subject to pending appeal, or have been settled finally on appeal;

f. The fact must not go to proof of the acts, conduct, or mental state of the accused person;

g. The fact must not be sufficient, in itself, to establish the criminal responsibility of the Accused;

h. The fact must not have been re-formulated by the party making the application in a substantially different or misleading fashion; that is to say, the fact must not differ significantly from the way the fact was expressed when adjudicated in the previous proceedings, it must not have been abstracted from the context of the original judgement in an unclear or misleading manner, and it must not be unclear or misleading in the context in which it is placed in the application.[48]

27. Facts that the Trial Chamber has taken judicial notice of under Rule 94(A) need not be proven again at trial. In contrast, Rule 94(B) creates a

> "well-founded presumption of accuracy of [the proposed fact], which therefore does not have to be proven again at Trial, but which, subject to that presumption, may be challenged at [...] trial."[49]

Like all rebuttable evidence, judicially noticed adjudicated facts remain subject to challenge by the non-moving party during the course of the trial.[50] As a party may challenge, at trial, an

[49] Sesay Decision on Adjudicated Facts, para. 18; see also Prosecutor v. Karemera et al., ICTR-98-AR73(C), Decision on Prosecutor's Interlocutory Appeal of Decision on Judicial Notice (AC), 16 June 2006, para. 42, stating the "facts noticed under Rule 94(B) are merely presumptions that may be rebutted [...] with evidence at trial."

adjudicated fact that has been judicially noticed, it follows that the Trial Chamber is not restricted to taking judicial notice of facts that are not subject of dispute between the parties.[51]

28. Pursuant to Rule 94(B), taking judicial notice of adjudicated facts is a matter for the exercise of the Trial Chamber's discretion. Therefore, even where a proposed adjudicated fact fulfils all of the aforementioned criteria, the Trial Chamber will retain its discretion not to take judicial notice of said fact if doing so will not best serve the interests of justice.[52] Factors to be considered in that regard are the rights of the accused and judicial economy.[53]

29. The Special Court has further established that

> "the overriding consideration is whether taking judicial notice of the said fact will promote judicial economy while ensuring that the trial is fair, public and expeditious. Other relevant factors in such a determination include: the stage of proceedings at the time the Application is brought; the volume of evidence already led by the parties in respect of the proposed adjudicated facts; whether the proposed adjudicated facts go to issues central to the present case; and the nature of the proposed adjudicated facts, including whether they are over-broad, tendentious, conclusory, too detailed, so numerous as to place a disproportionate burden on the opposing party to rebut the facts, or repetitive of evidence already heard in the case."[54]

30. Rule 94(B) has two purposes. The first is to promote judicial economy by dispensing with the need for the parties to lead evidence in order to prove supplementary facts or allegations already proven in past proceedings. The second is to harmonise judgements in relation to certain factual issues that arise in multiple cases before the Special Court.[55]

III. DELIBERATIONS

1. Timing of the Defence Application

31. The Defence filed the Motion after the Prosecution announced that it would be calling its last witness. The Prosecution objects to the timing of the Motion, submitting that it has already closed its case and that trial fairness would require that it be given the opportunity to consider calling "rebuttal" evidence, either before the close of its case, or in a rebuttal case.[56] Therefore the granting of the Motion would be contrary to the interest of justice and would not achieve judicial economy.

32. The Trial Chamber finds that the timing of the Motion is not in itself of sufficient concern to justify dismissal of the Motion in its entirety.[57] The Chamber notes that the Motion was filed before the opening of the Defence case and is intended to streamline the Defence case.[58] Furthermore, the Prosecution submissions, if accepted would lead to an unacceptable limitation of the application of Rule 94(B) to the pre-trial stage or to the Prosecution case. The Trial Chamber notes that Rule 94(B) itself does not contain such a limitation and that in the event that the proposed adjudicated facts are judicially noticed, the Prosecution may have the option to challenge them by cross-examining Defence witnesses or by calling rebuttal evidence. The Trial Chamber accordingly rejects an objection based on this ground alone.

2. The Proposed facts go to issues central to the present case

33. The Prosecution submits that it would be inappropriate to take judicial notice of Facts 1, 2, 3, 5, 7, 8, 9, 12, 13, 14 and 15 as they relate to central issues in this case, specifically the relationship between AFRC and the RUF.[59] In support, the Prosecution refers to a decision in the Popovic case before the ICTY, which states:

> "[...] some of the proposed adjudicated facts go to issues which are at the core of this case. In balancing judicial economy with the Accused's right to a fair and public trial, the Trial Chamber is of the view that a number of these facts should be excluded in the interests of justice".[60]

34. The Prosecution argues that the issues in the AFRC case were different and not central issues in that case, but are central in the present case. Whether a proposed adjudicated fact goes to issues central to the present case is a relevant factor to be considered in determining whether the Trial Chamber should exercise its discretion to judicially notice such fact.[61] In the present case, the Trial Chamber has to examine each of the proposed facts individually in order to ascertain whether it fulfils this and other criteria for judicial notice.

3. General Considerations

35. The Trial Chamber has individually considered the proposed adjudicated facts set out in Annex A as amended in the Reply and finds that each of them is relevant and pertinent to an issue in the current case; does not contain legal conclusions or constitute a legal finding; is not based on a plea agreement or upon facts admitted voluntarily in the AFRC Case; is not subject to a pending appeal, nor is it connected to a fact pending appeal, nor has it been settled finally on appeal; does not go to proof of the acts, conduct or mental state of the Accused; and is not sufficient in itself to establish the criminal liability of the Accused.

36. The Chamber will consider in detail below, whether the proposed facts are sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable[62] and if they have been extracted in a manner that is not misleading.[63]

37. The Prosecution submits that the Defence, by submitting entire paragraphs rather than a specific fact, has obscured the principal facts it seeks to have judicial notice taken of, and objects specifically to proposed Facts 1, 5, 6, 7 and 8.[64] The Trial Chamber finds that proposed Facts 1, 5, 6, 7 and 8, as partly amended by the Defence in its Reply, are sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable.

4. Discussion

38. Having determined that the proposed facts satisfy the above mentioned general requirements, the Trial Chamber will now assess whether judicial notice may be taken of all of the adjudicated facts proposed by the Defence and whether doing so would promote judicial economy and serve the interests of justice on a fact by fact basis.

39. Proposed Fact 1, as amended by the Defence Reply,[65] states:

> As the founders of the AFRC belonged to the Sierra Leone Army and therefore had been fighting the RUF since 1991, the coalition between the two factions following the 1997 coup was not based on longstanding common interests. Both factions officially declared that they were joining forces to bring peace and political stability to Sierra Leone. On 18 June 1997, the RUF issued an official apology to the nation for its crimes and went on to praise Johnny Paul Koroma's Government.[66]

40. The Prosecution objects that by omitting the final line of paragraph 169 of the AFRC Trial Judgement the proposed fact is tendentious and misleading.[67] In its Reply the Defence therefore proposed to include the last sentence of para. 169 of the AFRC Trial Judgement, if the Trial Chamber deems necessary.[68] This sentence stated that: "On 18 June 1997, the RUF issued an official apology to the nation for its crimes and went on to praise Johnny Paul Koroma's government."

41. The Prosecution, in addition, submits that this fact deals with the relationship between the RUF and AFRC and therefore goes to a central issue of the case.[69] The Trial Chamber, however, notes that the proposed fact does not discuss the relationship of these two organisations with the Accused. Furthermore, the Trial Chamber notes that the Prosecution concedes that it has led evidence on similar issues. The Trial Chamber considers that the proposed fact adds contextual elements to the evidence adduced by the Prosecution and therefore considers that taking judicial notice of proposed Fact 1 would promote judicial economy while causing no undue prejudice to the Prosecution.

42. Proposed Fact 2 states:

> [F]rom the earliest days there were tensions between the two factions and relations deteriorated over time. In October 1997, Johnny Paul Koroma ordered the arrest of two RUF leaders on charges that they were plotting with the CDF to overthrow his government. Not long after this incident, Koroma ordered the arrest of Issa Sesay, another top RUF commander, for his part in looting the Iranian Embassy in

> Freetown. In response the RUF stopped attending joint meetings. In January 1998 Sam Bockarie, formally Vice-Chairman of the AFRC government in Foday Sankoh's absence, left Freetown for Kenema District because of his discontent with AFRC commanders.[70]

43. The Prosecution submits that Fact 2, which is based on para. 171 of the AFRC Trial Judgment, standing on its own is misleading. The previous paragraph in the AFRC Trial Judgement, para. 170, states that "commanders of both factions attended coordination meetings at which they planned operations and organised joint efforts to obtain arms and ammunition." Therefore, The Prosecution submits that in the absence of para. 170, Fact 2 is misleading.

44. The Trial Chamber agrees with the Prosecution submissions and finds that it may have been appropriate to take judicial notice of the adjudicated facts of both paragraphs. The Defence, however, has not proposed the inclusion of para. 170 of the AFRC Trial Judgement in its Reply.[71] Accordingly, the Trial Chamber considers that it would not be in the interests of justice to take judicial notice of proposed Fact 2 as this fact has been abstracted from the context of the AFRC Trial Judgement in a misleading manner.

45. Proposed Fact 3, as amended in the Reply,[72] states:

> The RUF and AFRC were allied in one government and worked closely together during the AFRC period, [but] the individuals continued to identify themselves as either RUF or SLA and that at an organisational level, separate commanders for each group co-existed in the Districts.[73]

46. The Defence has amended its wording of proposed Fact 3, to include the word "closely", following the Prosecution objection in its Response.

47. The Prosecution submits that the fact relates to a key issue and is misleading, as the Defence has omitted the phrase "available evidence suggests" following "AFRC period".[74] The Trial Chamber agrees with the submissions and considers that it would not be in the interests of justice to take judicial notice of proposed Fact 3 as this fact has been abstracted from the context of the AFRC Trial Judgement in a misleading manner. The sentence "available evidence suggests" highlights that the Prosecution did not prove the issue beyond a reasonable doubt. Therefore, the Trial Chamber declines to take judicial notice of proposed Fact 3.

48. Proposed Fact 4 states:

> The Supreme Council did not have the collective ability to effectively control the military, as the military retained its own distinct chain of command and organisational structure.[75]

49. The Trial Chamber finds that this fact is sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable; is not extracted in a misleading manner and satisfies the criteria for judicial notice.

50. Proposed Fact 5, as amended by the Defence Reply,[76] states:

> Soon after the Conakry Accord was signed, hostilities resumed. ECOMOG forces attacked Freetown on 13 and 14 February 1998. The AFRC forces were not able to hold their positions and escaped through the Freetown peninsula. The government of former President Kabbah was reinstated in March 1998.[77]
> The retreat from Freetown was uncoordinated and without any semblance of military discipline. AFRC soldiers and RUF fighters fled with their families using either civilian cars or army vehicles. The fleeing troops passed through the villages of Lumley, Goderich, York and Tumbo. From Tumbo they crossed Yawri Bay to Fogbo. They then proceeded to Newton and Masiaka (Port Loko District). It took three to four days for the troops to reach Masiaka. This period is often referred to as "the intervention".[78]

51. The Prosecution objects to this fact stating that the retreat did not take place following the reinstatement of President Kabbah in March 1998. It submits that the two paragraphs together suggest that the troops did not reach Masiaka until March 1998.[79] The Trial Chamber disagrees and finds that the fact is sufficiently distinct insofar as the second paragraph[80] deals with the retreat and explains in more detail and specificity the second sentence of the first paragraph, i.e. the escape of the AFRC forces from the Freetown peninsula. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that this fact is sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable; is not extracted in a misleading manner and satisfies the criteria for judicial notice.

52. However, the Trial Chamber notes that it has already taken judicial notice of the fact that "President Kabbah's government returned to power in Sierra Leone in March 1998" pursuant to Rule 94(A).[81] The Trial Chamber considers that it is inappropriate to take judicial notice of the same fact again pursuant to Rule 94(B). The above sentence is therefore deleted from proposed Fact 5.

53. Proposed Fact 6 states:

> When SAJ Musa learned about Koroma's decision - that the AFRC soldiers should be subordinate to RUF command as part of the plan to recapture Kono District - he was furious. He would not accept the notion that untrained RUF fighters could be in charge of former soldiers, and insisted that the purpose of his group was to reinstate the army and that the RUF could not lead such a mission.[82]
> In addition, before the operation to recapture Kono took place, a dispute erupted over command and control issues resulting in hostilities between the two factions and the deaths of several fighters. As a result, SAJ Musa, and a significant number of AFRC troops loyal to him, opted not to participate in or support the operation.[83]

54. The Prosecution objects to this fact, submitting that the Defence has only referred to the relevance in general terms and that the fact is only tangentially relevant or relevant in part.[84] The Trial Chamber disagrees, as this fact deals with the relationship between two of the major warring factions in the armed conflict.

55. Trial Chamber considers that taking judicial notice of Fact 6 would promote judicial economy while causing no undue prejudice to the Prosecution. The Trial Chamber is satisfied that this fact is sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable; is not extracted in a misleading manner and satisfies the criteria for judicial notice.

56. Proposed Fact 7, as amended by the Defence Reply,[85] states:

> When Johnny Paul Koroma departed for Kailahun District in March 1998, he was given to believe that he would be welcome there by the RUF. However, when he arrived in Kailahun he encountered a hostile RUF leadership. He was arrested by Sam Bockarie, Issa Sesay and other RUF fighters. He was then stripped and searched for diamonds and his wife was sexually assaulted. Bockarie placed Koroma under house arrest in Kagama village near Buedu where he remained until mid 1999.[86]

57. The Prosecution submits that by omitting two sentences contained in para. 185 of the AFRC Trial Judgement, the originally proposed Fact 7 was misleading.[87] In addition it submits that the proposed fact is not clear as the last sentence of the original proposed fact made a reference to the Indictment period of the AFRC case.[88] In its Reply the Defence agreed to delete the last sentence of the originally proposed fact.[89] The Trial Chamber therefore finds that proposed Fact 7, as amended, is not misleading and now is sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable, not extracted in a misleading manner and considers that taking judicial notice of this fact would promote judicial economy, while causing no undue prejudice to the Prosecution and therefore satisfies all the criteria for judicial notice.

58. Proposed Fact 8, as amended by the Defence Reply,[90] states:

> At a meeting in Koinadugu District, various AFRC commanders met with SAJ Musa to discuss the future and develop a new military strategy. The commanders agreed that the troops who had arrived from Kono District should act as an advance troop which would establish a base in north western area Sierra Leone in preparation for an attack on Freetown. The purpose was to "restore the Sierra Leone Army".[91]

[86] AFRC Trial Judgement, para. 188.
[87] Response, para. 18, Annex A, Fact 7. The originally proposed Fact 7, which was based on paras 185 and 188 of the AFRC Trial Judgement, did not refer to the following two sentences of para. 185: "The majority of AFRC fighting forces remained in Kono District alongside the RUF troops. Although the AFRC were subordinate to the RUF, there was cooperation between them and the two factions planned and participated in joint operations."
[88] Response, para. 16, Annex A, Fact 7. The last sentence of this fact originally stated: "Koroma did not have any contact whatsoever with any of his former associates during the remaining period covered by the indictment.", see Motion, Annex A, Fact 7. The passage omitted from para. 188 of the AFRC Trial Judgement states: "No evidence was adduced suggesting that Koroma had any form of contact whatsoever with any of his former associates during the remaining period covered by the Indictment."
[89] Reply, para. 18 (e).
[90] Reply, para. 18 (f).
[91] AFRC Trial Judgement, paras 190, 379 [footnotes omitted].

59. In response to the Prosecution's submission that the last sentence of the originally proposed Fact 8 was misleading,[92] the Defence has amended the proposed Fact 8 in accordance with paragraph 190 of the AFRC Trial Judgement.[93]

60. The Trial Chamber finds that the amended proposed Fact 8 is now sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable, and that the Defence has not obscured the principal facts by submitting an entire paragraph rather than a specific fact it seeks to have judicially noticed, and that the criteria for judicial notice are satisfied.

61. Proposed Fact 9 states:

> From Colonel Eddie Town, in or around September 1998, AFRC troops staged a number of attacks on ECOMOG positions to supplement their dwindling stocks of arms and ammunition.[94]

62. The Prosecution objects to this fact, submitting that the Defence has only referred to the relevance in general terms and that the fact is only tangentially relevant or relevant in part.[95] The Trial Chamber finds that proposed Fact 8 is relevant to the instant case as it deals with the arms supply of one of the major rebel groups operating in the armed conflict in Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that this fact is sufficiently clear and satisfies the criteria for judicial notice.

63. Proposed Fact 10 states:

> In October 1998, following an armed clash with Dennis Mingo, SAJ Musa left Koinadugu District to join the advance team and prepare for an attack on Freetown. SAJ Musa did not follow the same route taken by the advance teams in his journey to the west.[96]

64. Again the Prosecution objects to this fact, submitting that the Defence has only referred to the relevance in general terms.[97] The Trial Chamber finds that this proposed Fact is relevant as it deals with the relationship between two senior officers of the two main warring factions in the armed conflict in Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that this fact is sufficiently clear and satisfies the criteria for judicial notice.

65. Proposed Fact 11 states:

> Upon his arrival in 'Colonel Eddie Town' in November 1998, SAJ Musa assumed command. He emphasised his disenchantment with the RUF and stressed that it was vital that his troops arrive in Freetown before the RUF. SAJ Musa reorganised the troops and began the advance towards Freetown. The troops passed through the villages of Mange, Lunsar, Masiaka and Newton before arriving in Benguema in the Western Area in December 1998. Throughout the advance, the troops withstood frequent attacks by ECOMOG.[98]

66. The Trial Chamber considers that taking judicial notice of Fact 11 would promote judicial economy without causing undue prejudice to the Prosecution. The Trial Chamber disagrees that this fact is not relevant to the case,[99] as it deals with the organisation of one of the major warring factions in Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber is therefore satisfied that this fact is relevant, sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable and satisfies the criteria for judicial notice.

67. Proposed Fact 12 states:

> On one occasion during the advance, SAJ Musa and the AFRC troops heard the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) interview Sam Bockarie over the radio. Bockarie revealed the position of the AFRC fighting forces and explained that it was RUF troops who were approaching Freetown. Soon after, ECOMOG bombarded the area. Musa immediately contacted Sam Bockarie, insulted him and told him that he had no right to claim that the troops approaching Freetown were RUF troops.[100]

68. The Prosecution objects to this fact, submitting that the Defence has only referred to the relevance in general terms.[101] The Prosecution further argues that this fact goes to a central issue of the case.[102] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that this fact is relevant, sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable, not extracted in a misleading manner and considers that taking judicial notice of this fact would promote judicial economy, while causing no undue prejudice to the Prosecution. Fact 12 therefore satisfies all the criteria for judicial notice.

69. Proposed Fact 13 states:

> On 23 December 1998, shortly after the arrival in Benguema, SAJ Musa was killed in an explosion during an attack on an ECOMOG weapons depot.[103]

70. The Prosecution argued that proposed Fact 13 goes to a central issue of the case.[104] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that this fact is relevant, sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable, not extracted in a misleading manner and considers that taking judicial notice of this fact would promote judicial economy, while causing no undue prejudice to the Prosecution. Fact 13 therefore satisfies all the criteria for judicial notice.

71. Proposed Fact 14 states:

> Following the death of SAJ Musa, the troops reorganised. On 5 January 1999, the Accused Brima gathered the troops in Allen Town and told them the time had come to attack Freetown. On 6 January 1999, they invaded Freetown.[105]

72. In relation to this proposed fact the Prosecution argued once again that it goes to a central issue of the case.[106] The Trial Chamber is satisfied that this fact is relevant, sufficiently distinct, concrete and identifiable, not extracted in a misleading manner and considers that taking judicial notice of this fact would promote judicial economy, while causing no undue prejudice to the Prosecution and therefore satisfies all the criteria for judicial notice.

73. Proposed Fact 15 states:

> Following heavy assaults from ECOMOG, the troops were forced to retreat from Freetown. This failure marked the end of the AFRC offensive as the troops were running out of ammunition. While the AFRC managed a controlled retreat, engaging ECOMOG and Kamajor troops who were blocking their way, RUF reinforcements arrived in Waterloo. However, the RUF troops were either unwilling or unable to provide the necessary support to the AFRC troops.[107]

74. The Prosecution submits that proposed Facts 15 goes to a central issue of the case as it deals with the relationship between the AFRC and RUF during the 1999 Freetown attack.[108]

Fact	AFRC Para	Adjudicated Fact
1	169	As the founders of the AFRC belonged to the Sierra Leone Army and therefore had been fighting the RUF since 1991, the coalition between the two factions following the 1997 coup was not based on longstanding common interests. Both factions officially declared that they were joining forces to bring peace and political stability to Sierra Leone. On 18 June 1997, the RUF issued an official apology to the nation for its crimes and went on to praise Johnny Paul Koroma's Government.
4	1656	The Supreme Council did not have the collective ability to effectively control the military, as the military retained its own distinct chain of command and organisational structure

SEPARATE AND PARTLY DISSENTING OPINION OF JUSTICE TERESA DOHERTY

1. I agree with the conclusions of my learned colleagues in this Decision, with the exception of two issues: (A) that the decision should have reasoned more clearly why the Trial Chamber exercised its discretion to judicially notice adjudicated facts that may go to a "central issue" of the case, and (B) the admission of proposed Fact 15.

A. Centrality of the Issue

2. Whether a proposed adjudicated fact goes to issues central to the present case is a relevant factor to be considered in determining whether the Trial Chamber should exercise its discretion to judicially notice such fact.[109]

3. The Prosecution has argued that several Facts relate to central issues in this case.[110] The majority has addressed this issue in its Decision, and nothing in this separate or dissenting opinion should suggest otherwise but, in my opinion, this element should have been further addressed in more detail. This specific element falls within the discretion of the Trial Chamber and the parties should be able to comprehend the specific reasoning for a discretionary decision. In this regard I am reminded by the Appeals Chamber Decision that unambiguously states that a Trial Chamber should "provide a reasoned opinion that, among other things, indicates its view on all those relevant factors that a reasonable Trial Chamber would have been expected to take into account before coming to a decision."[111] Therefore, I feel obliged to elaborate in more detail on this particular element.

4. In relation to the substantive issue itself, the question that arises is: what is a central issue? I note that there are three different aspects in the established test for judicial notice of adjudicated facts[112]: First, the fact has to be relevant. Secondly, and to be understood more narrowly than relevance, the Chamber may exercise its discretion even when a fact is "central" to the case. Thirdly, the Chamber has no discretion, and must dismiss a fact that goes to the acts and conduct of the accused. I therefore note that a "central issue" is more than merely relevant but does not extend to the actual acts and conduct of the accused. What is "central" depends on the individual case itself and that is why the determination falls within the discretion of a Chamber.

5. The Prosecution notes that a central issue in the instant case is the relationship between the AFRC and the RUF, concerted action between them culminating in the attack on Freetown in January 1999, and the relationship between the two groups and the Accused.[113] The Defence agrees with the Prosecution.[114]

6. I note that the Prosecution opposes most, if not all, of the facts on the ground that the relationship between the AFRC and the RUF and more specifically, SAJ Musa and senior members of the RUF, are central to the case. The Chamber must determine the right balance and assess whether those facts are central and, therefore, should not be judicially noticed but be determined on the evidence presented at trial.

7. However, a perusal of the Indictment, the Case Summary and the Prosecution Pre-Trial Brief indicate that the relationship between SAJ Musa and members of the RUF are not a central issue in this case. The facts geographically and temporally fall into a period that is not charged in the indictment, and therefore it can be said that the relationship between SAJ Musa and members of the RUF is not the main point that needs to be proven in this case, but is still important enough to bring a contextual understanding of the facts in this case. Therefore, the proposed facts are relevant, but are not sufficiently central to preclude the Chamber from exercising its discretion.

8. Therefore, I concur with the conclusions of the majority, with the exception hereunder, but would have added a brief reasoning for the exercise of the Trial Chamber's discretion.

[114] Reply, para. 14.

B. Dissent on Fact 15

9. I have to dissent from the conclusion reached by my learned colleagues in relation to proposed Fact 15, specifically the last sentence[115].

10. In that regard it should be noted that this fact was taken from the section of the AFRC Trial Judgement entitled "Context". The Fact is only based on a conclusion made by the military expert Col. Iron in his expert report which was tendered by the Prosecution in the AFRC case.[116] Further, it should be recalled that in the AFRC case the Trial Chamber did not specifically address the involvement of the RUF in the Freetown attack, as the pleading of a joint criminal enterprise between members of these two factions was dismissed on the grounds of a defective pleading.[117]

11. Furthermore, unlike the other proposed facts the AFRC Trial Judgement, did not otherwise address the involvement of the RUF in the 1999 Freetown attack in detail.

12. Finally, I note that the prior Defence team agreed that the RUF was involved in the Freetown attack.[118] The current Defence team now appears to qualify this agreed fact and submits in its Reply that this fact does not tie it to any "grand conclusion".[119] I consider that this shows that the issue raised in Fact 15, i.e. the exact involvement of the RUF in the 1999 Freetown attack, is a central issue in this case.

13. For the above reasons, it is my considered opinion that it would have been preferable not to add a rebuttable presumption to specific issues raised in this sentence of proposed Fact 15, but to determine it on the evidence adduced in this case alone. For those reasons I would have not admitted proposed Fact 15.

RECALLING the Trial Chamber's oral Decision of 19 February 2009 wherein the Chamber dismissed the Motion and stated that a properly reasoned decision would follow:[15]

COGNISANT OF the provisions of the Statute of the Special Court ("Statute") in particular Articles 6 and 17 and Rules 26*bis*, 47(C), 50,26 72(A), 72(B)(ii), 72(C) and 73 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Rules");

HEREBY DELIVERS ITS REASONED DECISION AS FOLLOWS, based solely on the written submissions of the parties, pursuant to Rule 73 of the Rules.

I. INTRODUCTION

A. Procedural History

1. The Initial Indictment against the Accused, accompanied by supporting material, was approved on 7 March 2003 and made public on 12 June of the same year.[16] On 16 March 2006, the Prosecutor filed an Amended Indictment and Case Summary. On 25 May 2007, the Trial Chamber granted the Prosecution leave to further amend the Amended Indictment[17] and the Prosecution filed a Second Amended Indictment on 29 May 2007.

2. On 6 June 2006, Mr. Karim Khan the former Defence Counsel of the Accused, notified the Trial Chamber that he would not file any preliminary motions pursuant to Rule 72 of the Rules.[18] However, in the Defence Pre-Trial Brief, he submitted that "a notable feature of the Amended Indictment was the deliberate decision to drop the allegation, present in the original indictment, that Mr Taylor was part of a Joint Criminal Enterprise ("JCE")."[19]

[19] Defence Pre-Trial Brief, para. 45, submitting that "the doctrine, scope and case law of JCE was well known to the Prosecutor as it has been employed in other cases before the SCSL. It has been judicially considered in a great many cases before the ICTY and ICTR. The decision to drop it from the Amended Indictment in the case of Mr. Taylor cannot be taken to have been accidental".

3. Soon thereafter on the 20 June 2007, the Trial Chamber, in its Judgement in the case of the Prosecutor v. Brima, Kamara and Kanu ("AFRC Trial Judgement") [20], held that the Indictment in that case with respect to Joint Criminal Enterprise ("JCE") as a mode of criminal responsibility, had been defectively pleaded since the "common purpose" alleged was not a criminal purpose recognized by the Statute and that the "common purpose" did not constitute a crime under the Special Court's jurisdiction. The Trial Chamber held that arguing the basic and extended forms of JCE in the alternative impeded the ability of the Accused to understand the material facts of the JCE, and that crimes charged within the common purpose could not also be a reasonably foreseeable consequence of that purpose[21] Finally, the Trial Chamber held that the Prosecution is required to know its case before the start of trial; that if the purpose of the JCE changed over time, all new and different purposes must also be pleaded in the Indictment; and that the Prosecution is not permitted to mould its case as the trial progresses.[22]

4. On 3 August 2007, the Prosecution, in consistency with the Trial Chamber's findings on JCE in the AFRC Judgement and "out of an abundance of caution", filed an Amended Case Summary with respect to the present case, amending paragraphs 42-44 of the Case Summary notwithstanding that it disagreed with those findings and would appeal the Judgement.[23] The Prosecution filed an appeal against the AFRC Trial Judgment on 13 September 2007.[24]

5. Although Mr. Karim Khan the former Defence Counsel of the Accused had notified the Trial Chamber that the Defence would not file any preliminary motions pursuant to Rule 72 of the Rules, the new Defence team filed this Motion regarding the defective pleading of the JCE on 14 December 2007, pending the resolution of the Appeal. The AFRC Appeal Judgement was delivered on 22 February 2008.[25]

6. In its AFRC Appeal Judgement, the Appeals Chamber concluded that the Trial Chamber erred in finding that the "common purpose" of the JCE must constitute a crime under international law. The Appeals Chamber held-

> 84....The common purpose of the joint criminal enterprise was not defectively pleaded. Although the objective of gaining and exercising political power and control over the territory of Sierra Leone may not be a crime under the Statute, the actions contemplated as a means to achieve that objective are crimes within the Statute. The Trial Chamber took an erroneously narrow view by confining its consideration to paragraph 33 and reading that paragraph in isolation. ..
> 85. Several other issues arose in the context of JCE for which the Appeals Chamber wishes to express itself. The Trial Chamber erred in concluding that the Prosecution could not plead the basic and extended forms of joint criminal enterprise liability in the alternative on the grounds that the two forms, as pleaded, logically exclude each other. Pleading the basic and extended forms of JCE in the alternative is now a well-established practice in the international criminal tribunals. The Trial Chamber erred in finding that the Indictment failed to specify the period covered by the JCE. That period is that covered by all of the alleged crimes, which in this case is between 25 May 1997 and January 2000. [26]

7. After the publication of the AFRC Appeal Judgement, the Trial Chamber invited both parties to file Consequential pleadings, taking into consideration the Appeals Chamber's findings[27]. Consequential Submissions were filed by the Parties on the 31 March 2008[28], 10 April 2008[29] and 15 April 2008[30], respectively.

B. Pleading of a Joint Criminal Enterprise in the Indictments and supporting documents

8. In its Initial Indictment, the Prosecution alleged JCE in very similar terms to the Indictment in the AFRC Trial[31]. The Initial Indictment alleged as follows:

> 23. The RUF and the AFRC shared a common, plan purpose or design (joint criminal enterprise) which was to take any actions necessary to gain and exercise political power and control over the territory of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamond mining areas. The natural resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, were to be provided to persons outside Sierra Leone in return for assistance in carrying out the joint criminal enterprise.
>
> 24. The joint criminal enterprise included gaining and exercising control over the population of Sierra Leone in order to prevent or minimize resistance to their geographic control, and to use members of the population to provide support to the members of the joint criminal enterprise. The crimes alleged in this Indictment, including unlawful killings, abduction, forced labour, physical and sexual violence, use of child soldiers, looting and burning of civilian structures, were either actions within the joint criminal enterprise or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of the joint criminal enterprise.
> 25. The Accused participated in this joint criminal enterprise as part of his continuing efforts to gain access to the mineral wealth of Sierra Leone and to destabilize the government of Sierra Leone.[32]

9. In its Amended Indictment filed on 16 March 2006, the Prosecution amended its pleading regarding JCE by deleting the above paragraphs and alleging instead that:

> 33. The ACCUSED, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1. of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment, which crimes the Accused planned, instigated, ordered, committed, or in whose planning, preparation or execution the Accused otherwise aided and abetted, or which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the Accused participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose. [emphasis added][33]

10. The Amended Indictment further alleged under the Particulars at Paragraph 5 that:

> 5. Members of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED burned civilian property and committed the crimes set forth below in paragraphs 6 through 31 and charged in Counts 2 through 11, as part of a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone.

In addition, the Particulars of each count in the Amended Indictment was prefixed with the following words:

> [.....] members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED.... [34]

11. The Second Amended Indictment did not alter these pleadings as far as the pleading of JCE is concerned.[35]

12. The Prosecution has made further submissions regarding the alleged JCE and ~~its~~ "common purpose" in its Case Summary,[36] Pre-Trial Brief,[37] Opening Statement,[38] and Amended Case Summary,[39] In its Prosecution Notification of Filing of Amended Case Summary[40] which was filed subsequent to the Second Amended Indictment and the AFRC Trial Judgement, the Prosecution submitted that although it had provided prior notice concerning "the common plan, design or purpose in the Indictment", never-the-less in order to be "consistent with the AFRC Trial Judgement and out of an abundance of caution, the Prosecution has amended paragraphs 42, 43 and 44 of the Case Summary which accompanies the Indictment, in order to further articulate the common plan, design or purpose which has been alleged in this case."[41] The relevant paragraphs of the Amended Case Summary state as follows:

> Participation in a common plan, design or purpose
> 42. Between about 1988 and about 18 January 2002, the Accused and others agreed upon and participated in a common plan, design or purpose to carry out a criminal campaign of terror, as charged in the Second Amended Indictment, in order to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, and to forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone.

43.1 The crimes charged in Counts 1 through 11 of the Second Amended Indictment were within the common plan as it existed from 30 November 1996 through 18 January 2002. the Accused and the other participants in the common plan intended the commission of each of the charged crimes.

43.2 Alternatively, from November 1996 through about January 2002, the following crimes were within the common plan, design or purpose: acts of terror against civilians in Sierra Leone; conscription, enlistment and use in active hostilities of children under the age of 15 years; enslavement of civilians and pillage. The Accused and other participants in the common plan agreed upon and intended the commission of these crimes. The crimes charged in Counts 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 were foreseeable consequences of the crimes agreed upon in the common plan. The Accused participated in the common plan despite the awareness that these were foreseeable consequences.

44.1 Others participated in the common plan, design or purpose during the various periods including:

(i) Foday Saybana Sankoh, leader of the RUF, who participated between about 1988 and January 2002;

(ii) Other commanders and other leaders of the RUF, from about 1990 until 18 January 2002;

(iii) Other commanders and other leaders of the NPFL from about 1988 until 18 January 2002;

(iv) Commanders and other leaders of Liberian organised armed groups who worked in concert with or under the direction of the Accused and participated from about 1989 until about 18 January 2002;

(v) Commanders, and other leaders of the AFRC who agreed to and commenced participation in the common plan on or about 28 May 1997 through about May 2000;

(vi) After August 1997 when the Accused was sworn-in as President of Liberia, commanders and other leaders of his Liberian government and armed forces, including specialised units, police and military forces who participated through about 18 January 2002;

(vii) Associates of the Accused who worked under his direction or in cooperation with him to further the common plan from about 1988 until about 18 January 2002.

II. SUBMISSIONS

A. Defence Motion

13. The Defence made submissions on the admissibility and merits of the Motion and requests that the Trial Chamber order the severance of JCE as a mode of criminal liability from the Second Amended Indictment.

1. Submissions on the Admissibility of the Motion

14. The Defence acknowledges that the Motion was filed after the 21-day period provided for pursuant to Rule 72(A) and notes that Rule 72(B) details the manner in which motions regarding defects in an indictment are to be filed.[42] It argues, however, that current Counsel were assigned over a year after the expiration of the 21-day period, and submits that the deadlines contemplated in Rule 72(A) are superseded by Article 17 of the Statute and by notions of "natural justice" and fundamental fairness.[43]

2. Submissions on the Merits of the Motion

15. In arguing that the Second Amended Indictment is fatally defective with regards to JCE,[44] the Defence submits that the actus reus of JCE liability requires first, that there be a plurality of persons not necessarily organised in a military, political or administrative structure; second, the existence of a common plan, design or purpose amounting to or involving the commission of a crime prohibited in the Statute; and, third, participation by an accused in the common design involving the perpetration of one of the crimes in the Statute.[45] The Defence further points to the four criteria that must appear in any Indictment charging JCE:

> (i) The nature and purpose of the JCE;
>
> (ii) The time at which or the period over which the enterprise is said to have existed;
>
> (iii) The identity of those engaged in the enterprise, so far as their identity is known, but at least by reference to their category as a group; and
> (iv) The nature of the participation of the accused in that enterprise.[46]

16. The Defence argues that the "common purpose" of a JCE must be a crime within the Statute of the Special Court, and that this purpose is a material fact which must be pleaded in the indictment.[47] In support of its position, the Defence attaches an expert opinion of Prof. William Schabas to its Motion.[48] The Defence submits that the Prosecution has not pleaded a crime within the jurisdiction of the Special Court as the "common purpose" of the JCE in the Second Amended Indictment and that this mode of liability is therefore fatally defective and should be severed.[49] The Defence further submits that the Prosecution's attempt to cure the defect in its Amended Case Summary by proposing two alternative and mutually exclusive theories does not cure the defect.[50]

17. The Defence argues that the "common purpose" of the JCE must be criminal in and of itself, regardless of whether or not the means by which the "common purpose" was achieved constituted crimes within the jurisdiction of the Special Court.[51]

18. Further, the Defence submits that the Prosecution's further description of the "common plan, design or purpose" of the JCE in the Amended Case Summary, specifically, "to carry out a criminal campaign of terror [...] in order to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, and to forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone,"[52] is "ill-defined at best" and "not legally sufficient to sustain the JCE mode of liability where the 'common plan' or objective is not defined at all, or is ill-defined at best, and where such objective or 'common purpose' is not intrinsically a crime within the jurisdiction of the court."[53] Furthermore, the Defence argues that the Prosecution's use of the word "pillage" in the Amended Case Summary does not suffice as a description of a criminal purpose "where the overall context in which it has been used renders it tantamount to verbs such as usurping, controlling, cultivating, or monopolizing the resources of Sierra Leone vis-à-vis the crime of pillage as recognised under international law."[54]

19. The Defence also argues that the Prosecution provided two alternative and mutually-exclusive theories of the purpose of the JCE in the Amended Case Summary, firstly a "criminal campaign of terror [...] in order to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone," with Counts 1 through 11 of the Second Amended Indictment falling within the common plan,[55] and alternatively, "acts of terror against civilians in Sierra Leone," with seven additional counts charged as "foreseeable consequences of the crimes agreed upon in the common plan."[56] The Defence argues that if the Prosecution alleges that a particular crime is within the "common purpose" of the JCE, it cannot also be a "reasonably foreseeable consequence" of that same purpose.[57] Because the Prosecution has alleged two different forms of JCE disjunctively, the Defence argues that the Accused's ability to understand the case against him has been impeded.[58]

B. Defence Consequential Motion

20. The Defence reiterates its core positions that the Accused has not been placed on sufficient notice of the case he is to meet and that the Trial Chamber should issue a decision ordering the severance of JCE as a mode of criminal liability from the Second Amended Indictment.[59] The Defence submits that the notice provided by the Prosecution to the Accused of the nature and cause of the charges against him has been legally insufficient due to the constantly changing "common purposes" of the alleged JCE pleaded by the Prosecution in this case. It adds that "the Accused is not to enter into the minds of the Prosecution and [...] divine exactly what the 'common purpose' is that the alleged means pertain to".[60]

21. The Defence submits that the "common purposes" pleaded in the Prosecution's Pre-Trial Brief, Opening Statement, and Amended Case Summary, are tantamount to "gaining or maintaining of political power or control over the territory of Sierra Leone [...] in order to exploit the natural resources of the country."[61] However, according to the Defence, the Prosecution now maintains that the "common purpose" is to "inflict a campaign of terror on the citizens of Sierra Leone."[62] The Defence submits that the AFRC Appeal Judgement has advanced the underlying claim of the Accused that he has not received adequate notice of the pleading of the JCE in this case because the Prosecution has repeatedly modified different theories of the "common purpose", pointing to the various iterations of the "common purpose" in the Case Summary, Pre-Trial Brief, Opening Statement, Second Amended Indictment, Amended Case Summary and more general disclosure.[63]

22. Pointing to findings of the AFRC Appeal Judgement that "the determination of whether the Prosecution properly pleaded a crime must be determined on the basis of whether the Prosecution pleaded all the material facts in the Indictment, not whether it adduced evidence [at trial] to support the allegations", the Defence argues that the Prosecution is required to know its case from the start.[64] On the contrary, the Prosecution has adopted a "fluid and constantly evolving 'common purpose'" which is inconsistent with the spirit of the AFRC Appeal Judgement which contemplated a consistently pleaded "common purpose".[65]

23. The Defence concedes that the "basic" and "extended" forms of JCE may be pleaded disjunctively and this, alone, may not serve to invalidate the notice given to an Accused regarding the case to be met.[66]

C. Prosecution Response

24. The Prosecution opposes the Motion and requests the Trial Chamber to dismiss it.[67]

1. Submission on the Admissibility of the Motion

25. The Prosecution notes that the Defence has conceded that the Motion was filed in violation of Rule 72(A). The Prosecution argues that the current Defence team had over four months available between the filing of the Amended Case Summary and the filing of the Motion, which it notes, was filed on the last day before judicial recess, and concludes that the Motion was not filed in a timely manner.[68]

26. The Prosecution however, acknowledges paragraph 24 of the Trial Chamber's Judgement in the AFRC case in which the Trial Chamber stated that it was "not precluded from reviewing in [a] judgement whether shortcomings in the form of the Indictment [...] resulted in prejudice to the rights of the Accused."[69] Therefore, unless the Trial Chamber's position on the issue has changed, the Prosecution does not oppose a review of the Second Amended Indictment at this stage of the presentation of evidence.[70]

2. Submissions on the Merits of the Motion

27. The Prosecution submits that the Trial Chamber should dismiss the Motion, arguing that the Prosecution provided the Defence with "adequate notice of the alleged common plan, design, or purpose to commit crimes within the jurisdiction of the Special Court".[71] In addition, the Prosecution argues that the Defence position "erroneously focuses JCE liability on the existence of a criminal purpose to the exclusion of liability based on the existence of a criminal plan or design." Further, "purpose" should not be defined too narrowly.[72] The Prosecution further argues that Professor William Schabas' opinion as contained in his letter to the Defence did not take into account the Amended Case Summary and should be ignored.[73]

28. The Prosecution argues that the details of the alleged JCE were sufficiently articulated in the Amended Case Summary[74] as a "common plan, design or purpose to inflict a campaign of terror on the citizens of Sierra Leone."[75] The Prosecution further argues that "acts of terrorism", which constitute a violation of Common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions, is a crime punishable under Article 3(d) of the Statute.[76]

[76] Response para. 10.

29. The Prosecution rejects the Defence's argument that those who enter into an agreement or understanding to commit international crimes such as acts of terrorism have not formed a JCE so long as their ultimate 'purpose' is not in and of itself criminal.[77] The Prosecution argues that "agreements that have criminal ends and those that plan or employ criminal means," are the same, stating that "[t]he harm or danger from such criminal agreements or understandings is equal whether the crime is considered the ultimate objective or the means agreed upon to achieve that objective."[78]

30. The Prosecution submits that even if the ultimate "objective" or "end" of the plan is not criminal, a JCE exists if there is a common state of mind that a crime within the jurisdiction of the Court be committed, be it an agreed criminal plan, purpose or design.[79]

31. In addition, the Prosecution argues that it alleged not only a common intent to employ criminal means, but also that part of the ultimate objective of the joint criminal enterprise was criminal. The Amended Case Summary states that "the campaign of terror in the JCE was used in part 'to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds.'"[80] The Prosecution submits that "pillage" is a crime under Article 3(f) of the Statute and well defined in international law is not used by the Prosecution as a synonym for "cultivating" as the Defence has argued.[81]

32. The Prosecution submits that it has pleaded two different categories of JCE, the "basic" and the "extended" categories, in the alternative[82] and argues that it is well established in international criminal jurisprudence that it may plead different, mutually-exclusive modes of responsibility in the alternative.[83]

D. Consequential Prosecution Response

33. The Prosecution submits that the Defence Motion and Consequential Submissions should be dismissed.[84] The Prosecution notes a change of focus in the Defence submissions on the defective pleadings of the JCE viz. that the Accused has not been placed on sufficient notice of the case he is to meet.[85] It responds that its pleadings on JCE have been consistent.[86] However, the Prosecution asserts that even if its pleadings had been inconsistent, "there is no prohibition against evolving theories."[87] Finally, the Prosecution avers that the Defence's arguments on this point are disingenuous considering that the current Defence team was appointed at the time the Second Amended Indictment was in place and at about the same time the Amended Case Summary was filed. From the outset the current Defence team had the full pre-trial articulation of the common plan, design or purpose, or JCE, in this case from the outset of their appointment.[88]

34. The Prosecution submits that the "common purpose" of the JCE alleged in this trial has always been "to take any actions necessary to gain and exercise political power and political and physical control over the territory of Sierra Leone, particularly the diamond mining areas."[89] The Prosecution further submits that it has put the Defence on notice that both the objective of the JCE and the means to achieve that objective involve crimes within the jurisdiction of the Special Court even though it is sufficient to prove that either the objective or the means involve a crime or crimes within the jurisdiction of the Court.[90]

35. The Prosecution submits that the Second Amended Indictment, the Amended Case Summary, the Pre-Trial Brief and the Prosecution's Opening Statement provide the Defence with sufficient detail about the alleged JCE.[91] It further reiterates that as it is entitled to amend indictments or case summaries, there cannot be a prohibition on "evolving theories."[92]

E. Defence Reply

1. Submission on Admissibility of Motion

36. In the Defence's view, the fact that the Prosecution does not oppose a review is significant and represents a "tacit acknowledgement of the legal significance and practical implications which are raised by the Motion."[93]

2. Submissions on Merits of Motion

37. With respect to the Prosecution's argument that adequate notice was given to the Defence, the Defence does not dispute that the Prosecution has attempted to advance a JCE theory of liability through a variety of submissions and materials but submits the dispute lies in the legal sufficiency and propriety of the articulated mode of JCE liability, in the specific context of the criminality (rather, the lack thereof) of the alleged "common purpose".[94] The Defence argues that the crux of the matter is the failure of the Prosecution to plead a crime within the jurisdiction of the Court as the "common purpose" of the JCE.[95] It concludes that the Prosecution has not provided adequate notice of the nature and cause of the charges against the Accused, as it "keeps modifying and advancing different theories" of the alleged "common purpose".[96]

38. Regarding the distinctions between "common purpose", "common plan," "common design," and "means" and "ends", the Defence submits that the Prosecution has placed "legally irrelevant" emphasis on the Defence's preferential use of the phrase "common purpose".[97] The Defence notes that they simply employed language mirroring this Chamber's Judgement in the AFRC case.[98]

39. The Defence reiterates its argument that if the charged crimes are allegedly within the "common purposes", they cannot logically be a reasonably foreseeable consequence of the same purpose.[99] Furthermore, the Defence reiterates that by pleading two forms of JCE disjunctively, the Prosecution has impeded the Accused's ability to understand the material facts of the JCE alleged against him by charging a common purpose that is not inherently criminal.[100]

F. Consequential Defence Reply

40. The Defence submits that it has not shifted its core position; its challenge on the form of the Second Amended Indictment directly impacts the question of adequate notice to the Accused of the case against him and the Prosecution argument erroneously assumes that the question of the manner and form in which an issue is pleaded can be divorced from the question of notice. The Defence submits that the Prosecution's attempt to divorce these two issues is "legal nonsense".[101]

41. The Defence submits that the Second Amended Indictment, as the principal accusatory document, must be written with clarity and sufficient detail, pursuant to Article 17(4)(a) of the Statute.[102] In this vein, the Defence cites the ICTY Appeal Judgement in Kordic and Cerkez for the proposition that the nature of the Accused's alleged responsibility must be unambiguous in an indictment.[103] The Defence states that the obligation on the Prosecution is two-fold, and entails the duty to inform the Accused of the nature and cause of the charges against him as well as a concise description of the facts underpinning the charges.[104]

42. The Defence specifically contests the Prosecution's assertion that it has pleaded the "common purpose" of the JCE in a consistent manner. The Defence reiterates the allegation made in paragraph 19 of its Consequential Submission that the Prosecution's case has been constantly shifting. This shift is apparent, the Defence submits, in the amendments to the Indictment and in other processes outlined in Prosecution Response, paragraphs 4 through 9.[105] The Defence reiterates that the Prosecution's position on the "common purpose" has shifted from "to take and maintain political and physical control over Sierra Leone in order to exploit its natural resources" to "to inflict a campaign of terror on the citizens of Sierra Leone."[106] The Defence acknowledges that the Prosecution is permitted to amend the indictment for clarity's sake, but stresses that the Prosecution may not "mould its case as it goes along."[107]

43. The Defence notes the finding of the AFRC Appeal Judgement which held that the criminal purpose under JCE may derive from the ultimate objective or from the means and that in determining the legal sufficiency of a JCE pleading the means must be viewed in conjunction with the pleaded "common purpose." However, the evolving nature of the pleaded "common purpose" in the present case sets the present Indictment outside this purview.[108]

44. Finally, in response to the Prosecution claim that the Defence was being disingenuous in alleging a lack of proper notice on the question of "common purpose", the Defence submits that notice is provided to the Accused and not to the Defence team and it is in this respect that the issue has been raised.[109]

III. APPLICABLE LAW

45. Article 17 of the Statute of the Special Court relating to "Rights of the Accused" provides:

> 1. All Accused shall be equal before the Special Court.
>
> 2. The Accused shall be entitled to a fair and public hearing, subject to measures ordered by the Special Court for the protection of victims and witnesses.
>
> 3. The Accused shall be presumed innocent until proven guilty according to the provisions of the present Statute.
>
> 4. In the determination of any charge against the Accused pursuant to the present Statute, he or she shall be entitled to the following minimum guarantees, in full equality:
>
> > a. To be informed promptly and in detail in a language which he or she understands, of the nature and cause of the charge against him or her;
> >
> > b. To have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his or her defence and to communicate with Counsel of his or her choosing;
> > c. To be tried without undue delay;

d. To be tried in his or her presence, and to defend himself or herself in person or through legal assistance of his or her own choosing; to be informed, if he or she does not have legal assistance, of this right; and to have legal assistance assigned to him or her in any case where the interests of justice so require, and without payment by him or her in any such case if he or she does not have sufficient means to pay for it;

e. To examine or have examined, the witnesses against him or her and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his or her behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him or her;

f. To have the Free assistance of an interpreter if he or she cannot understand or speak the language used in the Special Court;

g. Not to be compelled to testify against himself or herself or to confess guilt.

46. Rule 26*bis* relating to "Chambers" provides:

The Trial Chamber and Appeals Chamber shall ensure that a trial is fair and expeditious and that proceedings before the Special Court are conducted in accordance with the Agreement, the Statute and the Rules, with full respect for the rights of the Accused and due regard for the protection of victims and witnesses.

47. Rule 47 relating to "Review of Indictments" provides

A. An Indictment submitted in accordance with the following procedure shall be approved by the designated Judge.

B. [...]

C. The Indictment shall contain, and be sufficient if it contains, the name and particulars of the suspect, a statement of each specific offence of which the named suspect is charged and a short description of the particulars of the offence. It shall be accompanied by a Prosecutor's case summary briefly setting out the allegations he proposes to prove in making his case.

D. [...]

E. The designated Judge shall review the Indictment and accompanying material to determine whether the Indictment should be approved. The Judge shall approve the Indictment if he is satisfied that-

(i) the Indictment charges the suspect with a crime or crimes within the jurisdiction of the Special Court; and

(ii) that the allegations in the Prosecution's case summary would, if proven, amount to the crime or crimes as particularised in the Indictment.

48. Rule 50 relating to " Amendment of Indictment" provides:

A. The Prosecutor may amend an indictment, without prior leave, at any time before its approval, but thereafter, until the appearance of the accused pursuant to Rule 61, only with leave of the Designated Judge who reviewed it, but in exceptional circumstances, by leave of another Judge. At or after such initial appearance, an amendment of an indictment may only be made by leave granted by a Trial Chamber pursuant to Rule 73. If leave to amend is granted, Rule 47(G) and Rule 52 apply to the amended indictment.

B. If the amended indictment includes new charges and the accused has already made his initial appearance in accordance with Rule 61:

(i) A further appearance shall be held as soon as practicable to enable the accused to enter a plea on the new charges;

(ii) Within seven days from such appearance, the Prosecutor shall disclose all materials envisaged in Rule 66(A)(i) pertaining to the new charges;

(iii) The accused shall have a further period of ten days from the date of such disclosure by the Prosecutor in which to file preliminary motions pursuant to Rule 72 and relating to the new charges.

49. Rule 72 relating to " Preliminary Motions" provides:

A. Preliminary motions by either party shall be brought within 21 days following disclosure by the Prosecutor to the Defence of all the material envisaged by Rule 66(A)(i).

B. Preliminary motions by the accused are:

(i) Objections based on lack of jurisdiction;

(ii) Objections based on defects in the form of the indictment;

C. [...]

IV. DELIBERATIONS

A. Preliminary issue: Admissibility of the Defence Motion:

50. In evaluating the timeliness of the Motion presented by the Defence, the Trial Chamber is guided specifically by Rules 72(A) and 72(B)(ii) and more generally by Article 17 of the Statute and the interests of justice.

51. Whilst the Second Amended Indictment was filed on 29 May 2007 and the accompanying Amended Case Summary on 3 August 2007, the Motion challenging the form of Indictment was not filed until 14 December 2007, clearly out of time. Although the Motion is time-barred pursuant to Rule 72(A), the Trial Chamber may in the interest of justice review issues such as the pleading of JCE at any stage of the proceedings, particularly when violations of the rights of the accused are at risk.[110] The Appeals Chamber has emphasised that challenges to the form of an indictment should be made at a relatively early stage of the proceedings and usually at the pre-trial stage pursuant to Rule 72(B)(ii) of the Rules.[111] However, the Appeals Chamber has also held that a failure to challenge the form of an indictment at the pre-trial stage is not an absolute bar to challenges at a later stage.[112]

52. Parties may not misuse such exceptions for tactical purposes. Consequently a party requesting an exception is required to show good cause for its late filing.[113]

[112] AFRC Appeal Judgement, para. 43.
[113] See for example Rule 72 of the ICTY and ICTR Rules.

53. The initial Defence team was withdrawn on 4 June 2007 and a new team was not in place until early August 2007. The initial Defence team informed the Trial Chamber that it would be filing no preliminary motions[114] but stated in its Defence Pre-Trial Brief that a "notable feature of the Amended Indictment was the deliberate decision to drop the allegation, present in the original indictment, that Mr. Taylor was part of a Joint Criminal Enterprise".[115]

54. The current Defence team has not addressed the initial Defence team's position, but nevertheless appears to have adopted a different approach in relation to the Prosecution's pleading of JCE.

55. At a status conference held in August 2007, the Trial Chamber granted the Defence five months to prepare its case. Given the complexity of the instant case and the amount of documents and information provided by the Prosecution to the Accused and the Defence,[116] the Trial Chamber finds that the late filing of the Motion was not unreasonable and therefore that the Defence has shown good cause.

56. In addition, the Trial Chamber recalls that an Appeals Chamber may reverse a conviction as a result of a defective indictment[117] and that it is therefore important that any formal defects of an indictment be addressed as early as possible, and if possible before a final trial judgement. We note that the Prosecution, while observing that the Motion was not filed in a timely manner, nevertheless does not oppose a review on the basis of the Trial Chamber's reasoning in the AFRC judgement.[118]. We are of the opinion that it is in the interests of justice to address the issue raised at this stage of the proceedings. The Trial Chamber will therefore entertain the Motion, notwithstanding that it was filed out of time.

B. Pleading Requirements of an Indictment

57. Article 17(4)(a) of the Statute provides that an accused is entitled to be "informed promptly and in detail [...] of the nature and cause of the charge against him or her." Rule 47(C) of the Rules specifies that an "indictment shall contain, and be sufficient if it contains, the name and particulars of the suspect, a statement of each specific offence of which the named suspect is charged and a short description of the particulars of the offence." These provisions constitute an obligation on the part of the Prosecution to

See also for example, Prosecutor v. Taylor, SCSL-03-01-PT-323, Defence Motion for Adjournment to allow the Defence adequate time and facilities to prepare and other ancillary matters, 31 July 2007, in particular para. 13 in which the Defence notes that in addition to that earlier disclosure it had six motions pending including one with close to 2000 pages of evidential material.

plead the material facts underpinning the charges with enough detail to inform an accused clearly of the charges against him so that he may prepare a defence, but not the evidence by which such material facts are to be proven.[119] The materiality of a particular fact depends on the nature of the Prosecution case and on the context of the alleged criminal conduct with which an accused is charged.[120]

58. The Trial Chamber recalls that an indictment is the primary accusatory instrument[121] and that any other accusatory instruments cannot add charges or material facts that were not pleaded in the indictment.[122] Any assessment of supporting material provided by the Prosecution by the Trial Chamber is an exceptional measure. To do otherwise would allow the Prosecution to circumvent the procedure set out in Rule 50 of the Rules by including material facts in documents supplementary to the Indictment.

59. The Trial Chamber observes that any lack of precision or specificity in an indictment interferes with judicial economy, as the Prosecutor also benefits from a clear and unambiguous indictment which enables him it to focus his case and hence to allocate his-limited resources reasonably.[123] Therefore, the Trial Chamber stresses that a specific and unambiguous indictment is an essential prerequisite to a fair and expeditious trial.[124]

60. The fact that the case summary, provided for in Rule 47(C) of the Rules, is appended to the Indictment does not suggest that the case summary forms a part of the Indictment. The Appeals Chamber in the Norman case stated that:

> The case summary which should accompany the Indictment forms no part of it. The significance of this practice is that once a defendant is arraigned [...] no word or phrase of any count or any particular of a count may be changed without the permission of the court, by an application to amend the Indictment which is made in the presence of the Defence. The Prosecutor's case summary, however, is not a document susceptible to amendment by the court. It accompanies the Indictment in order to give the Accused better details of the charges against him and to enable the designated judge to decide whether to approve the Indictment under Rule 47(E).[125]

61. Therefore, the case summary is primarily a document intended for the confirmation stage of an indictment. In addition the case summary, like the pre-trial brief but in a more concise form, expands on the legal and factual issues the Prosecution intends to develop at trial. Therefore, any material fact that appears only in a case summary cannot substitute for the pleading of that material fact in the Indictment since, as the Appeals Chamber has concluded, the case summary "is not a document susceptible to amendment by the court".[126] The material facts of the case must be pleaded in an indictment and may only be amended with leave of the Trial Chamber pursuant to Rule 50(A).

62. The Appeals Chamber held that:

> In order to guarantee a fair trial the Prosecution is obliged to plead material facts with a sufficient degree of specificity. The question whether material facts are pleaded with the required degree of specificity depends on the context of the particular case.[127]

63. The Appeals Chamber also held that in order to determine whether the Prosecution properly pleaded a joint criminal enterprise, the Indictment should be read as a whole.[128]

64. The pleading of a JCE is a material fact and its elements must be pleaded in the indictment with sufficient specificity.[129] In its Case Summary, Prosecution Pre-Trial Brief and the Opening Statement of the Prosecutor on 4 June 2007 the Prosecution indicates that it intends to rely on JCE liability in this case.

65. The Trial Chamber will therefore consider whether the JCE was adequately pleaded in the Second Amended Indictment.

C. Pleading Requirements for Joint Criminal Enterprise

66. With regards to modes of liability in general, there is ample jurisprudence asserting that nature of the alleged responsibility of an accused must be unambiguous in an indictment.[130]

67. As for pleadings regarding JCE liability, the Trial Chamber recalls that the actus reus of JCE liability comprises three elements:

(i) A plurality of persons;

(ii) The existence of a common plan, design or purpose which amounts to or involves the commission of a crime provided for in the Statute;

(iii) Participation of the Accused in the common plan, design or purpose involving the perpetration of one of the crimes provided for in the Statute.[131]

68. The Appeals Chamber has found that following four categories of facts must be pleaded in any indictment charging an accused with JCE liability:[132]

(i) The nature or purpose of the JCE;[133]

(ii) The time at which or the period over which the enterprise is said to have existed;[134]

(iii) The identity of those engaged in the enterprise, so far as their identity is known, but at least by reference to their category as a group;[135]

(iv) The nature of the participation by the accused in that enterprise.[136]

D. Pleading of the JCE in the Second Amended Indictment

69. Bearing in mind the Appeals Chamber's finding that an Indictment must be read as a whole,[137] the Trial Chamber considers the following paragraphs of the Second Amended Indictment, namely:

a) Para. 5 which states that:

> Members of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, burned civilian property, and committed the crimes set forth below in paragraphs 6 through 31 and charged in Counts 2 through 11, as part of a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone.[138] [Emphasis added]

b) Para. 33, which states that:

> The ACCUSED, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1. of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment, which crimes the Accused planned, instigated, ordered, committed, or in whose planning, preparation or execution the Accused otherwise aided and abetted, or which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the Accused participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose.[139] [Emphasis added]

c) Para. 34, which states,

> In addition, or alternatively, pursuant to Article 6.3 of the Statute, the Accused, while holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, RUF/AFRC Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, is individually criminally responsible for the crimes referred to in Articles 2.3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment. The Accused is responsible for the criminal acts of his subordinates in that he knew or had cause to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the Accused failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof. [Emphasis added]

d) Paras 9, 14, 22, 23, 28, under the heading of the particulars of each count of the Indictment, which are prefixed with the following words:

> [...] Members of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters [...] acting in concert [...] with the ACCUSED."[140] [Emphasis added]

70. The Trial Chamber by a Majority opines that taken together, these paragraphs fulfil the requirements for pleading JCE and serve to put the Defence on notice that the Prosecution intended to charge the Accused with having participated in a Joint Criminal Enterprise.

> (i) The existence of a common plan, design or purpose amounting to or involving a crime under the Statute:

71. With regards to the common purpose, design or plan, paragraph 5 of the Indictment provides that the Accused together with others took part in "a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone." According to paragraphs 5 and 33 of the Indictment, the crimes charged in Counts 2 through 11 were part of the "campaign of terror" or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence thereof.

(ii)The time or period of the alleged criminal enterprise:

72. Following the direction of the Appeals Chamber that the Indictment must be read as a whole, it is clear that the JCE is alleged to have existed between 30 November 1996 and 18 January 2002.[141]

[139] Second Amended Indictment, para. 33 [emphasis added].
[140] Second Amended Indictment, paras 9, 14, 22, 23, 28 [emphasis added].

(iii) A plurality of participants in the criminal enterprise:

73. The Indictment states that, the alleged participants in the criminal enterprise included "members of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters."[142] The specific groups alleged to have participated have been clearly identified, and thus the Accused has been provided with adequate notice of the material fact of those engaged in the enterprise.

(iv) The nature of the Accused's participation in the criminal enterprise:

74. The Indictment alleges that the Accused participated in the criminal enterprise by "planning, instigating, ordering, committing or aiding and abetting the planning, preparation or execution of"[143] the alleged crimes; or alternatively, that "while holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, the Accused is responsible for the acts of his subordinates in that he knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit the crimes or had done so but failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent the crimes or to punish the perpetrators."[144] This clearly identifies the nature of the Accused's participation in the enterprise

75. Finally the fact that the Prosecution has not used the words "Joint Criminal Enterprise" in the indictment does not, in and of itself, indicate a defect. It is possible that other phrasings might effectively convey the same concept. The question is not whether particular words have been used but whether an accused has been meaningfully informed of the nature of the charges so as to be able to prepare an effective defence.[145] To rely on JCE, an indictment need not plead the doctrine ipsissima verba if the intention is clear.[146]

76. Reading the Indictment as a whole the Trial Chamber is satisfied that the Prosecution has adequately fulfilled the pleading requirements of the alleged Joint Criminal Enterprise in the Indictment, and that it has provided sufficient details to put the Accused on notice of the case against him.

DISSENTING OPINION OF JUSTICE RICHARD LUSSICK

Introduction

1. I have had the opportunity of reading the Majority Decision of my learned colleagues and have to say that I agree with their finding that the Defence has shown good cause for the late filing of the Motion. I dissent, however, from their finding that the joint criminal enterprise responsibility of the Accused has been properly pleaded in the Indictment.

2. I agree with the views expressed in the Majority Decision regarding the applicable law on the pleading requirements for indictments generally and for joint criminal enterprise specifically. Such views are well founded in the international jurisprudence of the ad hoc tribunals. Nevertheless, a proper application of those pleading principles leads to the conclusion, in my opinion, that the Indictment has been defectively pleaded with respect to joint criminal enterprise.

Defective Pleading of Joint Criminal Enterprise

3. The initial Indictment in this case was filed on 7 March 2003[1]. An Amended Indictment was filed with leave on 17 March 2006. In that indictment, joint criminal enterprise is pleaded in the following terms:

> The ACCUSED, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1. of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment, which crimes the Accused planned, instigated, ordered, committed, or in whose planning, preparation or execution the Accused otherwise aided and abetted, or which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the Accused participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose.[2]

[1] Pleading of joint criminal enterprise in the initial Indictment is mentioned infra in the "Remedy" section.

[2] Amended Indictment dated 16 March 2006, filed on 17 March 2006, para. 33 [emphasis added].

4. A Second Amended Indictment - which did not alter the wording of the pleading of joint criminal enterprise contained in the Amended Indictment - was filed on 29 May 2007[3]. (Hereinafter, unless otherwise indicated, a reference to "Indictment" will be a reference to the Second Amended Indictment, which is the current indictment.)

5. It is notable that the Indictment fails to identify any specific common purpose in respect of which the Accused is alleged to be criminally responsible. Hence, in my view, the Indictment is not sufficiently specific to clearly inform the Accused of the case he is required to meet in relation to joint criminal enterprise and is thus defective.

6. It is well established in international law that an indictment alleging the participation of the accused in a joint criminal enterprise must plead the nature of the common purpose of the joint criminal enterprise as a material fact, otherwise the indictment is defective[4]. The Appeals Chamber has found that "[e]stablished case law on the pleading of joint criminal enterprise requires that an indictment must allege the nature of the enterprise, the time period, the persons involved, and the nature of the accused's participation in the joint criminal enterprise."[5] The Appeals Chamber has also found that "determination of whether the Prosecution properly pleaded a crime must be determined on the basis of whether the Prosecution pleaded all the material facts in the Indictment".[6]

[6] AFRC Appeal Judgement, para 84.

7. On 3 August 2007 the Prosecution filed an Amended Case Summary, no doubt with the intention compensating for the deficiencies of the Indictment. The Prosecution claims that by virtue of this Amended Case Summary it cannot be said that "the Prosecution has failed to allege a common purpose to commit a crime within the Statute[7]." The Amended Case Summary provided (inter alia) the following details of the alleged common purpose:

> Between about 1988 and about 18 January 2002, the Accused and others agreed upon and participated in a common plan, design or purpose to carry out a criminal campaign of terror, as charged in the Second Amended Indictment, in order to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, and to forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone.[8]

8. The specific objective of the joint criminal enterprise detailed in the Amended Case Summary is obviously a material fact which should have been pleaded in the Indictment. The Amended Case Summary purports to change the count against the Accused by substituting a common purpose which was not charged in the Indictment. In my opinion, this cannot cure the defect in the Indictment. Material facts must be pleaded in an indictment - not in a case summary - and can only be amended by leave of the Trial Chamber under Rule 50. Since the indictment is the primary accusatory instrument, it is not possible for the Prosecution to cure a defective indictment by amending a case summary[9].

9. I disagree with the Majority Decision that "[r]eading the Indictment as a whole, (....) the Prosecution has adequately fulfilled the pleading requirements of the alleged Joint Criminal Enterprise in the Indictment." One cannot argue with the proposition that the Indictment should be read as a whole, but I do not agree that in the present case, reading together paragraphs 5, 9, 14, 22, 23, 28, 33 and 34 of the Indictment is sufficient to fulfil the requirements for pleading joint criminal enterprise.

10. (i) Para. 5 of the Indictment states that:

> Members of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, burned civilian property, and committed the crimes set forth below in paragraphs 6 through 31 and charged in Counts 2 through 11, as part of a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone.[10]

(ii) Paras 9, 14, 22, 23, 28, under the heading of the particulars of each count of the Indictment, make reference to "members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED."[11]

(iii) Para. 33 of the Indictment states that:

> The ACCUSED, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1. of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment, which crimes the Accused planned, instigated, ordered, committed, or in whose planning, preparation or execution the Accused otherwise aided and abetted, or which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the Accused participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose.[12]

11. The plain language of those paragraphs does not, in my opinion, support the Majority finding that paragraph 5 provides that the common plan, design or purpose of the joint criminal enterprise was "to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone." Not only does paragraph 5 fail to specify any purpose for the joint criminal enterprise, it does not mention joint criminal enterprise at all. That is because paragraph 5 is not concerned with joint criminal enterprise but is a count charging acts of terrorism, a violation of Article 3 Common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II. Bearing in mind that the Amended Case Summary, which particularises "a common, plan, design or purpose to carry out a criminal campaign of terror" was not in existence when the Indictment was filed, there is no more reason for reading paragraph 33 together with paragraph 5 than there is for reading paragraph 33 together with any other paragraph of the Indictment.

12. Furthermore, paragraph 5, when read with paragraph 33, does not clearly identify a common purpose. The campaign "to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone" would more likely be the means of achieving a common purpose rather than an end in itself. Indeed, the Amended Case Summary relied upon by the Prosecution alleges an objective different from paragraph 5, namely that the Accused participated in the "criminal campaign of terror, as charged in the Second Amended Indictment in order to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, and to forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone"[13].

13. Moreover, in view of the difference between the objective stated in paragraph 5 of the Indictment and the objective stated in the Amended Case Summary, it follows that not even the Prosecution would agree with the Majority theory of a common purpose.

14. I do not interpret the Appeals Chamber Decisions in Norman and in the AFRC Appeal Judgement as meaning that the Appeals Chamber has adopted pleading principles which are any less stringent than those of other international courts nor, in particular, that it has departed from well established pleading principles by deciding that the common purpose of a joint criminal enterprise need not be clearly specified in an Indictment. Such an interpretation would obviously be an infringement of the statutory right of the Accused to be informed clearly of the charges against him so that he may prepare a defence.

15. My final point is that the Accused should not be required to undergo the brain-twisting exercise of reading together paragraphs 5, 9, 14, 22, 23, 28, 33 and 34 of the Indictment in order to fathom what liability facts are most likely to form the basis for his alleged joint criminal enterprise. An indictment which requires an accused to do so is obviously defective in that it fails to clearly inform the accused of the case he is required to meet[14].

Remedy

16. Having found the Indictment to be defective in respect of its pleading of joint criminal enterprise, it is nonetheless clear that the Accused was given ample notice by the Prosecution in its various supporting documents, initial indictment and opening statement that he was to be charged with participation in a joint criminal enterprise, even though the objective of that enterprise was not always expressed in the same way.

17. The initial Indictment, filed on 7 March 2003, stated that "the common plan, purpose or design (joint criminal enterprise)" was "to take any actions necessary to gain and exercise political power and control over the territory of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamond mining areas. The natural resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, were to be provided to persons outside Sierra Leone in return for assistance in carrying out the joint criminal enterprise."[15]

18. The Amended Indictment filed on 17 March 2006, and the Second Amended Indictment filed on 29 May 2007, charged the Accused with being criminally responsible for crimes which "amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the Accused participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose"[16], but no common plan, design or purpose was specified.

19. The initial Case Summary filed on 7 March 2006 provided the following details of the common plan, design or purpose:

> 42. This shared common plan, design or purpose was to take any actions necessary to gain and exercise political power and political and physical control over the territory of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamond mining areas. The natural resources of Sierra

[16] See paragraph 33 of both documents.

Leone, in particular the diamonds, were to be provided primarily to the ACCUSED and other persons outside Sierra Leone.

43. The Common plan, design or purpose included taking any actions necessary to gain and exercise physical and political control over the population of Sierra Leone in order to prevent or minimize resistance to their geographic control, and to use members of the population to provide support to those persons engaged in achieving the objectives of the common plan, design or purpose. This common plan, design or purpose amounted to, or involved the commission of, the crimes alleged in the Amended Indictment. The alleged crimes, amounting to or involved within the common plan, design or purpose, were either intended by the ACCUSED, or were a foreseeable consequence of the common plan, design or purpose.

44. The ACCUSED participated in this common plan, design or purpose as part of his continuing efforts to gain access to the mineral wealth of Sierra Leone, in particular diamonds, to destabilize the Government of Sierra Leone in order to facilitate access to such mineral wealth, and to install a government in Sierra Leone that would be well disposed toward, and supportive of, the ACCUSED's interests and objectives in Liberia and the region.

20. The Prosecution's Pre-Trial Brief, filed on 4 April 2007, set out the alleged joint criminal enterprise responsibility of the Accused at some length. The common plan, design or purpose was particularised as follows:

> The Emergence of the Common Plan, Design or Purpose (Common Plan)
>
> Prior to the commencement of the armed conflict in Sierra Leone, and throughout the armed conflict, the Accused participated in a common plan, design or purpose to gain and maintain political power and physical control over the territory of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamond mining areas, in order to exploit the natural resources of the country. Implementation of this common plan included overthrowing the government of Sierra Leone in order to facilitate access to its natural resources and to install a government that would be well disposed toward, and supportive of, the Accused's interests and objectives in Liberia and the region.[17]

This common plan amounted to or involved the commission of the crimes alleged in the Amended Indictment (Indictment). From its inception, the Accused and the other participants in the common plan used criminal means to achieve and hold political power and physical control over the civilian population of Sierra Leone. These criminal means involved the campaign of terror waged against the civilian population of Sierra Leone, including widespread and continuing killings, rapes, beatings and mutilations, enslavement of the civilian population for use as fighters, "bush wives" and forced labour, looting and burning of civilian property. Children were used to carry out this criminal campaign and in active hostilities.[18]

The Accused, as leader of the NPFL was instrumental in the creation of this common plan. The Accused and Foday Sankoh, the leader of the RUF (Revolutionary United Front), made common cause to assist each other in their respective countries to achieve the common plan. From the outset, the Accused and his forces worked virtually as one with Sankoh and his RUF forces, and with the organised armed groups and forces that later evolved. To that end, Sankoh and his RUF forces assisted the Accused during the Liberian armed conflict which commenced in 1989.[19]

21. The Amended Case Summary, filed on 3 August 2007, alleged joint criminal enterprise in the following terms:

42. Between about 1988 and about 18 January 2002, the Accused and others agreed upon and participated in a common plan, design or purpose to carry out a criminal campaign of terror, as charged in the Second Amended Indictment, in order to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, and to forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone.

43.1 The crimes charged in Counts 1 through 11 of the Second Amended Indictment were within the common plan as it existed from 30 November 1996 through 18 January 2002. The Accused and the other participants in the common plan intended the commission of each of the charged crimes.

43.2 Alternatively, from 30 November 1996 through about 18 January 2002, the following crimes were within the common plan, design or purpose: acts of terror against civilians in Sierra Leone; conscription, enlistment and use in active hostilities of children under the age of 15 years; enslavement; and pillage. The Accused and other participants in the common plan agreed upon and intended the commission of these crimes. The crimes charged in Counts 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 were foreseeable consequences of the crimes agreed upon in the common plan. The Accused participated in the common plan despite his awareness that these were foreseeable consequences.

22. The Prosecutor, in his opening statement on 4 June 2007, addressed joint criminal enterprise in this way:

> The accused is responsible the development and execution of a plan that caused the death and destruction in Sierra Leone. That plan, formulated by the accused and others, was to take political and physical control of Sierra Leone, in order to exploit its abundant natural resources and to establish a friendly or subordinate government there to facilitate that exploitation....within that overall plan there were, of course, sub-plans and strategies and operations, and the execution of that plan, of course, changed and varied in its tactics due to the unfolding events and the resistance that it faced.[20]

Further on in his opening statement, the Prosecutor asserted that "the evidence will show that the accused's plan to control territory in Sierra Leone through a campaign of terror began at least in 1991..."[21]

Later in his address, the Prosecutor reiterated that

> A plan was there formulated by the Accused and others to take over political and physical control of Sierra Leone in order to exploit its abundant natural resources and to establish a friendly or subordinate government there to permit—to facilitate this exploitation. This was part of a larger strategy that included helping other militarily in their respective revolutions to take over their respective countries, and the first one was to be Liberia...The agreement made by the accused and Sankoh was to begin...in Liberia with the help of Sankoh's forces, and Liberia would then be used as a base from which to move into Sierra Leone with the help of the forces of the accused...access to

Sierra Leone's abundant resources was a primary objective, but Sierra Leone would also be a source of manpower.[22]

23. Thus, notwithstanding the defective indictment, an appraisal of the above material leaves no doubt that the Accused was put on notice at a very early stage in the case that he was going to have to answer an allegation of participating in a joint criminal enterprise. Although there are some obvious differences in the way the various materials describe the common purpose, such divergences are not so diffuse as to deprive the Accused of a fair opportunity to prepare his defence. Accordingly, I believe the justice of the case would be met by ordering the Prosecution to amend the indictment.[23]

Disposition

24. For the foregoing reasons, I would have determined as follows:

(i) The claim of the Defence that joint criminal enterprise is defectively pleaded in the Second Amended Indictment is upheld.

(ii) The Defence prayer for severance is denied.

(iii) The Prosecution is ordered to file within 14 days a further amended indictment which pleads clearly and unambiguously as a material fact the common plan, design or purpose of the joint criminal enterprise in which the Accused is alleged to have participated.

TRIAL CHAMBER II ("Trial Chamber") of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court");

NOTING the "Defence Response to Prosecution's Motion for Judicial Notice", filed on 10 September 2007 ("Response")[2];

NOTING the "Prosecution Reply to Defence Response to Prosecution's Motion for Judicial Notice", filed on 17 September 2007 ("Reply")[3];

COGNISANT OF Rules 89, 92*bis* and 94 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Rules");

HEREBY DECIDES AS FOLLOWS, based solely on the written submissions of the parties, pursuant to Rule 73 of the Rules.

I. SUBMISSIONS

Motion

1. The Prosecution requests the Trial Chamber to take judicial notice of the facts set out in Annex A to the Motion pursuant to Rules 89 and 94(A), which facts the Prosecution submits, are of "common knowledge".

2. The Prosecution submits that facts of common knowledge under Rule 94(A) of the Rules have been considered to encompass common or universally known facts, such as general facts of history, generally known geographical facts and the laws of nature, as well as those facts that are generally known within a Court's territorial jurisdiction and facts that are capable of accurate and ready determination by resort to sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be called into question.[4] In addition the Prosecution sets out four criteria approved by the Appeals Chamber.[5]

3. The Prosecution submits that judicial notice of facts of common knowledge is mandatory once a Trial Chamber has determined that a fact is of common knowledge.[6] It argues that there is no exception to this even where a fact proposed for judicial notice amounts to a "legal qualification" or constitutes an element of an offence[7] and that once judicially noticed, such facts cannot be challenged at trial.[8]

4. In the alternative, the Prosecution requests that the Trial Chamber admit into evidence pursuant to Rules 89(C) and 92*bis* the corresponding documentary extracts set out in Annex B of the Motion.[9]

[8] Motion, para. 8.
[9] Motion, paras 13-14.

Response

5. The Defence in its Response to the Motion "generally" accepts the statement of law by the Prosecution but argues that it would be improper for the Trial Chamber to take judicial notice of facts that are subject to reasonable dispute such as purported alliances between groups which allegedly include the Accused or any specific position held by the Accused where this could attest to the criminal responsibility of the Accused.[10] The Defence also argues that facts such as the launching of military operations or the specific nature of atrocities committed against civilians are disputable and that the Trial Chamber should not take judicial notice of them.[11]

6. The Defence accepts that judicial notice should be taken of (a) twelve of the proposed facts[12]; (b) parts of six of the proposed facts[13]; (c) 18 of the proposed facts subject to proposed amendments[14] and requests the Trial Chamber to deny the motion with regard to the remaining facts as they do not satisfy the criteria for "facts of common knowledge" and/or "attest to the criminal responsibility of the Accused".[15]

7. The Defence submits that the Trial Chamber should reject the Prosecution's alternative request to admit into evidence the corresponding documentary extracts pursuant to Rules 89(C) and 92*bis*, arguing that the Prosecution failed to follow the established practice of indicating the relevant passages or parts of each document which it seeks to tender into evidence.[16] Furthermore, the Defence requests that the Trial Chamber rely on Rule 92*bis* as amended on 14 May 2007 when considering the Prosecution Motion, submitting that the rule imposes a limitation on documents which relate to the acts and conduct of the Accused.[17]

Reply

8. The Prosecution submits that all facts in a criminal trial must be relevant to the issue of an Accused's criminal responsibility in order to be admissible and that therefore the phrase "attests to the criminal responsibility of the Accused" should be given a narrow interpretation. The Prosecution refers to the Karemera Appeals Decision stating that a fact which is "sufficient of itself" or "central" to establishing the criminal responsibility of the Accused should not be judicially noticed.[18]

9. Regarding the admission of documents pursuant to Rules 89(C) and 92*bis* the Prosecution submits that a textual interpretation of the amended Rule 92*bis* clearly suggest that the limitation on proof of acts and conduct of the Accused applies only to statements and transcripts and not to the other forms of admissible information.[19]

II. DELIBERATIONS

(a) Rule 94(A)

10. In evaluating the facts presented by the Prosecution for judicial notice, the Chamber is guided generally by Rule 89 and specifically by Rule 94(A) which directs the Chamber in regard to judicial notice of facts of common knowledge.

11. Rule 94(A) states:

> A Chamber shall not require proof of facts of common knowledge but shall take judicial notice thereof.

12. The Trial Chamber adopts the definition of "facts of common knowledge" set out in Prosecutor v. Semanza, namely, "those facts which are not subject to reasonable dispute including common or universally known facts, such as general facts of history, generally known geographical facts and the law of nature" and "those facts that are generally known within a tribunal's territorial jurisdiction".[20] This definition was endorsed by the Appeals Chamber in Prosecutor v. Norman et al.[21] The Trial Chamber therefore accepts that "[u]nder the rubric of matters of common knowledge, a court may generally take judicial notice of matters so notorious, or clearly established or susceptible to determination by reference to readily obtainable and authoritative sources that evidence of their existence is unnecessary".[22]

13. The criteria for facts of common knowledge, also endorsed by the Appeals Chamber in Prosecutor v. Norman et al, are as follows:

a) the facts are relevant to the case of the Accused person;

b) the facts are not subject to reasonable dispute;

c) the facts do not include legal findings;

d) the facts do not attest to the criminal responsibility of the Accused.[23]

14. Facts of common knowledge under Rule 94(A) cannot be challenged during trial and legal conclusions as well as facts which constitute legal findings cannot be judicially noticed.[24]

Norman et al*, SCSL-2004-14-AR73-398, "Fofana - Decision on Appeal against "Decision on Prosecution's Motion for Judicial Notice and Admission of Evidence", 16 May 2005, at para 21 ["Fofana Appeals Decision on Judicial Notice"]; The Trial Chamber also accepted this definition in Prosecutor v. Brima et al, Case No. SCSL-04-10-T, "Decision on the Prosecution Motion for Judicial Notice and Admission of Evidence", 25 October 2005 at para. 18 ["AFRC Judicial Notice Decision"].

[24] Fofana Appeals Decision on Judicial Notice, paras 30-32; AFRC Judicial Notice Decision, para. 20.

(b) Rule 92bis

15. The Appeals Chamber has held that "[a] party which fails in an application to have a fact judicially noticed under Rule 94(A) may nonetheless be able to introduce into evidence the sources upon which it has relied under 92*bis* and at the end of the trial the court may well conclude that the fact has been proved beyond reasonable doubt.[25]

16. The Trial Chamber notes the various submission made by the parties relating to the admission of materials pursuant to Rule 92*bis*.[26] The Trial Chamber addresses these submissions in a separate Decision.[27]

(c) Judicial Notice of Proposed Facts

(i) Facts agreed between the parties

17. The Trial Chamber concurs with the parties that Facts 1-3, 8, 19, 25, 27, 29, 30, 33, 101 and 102 are uncontroversial geographical or historical facts of which it is appropriate to take judicial notice.

18. The Defence proposed, and the Prosecution accepted, amendments to eighteen facts. The Trial Chamber concurs with the parties that Facts 4-5, 13-18, 22-24, 26, 31, 35-36, 38-39 and 49 in their amended form are facts of common knowledge not open to reasonable dispute. Accordingly, judicial notice is taken of them.

19. The Defence does not object to judicial notice being taken of parts of eight proposed facts: Facts 93(d), 94(c), 98(a), 99(a), 99(c), 100(a), 107(d) and 107(f). These facts consist of observations or conclusions contained in reports by various reputable non-governmental organisations and the Trial Chamber considers it also appropriate to take judicial notice of them.

(i) Facts objected to by the Defence

20. The Trial Chamber does not take judicial notice of Facts 6, 7, 9-12, 28, 32, 34, 37, 42, 43, 47, 50-100, 103, 104 and 107, with the exception of those parts accepted by the Defence, discussed above, because they are open to reasonable dispute and therefore are not appropriate for judicial notice.

21. The Defence objects that Facts 20, 21, 40, 41, 44-46, 48, 105 and 106 indirectly attest to the criminal responsibility of the Accused. The Trial Chamber upholds this objection and holds that these are not appropriate for judicial notice.

(Proposed Fact 36, amended)

Fact AB: ECOWAS issued a Final Communiqué at the conclusion of its 28-29 August 1997 summit in Abuja, Nigeria.

(Proposed Fact 38, amended)

Fact AC: ECOWAS issued a Final Communiqué at the conclusion of its 28-29 August 1997 summit in which it mandated ECOMOG to specifically monitor the ceasefire, enforce sanctions and embargo and secure the peace in Sierra Leone.

(Proposed Fact 39, amended)

Fact AD: ECOMOG ousted the AFRC/RUF junta from power on or about 14 February 1998.

(Proposed Fact 49, amended)

Fact AE: In the press release, Sierra Leone Rebels Forcefully Recruit Child Soldiers, dated 31 May 2000, Human Rights Watch stated or noted:

the executive director of the Africa Division of Human Rights Watch called on all parties to the conflict in Sierra Leone to immediately stop the use of child soldiers and to release all abducted children and people under the age of eighteen.

(Proposed Fact 93(d))

Fact AF: In its press release, New Testimony of Rape Committed by Sierra Leone Rebels – RUF fighters rape women and children in Makeni and other towns, dated 5 June 2000, Human Rights Watch:

called upon the members of the U.N. Security Council to provide UNAMSIL with the mandate and the means to protect civilians in Sierra Leone from atrocities.

(Proposed Fact 94(c))

Fact AG: In Taylor-made: The Pivotal Role of Liberia's Forests and Flag of Convenience in Regional Conflict, dated September 2001, Global Witness stated or noted that:

The UN Security Council should immediately impose a total embargo on the exportation and transportation of Liberian timber, and its importation into other countries. Such an embargo should remain in place until it can be demonstrated that the trade does not contribute to the RUF in Sierra Leone and armed militias in Liberia, and that it is carried out in a transparent manner.

(Proposed Fact 98(a))

Fact AH: In its press release IMC Plastic Surgeons Remove the Scars of War in Sierra Leone, dated 4 September 2001, the International Medical Corps stated or noted:

> For hundreds of children and child soldiers in Sierra Leone, the 10-year civil war left scars that could only be healed with the help of IMC's plastic surgery program.
>
> Without plastic surgery, the child victims might never be able to return to their communities and reintegrate into society. The torment of the scars was so great that some children tried to burn them off with caustic soda, which only made them worse.

(Proposed Fact 99(a) and (c))

Fact AI: Sierra Leone's decade-long conflict was marked by an extraordinary level of brutal human rights abuses, including abductions, beatings, killings, sexual assault of women and men, being "captured" for less than 24 hours, torture, forced labour, serious injuries and amputations.

(Proposed Fact 100(a))

Fact AJ: Amnesty International Report 2001, which covered the period January to December 2000, set out that:

> A UN panel of experts, established in August [2000] to investigate the link between the diamond trade and the conflict in Sierra Leone, published its report in December.
>
> The panel made recommendations, including for an embargo on diamonds from Liberia and a travel ban on Liberian officials by UN members states.

I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Defence in this case took a decision not to file a preliminary motion on the form of the indictment pursuant to Rule 72(A) of the Rules of Procedure of and Evidence, (Rule) stating that "challenges to the sufficiency of the evidence to support the allegations made in the Indictment ... are properly matters for trial".[1] However, in its pre-trial brief, the defence raised deficiencies in the pleading of common plan, design or purpose as a mode of liability.[2]

2. On 20 June 2007, Trial Chamber II delivered its judgement in Prosecutor v. Brima et al ("AFRC") case.[3] In the AFRC Judgement, Trial Chamber II found that, among other things, that:

> "with respect to Joint Criminal Enterprise ["JCE"] as a mode of criminal responsibility, the Indictment has been defectively pleaded. Therefore, the Trial Chamber will not consider JCE as a mode of criminal responsibility in this case."[4]

In its discussion of this issue, the Trial Chamber listed four categories of supporting facts that must be provided:

(a) the nature or purpose of the JCE;

(b) the time at which or the period over which the enterprise is said to have existed;

(c) the identity of those engaged in the enterprise, so far as their identity is known, but at least by reference to their category as a group; and

(d) the nature of the participation of the accused in that enterprise.[5]

3. The Office of the Prosecutor respectfully disagrees with that finding in the AFRC Judgement and shall appeal it.

4. The Prosecution has provided notice concerning the common plan, design or purpose in the indictment.[6] Further, by pleading: (i) the words "which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the Accused participated" in paragraph 33 of the Second Amended Indictment, the Prosecution pleaded what is commonly referred to as the "basic form" of liability for participation in the alleged common plan; and (ii) by pleading the words "which crimes ... were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose" in paragraph 33, the Prosecution pleaded the "extended form" of liability for participation in the alleged common plan.

5. The Prosecution has also provided notice regarding common plan, design or purpose as a mode of liability in the case summary which accompanied the indictment[7], the pre-trial brief[8], the opening statement[9] and the pre-trial disclosure.

6. However, consistent with the AFRC Judgement and out of an abundance of caution, the Prosecution has amended paragraphs 42, 43 and 44 of the case summary which accompanies the indictment in order to further articulate the common plan, design or purpose which has been alleged in this case. The Prosecution hereby files an Amended Case Summary in these proceedings reflecting the changes to those paragraphs. The Case Summary remains unchanged except for the aforementioned amendments to paragraphs 42 to 44, and the following amendments for consistency with the Second Amended Indictment:

   (a) The words "Port Loko" has been inserted in paragraph 21.

   (b) The word "Second" [Amended Indictment] has been inserted in the title and paragraphs 5-6, 18-21, 31-32, 34-37, 39, 41, and 45-48.

II. FILING OF THE AMENDED CASE SUMMARY

7. Rule 47(C) of the SCSL Rules of Procedure and Evidence requires the Prosecution to prepare a cases summary which shall accompany the indictment in each case. This is in contrast to Rules 47(C) at the ICTY and ICTR which require the Prosecution to include a "concise statement of facts" in the indictment itself. The case summary filed herein sets out many of the particulars required in the body of ICTY and ICTR indictments. In a 16 May 2005 decision in the Norman et al case, the Appeals Chamber can be said to have chastised the Prosecution for slavishly following the practice of the ad hoc Tribunals by including in the indictment more particulars than it was required to provide.[10]

8. In the Norman Decision, the Appeals Chamber set forth the required contents of both the indictment and the case summary.[11] The Appeals Chamber stated that the indictment will include particulars of personal identification and a statement of each specific offence of which the accused is charged, commonly known as the count of the indictment. The Appeals Chamber further stated that the count encapsulates the offence with which the accused is charged, that is, the law which the accused has allegedly broken. The count should then be followed by a "short description" of the particulars of the offence.[12] The Appeals Chamber restated the required contents of an indictment to be a list of counts, with each count followed by brief particulars.[13]

9. The Appeals Chamber stated that the Prosecution case summary should set out the allegations the Prosecution proposes to prove; that the case summary is the vehicle by which the Prosecution provides the Accused better details of the charges against him.[14] The Appeals Chamber stated that the case summary may be amended without seeking leave to amend.[15]

10. On 6 March 2006, when the Prosecution submitted its "Motion for Leave to Amend the Indictment and for Approval and Non-disclosure of the Amended Indictment"[16], in addition to the amended indictment ("Amended Indictment") it also provided a case summary ("Case Summary"). The Amended Indictment and Case Summary were filed in accordance with the Norman Decision. The modes of individual criminal liability upon which the Prosecution relies in this case were included in the Amended Indictment; and the further particulars relating to those modes of liability, including participation in a common plan, design or purpose, were included in the Case Summary. This is consistent with SCSL Rule 47(C) and the Norman Appeals Decision, however, even if it were decided that these particulars should be included in the body of the Indictment, this Trial Chamber has held that such a defect can be cured by "timely, clear, and consistent information."[17] Accordingly, this further articulation of those particulars relating to common plan, design or purpose as a mode of liability are set out in the Amended Case Summary, which is annexed to this filing.

11. The Prosecution notifies the Trial Chamber, the Accused and the Defence that the Case Summary filed with the Amended Indictment should, as of the date of this filing, be replaced by the Amended Case Summary.

CASE SUMMARY ACCOMPANYING THE SECOND AMENDED INDICTMENT

The Prosecution evidence, including expert witnesses, witnesses of fact and documentary evidence, will prove the following allegations:

THE ACCUSED

1. In the late 1980's the ACCUSED received military training in Libya from representatives of the Government of MU'AMMAR AL-QADHAFI. While in Libya the ACCUSED met FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH. The two made common cause to assist each other in taking power in their respective countries.

2. While in Libya, the ACCUSED formed or joined the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL), and became the leader or head of that organized armed group.

3. In December 1989 the NPFL, led by the ACCUSED, began conducting organized armed attacks in Liberia. The ACCUSED and the NPFL were assisted in these attacks by FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH and his followers.

CHARGES

Contextual Elements

4. Paragraphs 1 through 3 are incorporated by reference herein.

5. All offences alleged within the Second Amended Indictment were committed within the territory of Sierra Leone after 30 November 1996.

6. Between 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, a state of armed conflict existed within Sierra Leone. For the purposes of the Second Amended Indictment, organized armed factions involved in this conflict included the Civil Defence Forces (CDF), the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), and the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC). From the beginning of, and throughout the conflict, Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), under the ACCUSED's control and/or operating in Sierra Leone with the ACCUSED's approval and assistance, also participated in this conflict, fighting as part of or alongside members of the RUF, and, later, the AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance.

7. The CDF was comprised of Sierra Leonean traditional hunters, including the Kamajors, Gbethis, Kapras, Tamaboros and Donsos. The CDF fought against the RUF and, later, against the AFRC.

8. The organized armed group that became known as the RUF, led by FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH aka POPAY aka PAPA aka PA, was founded about 1988 or 1989 in Libya. The RUF, under the leadership of FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH, and with the assistance of Liberian fighters, began organized armed operations in Sierra Leone in March 1991. During the ensuing armed conflict, the RUF forces were also referred to as "RUF", "rebels" and "People's Army". Initially the RUF fought against the Republic of Sierra Leone Military Forces, commonly known as the Sierra Leone Army or SLA.

9. Although a peace accord was signed on 30 November 1996, in Abidjan, Ivory Coast, between FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH and President Kabbah, active hostilities recommenced after a temporary lull in the fighting.

10. The armed group known as the AFRC was created via a coup d'etat by members of the SLA on 25 May 1997. On that date the members of the coup seized power from the elected government of the Republic of Sierra Leone. JOHNNY PAUL KOROMA aka JPK became the leader and Chairman of the AFRC. Soldiers of the SLA comprised the majority of the AFRC membership. The AFRC forces were also referred to as "Junta", "soldiers", "SLA", and "ex-SLA".

11. Shortly after the AFRC seized power, at the invitation of JOHNNY PAUL KOROMA, and upon the order of FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH, the RUF joined with the AFRC. The AFRC and the RUF acted together thereafter. The AFRC/RUF Junta forces (Junta) were also referred to as "Junta", "rebels", "soldiers", "SLA", "ex-SLA" and "People's Army". The two armed factions now fought together against the CDF, SLAs loyal to the elected government, and any other force that fought against the AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance.

12. After the 25 May 1997 coup d'état, a governing body called the Supreme Council was created within the Junta. The governing body included leaders of both the AFRC and the RUF.

13. The Junta was forced from power by forces acting on behalf of the ousted government of President Kabbah about 14 February 1998. President Kabbah's government returned in March 1998. After the Junta was removed from power the AFRC/RUF alliance continued.

14. On 7 July 1999, in Lomé, Togo, FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH and President Kabbah signed a peace agreement. However, active hostilities continued.

15. The ACCUSED and all members of the organized armed factions engaged in fighting within Sierra Leone, including the Liberian fighters, were required to abide by International Humanitarian Law and the laws and customs governing the conduct of armed conflicts, including the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, to which the Republic of Sierra Leone succeeded on 10 June 1965, and the Republic of Liberia acceded on 29 March 1954 and Additional Protocol II to the Geneva Conventions, to which the Republic of Sierra Leone acceded on 21 October 1986, and the Republic of Liberia acceded on 30 June 1988.

16. The armed conflict continued within the territory of Sierra Leone until about 18 January 2002, when Ahmed Tejan Kabbah, President of the Republic of Sierra Leone, announced an end to the hostilities.

17. A nexus existed between the armed conflict and all acts or omissions charged herein as Violations of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II and as Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law.

18. All acts and omissions charged in the Second Amended Indictment as Crimes Against Humanity were committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against the civilian population of Sierra Leone.

19. The victims of the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment were civilians. In the Second Amended Indictment, the words "civilian(s)" or "civilian population" refer to persons who took no active part in the hostilities, or who were no longer taking an active part in the hostilities.

Enumerated crimes and serious violations

20. The Prosecution relies primarily on the particulars set forth in the Second Amended Indictment in respect of the alleged enumerated crimes and serious violations set forth therein.

21. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of the RUF, AFRC, Junta and/or the AFRC/RUF alliance, and Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, committed the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment. During that time period, members of these organized armed groups conducted widespread or systematic armed attacks throughout the territory of the Republic of Sierra Leone, including Kono, Kenema, Bombali, Port Loko and Kailahun Districts, Freetown and the Western area. The attacks were directed against the civilian population, and the victims of the armed attacks were civilian men, women and children.

Acts of Terror

22. The primary objective of the attacks was to terrorize the civilian population of Sierra Leone. Acts of terror included large scale burning of civilian homes and other civilian property, unlawful killings, sexual and physical violence, use of child soldiers and widescale looting. Many civilians saw these crimes committed; others returned to their homes or places of refuge to find the results of these crimes – dead bodies, savaged or mutilated victims and looted and burned property.

23. Also as part of the campaign of terror, members of the civilian population were routinely captured and abducted. These captives were typically subjected to sexual and physical violence; most, if not all, who survived capture were used as forced labor. Many males, and some females, were forced to become fighters in the armed groups to which their captors belonged. Men and boys who were abducted were also used as forced labour.

Unlawful Killings

24. Members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, engaged in widescale unlawful killing of civilians throughout Sierra Leone. Civilians were shot, burned in their homes, hacked to death, and killed either while trying to escape from attacks on their homes, or from their captors. Some victims died as a result of the sexual or physical violence to which they were subjected, while others died in the performance of forced labor.

Sexual Violence

25. Women and girls were subjected to widespread acts of sexual violence. Such violence included brutal rapes, often by multiple rapists. Captured women and girls were routinely raped; many of them were held for years, and forced to provide sexual gratification to their captors in addition to being forced to perform domestic duties and other manual labor.

Physical Violence

26. Physical violence was widespread and often carried out in public places. Civilians were forced to watch as others were violently attacked and mutilated; many of those forced spectators were then similarly attacked and mutilated. Civilians, in particular young men who tried to escape from their RUF, AFRC, AFRC Junta or alliance, or Liberian captors, were often mutilated by having "RUF" and "AFRC" carved on their bodies.

Child Soldiers

27. The conflict in Sierra Leone was marked at all stages by the presence of children, especially young boys, under the age of 15 in the ranks of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC Junta or alliance and Liberian fighters. Such children were enlisted or conscripted and forced to participate actively in hostilities. These children had generally been seized from their families and were unable or too frightened to escape from their captors. Military training was often given to these children and they were taught to handle and fire weapons, to lay ambushes and evade detection. Such was the prevalence of child soldiers during the conflict that some units were specifically designated for young boys such as the Small Boys Unit or "SBU".

Abductions and Forced Labor

28. Throughout Sierra Leone civilians were routinely abducted and forced to perform a variety of forced labor, including carrying goods, ammunition and weapons, performing domestic work, going on food-finding missions, performing agricultural duties and mining for diamonds. They did so under threat of physical harm or death, and often at gun point. Those forced to work were often physically abused, or in some instances killed, if they were unable to carry out the duties assigned them. The conditions of life for those forced to carry out this labor were often very difficult, and such individuals were generally deprived of adequate food, shelter and medical care. Civilians who attempted escape were punished, often brutally, or killed. In some cases, civilians were held for years.

Looting

29. Widespread looting formed a key element of the hostile activities engaged in by members of the RUF, the AFRC and the AFRC Junta or alliance and Liberian fighters. Civilian properties were routinely looted for items such as jewellery and other valuables, money and clothes.

INDIVIDUAL CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY

30. From the beginning of, and throughout, the conflict in Sierra Leone, the ACCUSED provided the RUF with assistance, encouragement and direction. Prior to the initial attacks into Sierra Leone, the ACCUSED provided military training, financial support, arms and ammunition, and safe havens to FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH and his organized group. The ACCUSED provided personnel for the initial attacks into Sierra Leone which began the armed conflict in that country.

31. Throughout the armed conflict in Sierra Leone, the ACCUSED's positions as leader or head of the NPFL and President of Liberia, combined with his close association with FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH and other senior leaders of the RUF and AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, provided the ACCUSED with the authority and the means to participate in the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment.

32. The ACCUSED's participation in the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment took a variety of forms – planning, instigating, ordering, committing, otherwise aiding and abetting in the commission of the alleged crimes, and participating in a common plan, design or purpose.

33. In addition, or in the alternative, the ACCUSED incurs criminal responsibility for the alleged crimes because, as the superior of the perpetrators, he failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish the crimes of which he had actual knowledge or of which he had reason to know.

Planning

34. The ACCUSED, individually, or participating with his direct subordinates and/or high level leaders of the RUF, AFRC and AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, planned armed operations in Sierra Leone which were themselves crimes or involved the commission of crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment.

Instigating

35. Throughout the armed conflict, the ACCUSED encouraged the actions of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters, thereby prompting the perpetrators to commit the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment.

Ordering

36. Through his positions set out in paragraph 31 above, and his close association with FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH and other senior leaders of RUF and AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, the ACCUSED, individually, or in concert with those senior leaders, exercised de jure and/or de facto control over the perpetrators of the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment. He exercised de facto control, individually, or in concert with FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH and other high level superiors in the RUF, AFRC and AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, through those senior leaders and/or intermediate level superiors within those armed groups. The ACCUSED exercised de jure and/or de facto control directly over Liberian fighters, or through intermediate superiors of those fighters.

37 The ACCUSED provided instruction, direction and guidance involving the commission of crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment directly to, and through, senior and/or intermediate level commanders within the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and directly to, or through intermediate level superiors of Liberian fighters.

38. Senior level RUF leaders to whom and through whom the ACCUSED gave instruction, direction and guidance included FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH, SAM BOCKARIE aka MOSQUITO aka MASKITA and ISSA HASSAN SESAY. The ACCUSED provided such instruction guidance and direction to the AFRC through the shared AFRC/RUF leadership, which included the high level RUF commanders named above, and TAMBA ALEX BRIMA aka GULLIT and BRIMA BAZZY KAMARA aka BAZZY.

Committing

39. The ACCUSED committed the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment in the sense of being a co-perpetrator of those crimes, in that, while not physically perpetrating the crimes, the ACCUSED shared the intent to commit the crimes and participated in the common plan, design or purpose which amounted to or involved commission of those crimes.

Aiding and abetting

40. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, the ACCUSED assisted in the commission of the alleged crimes by providing various forms of support. Such support included the provision of: military training, both in Liberia and Sierra Leone; facilities in Liberia; safe havens in Liberia; personnel drawn from the NPFL, other organized armed groups within Liberia and from the Liberian population in general; arms and associated materiel such as ammunition; communications equipment including satellite phones; and other supplies such as food, uniforms and petrol. To ensure the timely and safe delivery of this support to the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and to the Liberian fighters in Sierra Leone, the ACCUSED also provided Liberian escorts and vehicles.

41. The essential support set out above provided practical assistance, encouragement and/or moral support to the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and Liberian fighters in carrying out the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment, and had a substantial effect on the commission of those crimes, and/or furthered the common plan, design or purpose in which the participants included the leadership and members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and Liberian fighters.

Participation in a common plan, design or purpose

42. Between about 1988 and about 18 January 2002, the Accused and others agreed upon and participated in a common plan, design or purpose to carry out a criminal campaign of terror, as charged in the Second Amended Indictment, in order to pillage the resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, and to forcibly control the population and territory of Sierra Leone.

43.1 The crimes charged in Counts 1 through 11 of the Second Amended Indictment were within the common plan as it existed from 30 November 1996 through 18 January 2002. The Accused and the other participants in the common plan intended the commission of each of the charged crimes.

43.2 Alternatively, from 30 November 1996 through about 18 January 2002, the following crimes were within the common plan, design or purpose: acts of terror against civilians in Sierra Leone; conscription, enlistment and use in active hostilities of children under the age of 15 years; enslavement of civilians; and pillage. The Accused and other participants in the common plan agreed upon and intended the commission of these crimes. The crimes charged in Counts 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 were foreseeable consequences of the crimes agreed upon in the common plan. The Accused participated in the common plan despite his awareness that these were foreseeable consequences.

44.1 Others participated in the common plan, design or purpose during various periods, including:

(a) Foday Saybana Sankoh, leader of the RUF, who participated between about 1988 and January 2002;

(b) Other commanders and other leaders of the RUF, from about 1990 until about 18 January 2002;

(c) Other commanders and leaders of the NPFL from about 1988 until about 18 January 2002;

(d) Commanders and other leaders of Liberian organized armed groups who worked in concert with or under the direction of the Accused and participated from about 1989 until about 18 January 2002;

(e) Commanders, and other leaders of the AFRC who agreed to and commenced participation in the common plan on about 28 May 1997 through about May 2000;

(f) After August 1997 when the Accused was sworn-in as President of Liberia, commanders and other leaders of his Liberian government and armed forces, including specialized units, police and military forces who participated through about 18 January 2002.

(g) Associates of the Accused who worked under his direction or in cooperation with him to further the common plan from about 1988 until about 18 January 2002.

44.2 Members of the above named groups were either participants in the common plan or were used by the Accused and the other leaders and commanders as tools to implement and achieve the agreed common plan, design or purpose as described above.

44.3 At times during the armed conflict there were lulls in active hostilities. However, from its inception until the end of the armed conflict in Sierra Leone on about 18 January 2002, the common plan, as described in paragraphs 42 and 43 above, remained the same.

44.4 The ACCUSED's positions as leader or head of the NPFL and President of Liberia, combined with his close association with FODAY SAYBANA SANKOH and other senior leaders of the RUF and AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, as described in paragraphs 31, 36, 37 and 38 above, provided the ACCUSED with the authority and the means to participate in the common plan. The Accused's participation in the common plan is described in paragraphs 30 – 41 above, in paragraphs 33 and 34 of the Second Amended Indictment and in the Prosecution pre-trial brief and opening statement. The Accused's participation by providing financial support began prior to 30 November 1996 and continued through 18 January 2002. The Accused further participated in the common plan, design or purpose through his failure to fulfill his duty to instruct the forces described in paragraphs 44.2 and 44.3 above to cease ongoing crimes.

Intent and knowledge

45. The ACCUSED intended the commission of the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment, or acted with reckless indifference toward the possibility that such crimes would be committed, and/or had knowledge of the commission of these crimes or the likelihood that such crimes would be committed.

46. The ACCUSED had knowledge of the crimes committed, or the probability that such crimes would be committed, through a variety of sources – communications via radios, satellite phones, personal visits from leaders of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, contacts between the ACCUSED's representatives and RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance leaders, reports from his agents in Sierra Leone, documentary evidence of the commission of crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment from the media and international organizations and through representations made to the ACCUSED by representatives of the UN and of national governments. The ACCUSED also had this knowledge by virtue of the fact that many of these crimes paralleled the crimes committed against civilians in Liberia and Sierra Leone by members of his own organization, the NPFL, members and former members of which were fighting with or alongside the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, under the direction of, or with the approval and support of, the ACCUSED.

47. For the above reasons, the ACCUSED knew or had reason to know the crimes alleged in the Second Amended Indictment had been committed or were about to be committed by persons subordinate to him. The ACCUSED did not take steps to prevent or punish these crimes.

Superior Authority

48. As alleged in paragraphs 33, 36, 46 – 47 above, the ACCUSED, individually or in concert with leaders of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and intermediate leaders of the Liberian fighters, exercised de jure and/or de facto control over the participants of the perpetrators of the crimes alleged in this Second Amended Indictment. The ACCUSED knew or had reason to know these subordinates were about to commit these continuing crimes, or had done so, and failed to take reasonable and necessary steps to prevent or punish the perpetrators.

THE PROSECUTOR

Against

CHARLES GHANKAY TAYLOR also known as DANKPANNAH CHARLES GHANKAY TAYLOR also known as DANKPANNAH CHARLES GHANKAY MACARTHUR TAYLOR

SECOND AMENDED INDICTMENT

The Prosecutor, Special Court for Sierra Leone, under Article 15 of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone (the Statute) charges:

CHARLES GHANKAY TAYLOR also known as
(aka) DANKPANNAH CHARLES GHANKAY TAYLOR
aka DANKPANNAH CHARLES GHANKAY MACARTHUR TAYLOR with CRIMES AGAINST HUMANITY, VIOLATIONS OF ARTICLE 3 COMMON TO THE GENEVA CONVENTIONS AND OF ADDITIONAL PROTOCOL II and OTHER SERIOUS VIOLATIONS OF INTERNATIONAL HUMANITARIAN LAW, in violation of Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as set forth below:

THE ACCUSED

1. CHARLES GHANKAY TAYLOR aka DANKPANNAH CHARLES GHANKAY TAYLOR aka DANKPANNAH CHARLES GHANKAY MACARTHUR TAYLOR (the ACCUSED) was born on 27 or 28 January 1948 at Arthington in the Republic of Liberia.

2. From the late 1980's the ACCUSED was the Leader or Head of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPFL), an organized armed group.

3. From 2 August 1997 until about 11 August 2003, the ACCUSED was the President of the Republic of Liberia.

4. Paragraphs 1 through 3 are incorporated by reference in CHARGES below.

CHARGES

By his acts or omissions in relation to the below described events, the ACCUSED, pursuant to Article 6.1. and, or alternatively, Article 6.3. of the Statute, is individually criminally responsible for the crimes alleged below:

TERRORIZING THE CIVILIAN POPULATION

COUNT 1: Acts of Terrorism, a VIOLATION OF ARTICLE 3 COMMON TO THE GENEVA CONVENTIONS AND OF ADDITIONAL PROTOCOL II, punishable under Article 3.d. of the Statute.

PARTICULARS

5. Members of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC), AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, including members and ex-members of the NPFL (Liberian fighters), assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, burned civilian property, and committed the crimes set forth below in paragraphs 6 through 31 and charged in Counts 2 through 11, as part of a campaign to terrorize the civilian population of the Republic of Sierra Leone.

Burning

6. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, engaged in widespread destruction of civilian property by burning, including the following:

Kono District

7. Between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, in various locations, including Koidu, Tombodu or Tumbodu, Sewafe or Njaima Sewafe, Wendedu and Bumpe;

In addition, or in the alternative:

COUNT 8: Other inhumane acts, a CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY, punishable under Article 2.i. of the Statute.

PARTICULARS

18. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, committed widespread acts of physical violence against civilians, including the following:

Kono District

19. Between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, mutilated and beat an unknown number of civilians in various locations, including Tombodu or Tumbodu, Kaima or Kayima and Wondedu. The mutilations included cutting off limbs and other body parts and carving "AFRC" and "RUF" on the bodies of the civilians;

Kailahun District

20. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, beat an unknown number of civilians in locations throughout the District;

Freetown and Western Area

21. Between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, mutilated and beat an unknown number of civilians in various areas of Freetown, including the northern and eastern areas of the city, the Kissy area around the State House, Fourah Bay, Upgun and the Kissy mental hospital, and Hastings, Wellington, Tumbo, Waterloo and Benguema in the Western Area. The mutilations included cutting off limbs.

CHILD SOLDIERS

COUNT 9: Conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years into armed forces or groups, or using them to participate actively in hostilities, an OTHER SERIOUS VIOLATION OF INTERNATIONAL HUMANITARIAN LAW, punishable under Article 4.c. of the Statute.

PARTICULARS

22. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, throughout the Republic of Sierra Leone, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, routinely conscripted, enlisted and/or used boys and girls under the age of 15 to participate in active hostilities. Many of these children were first abducted, then trained in AFRC and/or RUF camps in various locations throughout the country, and thereafter used as fighters.

ABDUCTIONS AND FORCED LABOUR

COUNT 10: Enslavement, a CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY, punishable under Article 2.c. of the Statute.

PARTICULARS

23. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, engaged in widespread and large scale abductions of civilians and use of civilians as forced labour, including the following:

Kenema District

24. Between about 1 July 1997 and about 28 February 1998, used an unknown number of civilians living in the District as forced labor in various locations such as the Tongo Fields area;

Kono District

25. Between about 1 February 1998 and about 18 January 2002, abducted an unknown number of civilians, and took them to various locations outside the District, or to locations within the District such as AFRC and/or RUF camps, Tombodu or Tumbodu, Koidu and Wondedu, and used them as forced labour;

Kailahun District

26. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, brought abducted civilian men, women and children to various locations within the District and used them and residents of the District as forced labour;

Freetown and Western Area

27. Between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, abducted an unknown number of civilians, including a large number of children, from locations throughout Freetown and the Western Area, and used them as forced labour.

LOOTING

COUNT 11: Pillage, a VIOLATION OF ARTICLE 3 COMMON TO THE GENEVA CONVENTIONS AND OF ADDITIONAL PROTOCOL II, punishable under Article 3.f. of the Statute.

PARTICULARS

28. Between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, assisted and encouraged by, acting in concert with, under the direction and/or control of, and/or subordinate to the ACCUSED, engaged in widespread unlawful taking of civilian property, including the following:

Kono District

29. Between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, in various locations, including Koidu, Tombodu or Tumbodu and Bumpe;

Bombali District

30. Between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 April 1998, in various locations, including Makeni;

Port Loko District

30A. Between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 April 1998, in various locations, including Masiaka;

Freetown and Western Area

31. Between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, throughout Freetown and the Western Area.

32. Paragraphs 4 through 31 are incorporated by reference in INDIVIDUAL CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY below.

INDIVIDUAL CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY

33. The ACCUSED, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6.1. of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment, which crimes the ACCUSED planned, instigated, ordered, committed, or in whose planning, preparation or execution the ACCUSED otherwise aided and abetted, or which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the ACCUSED participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose.

34. In addition, or alternatively, pursuant to Article 6.3. of the Statute, the ACCUSED, while holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters, is individually criminally responsible for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in this Amended Indictment. The ACCUSED is responsible for the criminal acts of his subordinates in that he knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so and the ACCUSED failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof.

SEISED of the Defence Application for Leave to Appeal the 25 April 2007 "Decision on Defence Motion Requesting Reconsideration of 'Joint Defence Motions on Adequate Facilities and Adequate Time for the Preparation of Mr. Taylor's Defence,' Dated 23 January", filed on 30 April 2007 ("Motion"), on the grounds that

(i) "exceptional circumstances" exist, in that the course of justice would be interfered with if the Trial Chamber does not give any compensation for the three and a half months during which the Defence legal consultations were hampered by the "chilling effect" of a video surveillance camera[1]; and

(ii) "irreparable prejudice" will be caused to the Defence if it is denied immediate relief and adequate time to prepare, since the only remedy would be an order for retrial[2];

NOTING the "Prosecution Response to Defence Application for Leave to Appeal Filed on 30 April 2007", filed on 8 May 2007,("Response"), wherein the Prosecution relies on its responses filed in respect of two previous Defence motions[3], conceding that the Defence had shown good cause for an additional delay in the commencement of the trial;

NOTING that the Defence has not filed a reply to the Response;

RECALLING the Trial Chamber's "Decision on Defence Motion Requesting Reconsideration of 'Joint Decision on Defence Motions on Adequate Facilities and Adequate Time for the Preparation of Mr. Taylor's Defence', dated 23 January 2007", filed on 25 April 2007 ("Impugned Decision") in which the Trial Chamber granted the said motion in part by allowing an adjournment of 18 calendar days after the Prosecution opens its case on 4 June 2007;

MINDFUL of the provisions of Article 17 of the Statute of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, and of Rules 26*bis*, 54 and 73 of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence ("Rules");

NOTING that Rule 73(B) of the Rules provides that:

> Decisions rendered on such motions are without interlocutory appeal. However, in exceptional circumstances and to avoid irreparable prejudice to a party, the Trial Chamber may give leave to appeal. Such leave should be sought within 3 days of the decision and shall not operate as a stay of proceedings unless the Trial Chamber so orders;

NOTING therefore that Rule 73(B) does not confer a general right of appeal, but that leave to appeal may be granted by the Trial Chamber only in cases where the conjunctive conditions of exceptional circumstances and irreparable prejudice to a party are both satisfied;

[3] Response, para. 5; see also Prosecution Response to "Defence Application for Leave to Appeal 'Joint Decision on Defence Motions on Adequate Facilities and Adequate Time for the Preparation of Mr. Taylor's Defence' Dated 23 January 2007", filed on 5 February 2007, and Prosecution's Response to "Defence Motion Requesting Reconsideration of 'Joint Decision on Defence Motions on Adequate Facilities and Adequate Time for the Preparation of Mr. Taylor's Defence', dated 23 January 2007", filed on 20 April 2007.

CONSIDERING that the overriding legal consideration in respect of an application of this nature is that the applicant's case must reach a level nothing short of exceptional circumstances and irreparable prejudice, having regard to the restrictive nature of Rule 73(B) and the rationale that criminal trials must not be heavily encumbered and, consequently, unduly delayed by interlocutory appeals;[4]

CONSIDERING also that the Appeals Chamber has ruled that:

> "In this Court, the procedural assumption is that trials will continue to their conclusion without delay or diversion caused by interlocutory appeals on procedural matters, and that any errors which affect the final judgement will be corrected in due course by this Chamber on appeal";[5]

HOLDING that, upon a reading of the Impugned Decision, the argument by the Defence that the Trial Chamber failed to give proper regard to the three and a half months that the Defence legal consultations took place under the "chilling effect" of the video surveillance camera[6] is fallacious and cannot be maintained;

RECALLING, in relation to the claim by the Defence of irreparable prejudice, the ruling of the Trial Chamber in its "Decision on Defence Application for Leave to Appeal 'Joint Decision on Defence Motions on Adequate Facilities and Adequate Time for the Preparation of Mr. Taylor's Defence' Dated 23 January 2007", dated 15 February 2007, at paragraph 18;

FINDING that the Defence has not met the criteria of exceptional circumstances and irreparable prejudice prescribed by Rule 73(B);

DISMISSES THE MOTION.

I, Justice Julia Sebutinde, Presiding Judge of Trial Chamber II of the Special Court for Sierra Leone ("Special Court");

RECALLING that in accordance with Article 2 of the Agreement Between the United Nations and the Government of Sierra Leone on the Establishment of a Special Court for Sierra Leone, ("Agreement")[1] and Article 12 of the Statute of the Special Court ("Statute") H. E. Ban Ki-Moon, Secretary General of the United Nations did in his letter dated 25 April 2007 appoint the Honourable Justice El Hadji Malick Sow as an alternate judge of Trial Chamber II of the Special Court for a period of three years commencing on 10 May 2007;

NOTING the provisions of Article 2.5 of the Agreement and of Article 12.4 of the Statute that-

> "If at the request of the President of the Special Court, an alternate judge or judges have been appointed by the Government of Sierra Leone or the Secretary General, the presiding judge of a Trial Chamber or the Appeals Chamber shall designate such an alternate judge to be present at each stage of the trial and to replace a judge if that judge is unable to continue sitting";

NOTING also the provisions of Rules 16 and 16*bis* of the Rules of Procedure and Evidence;

PURSUANT to Article 12.4 of the Statute;

HEREBY DESIGNATES Justice El Hadji Malick Sow, to be present at each stage of the trial of the Accused Charles Ghankay Taylor[2] and to replace a judge if that judge is unable to continue sitting.

The Emergence of the Common Plan, Design or Purpose (Common Plan)

6. Prior to the commencement of the armed conflict in Sierra Leone, and throughout the armed conflict, the Accused participated in a common plan, design or purpose to gain and maintain political power and physical control over the territory of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamond mining areas, in order to exploit the natural resources of the country. Implementation of this common plan included overthrowing the government of Sierra Leone in order to facilitate access to its natural resources and to install a government that would be well disposed toward, and supportive of, the Accused's interests and objectives in Liberia and the region.[4]

7. This common plan amounted to or involved the commission of the crimes alleged in the Amended Indictment (Indictment). From its inception, the Accused and the other participants in the common plan used criminal means to achieve and hold political power and physical control over the civilian population of Sierra Leone. These criminal means involved the campaign of terror waged against the civilian population of Sierra Leone, including widespread and continuing killings, rapes, beatings and mutilations, enslavement of the civilian population for use as fighters, "bush wives" and forced labour, looting and burning of civilian property. Children were used to carry out this criminal campaign and in active hostilities.[5]

8. The Accused, as leader of the NPFL was instrumental in the creation of this common plan. The Accused and Foday Sankoh, the leader of the RUF (Revolutionary United Front), made common cause to assist each other in their respective countries to achieve the common plan. From the outset, the Accused and his forces worked virtually as one with Sankoh and his RUF forces, and with the organised armed groups and forces that later evolved. To that end, Sankoh and his RUF forces assisted the Accused during the Liberian armed conflict which commenced in 1989.[6]

9. The Accused assumed and maintained the overall leadership role in the implementation of the common plan. Liberian subordinates of the Accused, including Benjamin Yeaten, also known as (aka) "50" or "General 50", Musa Sesay aka Musa Cisse, Grace Minor, Joe Tuah, Roland Duoh, Christopher Varmoh aka "Liberian Mosquito", Momoh Gibba, Duopo Makerzon, Sampson Weah, and Zig Zag Marzah fighters in carrying out the crimes alleged in the Amended Indictment, and had a substantial effect on the commission of those crimes, and/or furthered the common plan, design or purpose in which the participants included the leadership and members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and Liberian fighters.

Participation in a common plan, design or purpose

42. This shared common plan, design or purpose was to take any actions necessary to gain and exercise political power and political and physical control over the territory of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamond mining areas. The natural resources of Sierra Leone, in particular the diamonds, were to be provided primarily to the ACCUSED and other persons outside Sierra Leone.

43. The common plan, design or purpose included taking any actions necessary to gain and exercise physical and political control over the population of Sierra Leone in order to prevent or minimize resistance to their geographic control, and to use members of the population to provide support to those persons engaged in achieving the objectives of the common plan, design or purpose. This common plan, design or purpose amounted to, or involved the commission of, the crimes alleged in the Amended Indictment. The alleged crimes, amounting to or involved within the common plan, design or purpose, were either intended by the ACCUSED, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of the common plan, design or purpose.

44. The ACCUSED participated in this common plan, design or purpose as part of his continuing efforts to gain access to the mineral wealth of Sierra Leone, in particular diamonds, to destabilize the Government of Sierra Leone in order to facilitate access to such mineral wealth and to install a government in Sierra Leone that would be well disposed toward, and supportive of, the ACCUSED's interests and objectives in Liberia and the region.

Intent and knowledge

45. The ACCUSED intended the commission of the crimes alleged in the Amended Indictment, or acted with reckless indifference toward the possibility that such crimes

It follows that it was wrong for the Alternate Judge, who has not been designated to replace a sitting Judge, to offer an opinion, whether dissenting or concurring, on a judgement of Trial Chamber.

09:37:15

The behaviour of Judge Sow was referred by the Council of Judges to a plenary meeting of the Judges of the Special Court. We three Trial Chamber Judges abstained from voting at that plenary.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you. Trial Chamber I, composed of Justice Richard Lussick, presiding, Justice Teresa Doherty, Justice Julia Sebutinde, with alternate Judge
11:04:08 Justice El Hadji Malick Sow, today delivers its judgement in the case of the Prosecutor against Charles Ghankay Taylor. For the purposes of this hearing, the Chamber will briefly summarise its findings. This a summary only. The written judgement which is the only authoritative version will be made available 11:04:20 subsequently.

Now, by way of introduction, Charles Ghankay Taylor was elected president of Liberia and took office on the 2nd of August, 1997. On 4 June 2003, his indictment by the Special Court and warrant of arrest were unsealed, and on 11th of August, 11:04:44 2003, he stepped down from the Presidency and went into exile in Nigeria. In 2003, the accused applied to the Special Court to quash his indictment and set aside the warrant of arrest on the grounds that he was immune from any exercise of the jurisdiction of this court by virtue of the fact that at the time the 11:05:06 indictment and warrant of arrest were issued, he was a sitting head of state. This application was denied by the Trial Chamber and its decision was upheld by the Appeals Chamber on 31 May 2004 on the ground that the sovereign equality of states does not prevent a head of state from being prosecuted before an 11:05:29 international criminal tribunal or court.

Accordingly, the Appeals Chamber held that the official position of Charles Taylor as an incumbent head of state at the time when these criminal proceedings were initiated against him was not a bar to his prosecution by this court.

On 29 March 2006, the accused was arrested in Nigeria by Nigerian authorities following a request by Liberian President Johnson-Sirleaf that he be surrendered to the Special Court pursuant to the warrant of arrest.

11:06:07 Shortly thereafter, he was transferred into the custody Of the Special court in Freetown, Sierra Leone, and was formally arraigned on 3 April 2006, when he pleaded not guilty to all counts in the indictment.

Because of security concerns, the accused was transferred 11:06:28 to The Hague on 20 June 2006. The armed conflict in Sierra Leone started in March 1991, when armed fighters known as the Revolutionary United Front, RUF, led by Foday Sankoh, attacked Sierra Leone from Liberia. The RUF continued their insurgency against the government despite the Abidjan Peace Accord in 11:06:55 November 1996.

In a coup on 25 May 1997, members of the Sierra Leone Army overthrew the democratically elected government of Ahmad Tejan Kabbah and invited the RUF to join its Junta government called the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council, AFRC.

11:07:19 As leader of the NPFL, National Patriotic Front of Liberia and later as president of Liberia, the accused is alleged to have acted in concert with members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and all Liberian fighters, members and ex-members of the NPFL. Specifically in that capacity, the accused is alleged to 11:07:52 have assisted, encouraged, directed, and or controlled the above-mentioned warring factions in conducting armed attacks in the territory of Sierra Leone from 30 November 1996 to 18 January 2002, which is the indictment period. The attacks included terrorising the civilian population including burning of civilian homes, murder, sexual violence, physical violence, illegal recruitment of child soldiers, abduction, and forced labour and looting.

Procedural background.

11:08:35 The Prosecution case commenced on 4 June 2007 and closed on 27 February 2009. During the Defence case, the Prosecution was granted leave to re-open its case to call three additional witnesses who testified on 5th, 9th and 10th of August, 2010. In sum, 94 witnesses testified for the Prosecution including three 11:09:03 expert witnesses. A total of 782 Prosecution exhibits were admitted into evidence including five expert reports.

The Defence opened its case on 13 July 2009 and closed on 12 November 2010, having called 21 witnesses, including the accused, who testified for seven months from 14 July 2009 until 11:09:34 18 February 2010. A total of 740 Defence exhibits were admitted into evidence. Prosecution closing arguments were heard on 8th and 9 of February, 2011. Defence closing arguments were heard on 9th and 10th of March, 2011. Oral responses by both parties were heard on 11th of March, 2011.

11:10:06 After 420 trial days over the course of three years and ten months, the case was formally closed on 11 March 2011. A total of 115 witnesses testified, 1.522 exhibits were admitted into evidence, 49.622 pages of trial records were transcribed, and 281 written interlocutory decisions were issued by the 11:10:34 Trial Chamber.

Summary of the charges.

The accused is charged with 11 counts under the indictment. Five of these counts charge the accused with crimes against humanity punishable under Article 2 of the Statute, in particular: Murder, count 2; rape, count 4; sexual slavery, count 5; other inhumane acts, count 8; and enslavement, count 10. Five additional counts charge the accused with violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3 of the Statute, in particular: acts of terrorism, count 1; violence to life, health, and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder, count 3; outrages upon personal dignity, count 6; violence to life, health, and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular cruel treatment, count 7; and pillage, count 11. The remaining count charges the accused with conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 into armed forces or groups, or using them to participate actively in hostilities, count 9, a serious violation of international humanitarian law punishable under Article 4 of the Statute.

The indictment charges that the accused is individually criminally responsible under Articles 6(1) and 6(3) of the Statute for the crimes referred to above.

The accused pleaded not guilty to each of the counts charged in the indictment.

Summary of the Defence case.

The Defence accepts that crimes against humanity and war crimes were committed during the indictment period in the course of the armed conflict in Sierra Leone, but denies that the accused is responsible. The Defence admits that the burden of proof is upon the Prosecution to prove beyond reasonable doubt that, (i) the crimes were actually committed; (ii) that the crimes fulfil all the legal requirements of Articles 2, 3, and 4 of the Statute; and (iii) that there is a nexus between the alleged crimes and the accused.

As part of its case, the Defence maintained that the accused, through his diplomatic efforts, played a substantial role in fostering peace and security in Sierra Leone, that his 11:13:23 contribution to the peace process was significant, and that his prosecution has from the outset been "selective and vindictive in nature ... on the basis of political motives and interests." The Defence also challenged the credibility of the Prosecution evidence. The Trial Chamber has considered a number of 11:13:46 preliminary issues in its written judgement, including the issue of selective prosecution and a number of fair trial issues raised by the Defence. With regard to the issue of selective prosecution, the Trial Chamber finds that the accused was not singled out for selective prosecution.

11:14:05 Summary of the findings on crimes committed.

The Trial Chamber finds that the chapeau requirements in respect of the crimes against humanity, violations of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II and other serious violations of international humanitarian law 11:14:31 charged in the indictment, have been proved by the Prosecution beyond reasonable doubt.

The Trial Chamber has examined the evidence presented in relation to the crimes that members of the RUF, AFRC, and AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters allegedly 11:14:56 committed in Sierra Leone between 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002. The Trial Chamber finds that the crimes charged in counts 1 to 11 were committed. The findings on each of these crimes will be summarised in turn.

Murder, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(a) of the Statute, count 2; and/or violence to life, health, and physical or mental well-being of persons, and in particular, murder, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(a) of the Statute, count 3.

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters murdered civilians in various locations in the following districts of Sierra Leone:

In Kenema District between 25th of May, 1997, and about 31 March 1998.

In Kono District between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 January 2000.

In Freetown and the Western Area between about 21 December 1998 and 28 February 1999.

In Kailahun District between about 1 February 1998 and about 30 June 1998.

Rape, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(g) of the Statute count 4.

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters committed widespread acts of rape against women and girls in various locations in the following districts of Sierra Leone:

In Kono District between about 1 February and about 31 December 1998.

In Freetown and the Western Area between 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999.

In Kailahun District in 1998 and 1999, women and girls were raped in various locations which were not charged in the indictment. The Trial Chamber makes no finding of guilt for these crimes for reasons fully set out in the written judgement.

Sexual slavery, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(g) of the Statute, count 5.

11:17:52

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters committed widespread acts of sexual slavery against civilian women and girls in Sierra Leone in various locations in the following districts of Sierra Leone:

11:18:14

In Kono District between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998.

In Kailahun District in 1998 and 1999.

In Freetown and the Western Area between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999.

11:18:35

Outrages upon personal dignity, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(e) of the Statute. Count 6.

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters committed widespread acts of outrages upon the personal dignity of civilian women and girls by acts such as forcing them to undress in public and by raping them and committing other acts of sexual abuse sometimes in full view of the public, and in full view of family members, in various locations in the following districts of Sierra Leone:

In Kono District between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998.

In Freetown and the Western Area between about 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999.

In Kailahun District in 1998 and 1999, outrages upon personal dignity were committed against women and girls in various locations not charged in the indictment. The Trial Chamber makes no finding of guilt for these crimes for reasons fully set out in the written judgement.

Violence to life, health, and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular cruel treatment, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(a) of the Statute, count 7; and/or other inhumane acts, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(i) of the Statute, count 8.

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters committed widespread acts of physical violence against civilians in various locations in the following districts of Sierra Leone:

In Kono District between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, civilians were forced to endure cruel treatment including having words carved into their bodies and amputations of limbs.

In Kailahun District crimes of physical violence were committed -- crimes of physical violence were committed not -- in areas not charged in the indictment. The Trial Chamber makes no finding of guilt for these crimes for reasons fully set out in the written judgement.

In Freetown and the Western Area between about 21 December and about 28 February 1999 civilians were subjected to cruel treatment, including amputations of limbs.

Conscripting or enlisting child soldiers into the armed forces or using them in hostilities and other serious violations of international humanitarian law, punishable under Article 4(c) of the Statute, count 9.

11:22:16

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between about 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters conscripted and enlisted children under the age of 15 into their armed groups and used them to participate actively in the hostilities in the following districts of Sierra Leone:

11:22:41

In Tonkolili District, children under the age of 15 were abducted and conscripted into the RUF at Kangari Hills from early 1996 until May 1997. Between 500 and 1.000 children had the letters "RUF" carved into their forehead or back to prevent escape.

11:23:03

In Kailahun District, children under the age of 15 were conscripted into the RUF throughout 1998 and 1999 and underwent military training at Bunumbu training base, also known as Camp Lion, and at Buedu field.

11:23:28

In Kono District during the indictment period, children under the age of 15 were conscripted into the RUF and AFRC at various locations and were used to participate actively in hostilities and to amputate limbs, guard diamond mines, go on food-finding missions, as bodyguards to man check-points and in armed combat.

11:23:51

In Bombali District, children under the age of 15 were conscripted into the RUF and AFRC between 1998 and 2000, and underwent military training at various locations and also participated actively in hostilities.

In Port Loko District between January 1999 and April/May 1999, a child under the age of 15 was abducted, conscripted into the AFRC and used for active participation in hostilities in Masiaka.

In Kenema District between the -- during the Junta period, children under the age of 15 were used as armed guards for mining sites.

In Koinadugu District between March and May 1998, children under the age of 15 were used to participate actively in hostilities, and at least one child under the age of 15 was used to fight against the Kamajors.

In Freetown and the Western Area, children under the age of 15 were used to participate actively in hostilities in Benguema from the end of January until March 1999 and during the Freetown attack in January 1999.

Enslavement, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(c) of the Statute, count 10.

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that between 30 November 1996 and about 18 January 2002, members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters intentionally exercised powers of ownership over civilians by depriving them of their freedom and forcing them to work, thus committing the crime of enslavement in the various locations in the following district of Sierra Leone:

In Kenema District between about 1 July 1997 and about 28 February 1998, civilians were abducted and forced to mine for diamonds.

In Kono District throughout 1998 and 1999, civilians were abducted and used as forced labour to carry loads, perform domestic chores, go on food-finding missions, undergo military training, and work in diamond mines.

11:26:40 In Kailahun District between 30 November 1996 and July 2000, civilians were abducted and used as forced labour to carry loads, collect arms and ammunition, construct the Buedu airstrip, undergo military training, farm, fish, perform domestic chores, and go on food-finding missions.

11:27:08 In Freetown and Western Area between 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, civilians were abducted and used as forced labour to carry loads, perform domestic chores, and destroy a bridge.

Pillage, a violation of Article 3 common to the 11:27:29 Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(f) of the Statute, count 11.

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters engaged in widespread 11:27:51 and unlawful taking of civilian property in various locations in the following districts of Sierra Leone:

In Kono District between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, civilian goods were looted, money and diamonds were looted from a bank, and as part of Operation Pay Yourself, 11:28:16 civilian homes and shops were looted.

In Bombali District, numerous instances of looting of civilian property occurred between 1 February 1998 and 30 April 1998. Money from a bank was also looted.

In Port Loko District between 1 February 1998 and 30 April 1998 there were numerous instances of looting of civilian property as part of Operation Pay Yourself.

In Freetown and Western Area between 21 December 1998 and about 28 February 1999, widespread looting of civilian property from residences and businesses occurred.

Acts of terrorism, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II, punishable under Article 3(d) of the Statute, count 1.

The Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters committed acts of terrorism by committing the crimes described in counts 2 to 8 as part of a campaign to terrorise the civilian population of Sierra Leone.

11:29:48

There was evidence in the crimes described in counts 2 to 8 of public executions and amputations; people were beheaded and their heads displayed on check-points; during Operation No Living Thing during the Junta period in Kenema town, a civilian was killed in full public view and then his body was disemboweled and his intestines stretched across the road to make a check-point; women and girls were raped in public; people were burned alive in their homes. The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the purpose of these atrocities charged in counts 2 to 8 was to instill terror in the civilian population.

However, some acts of violence even when committed in a campaign whose primary purpose was to terrorise the civilian population may not have been committed in furtherance of such a campaign. The Trial Chamber finds that this is the case with the acts of violence underlying the crimes of child soldiers, count 9; enslavement, count 10; and pillage, count 11. The Trial Chamber therefore finds that the crime of acts of terrorism has not been established for these counts.

The Trial Chamber also finds that the Prosecution has proved beyond reasonable doubt that acts of terrorism were committed by the widespread burning of civilian property with the primary purpose of terrorising the civilian population in various locations in Kono District between about 1 February 1998 and about 31 December 1998, and in various locations in Freetown and the Western Area between about 21 December 1998 and February 1999.

Summary of findings on the role of the accused.

The Trial Chamber will now summarise its factual findings on the role of the accused.

The role of the accused before 1996.

The Trial Chamber has considered evidence prior to the indictment period only for the purposes of clarifying the context or establishing by inference the elements of criminal conduct that occurred during the material period, or demonstrating a consistent pattern of conduct.

Evidence before the Trial Chamber establishes the following: At the end of the 1980s, a number of West African revolutionaries were trained in Libya, including Charles Taylor from Liberia; Ali Kabbah and Foday Sankoh from Sierra Leone; and Kukoi Samba Sanyang, also known as Dr Manneh, from the Gambia. The accused met Sankoh in Libya, although the exact circumstances of their meeting are not known. Contrary to the Prosecution's submissions, the evidence did not establish that prior to 1996 Taylor, Sankoh, and Dr Manneh participated in any common plan involving the crimes alleged in the indictment, nor in fact that the three men even met together. Furthermore, the evidence was that during the pre-indictment period, Sankoh operated independently of the accused and that while he relied at times on 11:33:28 Taylor's guidance and support, Sankoh did not take orders from the accused.

During the pre-indictment period, the accused provided the RUF with a training camp in Liberia, instructors, recruits and material support including food and other supplies. However, 11:33:51 again contrary to the Prosecution's submissions, the evidence did not establish that the RUF were under the superior authority of the accused or the NPFL chain of command or that they were instructed in NPFL terror tactics.

The accused supported the invasion of Sierra Leone in 11:34:10 March 1991. NPFL troops actively participated in the invasion, but the Prosecution failed to prove that the accused participated in the planning of the invasion. The Prosecution also failed to prove that the support of the accused for the invasion of Sierra Leone was undertaken pursuant to a common purpose to 11:34:31 terrorise the civilian population of Sierra Leone. Rather, the evidence shows that the accused and Sankoh had a common interest in fighting common enemies, namely ULIMO, a Liberian insurgency group in Sierra Leone and the Sierra Leonean government forces which supported ULIMO.

11:34:57 The accused withdrew his NPFL troops from Sierra Leone after the fallout between NPFL and RUF troops in 1992, culminating in Operations Top 20, Top 40, and Top Final. While the Defence maintains that the accused had no further contact or co-operation with Sankoh, the leader of the RUF, after 1992 following Top Final, the Trial Chamber finds otherwise. Although the Liberia-Sierra Leone border was closed by ULIMO and the Sierra Leone government forces, it remained porous, enabling the flow of arms, ammunition and other supplies from Liberia into Sierra Leone during the remainder of the pre-indictment period. For example, there was evidence that the accused provided arms and ammunition to Sankoh for an attack on Kono in November 1992, and he advised Sankoh prior to and following the attack on Sierra Rutile. The accused also asked Sankoh to send troops in 1993 to help him fight the ULIMO.

The role of the accused during the indictment period. Military operations.

In February 1998, ECOMOG forces intervened in Sierra Leone and expelled the RUF/AFRC Junta from Freetown reinstating Tejan Kabbah's SLPP government to power in March 1998. Although ECOMOG initially forced RUF and AFRC forces to withdraw from Kono under the orders AFRC leader Johnny Paul Koroma, these forces managed to recapture Koidu Town in late February-early March 1998. A few weeks later, ECOMOG forces regained control of Koidu Town. In mid-June 1998, forces under the ultimate direction of Sam Bockarie, who had by then assumed leadership of the renegade RUF/AFRC Junta forces, made another attempt to retake Koidu Town, code named Operation Fitti-Fatta. The Fitti-Fatta attack was unsuccessful and in late November, early December 1998, after a trip by Bockarie to Liberia where he met with the accused, a meeting was held at Waterworks in which Bockarie ordered RUF/AFRC troops under his command to carry out a two-pronged attack on Kono and Kenema, with Freetown as the ultimate target. The attacks on Kenema and Kono were launched in mid-December 1998. While the former was unsuccessful, the latter attack succeeded and the RUF/AFRC troops continued towards Freetown. On 6 January 1999, a group of predominantly AFRC troops led by Alex Tamba Brima, also known as Gullit, launched an assault on Freetown.

The Trial Chamber will now summarise its findings on the assistance provided by the accused in these military operations.

From the time of the ECOMOG intervention, the accused and his subordinates communicated to the AFRC/RUF forces the imperative to maintain control over Kono, a diamondiferous area. When the AFRC/RUF forces were pulling out of Kono during the intervention the radio station of Benjamin Yeaten, director of the accused's Special Security Service, intercepted a radio transmission between AFRC/RUF radio stations about the withdrawal and intervened to ask why the forces were withdrawing. Then, in several satellite phone conversations with Johnny Paul Koroma, who was trying to make arrangements to get to Liberia by helicopter, the accused told Koroma to capture Kono. After a first failed attempt, the accused gave instructions for a second attack which led to the ultimate recapture of Koidu Town in Kono District in late February, early March 1998. Once Kono had been recaptured, the accused told Bockarie to be sure to maintain control of Kono for the purpose of trading diamonds with him for arms and ammunition.

The accused advised Bockarie to recapture Kono following its loss to ECOMOG, again so that the diamonds could be used to purchase arms and ammunition. Such advice was transmitted to RUF commanders both through Bockarie and Liberian emissaries Daniel Tamba, also known as Jungle, and/or Ibrahim Bah, and resulted in the Fitti-Fatta attack in mid-June 1998.

In addition to urging the RUF and AFRC to capture and hold Kono, the accused supplied arms and ammunition for the operations in the Kono District in early 1998 and for Operation Fitti-Fatta.

11:40:39 In November and December 1998, when Bockarie met with the accused in Monrovia, the accused jointly designed with Bockarie a two-pronged attack on Kono, Kenema, and Freetown, outlined by Bockarie to his commanders in a meeting at Waterworks on his return to Sierra Leone. Although the idea to advance towards

11:41:01 Freetown was already in discussion when Bockarie went to Monrovia, the accused emphasised to Bockarie the need to first attack Kono District and told Bockarie to make the operation "fearful" in order to pressure the government of Sierra Leone into negotiations on the release of Foday Sankoh from prison, as 11:41:23 well as to use "all means" to get to Freetown. Subsequently, Bockarie named the operation Operation No Living Thing, implying that anything that stood in their way should be eliminated.

At this time there were two plans to attack Freetown; one made by Bockarie with the accused and one made by breakaway AFRC 11:41:50 commander Solomon Anthony Joseph Musa, also known as SAJ Musa, whose troops had started an advance towards Freetown at the end of June, beginning of July 1998. Consistent with his discussions with the accused, Bockarie invited SAJ Musa after the Waterworks meeting to join his efforts to attack Freetown but Musa refused.

11:42:16 However, with SAJ Musa's death in or around 23rd of December, 1998, when Gullit took over the leadership of the troops at Benguema and resumed contact with Bockarie, Bockarie and Gullit co-ordinated in their efforts to capture Freetown. From that point onwards, SAJ Musa's original plan was abandoned and Gullit followed the Bockarie/Taylor plan as had been contemplated by Bockarie and the accused.

During the operation, Bockarie exercised effective command and control over Gullit, issuing a number of instructions to Gullit, including the order to use terror tactics against the civilian population on the retreat from Freetown. The Trial Chamber did not make a finding as to how SAJ Musa was killed but noted that the possibility of his death had been mentioned by Bockarie at the time of the Waterworks meeting.

11:43:22 The accused gave advice to Bockarie and received updates in relation to the progress of the operations in Kono and Freetown in the implementation of their plan. Bockarie was in frequent contact via radio or satellite phone with the accused in December 1998 and January 1999, either directly or through

11:43:44 Benjamin Yeaten. Yeaten also travelled to Sierra Leone to meet with Bockarie in Buedu during this period. However, it is not clear that the accused had any level of control over the conduct of these operations. Of the instructions allegedly given to Bockarie by the accused during this period, only one was proved 11:44:08 beyond reasonable doubt, that being that the accused instructed Bockarie to transfer some of the Pademba Road prisoners to Buedu. This finding is insufficient to establish, as the Prosecution has alleged, that the accused directed or had control over the Kono and Freetown operations in December 1998 and January 1999.

11:44:36 In addition to planning and advising on the Kono-Freetown operation, the accused also provided military and other support. He facilitated the purchase and transport of a large shipment of arms and ammunition from Burkina Faso in around November 1998 which was used in the attacks on Kono and Kenema in December

1998, where further arms and ammunition were captured. These arms and ammunition were in turn sent to the troops in Freetown in January 1999 and also used by the RUF and AFRC in joint attacks on the outskirts of Freetown. The accused also sent 11:45:18 personnel in the form of at least four former Sierra Leone Army, SLA, fighters who participated in the attack on Kono, as well as 20 former NPFL fighters who were part of the forces under the command of Gullit that entered Freetown, and a group of 150 fighters with Abu Keita, a former ULIMO member, known as the 11:45:46 Scorpion Unit, who participated in the attack on Kenema.

During the Freetown operation, the accused's subordinates in Liberia also transmitted "448 messages" to RUF forces to warn them of impending ECOMOG jet attacks. These messages originated in both Sierra Leone and Liberia.

11:46:14 Operational support.

In addition to support for specific military operations, the accused provided to the RUF and the RUF/FRC alliance communications support, financial support, military training, technical support, and other operational support. Of these, 11:46:35 communications support, facilitation and transport of materiel and personnel, and the provision of a guesthouse to the RUF were sustained and significant.

Concerning communications assistance, following the invasion of Sierra Leone in 1991, the NPFL provided radio 11:46:57 operators and equipment to the RUF with the knowledge of the accused. NPFL radio operators were sent to Sierra Leone and trained RUF fighters in radio communications. Some of these radio operators stayed in Sierra Leone following the break with the NPFL in Operation Top Final, and the RUF continued to benefit from the training and equipment provided by the NPFL throughout the conflict in Sierra Leone and during the indictment period.

The accused gave Sam Bockarie a satellite phone in October 1998. Bockarie also received "top-up cards" for phone credit from Benjamin Yeaten. The accused also gave a satellite phone to Issa Sesay in 2000, albeit with the full knowledge of the ECOWAS leaders. The supply of such satellite phones enhanced the communications possibility of both Bockarie and Sesay which they used in furtherance of RUF and RUF/AFRC military activities. Sesay, for example, used a satellite phone to report to Bockarie that Kono was under RUF control. While Foday Sankoh was also given a satellite phone, the Prosecution failed to prove that the phone came from the accused.

In addition to providing communications training and equipment to the RUF, the accused and his subordinates facilitated communications for the RUF through their own communications network. The RUF/AFRC was provided access to radio communications equipment in Liberia by the accused or by his subordinates. This equipment was used by RUF radio operators to communicate with the RUF, in one instance concerning supplies of military equipment, and in another to update Bockarie on events in Sierra Leone when he was in Liberia. A radio was provided by the accused to Johnny Paul Koroma. However, this radio was used specifically for the purpose of enabling Koroma to communicate with the West Side Boys about the UN peacekeepers that they had taken hostage. The evidence did not establish that the accused and Yeaten received updates during the Freetown invasion from an RUF operator stationed in Liberia.

Although the establishment of the infrastructure and training of RUF radio operators occurred prior to the indictment period, the ongoing support from the accused and his subordinates through the provision of satellite phones, the use of the NPFL communications infrastructure and the transmission of "448 messages" alerting the RUF to imminent ECOMOG attack collectively enhanced the communications capacity of the RUF/AFRC during the indictment period and its capacity to carry out military operations in which crimes were committed.

11:49:58

In relation to the guesthouse, the Trial Chamber finds that from 1998 to 2001, the accused provided a base for the RUF in Monrovia, equipped with a long-range radio and telephone, RUF radio operators, SSS security supervised by Benjamin Yeaten, cooks and a caretaker. Although the guesthouse was used by RUF members partly for matters relevant to the peace process or for diplomatic purposes, it was also used to facilitate the transfer of arms, ammunition and funds directly from the accused to the RUF, and the delivery of diamonds from the RUF directly to the accused, belying his testimony that he was entirely unaware of what occurred at the guesthouse. The RUF guesthouse provided a base for the RUF in Monrovia which facilitated the regular transfers of arms and ammunition from the accused to the RUF, as well as diamonds from the RUF to the accused, transactions which played a vital role in the military operations of the RUF in which crimes were committed.

11:50:24

11:51:17

The Trial Chamber further fiends that during the indictment period, the accused provided much needed road and air transportation to the RUF of arms and ammunition into RUF territory. Materiel was also escorted across military check-points by security personnel working for the accused, including Daniel Tamba, also known as Jungle; Joseph Marzah, also known as Zigzag; and Sampson Weah. This facilitation of road and air transportation of materiel as well as security escorts played a vital role of the operations of the RUF/AFRC during a period when an international arms embargo was in force.

The accused also provided financial support, military training, technical support, and other operational support to the RUF, including medical support. In most instances in which the accused provided financial support, the funds given by the accused to various individuals were for unspecified or personal use. The evidence failed to establish that the 10 million CFA francs given by the accused to the RUF in Cote d'Ivoire, or the $15.000 US given by him to Sesay to support the RUF, were used to facilitate arms and diamond deals. However, the accused did give funds to Bockarie in the tens of thousands of dollars to buy arms and ammunition from ULIMO. The RUF received financial support for arms and ammunition from sources other than the accused as well.

Similarly, while the accused provided other forms of support to the RUF, including medical support, and he acknowledged that he permitted injured RUF fighters to get treatment in Liberia, it is not clear how continuous or substantial the provision of medical care was throughout the indictment period. In preparation for the Fitti-Fatta mission in mid 1998, the accused sent "herbalists" who marked fighters in Buedu and in Kono in order to bolster their confidence for the mission to recapture Kono. Other support included provision of goods such as food, clothing, cigarettes, alcohol and other supplies to the RUF by the accused. The evidence is insufficient to enable the Trial Chamber to judge the quantity of supplies provided. Other supplies for the RUF came from Liberia through channels unrelated to the accused.

With regard to military training and technical support, the 11:54:36 accused introduced -- instructed Bockarie in 1998 to open a training base in Bunumbu, Kailahun District, and told him also in 1998 that the RUF should construct or re-prepare an airfield in Buedu. However, the Prosecution failed to prove that the accused sent Martina Johnson, a former NPFL artillery commander, to Buedu 11:55:08 to train RUF fighters to use a 40-barrel missile gun.

The accused provided safe haven to RUF fighters, including Mike Lamin, when they crossed into Liberia after the retreat from Zogoda in 1996, but the accused was not found to have ordered the RUF combatants to cross into Liberia. He had not yet taken 11:55:32 office as president at that time, however, and the Prosecution failed to prove that he facilitated documentation to enable Lamin to travel to Cote d'Ivoire.

Arms and ammunition.

Turning to the allegations of the Prosecution relating to 11:55:55 the role of the accused in providing military support to the RUF/AFRC, the Trial Chamber first considered two preliminary issues raised by the Defence one related to the status of the border between Sierra Leone and Liberia and the other relating to disarmament in Liberia. The Trial Chamber finds that at no 11:56:22 relevant time in the indictment period was the ECOMOG presence on the Liberia-Sierra Leone border or the official closure of the border by the Liberian government sufficient to prevent the cross-border movement of arms and ammunition. With regard to the claim that as a result of disarmament and the destruction of arms, as well as the arms embargo, Liberia had insufficient arms and ammunition to supply Sierra Leone, the Trial Chamber finds that despite these measures, the accused was able to obtain arms and had the capacity to supply arms and ammunition from Liberia to the rebel groups in Sierra Leone. Moreover, he had the capacity to facilitate larger arms shipments through third countries. Of the arms shipments to the RUF and AFRC linked to accused during the indictment period, the largest arrived not from Liberia but through Liberia from third-party states, including Burkina Faso.

11:57:30

The accused directly supplied arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC as well as facilitating the supply of arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC from outside Liberia. During the Junta period, the accused sent ammunition to Bockarie via Daniel Tamba in 1997. The accused was the source of the materiel delivered by Tamba, Joseph Marzah and Sampson Weah, among others, to Sierra Leone throughout 1998 and 1999, such supplies consisting of both arms and ammunition. Bockarie himself made trips to Liberia in 1998 and 1999 during which he obtained arms and ammunition from the accused. During Issa Sesay's leadership of the RUF, the accused continued to deliver arms and ammunition to the RUF in 2000 and 2001 via Tamba, Marzah, Weah and others. Sesay himself made trips to Liberia, including a trip in May 2000 and at least two trips in the second half of 2000 and early 2001 during which he obtained arms and ammunition from the accused.

11:57:56

Although the materiel delivered through, inter alia, Tamba, Weah, and Marzah was limited in quantity, certain shipments provided by the accused on Bockarie's trips to Liberia in 1998 and 1999 did contain sizable amounts of materiel.

After 14 February 1998, the accused sent Varmuyan Sherif to open a corridor between Lofa County and the RUF-held territories to facilitate the trade of arms and ammunition between the RUF/AFRC and ULIMO. As a result, members of ULIMO who were supposed to disarm and surrender their arms to the United Nations, instead sold or bartered them to the RUF. The accused also provided financial support to the RUF/AFRC in order to facilitate their purchases of arms and ammunition from ex-ULIMO combatants. However, the evidence was insufficient to establish that the accused attempted to help the RUF purchase arms and ammunition from ECOMOG and ULIMO prior to the Junta period.

12:00:02

The accused facilitated two large shipments of ammunition. The first occurred in late 1997. In around September 1997, the accused sent Ibrahim Bah to Freetown to meet with Sam Bockarie and Johnny Paul Koroma to make arrangements for the procurement of arms and ammunition. Bah was given 90 carats of diamonds and $90.000 US to pay for the shipment. This shipment of arms and ammunition was delivered by plane to Magburaka in Sierra Leone sometime between September and December 1997 and was distributed amongst members of the AFRC/RUF Junta. Materiel from this shipment was used by the AFRC/RUF forces in fighting ECOMOG and SLPP forces in Freetown before, during, and after the intervention, in the Junta mining operations at Tongo fields prior to the ECOMOG intervention, in Operation Pay Yourself and subsequent offensives on Kono, as well as in the commission of crimes during these operations.

12:00:28

The accused also facilitated a shipment of materiel around November 1998 from Burkina Faso. Ibrahim Bah and Musa Cisse, Charles Taylor's chief of protocol, accompanied a delegation led by Bockarie to Burkina Faso where a shipment of arms and ammunition was arranged and brought back by plane to Liberia and then transported by trucks provided by the accused to Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber finds that the accused was instrumental in procuring and transporting this large quantity of arms and ammunition for the RUF, that he was paid for it with diamonds, and that he kept some of the shipment for his own purposes. The shipment from Burkina Faso was unprecedented in volume and, as previously noted, was critical in the December 1998 and January 1999 offensives.

The Trial Chamber considered the Defence submission that other sources of military equipment for the RUF and AFRC far outweighed supplies allegedly provided by the accused. In addition to receiving arms and ammunition from the accused, the RUF and the AFRC also obtained supplies from the existing stockpiles of the former government when they took over power in May 1997, by capturing them from ECOMOG and UN peacekeepers, and through trade with ULIMO, AFL, and ECOMOG commanders. However, these sources of materiel were of minor importance in comparison to those supplied or facilitated by the accused. Significantly, the RUF/AFRC in fact heavily and frequently relied on the materiel supplied and facilitated by the accused. The accused's support often satisfied a need or request for materiel at a particular time, and shipments of materiel supplied by or facilitated by the accused often contributed to and were causally linked to the capture of further supplies by the RUF and AFRC. Although there were instances in which the materiel that the accused gave to the RUF/AFRC was more limited in quantity, on a number of occasions the arms and ammunition which he supplied or facilitated were indispensable for the RUF/AFRC military offensives. The materiel provided or facilitated by the accused was critical in enabling the operational strategy of the RUF and the AFRC during the indictment period.

On the basis of its findings, more detailed in the written judgement, the Trial Chamber rejects the Defence argument that Benjamin Yeaten, the director of the accused's special security service, to whom the arms couriers reported, was engaged in the trade of arms and ammunition for the RUF independently and without the knowledge of the accused.

12:05:01

Military personnel.

As previously noted, approximately 20 former NPFL fighters who had been integrated into the armed forces of Liberia formed part of a group of approximately 200 fighters led by O-Five, who attacked and committed crimes in Karina and Kamalo in Bombali District on or about August/September 1998. Subsequently, this group of 20 fighters was incorporated into the Red Lion Battalion which was comprised of 200 fighters and was part of a larger group of approximately 11.000 fighters who attacked and committed crimes in Waterloo, Fisher Lane, Hastings, Freetown Eastern Police, Pademba Road Prison, Kingtom, Fourah Bay, and Upgun in Freetown and the Western Area, on or about December 1998, January 1999. These 20 fighters were sent by the accused from Liberia to Sierra Leone where they joined the RUF/AFRC forces in Sierra Leone and participated in attacks in which crimes were committed.

12:05:22

The Trial Chamber find that Abu Keita and the reinforcements known as the Scorpion Unit were sent by the accused to Sierra Leone and participated in the attack on Kenema in which Abu Keita committed crimes. The Kenema attack was part of the attack on Kono and Freetown. Although the evidence did not establish beyond reasonable doubt that the Scorpion Unit was 12:06:48 sent for the purpose of fighting in the Kono and Freetown military operations, which included Kenema, Daniel Tamba, on behalf of the accused, approved Bockarie's decision to integrate the Scorpion Unit under his command.

The accused sent former SLA soldiers to the Bunumbu
12:07:17 training camp soon after the intervention, although their subsequent deployment was not established. The accused later sent a group of former SLA soldiers from Liberia back to Sierra Leone to support the attack on Freetown. These men arrived in Kailahun in or around late November 1998, and they 12:07:35 participated in the attack on Kono in December 1998, although they were unable to reach Freetown and did not participate in the Freetown attack.

The Liberian government authorities and AFRC/RUF members recruited and forced Sierra Leonean refugees residing in Liberia 12:07:59 to return to Sierra Leone to fight. However, the evidence did not establish that these civilian refugees participated in attacks in Sierra Leone.

The Trial Chamber considered the allegation by the Prosecution that the accused assisted the AFRC/RUF by capturing 12:08:21 and returning AFRC/RUF deserters to Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber finds that the Liberian police authorities detained two RUF/AFRC members, Fonti Kanu and Dauda Aruna Fornie, and handed them over to RUF personnel in late 1998 and late 1999 respectively. In evidence about his own arrest and torture in Sierra Leone, Mohammed Kabbah described as common knowledge the co-operation of Liberian authorities and the RUF on the return of warranted Sierra Leoneans who escaped to Liberia.

Diamonds.

12:09:12 The Trial Chamber finds that there was a continuous supply by the AFRC/RUF of diamonds mined from areas in Sierra Leone to the accused, often in exchange for arms and ammunition.

During the period May 1997 to February 1998, diamonds mined in Kono and Tongo fields were delivered from the AFRC/RUF to the 12:09:37 accused by Daniel Tamba, also known as Jungle, in exchange for arms and ammunition.

Following the ECOMOG intervention from February 1998 to July 1999, the diamonds delivered to the accused by Sam Bockarie directly, as well as indirectly through intermediaries such as 12:10:05 Eddie Kanneh and Daniel Tamba, were given to him in order to get arms and ammunition from him or sometimes for "safekeeping" on behalf of the RUF.

From February 1998 to July 1999, diamonds were delivered to the accused by Sam Bockarie directly. These diamonds were 12:10:29 delivered to the accused for the purpose of obtaining arms and ammunition from him. During this period, diamonds were also delivered through intermediaries such as Eddie Kanneh and Daniel Tamba.

The RUF also traded diamonds with entities and individuals 12:10:48 other than the accused or his government. Testimonial evidence of specific involvement of the accused in the trade of diamonds supported the findings of a United Nations report of a panel of experts that diamond smuggling in Sierra Leone to Liberia was "the bulk of the RUF trade in diamonds," and while difficult to quantify was nevertheless the "primary source of income to the RUF." This report concluded that the trade of diamonds between Liberia and Sierra Leone could not be conducted in Liberia "without the permission and the involvement of government officials at the highest level."

12:11:39

From July 1999 to May 2000, Foday Sankoh delivered diamonds to the accused and diamonds were delivered to the accused on his behalf in or before 1999 while he was in detention. In March 2000, Foday Sankoh visited South Africa and travelled through Monrovia on his way back to Sierra Leone, meeting with the accused in Monrovia. According to one witness, among the diamonds delivered to the accused during this meeting was a 45 carat diamond and two 25 carat diamonds.

12:12:07

From June 2000 until the end of the hostilities in 2002, Issa Sesay delivered to the accused, including on one occasion a 36 carat diamond. Eddie Kanneh also delivered diamonds to the accused on Sesay's behalf. Sometimes the diamonds were delivered to the accused supposedly for "safekeeping" until Sankoh's release from detention and, at other times, in exchange for supplies and/or arms and ammunition. During this period, diamond trading between the RUF and persons other than the accused also took place.

12:12:54

As detailed in documentary evidence before the Trial Chamber, Liberian diamonds are generally known to be of a significantly lower quality than diamonds from Sierra Leone, refuting the claim made by the accused that he would have had no reason to trade in diamonds from Sierra Leone because Liberia had its own diamonds. Moreover, the documentary evidence indicates that export of diamonds from Liberia was far greater than 12:13:15

Liberian diamond production, attributing the difference to diamonds from Sierra Leone smuggled through Liberia.

The Trial Chamber finds that the accused also facilitated a relationship between RUF and a Belgian known as Alpha Bravo for the purpose of diamond transactions. However, there was insufficient evidence to establish that the accused facilitated a relationship between the RUF and other diamond dealers.

The accused also provided diesel fuel for the Caterpillars at the diamond mining sites in Sierra Leone and equipment for use in mining diamonds to the RUF on at least one occasion between 1998 and 2002. While there may have been multiple sources of mining equipment and fuel entering Sierra Leone during the indictment period, the accused was among them. The Trial Chamber has also found that men sent by the accused visited at least one mining site and assessed mining operations.

While there was evidence of occasional inquiries from Benjamin Yeaten and reports to him about the activity in the mining sites in Sierra Leone, the evidence did not establish that regular updates were sent to the accused about mining activity.

The peace process.

The Trial Chamber will now summarise its findings relating to the role of the accused in the peace process and the Defence contention that his involvement with the RUF/AFRC was solely for the purpose of promoting peace.

During a radio conversation with Foday Sankoh following the attack on Sierra Rutile in 1994, the accused advised the RUF leader to send an external delegation to Cote d'Ivoire. In Cote d'Ivoire, the delegates met Musa Cisse, an NPFL representative who allowed them to use his radio for communications with Sankoh. The accused, through contact with Musa Cisse, invited members of the external delegation to Liberia where he met them twice in 1995. In December 1995, the accused met members of the External Delegation in Cote d'Ivoire on the occasion of the publication of "Footpaths to democracy," at which time he gave them 10 million CFA francs for their maintenance.

12:16:22

The accused instructed Foday Sankoh to participate in the Abidjan peace talks from March to November 1996 in order to obtain ammunition and materiel for the RUF. The evidence established that while in Abidjan, Sankoh obtained arms and ammunition for the RUF using funds from Libya. However, the evidence was insufficient to establish that Sankoh used contacts of the accused to obtain arms and ammunition in Abidjan.

12:16:53

The accused played an active role in the Lome peace negotiations, which role the Prosecution alleged to be subversive, suggesting that the accused improperly assisted and advised the RUF delegation before and during the negotiations so as to procure the most favourable outcome for the RUF/AFRC and himself.

12:17:19

The Trial Chamber did not find this to be the case in the absence of evidence that the accused controlled the RUF delegation or dictated the outcome of the negotiations. However, the evidence established that the accused was engaged in arms transactions at the same time that he was involved in the peace negotiations in Lome, publicly promoting peace at the Lome negotiations while privately providing arms and ammunitions to the RUF.

12:17:41

Following the Lome Peace Accord, the so-called West Side Boys, discontent with the apparent exclusion of the AFRC from the peace process, kidnapped UN peacekeepers and others in Sierra Leone and demanded to talk to, and then see, Johnny Paul Koroma, their leader. The accused officially and publicly made arrangements to bring Koroma to Monrovia, including 12:18:47 negotiating a waiver of the UN travel ban and facilitating several meetings thereby playing a central role in bringing Koroma and Sankoh together and achieving a reduction in the tension between the RUF and the AFRC. The evidence establishes, as the accused contends, that the UN and ECOWAS heads of state

12:19:12 knew about his public role in the negotiations. Taylor's influence with both Koroma and Sankoh evidently made him a significant actor in the process and helped to facilitate the release of the UN peacekeepers and others who had been taken captive by the West Side Boys.

12:19:32 The Trial Chamber accepts that as president of Liberia, as a member of the ECOWAS committee of five, later committee of six, the accused wielded considerable influence over the warring factions in Sierra Leone and that the ECOWAS heads of state played a substantial role in the Sierra Leone peace process.
12:19:52 However, there is strong evidence showing that while publicly participating in regional efforts to broker peace in Sierra Leone, the accused was secretly fuelling hostilities between the AFRC/RUF and the democratically elected authorities in Sierra Leone. This clandestine undermining of the peace
12:20:15 process by the accused occurred even when he knew that an arms embargo by the UN and ECOWAS was in force in the region.

In late April or early May 2000, the RUF forcibly disarmed and detained a group of approximately 500 UNAMSIL peacekeepers in Sierra Leone. The accused was asked by ECOWAS to become involved in negotiations for the release of these hostages and his mandate was endorsed by the United Nations. Thereafter, the accused invited Issa Sesay, RUF interim leader, to Monrovia to discuss the matter of their release. After this meeting, from about the middle to the end of May 2000, the RUF released the captured UNAMSIL peacekeepers into Liberian territory in stages. The Trial Chamber found that the accused had significant influence over the RUF decision to release the UN peacekeepers and that in his meeting with Issa Sesay, Taylor promised him assistance "in the struggle." While the Trial Chamber found that Issa Sesay made a trip to Liberia in May 2000 in which he obtained arms and ammunition from the accused, the evidence was insufficient to establish that this material was provided in exchanges for Issa Sesay agreeing to release the UNAMSIL peacekeepers.

In July 2000, a meeting was convened in Monrovia to discuss the selection of new leadership for the RUF following Sankoh's imprisonment. The meeting was attended by all of the ECOWAS heads of state and an RUF delegation led by Sesay, where it was proposed that Sesay take over as interim leader of the RUF. In another meeting late that night, the accused privately advised Sesay to say that he would disarm but "not do it in reality." At that time, the accused was supplying Sesay with arms and ammunition, and also calling on the RUF to send forces to help him fight his own enemies together with the AFL in Liberia and in Guinea.

The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that while the accused publicly played a substantial role in the Sierra Leone peace process, including as a member of the ECOWAS committee of five, later committee of six, secretly he was fuelling hostilities between the AFRC/RUF and the democratically elected authorities in Sierra Leone, by urging the former not to disarm and actively providing them with arms and ammunition, acting, as the Prosecution described, as "a two-headed Janus."

12:23:23 Leadership and command structure.

The Trial Chamber has considered the leadership and command structure of the RUF and the role of the accused, if any, in relation to that structure. The Trial Chamber has found that Foday Sankoh and the accused met in Libya in the early 1990s and 12:23:45 pursued parallel goals and aspirations, but not in a chain of command. Following Operation Top Final in 1992 and the withdrawal of NPFL forces from Sierra Leone, contacts and co-operation between the accused and Sankoh continued but to a lesser extent. The accused asked Sankoh to send troops in 1993 12:24:10 to help him fight ULIMO. He advised Sankoh prior to and following the RUF attack on Sierra Rutile, and he advised Sankoh to send an external delegation to Cote d'Ivoire.

When Foday Sankoh was arrested in Nigeria in March 1997, he instructed Sam Bockarie to take orders from the accused. While 12:24:35 much evidence was adduced relating to the trade of arms and diamonds between Sam Bockarie and the accused, the evidence did not establish that Bockarie took orders from the accused. The instructions given to Bockarie by the accused were given with the inherent authority the accused had by virtue of his position. 12:25:01 Bockarie was deferential to the accused and generally followed his instruction. However, the Trial Chamber considers that the role Sankoh envisioned for the accused while he was in detention was that he would guide Bockarie and that Bockarie should look to his guidance, not that the accused should take over Sankoh's rule -- role as leader of the RUF with effective control over its actions.

Sometime around March 1998, Sam Bockarie was promoted. The Prosecution allege that this promotion was made by the accused directly, or through a joint decision between himself and Johnny Paul Koroma. Bockarie had just returned from Monrovia. The Trial Chamber finds that the accused may well have been consulted by Koroma or talked directly with Bockarie about the promotion while he was in Monrovia, but not that Bockarie was promoted by the accused. Like Sankoh, Koroma turned to the accused for advice and support, and the Trial Chamber accepts that he would have consulted the accused. Nevertheless, the accused was not part of the command structure.

12:25:40 12:26:04 12:26:25 12:26:52 12:27:12

In December 1999, Sam Bockarie left Sierra Leone and went to Liberia amidst violent clashes between RUF fighters loyal to Foday Sankoh and RUF fighters loyal to him. He was told to leave Sierra Leone by the accused, but the Trial Chamber finds that in summoning Bockarie to Liberia, the accused relied on the authority of ECOWAS and sought the help of President Obasanjo, organising a meeting at Roberts International Airport between Foday Sankoh, Sam Bockarie, President Obasanjo, and himself, as a result of which a decision was made that Bockarie would not return to Sierra Leone until the disarmament process had been completed.

On 26th of July, 2000, a meeting took place at the executive mansion in Monrovia between the heads of state of ECOWAS and an RUF delegation led by Issa Sesay, where the suggestion was made that Issa Sesay should become the interim leader of the RUF. Sesay would not accept the appointment without it first being approved by the RUF and Foday Sankoh. A meeting of RUF commanders was held, and a letter was also delivered to Foday Sankoh by President Obasanjo seeking Sankoh's consent to the appointment. At a follow-up meeting in August 2000, Sesay was confirmed as the RUF interim leader. Presidents Obasanjo and Konare both met with Sankoh in Freetown without the accused present, and the Trial Chamber finds that this process was undertaken by ECOWAS heads of state collectively, rather than the accused unilaterally.

The accused called on the AFRC/RUF to assist him in fighting outside Sierra Leone. In 1999, the accused ordered Bockarie to send AFRC/RUF forces to assist him in his fight against Mosquito Spray and the LURD forces that had attacked his forces.

In 2000 and 2001, the accused instructed Sesay to send RUF forces. The RUF forces sent in response to these requests fought alongside AFL forces in Liberia and Guinea under the command of the accused's subordinates. The evidence was insufficient to establish that in 2001, Bockarie left Liberia to fight for Taylor's allies in Cote d'Ivoire as alleged by the Prosecution.

Knowledge of the accused of crimes committed in Sierra Leone.

The accused testified that prior to becoming president, he was not following whether crimes were committed by the RUF in Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber found that the relationship of the accused with the RUF from 1989 until he became president was much closer than he admitted. The accused knew that during the early war years in Sierra Leone, RUF soldiers, under the command of NPFL officers, abducted civilians, including children, forcing them to fight within the NPFL/RUF forces against the Sierra Leonean forces and ULIMO. Moreover, the accused was aware that the RUF captured civilians and looted money during the attack on Sierra Rutile, and he advised Sankoh on the use of the hostages and the money.

The accused testified that upon becoming president, he received a daily briefing from his national security advisor which would include press and intelligence reports. Also, following his election, the accused joined the ECOWAS Committee of Five and would therefore have received and read ECOWAS reports. The numerous reports prepared in 1997 by ECOWAS and the United Nations agencies established that as early as May 1997, the crimes committed by the Junta were significantly reported by these international organisations.

12:30:39

In a report of June 1997, the United Nations Department of Humanitarian Affairs reported killings of civilians, amputations, and looting in Sierra Leone. An ECOWAS report of the Committee of Four on the situation in Sierra Leone in August 1997 described the massive looting of property, murder and rapes, following the coup on 25 May 1997. The final report of the 16th meeting of ECOWAS chiefs of state in Abuja, Nigeria, in August 1997, a meeting in which the Liberian representative participated, also described "a very bloody coup, followed by massive looting and vandalisation of public and private properties and the opening of prisons by the Junta." In a speech to the nation on 18 June 1997, the RUF forces themselves apologised for the atrocities they had committed in Sierra Leone, including killings and rapes.

12:31:03

Following a coup on 29 August 1997, ECOWAS decided to place a total embargo on all supplies of petroleum products, arms and military equipment to Sierra Leone. Similarly on 8 October 1997, the United Nations Security Council decided to impose an embargo on arms and ammunition to Sierra Leone. These embargoes clearly indicate that at the very least by August 1997, the Junta was 12:32:51 perceived by the international community as a threat to peace and it was reorganised -- and it was recognised that military support could facilitate the commission of the crimes described above.

The accused was evasive in his testimony as to what and when he knew about the crimes being committed in Sierra Leone.
12:33:16 In light of these contemporary reports and considering the fact that the accused received daily briefings from his national security advisor about the international situation and was a member of the ECOWAS committee of five, the Trial Chamber finds that as early as 1997, Charles Taylor was informed in detail of 12:33:39 the crimes committed during the Junta period, including murder, abduction of civilians including children, rape, amputation, and looting.

After 1997, the media coverage of the AFRC/RUF's crimes and terror campaign against the Sierra Leonean civilian population 12:34:01 increased. Many reports and articles by international organisations, non-governmental organisations and newspapers admitted into evidence described the atrocities committed by the AFRC/RUF troops after the ECOMOG intervention and the end of the Junta government. These public reports demonstrate that at that 12:34:28 time, it was public knowledge that the AFRC/RUF forces committed the following crimes: Unlawful killings, sexual violence, physical violence, looting, conscriptions and use of child soldiers, abduction, terrorism, and other atrocities.

The accused himself admitted that by April 1998, if "someone was providing support to the AFRC/RUF," he "would be supporting a group engaged in a campaign of atrocities against the civilian population of Sierra Leone." At that time, as the accused testified, there were news reports of a horrific campaign being waged against the civilian population in Sierra Leone. In a statement dated July 1998, the accused "strongly condemned the continuing rebel activities in Sierra Leone, as well as the horrendous atrocities that had been committed there."

Based on this evidence and the testimony of the accused himself, the Trial Chamber finds that the accused was aware of the crimes committed by RUF/AFRC forces against civilians, including murder, abduction of civilians including children, rape, amputations, and looting, as early as August 1997 when he became president of Liberia.

Summary of legal findings.

The indictment charges the accused with individual criminal responsibility pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute alleged in the indictment. The Trial Chamber has found that the crimes charged under counts 1 to 11 of the indictment were committed and now turns to the responsibility of the accused for these crimes.

Responsibility pursuant to Article 6(3) of the Statute.

The indictment charges that the accused is individually criminally responsible for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3, and 4 of the Statute as alleged in the indictment by virtue of holding positions of superior responsibility and exercising command and control over subordinate members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and/or Liberian fighters. It is alleged that the accused is responsible for the criminal acts of his subordinates in that he knew or had reason to know that the subordinate was about to commit such acts or had done so, and the accused failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent such acts or to punish the perpetrators thereof.

12:37:43 The accused denies criminal responsibility based on superior/subordinate relationship with the perpetrators of the crimes.

Article 6(3) holds a superior criminally responsible if the superior knew or had reason to know that his or her subordinate 12:38:03 was about to commit crimes prohibited by the Statute or had done so, and the superior failed to take the necessary and reasonable measures to prevent or punish the perpetrators. It must thus be demonstrated that the superior had effective command and control over his subordinates, that is, the material ability to prevent 12:38:29 or punish the commission of the offence.

The Trial Chamber is of the view that the accused had substantial influence over the leadership of the RUF, and to a lesser extent that of the AFRC. However, that substantial influence over the conduct of others fell short of effective 12:38:51 command and control as demonstrated by the evidence.

The evidence establishes that from 1990 to March 1997, Sankoh was the sole leader of the RUF and that he did not take orders from the accused. When Sankoh was arrested in March 1997, he appointed Bockarie to lead the RUF and instructed him to take 12:39:15 direction from the accused.

The Trial Chamber finds that the accused gave guidance, advice, and direction to Bockarie and to his successor Issa Sesay, but that the evidence does not establish that either of them was a subordinate of the accused, nor that the accused had effective command and control over the RUF during their respective tenures. Similarly, the Trial Chamber finds that the accused gave guidance, advice, and direction to Johnny Paul Koroma when he was leader of the AFRC/RUF Junta, but the evidence does not establish that he was a subordinate of the accused, nor that the accused had effective command and control over the AFRC/RUF Junta.

12:39:54

With regard to Liberian fighters who were found to have participated in the commission of crimes, the Trial Chamber finds that even if they were sent to Sierra Leone by the accused, there is insufficient evidence to find beyond a reasonable doubt that they remained under the effective command and control of the accused once in Sierra Leone.

12:40:11

The Trial Chamber accordingly finds that the Prosecution failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused is individually criminally responsible under Article 6(3) for the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in the indictment.

12:40:31

Joint criminal enterprise.

The indictment charges the accused with the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in the indictment, which crimes amounted to or were involved within a common plan, design or purpose in which the accused participated, or were a reasonably foreseeable consequence of such common plan, design or purpose.

12:40:50

As discussed earlier, the Trial Chamber found that the Prosecution failed to prove that any of the three alleged meetings in Libya, Burkina Faso, and Voinjama, where the common plan was said to have been established, took place. Furthermore, while the Trial Chamber found that the accused provided significant operational and military support to the RUF, particularly after he became president of Liberia, the evidence does not establish that this support was provided pursuant a common plan in the context of a joint criminal enterprise.

Accordingly, the Trial Chamber finds that the Prosecution has failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused is criminally responsible by virtue of having participated in a common plan, design or purpose to commit the crimes alleged in the indictment.

Responsibility under 6(1) for aiding and abetting.

The indictment charges that the accused, by his acts or omissions, is individually criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for, inter alia, aiding and abetting the planning, preparation, or execution of the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in the indictment.

The Prosecution submits that in providing practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support, the accused's acts had a substantial effect on the perpetration of the crimes charged in the indictment and that he had a clear intent to act in support of those crimes.

The Defence denies that the accused is responsible for aiding and abetting the commission of any of the crimes charged in the indictment.

Aiding and abetting requires that the accused gave practical assistance, encouragement, or moral support which had a substantial effect on the perpetration of a crime.

The Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the accused provided arms and ammunition, military personnel, operational support, moral support and ongoing guidance to the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance and Liberian fighters for military operations during the indictment period.

12:43:51 Before turning to -- the heading is: Commission of crimes intrinsic to the RUF/AFRC's war strategy.

Before turning to the various forms of assistance provided by the accused, the Trial Chamber considered the RUF/AFRC's war strategy. Throughout the indictment period, the operational 12:44:16 strategy of the RUF and AFRC was characterized by a campaign of crimes against the Sierra Leonean civilian population, including murders, rapes, sexual slavery, looting, abductions, forced labour, conscription of child soldiers, amputations, and other forms of physical violence and acts of terror. These crimes were 12:44:46 inextricably linked to how the RUF and the AFRC achieved their political and military objectives. In particular, under the leadership of Sam Bockarie, the RUF and AFRC pursued a policy of committing crimes in order to achieve military gains at any civilian cost, and also politically in order to attract the 12:45:10 attention of the international community and to heighten their negotiating stance with the Sierra Leonean government. That their operations were given titles such as Operation No Living Thing, and Operation Spare No Soul made explicit the intent of the RUF and AFRC to wage a campaign of terror against civilians 12:45:39 as part of their war strategy.

The findings of the Trial Chamber as to the various forms of assistance provided by the accused are as follows:

Arms and ammunition.

During the indictment period, the accused directly or through intermediaries supplied or facilitated the supply of arms and ammunition to the RUF/AFRC. The accused sent small but regular supplies of arms and ammunition and other supplies to the RUF from late 1997 to 1998 via his subordinates and substantial 12:46:24 amounts of arms and ammunition to the AFRC/RUF from 1998 to 2001. The accused facilitated much larger shipments of arms and ammunition from third-party states to the AFRC/RUF, including the Magburaka shipment of October 1997 and the Burkina Faso shipment of November/December 1998.

12:46:50 Also during the indictment period, these arms and ammunition were used by the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters in military operations including the Junta mining operations at Tongo Fields prior to the ECOMOG intervention, Operation Pay Yourself, and subsequent offensives 12:47:17 in Kono District in 1998, and in the Freetown invasion in January 1999, and attacks on the outskirts of Freetown and the Western Area in late January to early February 1999. These operations involved widespread or systematic attacks on the civilian population and the commission of crimes. The 12:47:38 Trial Chamber finds that the provision and facilitation of these arms and ammunition constituted practical assistance which had a substantial effect on the perpetration of crimes by the RUF and the RUF/AFRC during the indictment period.

Military personnel.

12:47:58 The accused also provided military personnel to the RUF/AFRC. The accused provided a group of 20 ex-NPFL fighters who had been integrated into the AFL. These fighters fought in Karina and Kamalo in Bombali District in August/September 1998 as part of a group of 200 fighters. These 20 fighters were later incorporated into the Red Lion Battalion which was comprised of 200 fighters. The Red Lion Battalion was part of a group of 1.000 fighters who participated in the invasion of Freetown and committed crimes during the course of military operations in 12:48:45 December 1998/January 1999.

The accused reorganised, armed, and sent former SLA fighters and Sierra Leonean civilians who had retreated to Liberia back to Sierra Leone to fight in the Kono and Freetown operation, and these men fought in the Kono operation in 12:49:04 December 1998.

Moreover, the accused sent Abu Keita and 150 fighters as reinforcements known as the Scorpion Unit who participated in the attack on Kono and Kenema Districts in late 1998/early 1999.

The Trial Chamber finds that the practical assistance
12:49:26 provided by these military personnel sent by the accused had a substantial effect on the commission of crimes by the RUF/AFRC during the course of military operations.

Operational support.

In the pre-indictment period, NPFL radio operators and 12:49:47 equipment were sent to Sierra Leone, and RUF fighters trained by the NPFL radio -- and RUF fighters were trained by the NPFL radio operators in radio communications with the knowledge of the accused. The RUF continued to benefit into the indictment period from the enhanced communications capacity that resulted from this 12:50:13 assistance. However, as the acts of the accused took place prior to the indictment period, the Trial Chamber has not taken them into account in determining criminal responsibility.

The Trial Chamber found that the accused also provided operational support to the RUF/AFRC during the indictment period, including giving Sam Bockarie and Issa Sesay satellite phones and facilitating communications for the RUF through the NPFL's own communications network, providing the RUF/AFRC access to radio communications equipment in Liberia, allowing the use of the radio station at Benjamin Yeaten's home for communications with Bockarie and later Sesay, and the transmission of "448 messages" to RUF forces warning them of impending ECOMOG jet attacks which the accused must have known about. This communications support provided practical assistance to the RUF/AFRC for the crimes committed during the course of their military operations throughout the indictment period.

The accused also provided financial support to the RUF/AFRC, including funds to Bockarie of $10.000 to $20.000 at a time, on multiple occasions for the purchase of arms from ULIMO. The accused also kept diamonds and money in safekeeping for the RUF/AFRC.

The accused also provided a guesthouse to the RUF in Monrovia which was used by the RUF to facilitate the transfer of arms and ammunition -- of arms and funds from the accused to the RUF and the delivery of diamonds from the RUF to the accused. The Trial Chamber considers that the provision of the RUF guesthouse by the accused, as a base of operation for procurement and a way station for the transport of arms and ammunition, provided practical assistance to the RUF/AFRC for the commission of crimes committed during the course of military operations. The accused provided other forms of support to the RUF/AFRC, including the provision of security escorts, facilitation of access through check-points, assistance with transport of arms and ammunition by road and by air, safe haven and medical support for treatment of wounded RUF fighters in Liberia, as well as provisions of goods such as food, clothing, cigarettes, alcohol, and other supplies to the RUF. The accused also sent "herbalists" who marked fighters in Buedu and Kono to protect them against bullets and bolster their confidence. Liberian forces also assisted the RUF/AFRC with the capture and return of deserters to Sierra Leone.

The provision of such support in addition to the military support provided constituted practical assistance to the RUF/AFRC, which had a substantial effect on the commission of crimes committed during the course of military operations.

Encouragement and moral support.

The Trial Chamber has considered the ongoing communications and consultation between the accused and the RUF/AFRC leadership, and the ongoing advice and encouragement that the accused provided to the RUF/AFRC. He advised Sankoh to participate in the Abidjan peace talks in 1996 in order to obtain arms and ammunition for the RUF. He instructed the RUF to open a training base in Bunumbu in 1998 and to construct an airfield in Buedu. He instructed the AFRC/RUF to capture Kono and subsequently advised them to hold and recapture it, as a source of revenue through diamonds that could be used to secure arms and ammunition. The Trial Chamber has taken into account the position of authority of the accused as an elder statesman and as president of Liberia, the deference that was accorded to him by the RUF/AFRC leadership and their reliance on his guidance, and the fact that his advice was generally heeded by them.

Taken accumulatively and having regard to the military support provided by the accused to the RUF/AFRC, the Trial Chamber finds that the practical assistance, encouragement, and moral support provided by the accused had a substantial effect on the commission of crimes by the RUF/AFRC during the course of military operations in Sierra Leone.

12:55:24 The accused.

The essential mental element required for aiding and abetting is that the accused knew that his acts would assist the commission of the crime by the perpetrator or that he was aware of the substantial likelihood that his acts would assist the 12:55:45 commission of a crime by the perpetrator. In cases of specific intent crimes such as acts of terrorism, the accused must be aware of the specific intent of the perpetrator.

As discussed earlier, the Trial Chamber is satisfied that as of August 1997, the accused knew of the atrocities committed 12:56:11 against civilians in Sierra Leone by the RUF/AFRC forces and of their propensity to commit crimes. Notwithstanding such knowledge, the accused continued to provide support to the RUF and RUF/AFRC forces during the period that crimes were being committed in Sierra Leone. The Trial Chamber therefore finds 12:56:36 beyond reasonable doubt that the accused knew that his support to the RUF/AFRC would provide practical assistance, encouragement or moral support to them in the commission of crimes during the course of their military operations in Sierra Leone.

For the foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber finds beyond 12:56:59 reasonable doubt that the accused is criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for aiding and abetting the commission of the crimes set forth in counts 1 to 11 of the indictment.

Planning.

The accused is charged with individual criminal responsibility pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute for, inter alia, planning the crimes referred to in Articles 2, 3 and 4 of the Statute as alleged in the indictment.

12:57:32 The Prosecution submits that the accused, acting jointly with RUF, AFRC and Liberian subordinates, designed or organised the commission of crimes at both the preparatory and execution phases by designing a strategy for the AFRC Junta, the RUF and AFRC forces, including selecting strategic areas to attack and 12:57:58 control, such as Kono and the capital Freetown, and organising the delivery of arms and ammunition needed to carry out the attacks.

The Defence submits that the evidence put forward by the Prosecution does not show that the accused planned the commission 12:58:14 of crimes or was aware of the substantial likelihood of crimes as charged in the indictment as part of the January 6 invasion of Freetown, asserting that it was the AFRC, not the RUF, who executed and planned the attack.

Criminal responsibility requires that the accused, alone or 12:58:39 with others, intentionally planned the criminal conduct constituting the crimes charged, with the intent that a crime be committed in the execution of that plan, or with the awareness of the substantial likelihood that a crime would be committed in the execution of that plan.

12:58:55 The Trial Chamber found that in November 1998, Sam Bockarie and the accused designed a two-pronged attack on Kono and Kenema, with Freetown as the ultimate destination. This plan was conveyed to RUF and AFRC commanders in December 1998 at Waterworks in Kailahun District.

The plan designed by Bockarie and the accused led to the attacks on Kono and Makeni. In the course of the implementation of this plan, a small contingent of troops led by Idrissa Kamara, also known as Rambo Red Goat, reached Freetown and Bockarie's 12:59:39 forces got to the outskirts of Freetown, where they met up with the forces led by Gullit. During the course of the implementation of this plan, these forces committed the crimes committed in the indictment. These crimes resulted directly from the plan made by Bockarie and the accused in Monrovia. There was 12:59:58 evidence that while in Monrovia, the accused instructed Bockarie to make the operation fearful in order to pressure the government of Sierra Leone into negotiations. Moreover, following the Waterworks meeting, the accused told Bockarie during a satellite phone conversation to use "all means" to get to Freetown.

13:00:42 The Trial Chamber found that following the Waterworks meeting, Bockarie told SAJ Musa to attack Freetown, but that SAJ Musa refused to take orders from Bockarie and continued on his own advance pursuant to a separate plan.

I will need to interrupt what I'm saying, unfortunately the 13:01:10 tape has run out and needs to be changed. I think that will be a matter of a few minutes. We won't adjourn. We will wait for it to be changed.

The Trial Chamber found that Gullit took over the leadership of the troops at Benguema following the death of 13:06:46 SAJ Musa. Bockarie then assumed effective control over Gullit and SAJ Musa's plan was abandoned for the Bockarie/Taylor plan, as conveyed by Bockarie at Waterworks. Further execution of the plan was carried out with close co-ordination between Bockarie and Gullit, with Gullit in frequent communication with Bockarie and with Gullit taking orders from Bockarie. In these circumstances, the Trial Chamber finds that the Bockarie/Taylor plan substantially contributed to the commission of the crimes committed by Gullit's forces while Gullit was operating under Bockarie's command.

13:07:34

The accused, having drawn up the plan with Bockarie, and having followed its implementation closely via daily communications with Bockarie, either directly or through Yeaten, was aware of its continuing evolution.

13:07:50

As mentioned previously, the accused was well aware of the crimes committed by the AFRC/RUF forces in the course of their military operations and that their war strategy was explicitly based on a widespread or systematic campaign of crimes against civilians. Moreover, by his instruction to make the operation fearful, which was repeated many times by Bockarie during the course of the Freetown invasion and by his instruction to use all means, the accused demonstrated his awareness of the substantial likelihood that crimes would be committed in the execution of the plan.

13:08:10

13:08:27

For foregoing reasons, the Trial Chamber finds beyond reasonable doubt that the accused is criminally responsible pursuant to Article 6(1) for planning the crimes committed by members of the RUF, AFRC, AFRC/RUF Junta or alliance, and Liberian fighters in the attacks on Kono and Makeni, in the invasion of Freetown and during the retreat from Freetown.

13:08:55

Ordering.

The Trial Chamber has found that while the accused held a position of authority amongst the RUF and RUF/AFRC, the instructions and guidance which he gave to the RUF and RUF/AFRC were generally of an advisory nature and at times were, in fact, not followed by the RUF/AFRC leadership. For these reasons, the Trial Chamber finds that the accused cannot be held responsible for ordering the commission of crimes.

13:09:34 Instigating.

The Trial Chamber, having already found that the accused is criminally responsible for aiding and abetting the commission of the crimes in counts 1 to 11 of the indictment, does not find that the accused also instigated those crimes.

13:09:54 This brings me to the verdict. I will ask the accused, Mr Taylor, will you please stand for the verdict of the Trial Chamber.

Having considered all the evidence and the arguments of the parties, the Statute and the Rules, and based upon the findings

13:10:19 as determined by the Trial Chamber in its judgement, the Trial Chamber unanimously finds you guilty of aiding and abetting the commission of the following crimes pursuant to Article 6(1) of the Statute during the indictment period, and planning the commission of the following crimes in the attacks on Kono and

13:10:38 Makeni in December 1998, and in the invasion of and retreat from Freetown between December 1998 and February 1999:

Count 1: Acts of terrorism, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3(d) of the Statute.

13:11:11 Count 2: Murder, a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 2(a) of the Statute.

Count 3: Violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular murder, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3(a) of the Statute.

Count 4: Rape, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(g) of the Statute.

Count 5: Sexual slavery, a crime against humanity, punishable under Article 2(g) of the Statute.

Count 6: Outrages upon personal dignity, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3(e) of the Statute.

Count 7: Violence to life, health and physical or mental well-being of persons, in particular cruel treatment, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3(a) of the Statute.

Count 8: Other inhumane acts, a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 2(i) of the Statute.

Count 9: Conscripting or enlisting children under the age of 15 years into the armed forces or groups, and using them to participate actively in hostilities, another serious violation of international humanitarian law pursuant to Article 4(c) of the Statute.

Count 10: Enslavement, a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 2(c) of the Statute.

Count 11: Pillage, a violation of Article 3 common to the Geneva Conventions and of Additional Protocol II pursuant to Article 3(f) of the Statute.

Thank you, Mr Taylor, you can sit down now.

Now, we come to the sentencing process.

Firstly, I remind the parties of their obligation under Rule 100, which provides for the submission of information relevant to sentencing by the Prosecution no more than seven days after conviction and by the Defence no more than seven days after the Prosecution's filing. This seven-day period runs from the date of conviction, which is today. By the Trial Chamber's calculation, in order to comply with Rule 100, the Prosecution's 13:14:14 filing under Rule 100 must be made by close of business Thursday, 3rd of May. The Defence filing under Rule 100 on the Prosecution -- on the Trial Chamber's calculation must be no more than seven days after that, which would be by close of business Thursday, 10th of May.

13:14:40 Under Rule 100, the parties can provide information relating to factors that affect sentencing, which would include written submissions and testimonials, if any. The extensive judgement summary that is being delivered today will suffice for this purpose, since it is a reasoned opinion of the Trial Chamber 13:15:03 which sets out comprehensively the grounds for convicting Mr Taylor.

Now, secondly, the Trial Chamber considers that this is an appropriate case to fix a sentencing hearing, and fixes such hearing, which will be for additional oral arguments only, for 13:15:27 Wednesday, 16th of May, at 9.30 a.m. At the sentencing hearing, the Prosecution shall limit the length of its sentencing submissions to a time not exceeding one hour. The Defence shall limit the length of its sentencing submissions to a time not exceeding one hour.

13:15:56 If Mr Taylor wishes to address the Court prior to being sentenced, then this will be his opportunity to do so, and he shall limit the length of his address, if any, to a time not exceeding 30 minutes.

Thirdly, a sentencing judgement will be pronounced on Wednesday, 30th of May, at 11.00 a.m.

Lastly, the accused is remanded until Wednesday, 16th of May, at 9.30 a.m., for a sentencing hearing.

The Court is hereby adjourned to that date.

13:17:33 [Whereupon the Judgement adjourned at 1.17 p.m.]

[Open session]

[In the presence of the Accused]

[Upon commencing at 9.47 a.m.]

09:48:36 PRESIDING JUDGE: Good morning. I will open the Court by noting that Justice Sebutinde is not here with us. I have her authorisation to read a notification, which I received this morning from Justice Sebutinde, and I will read it out verbatim:

"This is to notify you that in view of the recent 09:49:09 developments in the Trial Chamber, and consistent with my earlier views and opinion on this matter, both in Chamber and on the Bench wherein I dissented from the directive to lead counsel, I will on principle, not attend Friday's hearing."

I will therefore, first, invite appearances, and secondly - 09:49:38 I haven't added the words end of quote.

In the light of this, I will first invite appearances and, secondly, I will ask counsel if there is any matters which he wishes to make before proceeding.

MR MUNYARD: Good morning, Madam President, your Honours, 09:50:03 and Ms Donlon, who is the Deputy Registrar, who's here in court, that's the first appearance that I note.

Madam President, on the Defence bench is Courtenay Griffiths QC, Morris Anyah, Logan Hambrick, myself, Terry Munyard, and beside me is counsel Mr Peter Robinson, who is 09:50:31 here to represent Mr Griffiths this morning, following your order granting Mr Griffiths right of representation of two weeks ago.

Unless there is anything further you wish to hear from me, I propose now to hand over, first of all, to Mr Robinson.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you, Mr Munyard.

MR ROBINSON: Thank you, Madam President. It's a privilege to appear before your Court and a real honour to represent Courtenay Griffiths. I'd like to speak to you for a few minutes, if you don't mind, about the issue of sanctions under rule 46 that were mentioned.

09:51:07

PRESIDING JUDGE: Prior to you proceeding, Mr Robinson, on that, I did invite comments, first, on the question of the constitution of the Court, in the light of the matter I have just read, and in the light of Justice Sebutinde's absence. I must dispose of that first, prior to hearing any submissions on the issue before us.

09:51:30

MR ROBINSON: Very well, Madam President, since we hadn't had any notice of that, would you mind giving us a few minutes to consult among ourselves before we address that issue?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Please do so.

09:51:45

MR ROBINSON: Thank you.

[Defence counsel confer]

MR ROBINSON: Yes, thank you, Madam President, we would like to invite the Chamber to invite Justice Sow to participate, so the Bench is constituted of three regularly constituted judges.

09:52:25

JUDGE SOW: Let me make this very clear: This Bench is regularly composed with three judges sitting, as it shows. Two judges cannot sign decisions. When the Bench is sitting, it's sitting with three judges, not two judges, and I don't know what. I'm not here for decoration. I am a judge. This Bench is regularly composed, as everybody can see. I don't know how people can think that two judges - I don't know where in this world you will see two judges sitting. It's not possible. This Bench is regularly composed with three judges. This is my comment. No matter how parties will look at it, it shows and it's apparent that this Bench is composed with three judges. We are three judges sitting.

09:52:41

09:53:34 PRESIDING JUDGE: The Articles governing the composition of this Court and the Trial Chamber mandate that it is to be composed of three judges. This is not a situation where rule 16 applies. Accordingly, in our view, this Trial Chamber is not properly constituted and we consider we have no alternative but 09:53:59 to adjourn this hearing today. The matter is adjourned for a date to be fixed.

Please adjourn the Court.

Q. Who was that person?

A. Senegalese at one time was a member of the RUF. That was the time ECOMOG intervention took place. I think he met me in Sengema and he was to travel to Kono. He was once a member of the ULIMO fighters. According to report we gathered when RUF joined their forces with AFRC was that that Senegalese was one of the soldiers who were fighting alongside the government forces, the SLAs. So when ECOMOG intervention took place, he also retreated to Buedu. So he was commanded by Sam Bockarie to move to Kono on assignment."

16:12:40

Now, did you ever hear of someone by the name Senegalese while you were at Base 1?

A. I heard of Senegalese. And there were a lot of people in Liberia who were referred to as Senegalese as a nickname. That is like Mosquito, like I explained. Those who were tall and slim bodily could be referred to as Senegalese because, in Liberia, they say the Senegalese are tall people. So a lot of people were called Senegalese. Even one of my friends was called Senegalese because he was tall and slim. But I don't know the Senegalese he is talking about. But the Senegalese that I knew was a Liberian Senegalese.

Q. Thank you, Mr Witness. Let's just go over to the next page because I see something that should be on the record as well. This is at page 7186. The witness, TF1-516, sought to make a clarification and the Presiding Judge allowed it, and the witness was asked the question:

"Q. Yes, what is it you wish to clarify?"

And the witness went on to say at line 7:

"A. I was asked a question to state the number of times I went to the mansion and I spoke of handing over a code chart to operator Sky 1. Operator Sky 1 was not assigned at Base 1. He was at 020 and it was at 020 that I gave him the code chart. I gave the code chart to Sunlight at Base 1, and if that is the case, then the number of times I went to the Executive Mansion Ground is supposed to be two, but not one."

A. Well, it - communication is important in war because when you communicate you'd be able to know the position of the other group and the other groups also would know the positions of the others and you'd be able to know about events that are going on.

14:50:44 Q. It's critical, isn't it, to be able to communicate among your own units?

A. Yes, it was important.

Q. Without radios and communications it would be like going into a boxing match blindfolded, you don't know what's going on, 14:51:08 isn't that true?

A. Yes, when you don't have communication you will not be able to know what the other groups are doing at the other locations. Because it happened during the early days of the war when we had the Pujehun group and the Kailahun group, we did not know what 14:51:28 they were doing on the other side.

Q. And when - by the way, Bockarie sent Alfred Brown, he sent King Perry and he sent others also to the north. Isn't that correct?

A. Yes.

14:51:42 Q. Who were these others?

A. Well, I knew about King Perry, Alfred Brown. They also had their own securities.

Q. Liberians were sent by Sam Bockarie to reinforce the north. Isn't that true?

14:52:06 A. No. I did not know about Liberians who were sent to reinforce the north. The person that I know that Sam Bockarie sent was Senegalese whom he sent to Superman in Kono to request for the ammunition that Superman captured. When Senegalese went to Kono he and few RUFs, Superman did not allow them to return, so he took all of them to the north.

Q. This Senegalese that you're speaking about, let's just briefly talk about him. He was a Liberian, correct?
A. Yes, he was a Liberian ULIMO-K.
14:52:51 Q. Because the name Senegalese, the nickname Senegalese, quite a few people had that name, sort of like Rambo. Isn't that true?
A. Yes.
Q. The Senegalese that you're talking about, was he killed by the AFRC in the October 1999 infight at Makeni with the RUF?
14:53:19 A. Well, he was not in Makeni. He was not killed in Makeni Town. After the infighting between Superman's group and Isaac and against the AFRC, one of the AFRC men, Savage, when he retreated from Makeni, he met Senegalese in Kamabai, that was where he killed him. It was in Kamabai that he killed 14:53:50 Senegalese. That was Savage.
Q. So that was the October 1999 infighting where it was AFRC against RUF, correct?
A. Yes. The AFRC and part of the RUF, because it was not all of us that took part in the infight.
14:54:11 Q. Well, you were the battle group commander at the time, correct?
A. I was the battle group. But the people who chased me in Makeni who killed my bodyguards were the same people whom I had met in Makeni. They started the fighting and I had no control 14:54:30 over them, like Isaac, Superman, and Gibril, including their followers like Nya.
Q. They were ordered by Foday Sankoh to expel the AFRC from Makeni in October 1999, correct?
A. Yes, that was it. Because Superman came from

Q. Likewise, a similar fate befell members of the RUF in Pujehun District; is that right?
A. Yes. From Zogoda, when they were going to Pujehun.
Q. And is it not right that during the course of their retreat from Pujehun, Zino, unfortunately, lost his life?
09:13:54
MR GRIFFITHS: Objection, counsel is leading the witness.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, Mr Griffiths, I think you are.
MR GRIFFITHS: But, Madam President, with respect, these are well-established facts now. Why do we really need to waste time having to go over the same ground over and over again when they are clearly established on the record?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Not with this witness, they're not.
MR GRIFFITHS: Very well.
Q. Who is Zino?
09:14:36
A. Zino is Mohamed Tarawalli.
Q. Is Mohamed Tarawalli still alive?
A. No. Mohamed Tarawalli died during the retreat from Zogoda to Kailahun. That was where the Kamajors killed him around Bunumbu.
09:14:57
Q. Well, given that you haven't given any evidence about this, Mr Sesay, take your time, please, and explain to us how Mohamed Tarawalli, AKA Zino, came to take his life. Take your time.
A. Well, during the peace accord between Tejan Kabbah and Mr Sankoh - former President Kabbah and Mr Sankoh, there was a

A. Yes, Senegalese, yes.
Q. What was that link?
A. Well, Senegalese was at the Mano River with the ULIMO-K forces, the time the RUF crossed around that November 1996, when 11:54:41 Mike Lamin and others surrendered to the ULIMO. That was the first time Senegalese had a contact with the RUF. So in 1997, when Mike Lamin left Liberia to come, he came along with Senegalese to Sierra Leone. From that time, Senegalese was in Kenema with Sam Bockarie during the AFRC period. And when the 11:55:09 intervention happened, Senegalese withdrew with Sam Bockarie to Kailahun, and he was in Kailahun before we arrived there. If you see in that report that Sam Bockarie wrote to Mr Sankoh, that salute report, he said he had sent people to Superman to receive ammunition that he captured during the Fitti-Fatta attack, and 11:55:40 Superman seized the people. Senegalese was among that group. He was in that group, and he went to Superman. He was with Superman until December. Senegalese came to Makeni with Superman, and I was in Makeni when Superman went to Lunsar. So Senegalese was in Sierra Leone from 1997, before this invasion in Freetown which 11:56:12 occurred in 1999, January.
Q. The second question: Have you heard of a Red Goat Battalion?
A. Yes. That battalion operated with the Mani group in Koinadugu. I heard about that name in December 1998 when we met 11:56:47 at Makeni.
Q. Who made up that Red Goat Battalion?
A. They were the RUF soldiers.

people crossed into Kailahun for defensive purposes.
Q. Those that crossed to Kailahun, was it the case that they were led by CO Mohamed?
A. That was the time we lost CO Mohamed. That was the time he 09:48:29 got missing, and up to this moment we don't know his whereabouts. He never reached Kailahun. He was captured by enemies and he was killed. That was how Foday Sankoh gave the command structure to Sam Bockarie.
Q. When you went to the Northern Jungle, you said together

Q. Mr George, what year was Zogoda overrun by the enemy?
A. In 1996.
Q. In what year did you, Manawai, and others go to the Northern Jungle?

A. Kamajors, 1996.
Q. Where did the Kamajors first attack the RUF after the signing of the ceasefire?
A. At the Koribundu Jungle. It was dissolved.
10:33:27 Q. What happened to the fighters who had been at the Koribundu Jungle?
A. Some ran to International Boko and some came to us at Zogoda.
Q. And were the RUF able to hold on to the base at 10:33:52 International Boko?
A. Yes. Our brothers were still there, 1996.
Q. Now, you've told us that you had gone with CO Mohamed to Zogoda. Can you give us any rough estimation of when it was you arrived in Zogoda?
10:34:19 A. It was after the departure of Foday Sankoh. The month he left, it was that same month that we entered Zogoda and he took over as the RUF leader, the second leader. I can't recall the exact month, but it was that same month that Pa Sankoh departed for Ivory Coast that we went there and he took over.
10:34:45 Q. [Microphone not activated] that?
A. 1996.
Q. Thank you. And did you remain at Zogoda?
A. We used to trip to Bandawor, areas like Zundumi [phon], all the areas that were around us, we used to patrol those areas. We 10:35:13 would go to Bandawor, Zundumi. Zogoda was a very big place, a big place that Pa Sankoh had established. Yes.
Q. How long did you stay based at Zogoda?
A. I cannot guess the month that we entered Zogoda, but I can tell you the exact day that we left Zogoda, after the Kamajors had finally pushed us. It was on November 12, 1996. November 12, 1996. That was the time we finally left Zogoda.

Q. And although you've already mentioned it, just tell us what happened to cause you to leave Zogoda on that date.

10:36:17 A. It was as a result of the persistent attacks from the Kamajors and we were on ceasefire. We were not ready to attack, and it was as a result of the attacks that we decided to leave. We had arms, but we did not have enough ammunition. In fact, we had run short of ammunitions. We had weapons with us, but no

10:36:37 ammunition.

Q. Who was in charge of the Kamajors, as far as you were aware?

A. Well, according to news that was filtering in --

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, could the witness be asked 10:36:53 to repeat that name.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Can you please repeat the name you just gave and continue your evidence.

THE WITNESS: Chief Hinga Norman.

MR MUNYARD:

10:37:05 Q. And what was his position in Sierra Leone at that time?

A. Well, we heard at that time that he was the Deputy Defence Minister under the President Kabbah government.

Q. Now, what was Foday Sankoh doing on November 12, 1996, and where was he?

10:37:35 A. He was still in the Ivory Coast.

Q. Doing what?

A. He was still on the same peace mission. He was trying to bring Pa Kabbah on board so that they will respect the ceasefire and then they will stop attacking our positions, that is, the Kamajors.

Q. You say that you left Zogoda on that day. Did anybody remain behind in Zogoda, or was the RUF base then completely emptied?

10:38:18 A. On 12 November, that particular base was finally deserted and it was deserted by the Kamajors November 1996.

Q. Where did you go to from Zogoda?

A. After we had crossed the highway and we jumped over the roads to the other side, we passed the night in a small bush on 10:38:54 our way to Kailahun District. That should be around the Kenema District. And we went to a small bush, that was on the 12th, and we passed the night there. And 13 November, that was the following morning, we went to Basala and Basala was a small village.

10:39:20 Q. Pause there for a moment. B-A-S-A-L-A. Why were you going to Kailahun District?

A. Zogoda had fallen, so we have nowhere else to go to but to go back to Kailahun so that we'll decide what to do next, because we did not have anything to fight with. We never had ammunition, 10:39:57 so we were all trying to move out off from the streets.

Q. Who was in Kailahun?

A. At that time Sam Bockarie was the commander in Kailahun alias Mosquito, 1996.

Q. Was Zino with you when you left Zogoda on 12 November?

10:40:23 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Was he going with you to Kailahun where Sam Bockarie was the commander?

A. That was what we expected to do, for us all to go to Kailahun. But unfortunately for us, it was at Basala that Zino President, there is a government, the RUF is a part of that government. That's what I know.

Q. At this meeting in November with Sam Bockarie did you give him shopping money?

12:19:19 A. No, Mr Koumjian, I did not give him shopping money.

Q. Why is it that you were giving him shopping money and then you stopped doing that?

A. Mr Koumjian, the issue of giving him shopping money in previous times in 1998 that you referred to was a matter that 12:19:47 leaders do all of the time. By the time Sam Bockarie comes to Liberia at the time you are talking about Sam Bockarie doesn't appear to need any little help from me. He is well attired and all that. I mean I could have very well given him money but I didn't. I mean, I didn't see the necessity at that time. It 12:20:06 depends on how the leader feels at that time when someone at that subordinate level visits him.

Q. So I gather from your answer that it was apparent to you that between what you say is your first meeting with Sam Bockarie in September 1998 and this meeting in November, a little over a 12:20:30 year later, Sam Bockarie had enriched himself; he was better off?

A. No, Mr Koumjian, I would not use that word. I would disagree. I have not even alluded to enrichment. I said that I saw no need to give him money. Now that's not my testimony that he had enriched himself.

12:20:54 Q. Was there a reason why you saw a need to give him money before and then you said he came back, he is well attired and all that. You said, "Sam Bockarie doesn't appear to need any little help from me." So was that because he looked richer to you?

A. Well, he looked a little better. He looked better taken care of. The matter of giving gifts to individuals is really - it's really a judgmental matter. From time to time people come different places to visit you. You know, I guess for some of us it's a tradition. I don't know about other parts of Africa.

12:21:36 It's a tradition in West Africa to - and may I just almost say most parts of Africa. You come from - especially in dealing with these kinds of things. You do little gifts to people. They come, give them a little money, go buy a gift or something. For me it's mostly traditional, Mr Koumjian.
12:21:59 Q. When Sam Bockarie came to stay, I believe you said that was in December 1999, and we understand by "stay" he is not there forever, you understand what I mean, when he came in December '99 and was given a house, he was also given a salary?
A. Yes.
12:22:17 Q. $1,000 a month. Is that right?
A. That is correct.
Q. What was the salary of an AFL soldier at that time?
A. An AFL soldier was making far less. He could have been making about maybe as much as 1 ,000 to 1,500 Liberian dollars 12:22:37 which would be maybe $300, $400.
Q. In fact, Mr Taylor, that would have been the salary of SSS or ATU but that was not the salary of regular AFL soldiers, was it?
A. What was not the salary of regular AFL soldiers?
12:22:49 Q. $300 a month?
A. No, that was not the - yes, certain officers at that particular time, depending on the rank, could have been making about 1,000, like I said, to 1,500 Liberian dollars, yes.
Q. An enlisted man in Liberia at that time in the Liberian army, the AFL, would make about $5 a month. Isn't that right?

A. No, Mr Koumjian, that is not correct.
Q. $5 US a month?
A. No, that is not correct.
12:23:27 Q. How much would they make, according to you?
A. I would put it to around maybe 4 to 500 Liberian dollars a month.
Q. There was 50 Liberian dollars to the US dollar at that time?
12:23:39 A. No. During my administration it was $40.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Koumjian, Bockarie's $1,000, was that US or Liberian dollars?
THE WITNESS: US dollars.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: US dollars?
12:23:51 THE WITNESS: That is correct.
MR KOUMJIAN:
Q. In the trips that he had made before he came, you said you didn't give him any gifts on the fifth and sixth trips. In total how much had you given him on the earlier trips?
12:24:06 A. Well, again, Mr Koumjian, you have just - I have to be very careful with these records. You and I have not discussed the sixth trip yet. We've discussed only the fifth. You've added the sixth. You're asking me specifically about the November visit, that's what I have responded to and I'm calculating that 12:24:27 to be the fifth. You've not asked me about the sixth.
Q. Sir, I'm sure, as I made a mistake this morning, I think you are miscounting and just to make it easier for you let's review them. There were three trips in 1998?
A. Yes.

Q. You have told us September, October and November. And we've talked about April '99, we talked about September '99 and now we're on the sixth trip, November '99?
A. Well, you asked me about the November trip and I say - because that's the trip that he and Foday Sankoh are there.
Q. No, okay. Now my question, sir, is on the six trips in total how much had you given Sam Bockarie?
A. It could have been as much as $4,000 maybe $5,000.
Q. Sir, what was the condition of the average Liberian at that time? Do you have an idea? What was the, let's say, gross national product per capita? Do you know what that was in Liberia at that time?
A. No, I don't remember the figure but the condition in Liberia were not very good, but people were fairly comfortable. I mean not rich. They were suffering but fairly comfortable.
Q. Mr Taylor, isn't it true that about 80 per cent of the population was living on less than $2 a day?
A. Well, those statistics, I am not sure if it's $2. That sounds like a reasonable amount. But, again, because of the way you're going, we have to answer you. I can even agree to less than $2 a day. But then we are talking about different - well, okay, I'll wait for you. Go ahead.
Q. I'm enjoying you're elaboration. Do you have anything else to add to that?
A. Because, you know, you say less than $2 a day, I say I agree. I will see where you are going then I will respond.
Q. Did Sam Bockarie in all the time that you knew him give you gifts back as is common in the African tradition and others when you visit a host?

A. No, Sam Bockarie did not give me any gifts.
Q. All that you did for Sam Bockarie and he didn't give you a single gift in return?
A. Sam Bockarie never gave me any gifts. Never.
12:26:57 Q. For how many months did you pay Sam Bockarie this $1,000 a month salary?
A. Sam Bockarie received that money up until his departure in late 2000.
Q. Sam Bockarie during all this time you knew had been the 12:27:11 leader of the RUF, correct? He had been the leader of the RUF up until he left Sierra Leone, correct, the military leader?
A. Okay. He had been the military commander.
Q. Thank you. That's a better word. Thank you.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Koumjian, if I may seek clarification
12:27:29 from the witness. Did you say you were paying Sam Bockarie a salary because he was working as what?
THE WITNESS: No, I was not paying Sam Bockarie a salary because he was working as something. Sam Bockarie was given a subsistence by the Government of Liberia which for us was a 12:27:46 contribution to the peace process for being in Liberia. He was not working for the Liberian government. It was a subsistence given for he and his family because he had been invited by the government.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: So it was subsistence, not salary?
12:28:02 THE WITNESS: It was subsistence, not salary. He was been asking me about the amounts, your Honour, and I have been really verifying that. He didn't work. He didn't do any work at all for the Government of Liberia.

amputations, correct?
A. It depends on when. You've been switching me between '99 and '98. February, the intervention - you've been switching me between the intervention and the 6 January invasion and so it 11:14:23 depends on now - by the intervention time, if you read the Secretary-General's report - because I know of that report. We've presented copies here. Following the intervention - most of the issues that came up following the intervention that Liberia was concerned with was the presence of Liberians and 11:14:47 that's what we were seized with at that time. So I'm not aware of the details. Following the 6 January '99 situation, yes, that's a different story. We begin to get more details based on even what - if you read the Secretary-General's report, what we all received, that's what I'm talking about.

Q. Point President?
A. Yeah.
Q. Sir, as the point President in the negotiations, wouldn't it be important to understand who you're dealing with on the 11:16:05 various sides?
A. Yes, it would be very important.
Q. So did you read up about what the RUF - who they were and what they were doing?
A. Yes. Whatever reports came I read the reports from ECOMOG,

Q. Did you read the United Nations reports about atrocities committed in Sierra Leone?
A. Yes, the Secretary-General's report, I read them, yes.
Q. Did you read reports or get summaries of reports of the 11:19:51 international human rights community, people like Amnesty, Human Rights Watch, and their reports that of the atrocities that were being carried out by the RUF and its allies in Sierra Leone?
A. No, no, I did not. I only read the Secretary-General's reports.
11:20:09 Q. Did you read the reports in Liberian newspapers about the atrocities being committed against the civilians in their neighbouring country, Sierra Leone?
A. Well, I received briefings on the reports. I did not very rarely grab up a whole bunch of papers to read. I had people 11:20:25 that would summarise the important issues. But I received reports of what was reported in the papers as being reported in the international media, yes.
Q. Let's look a little bit at that situation after the intervention. The RUF was on the run, isn't that right?
11:20:47 A. When you say "on the run" --
Q. Thank you. That's a fair question. I'll try to clarify it. The RUF is militarily weakened?
A. Well, I would say I don't know. The intervention was against the junta and if you want to ask me if the junta - well, 11:21:09 your question was the RUF. I don't really know, Mr Koumjian, if they were weakened or not.
Q. Was the junta weakened?
A. Well, I would say yes, they were destroyed.
Q. They were destroyed. In fact, the AFRC and the RUF, the allies, had lost most of their heavy weapons that were in Freetown during the intervention. You knew that, didn't you?

A. No, I did not know.
Q. As the point person on peace, wasn't it important to understand the strategic situation?
A. Well, one could say that. But if your question is did I ask how many guns, how many pieces of artillery did they lose, I didn't get into that. For ECOWAS, driving the junta out of power was something that was agreed upon by ECOWAS. So for me strategically I did not ask for the military and intricacies of loss of equipment. I didn't really get into that.
Q. You understand strategically the junta, the RUF and its AFRC allies, were retreating and weakened, correct?
A. Definitely. We received reports on that, yes.
Q. Sir, let me ask you this: At this point - let's even get a date so it will be clear to you. Let's say by April 1998, was it clear to you that anyone who continued to provide support to the RUF and the AFRC would be supporting a group engaged in a campaign against the civilian population of Sierra Leone?
A. Well, I would say no because I was not aware that - I was not aware of anyone that was giving - as you put the question, giving support to be aware that anyone that would continue. So I really don't know how to answer this question. To the best of my knowledge from reports that reached to the Heads of State, we did not get an indication that they were receiving support from outside.
Q. Sir, my question is: Would anyone who gave support to the RUF be giving support to a force that was carrying out a campaign of atrocities against civilians as of April 1998?

A. That never - you're talking about strategically thinking about it. No, it didn't - what I was hoping was that nobody would support the RUF. So I was not thinking in that particular direction, no.

11:23:27 Q. What did you do to make sure that no one would support the RUF?

A. Well, like I said, I was not aware that anyone was supporting the RUF in the first place to begin to plan that no one would do so. But what I did know at the particular time was 11:23:43 that ECOWAS had taken a decision that the junta would not be in power. That had been accomplished. All of us took part in that by, you know, in making sure that they were removed. I provided bases for that. So as far as I'm concerned, the strategic interest of ECOWAS had been served and the international 11:24:06 community.

Q. Let's go back to my question because I don't believe you've answered it. The question is not whether you were aware of people providing support. The question is: If someone was providing support to the RUF/AFRC as of April 1998, they would be 11:24:23 supporting a group engaged in a campaign of atrocities against the civilian population of Sierra Leone. Do you agree?

A. Well, to an extent you could say yes, anybody that would supply would be doing it against the civilians, yes.

Q. Now, what did you do to assist ECOMOG to weaken the RUF?

11:24:46 A. Well, it was not what I had to do. Nothing. I did absolutely nothing outside of - we're not operating by me or you. What did I do? Absolutely what was within the purview of ECOWAS to work to bring peace. That's what I did; work for peace.

Q. Mr Taylor, did it occur to you that the best solution for the people of Sierra Leone would have been the defeat of the RUF and the AFRC?

A. Quite frankly, no. Personally, my views were part of a concerted view of many other individuals. My own personal view was that the return to peace and the recognition of the Kabbah government was the proper way to go. That was my personal thought.

Q. So because of that personal belief, did you refrain from doing anything that would weaken the RUF?

11:25:52 A. Well, I had nothing personal to do. Again I'm not going to get into personal, because the situation was not personal. So there was nothing - I did nothing personally. Absolutely nothing personally.

Q. Liberia was a member of ECOWAS at this time, of course?

11:26:14 A. It is, yes.

Q. And Liberia - in fact, what was your relationship to ECOMOG at that time?

A. Depending. We had - what time are you speaking about now?

Q. I'm talking about after the intervention. Just for 11:26:31 precision's sake we'll call it, say, April 1998?

A. We had a bittersweet relationship.

Q. Did you do anything to assist or to hinder ECOMOG in the fight against the RUF in Sierra Leone?

A. That's two questions, Mr Koumjian. I've answered the first 11:26:47 one. Did I do anything to assist them? Yes. Did I do anything to oppose them? No.

Q. What did you do to assist ECOMOG in the fight against the RUF?

A. We provided the use of Liberian territory, Roberts atrocity?

A. Terrible, terrible atrocity, Mr Koumjian.

Q. Did you receive reports about that occurring in Koidu by the junta forces by the RUF and the AFRC?

12:33:59 A. There were reports, yes. I did not receive them, but I got to know of these reports, yes.

Excuse, Mr President, just for the Court, you see, I am trying not to waste time. I am interpreting Mr Koumjian's question, "Did you receive as point President" ECOMOG coming to 12:34:26 mean and saying, "Mr Point President, here is what is going on". So that's what I am responding to. So when you say, "Did you receive", it is as if there is a subordinate out there bringing you specific reports. So that's what I am responding to.

Now, did I read reports of such through United Nations

12:34:48 agencies? Yes. So I don't want to be told later on: Well, you say you didn't know. That's not what I am saying. I am just saying for the Bench when you asked me, "Did you receive", that's how I am interpreting reception.

Q. So after reading these reports from the United Nations and 12:35:04 other sources, what was your opinion of the leadership of the RUF?

A. Obviously, any - and, again, these reports were by the junta and all of them. Anyone that was involved in atrocities anywhere, I would give them a very, very low score that they were 12:35:27 not acting properly.

Q. Did you believe that they were war criminals?

A. Well, I didn't get into the legal part of it, and we are talking about at this particular time, and a lot of people that - no, I did not get into that legalistic side. Never evaluated it

Leone because, like I said, after the intervention in February, they did not have total cessation of hostilities. He showed interest in what I had to say and said that one of the things on his mind - or the RUF - was the release of their leader. So I 13:02:26 said, well, fine, that is an issue that I would discuss with other colleagues in ECOWAS. But what we were interested in was making sure that we had peace and a return to the 1996 agreement that had been signed in la Cote d'Ivoire. That was my conversation with him.

13:02:45 Q. Thank you. So it was clear at that time to you that Sam Bockarie still recognised Foday Sankoh as a leader of the RUF?

A. Well, I tell you what, I can only say what he said to me; that they wanted Foday Sankoh released. That was one of the conditions he said.

13:03:07 Q. Well, in fact, the words you used were: "He showed interest in what I had to say and said that one of those things in his mind were the RUF was the release of their leader." So did you understand him to be saying that the RUF still recognised Foday Sankoh as their leader?

13:03:30 A. Well, I would say - I could say subjectively yes. I mean, he said that they wanted, you know, their leader released. That's how he put it, yes. I would say yes.

Q. Did you then try to contact Foday Sankoh in Nigeria?

A. No.

13:03:47 Q. Excuse me, because I may be misleading. He was brought - around that time he was brought to Sierra Leone. Is that correct?

A. I know he was transferred, what, about --

Q. I think it was August.

miles away. And the men are supposed to be in training camp being trained by a Monica Pearson.

Q. Now, Mr Taylor, perhaps you can help me. On line 14 on page 2020 the witness said this: "He shot and said we were coming around the State House" - this is Bockarie in conversation with Robin White - "but we were in Buedu." What do you understand by that?

A. You say he shot and said?

Q. This is Bockarie shot and said we were coming around the State House but we were in fact in Buedu. What do you understand by that?

A. These boys are playing games like cowboys. I mean Sam Bockarie is supposed to be letting maybe Robin White hear the sound of gunfire as an impression that Sam Bockarie is in the Freetown area where the fighting is going on. They are really taking the heat - they are taking this thing for fun.

Q. And the witness continues, Mr Taylor, page 2020 line 21:

"Q. Did Sam Bockarie maintain any communications with people in Freetown?

A. Yes, in Freetown.

Q. In and around Freetown?

A. He was talking to the various commanders over the Yaesu radios. He also communicated with Benjamin Yeaten and Joe Tuah over his satellite phone at night."

Then he goes on over the page, page 2021 line 11.

"Q. You mentioned that Bockarie was on the satellite phone with Benjamin Yeaten and Joe Tuah?

A. Those are the names I recall.

Q. Did you hear him talking to Benjamin Yeaten and Joe Tuah during the Freetown fighting?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know when the Freetown fighting occurred?

A. It started in January. It was on 6 January that they called from the State House saying they were in control of the State House.

Q. What year?

A. That was in 1999, sir."

Now, Mr Taylor, you understand the implication of that, don't you? That senior members of your regime were in contact with Bockarie during the Freetown invasion. Is that true or false.

A. I would say totally false, because they would have no reason to be in touch with Sam Bockarie during the Freetown invasion. None whatsoever. I would say it's false.

Q. But he continues. Page 2022:

"Q. What did Bockarie tell you? What did you hear him say to Benjamin Yeaten?

A. I heard Bockarie and Benjamin Yeaten conversing about the progressive move that RUF has made. I didn't hear any instruction from Benjamin Yeaten to Bockarie to say do this or do that at the time.

Q. During the fighting in Freetown in the January offensive did you play any part in that? What was your assignment?

A. I told you I was assigned to Segbwema, Bunumbu just in case any wounded soldier came. I will take that wounded soldier to Buedu where he could be treated at the rear. Even Mano, I made civilians to make a hammock so they can who led the troops that entered Freetown?

Q. So who was at the transmitting station with you? Who else was there on this day, 6 January?

A. I met all the operators - in fact almost all the operators by then were in the transmitting station. Like Seibatu, Tiger, Tourist. Almost all the operators were in the station on that particular day.

Q. Now, on that particular day what stations was the transmitting station in Buedu in contact with?"

15:44:03 Now, pausing there. Mr Taylor, at the time - this is back in January 1999 - were you aware of an AFRC commander called Gullit?

A. No. No.

Q. Were you aware back then that the invasion of Freetown had been led by that individual?

15:44:37 A. No, I didn't know.

Q. Let's move on. Page 21581, line 1:

"Actually, there had been some minor problems that had been existing between us and Gullit. That is, RUF and AFRC. That was Sam's concern. That was the only time that he was grumbling. Even before they entered Freetown and even when he received the message in the morning, that was when Sam was saying that. He said maybe Gullit and others would want to - maybe they would change this time around to cooperate if at all they didn't go there to seize power, they wouldn't want to be greedy and take power on their own. And Sam Bockarie assured Gullit that Rambo was very close to him on his way to join him in the city - and that Rambo was on his way to join him in the city and that time

Liberia. Momoh does not leave that part of the world until Johnny Paul Koroma is released from there in August 1999. So Momoh is up there in the bush suffering. I understand he was sick for many months. So why would I order or be in control of an operation in Freetown where the former President, who is friend of mine, would come out and I have such control that I cannot ask - or not even ask. That's the wrong word. That I cannot instruct, "Have Momoh brought to me", that he would be at least comfortable in Liberia. I have nothing to do.

16:00:26

But there is - I am not too sure about this and I don't want to jump the gun, because there is a name - there are names floating in this section here that I see a link in the lie and the construction of this lie, and I don't know if I can associate a particular name here, but I don't know the status, so I will just leave it for now.

16:00:48

Q. Well, hold on a second. Yes. Hold on a second. Now, you notice, page 21586, yes? Note the route of communication. It is Mosquito to Yeaten. Yeaten calls back and tells him there is this instruction from Mr Taylor. Do you see it? Page 21586.

16:01:35

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And Mosquito told the operator in charge - that was one Mohamed Kabbah, yes?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Remember we looked at Mohamed Kabbah yesterday?

16:01:46

A. That's what I was saying just now. I don't know the status, that's why I didn't want to mention any names.

Q. Let's just remind ourselves. Mohamed Kabbah, who we looked at yesterday, page 16173, 15 September 2008, line 7:

"Sam Bockarie communicated with Benjamin Yeaten, and he used to communicate as well as with Charles Taylor. But for the communication with Charles Taylor, that one he used a satellite phone. And the capture of Freetown, that was not even a hidden thing that he would go to a corner and discuss like he used to do. That one he did in the open place when he was trying to inform Charles Taylor that our men were in Freetown. He did that in the open because the RUF was happy. That was a joy to the RUF. They had entered Freetown."

You see that?

16:02:45 A. Yes, but that's the name I was talking about. I didn't know as to what - when I said I didn't know the status, I didn't know his status, because I remember what he had said. I didn't know his status.

Q. Right. So help us, Mr Taylor, which is right? Did 16:03:00 Mosquito speak to you directly, or did he speak to you through Benjamin Yeaten? Help us.

A. Neither of them. Neither of them. That's what makes it so confusing. I picked it up right away and said I didn't want to mention his status, because two different stories about the same 16:03:18 situation.

Q. But Mohamed Kabbah, according to this witness, is the operator in charge. He is supposed to know. So help us, what's going on here, Mr Taylor?

A. Absolutely - from what I know, there is none of this kind 16:03:35 of thing. There is no contact with Sam Bockarie. I don't speak to Sam Bockarie on the 6th and so on. So this is why I am explaining you have this radio operator saying one thing here, Mohamed Kabbah saying a different thing about the same thing and dealing with the same person. This shows you maybe it's almost like a script. Maybe they forgot their lines.

Q. And this witness - let's go back to the one we've been dealing with today.

"And Mosquito told the operator in charge, that was one Mohamed Kabbah I can recall, and on that very day he was the one on duty and he sent the massage. I was there when Mohamed Kabbah encoded the message and sent it to Gullit and others for them to send back these people to the rear for safety.

16:04:44 Q. How did you know Mosquito was speaking to Benjamin Yeaten?

A. After he called Benjamin, and I was sitting at the other extreme edge of the corner, he said, 'Is this Five-Zero?' And he said yes. He explained to him the development at the frontlines, and when he was talking to him he used to respond, 'Yes, sir.' When they were discussing, he would respond to him directly 'Yes, sir. Okay, okay, I will do that.' And when Mosquito finished, he told the operator directly that he had had instructions from Benjamin from above; that is, Charles Taylor through Benjamin" - note: Not directly - "that Benjamin had told him that the Pa had said that they should make sure that those people who had been released from Pademba Road should come to Buedu."

16:05:57 And then he confirms at line 25, page 21587:

"It was Benjamin who came back on the line - on the telephone line and called Mosquito. Benjamin called Mosquito back on the sat phone. It was Benjamin who sent the instruction to Mosquito for Mosquito to call for the people who had been released by Gullit and others from the Pademba Road Prison to send all of them to Buedu, including ex-President Missouri. He told Gullit and others to dispatch all those big names that he had mention?

16:06:44 Q. What do you mean when you say 'all those big names'?

A. Yes, all the big names. You know, like, there was one Steve Bio among them. Steve Bio, Osho-Williams - Osho-Williams, Victor Foh. You know, really I cannot recall all of the names now - all of the names of the 16:07:06 people who were released from Pademba that were named, but there were about 20 prominent people in Sierra Leone who were among the list."

Then he is asked this question at page 21588, line 20:

"Q. Then you said, 'He said that was the instruction from 16:07:38 Taylor.' Who said that?

A. It was Mosquito who said that. That was the instruction.

Q. Who did he say that to?

A. It was the operator to whom he was explaining.

16:07:55 Mosquito was now explaining to the operator about his conversation with Mr Benjamin Yeaten.

Q. Now, then you said that Mohamed Kabbah, who was the operator, sent this message to Gullit. Is that correct?

A. Yes, yes.

16:08:19 Q. Now, just in terms of timing here, what date is this that we are referring to?

A. It was around 7 January, I'm sure. It's supposed to be something like that, 7 January in the morning. That was after the Freetown invasion, the following day.

Q. Now, do you know if this message was received?
A. Yes.
Q. How do you know that?
A. Gullit and others received the message and acted on the 16:08:57 message."
Now for completeness, line 11, page 21589.
"Q. Now, I am going to ask you to just describe generally the frequency of the communications between Sam Bockarie and Gullit during the course of this Freetown operation?
16:09:30 A. I can say there was frequent communication at that time. Frequent communication was there. There was a free flow of communication.
Q. What do you mean by that?
A. That it did not take up to an hour when one of the 16:09:51 stations in Freetown did not call to Buedu directly, or Mosquito's station in Buedu did not call one of the stations in Freetown directly to get an update from there. It was constant communication that existed."
Now, I am going to leave that. Mr Taylor, late on a 16:10:22 Thursday afternoon, simple question: Did you have a hand in that orgy of violence which was the 6 January invasion of Freetown?
A. No, never did. Did not know of it. Had nothing to do with it. Absolutely nothing.
Q. Before the event, did you find - did you provide materiel
16:10:55 to either the AFRC or the RUF to facilitate that invasion?
A. No.
Q. Did you have any prior knowledge that it was to take place?
A. No prior knowledge whatsoever, no.
Q. Did you instruct, at any stage prior to 6 January, anyone

For Chambers:	Ms Doreen Kiggundu
For the Registry:	Ms Rachel Irura Mr Benedict Williams
For the Prosecution:	Ms Brenda J Hollis Mr Mohamed A Bangura Mr Christopher Santora Ms Maja Dimitrova
For the accused Charles Ghankay Taylor:	Mr Courtenay Griffiths QC Mr Morris Anyah

Q. Being radio operators, they are the eyes and ears of the organisation, and this man, this radio operator, is saying that through that role he learned that you were the hidden hand behind all of this. Now, what do you say to that allegation, Mr Taylor?
10:22:26 A. That is totally untrue. I was not the hidden hand. And that's why some of these radio operators and [indiscernible], he talked about a lot of this being in log books. From the log books presented before this Court probably it would be good to go through to see. I don't know as to whether they have all of 10:22:45 their log books to see if some of these major allegations, he said that they were recorded, he learned some from log books. I don't know if we can probably go through those log books to see if this is true.

But this is one of the problems that you have with some of 10:23:01 these kinds of situations. Here is a radio operator someplace, not knowing what's going on, Sam Bockarie goes to Liberia. Now I am telling you, and everybody else, during the period that I mediated for ECOWAS in dealing with the RUF I tell this Court if I had given Sam Bockarie rice it would have been within my right
10:23:35 to do so. In fact, I would have felt that it was a good thing to do. And there would be nothing about that to hide from this Court, that I gave Sam Bockarie rice.

That period I did not give Sam Bockarie rice. I have even testified before this Court that during the very tough period I 10:23:57 permitted RUF injured persons to take treatment in Liberia, okay. So what would be rice? Of course, non-lethal thing as rice if I give it to them why would I say I didn't?

Sam Bockarie then came to Monrovia, they did a lot of shopping. They did a lot of shopping. They came to Monrovia, Q. Hardly any communication?

A. Hardly any communication.
Q. Right. Let's go to 1999 now.
A. Yes.
14:50:45 Q. You say there's a period of quite a bit of activity leading up to Lome?
A. That is correct.
Q. Try and time that for us, please?
A. I would put that to April - mostly in the month of April of 14:51:00 1999.
Q. And does Bockarie come to Liberia in that period?
A. Bockarie does come to Liberia in that particular period, yes, he does.
Q. How many times?
14:51:12 A. Once. He comes to Liberia once while the delegates are being put together. Once.
Q. Right. So that's the fourth trip?
A. That is correct.
Q. Just to be clear, had he been to Liberia earlier in the 14:51:24 year of 1999?
A. No, not to my recollection, no. Between January and April, no. Not to my recollection, no.
Q. Right. Before I move on we're up to the fourth trip now?
A. Yes.
14:51:36 Q. I just want to pause briefly and deal with radio communications. In the aftermath of the Freetown invasion - because you remember that's the beginning of 1999, the year we're talking about?
A. That is correct.

Q. Was there a great deal of radio traffic between you and Bockarie and the RUF in that period?
A. By "you" - not personally, but there was communication. Not by me now.
14:52:01 Q. Not by you, I understand that. Was there communication between the Government of Liberia and Bockarie in that period?
A. Yes. In January of 1999 there was communication I would say immediately after the Freetown invasion and into the negotiation for the ceasefire which occurred, I would say, around 14:52:23 the middle of January. Yes, there were communications.
Q. So during that period there's communication going on?
A. Yes.
Q. But no visit?
A. No visits, no. Strictly communication.
14:52:33 Q. So then we come down to April, and there's a lot of activity and a visit by Bockarie?
A. Yes.
Q. Yes?
A. Yes.
14:52:40 Q. Then we have June, July: Lome?
A. Yes.
Q. August, Johnny Paul Koroma comes to Monrovia?
A. That is correct.
Q. Then we know Sankoh comes to Monrovia in September?
14:53:00 A. That is correct.
Q. Bockarie comes then, you tell us?
A. In September. He does come, yes.
Q. That's number five?
A. Yes.

communication with anyone outside of Sierra Leone you've discussed some conversations with Benjamin Yeaten and you also said that Sam Bockarie was in communication on a satellite phone with Charles Taylor. How do you know that?

15:08:16 A. That was not any hidden thing, particularly with regards to communication, that was not hidden to me particularly because I was in charge. Once when Sam Bockarie went to Liberia he brought a satellite phone, just like a handset that people use, that security guards use.

15:08:34 That was what he communicated with always whenever he wanted to talk to Charles Taylor. When he would want to talk to Charles Taylor he would tell like me or the operator who would be on duty to tell Sunlight because Sunlight was the one who worked at Charles Taylor's radio

15:08:51 station, the Mansion Ground."

Now, that clearly suggests, Mr Taylor, that if not you, then at least your director of the SSS, Benjamin Yeaten, had a controlling influence over the Freetown invasion. Is that true?

A. That is not true. That is not true at all. No official in 15:09:22 my government had anything to do with any invasion in Freetown. No, that's not true.

Q. Now, Mr Taylor, the witness goes on and he's quite specific that Yeaten told Bockarie to send reinforcements to Freetown when Gullit was coming under suppression. What do you know about 15:09:50 that?

A. Nothing. I doubt if Benjamin Yeaten would have had to tell an experienced person like - if the RUF was involved in an invasion of Freetown, it would take somebody from Liberia to call Sam Bockarie to say send reinforcement? Sam Bockarie as a general would know what he's supposed to do if he's involved. He would know.

Q. Now, it goes on on this same topic, page 16176 - no, I should pick it up at the bottom of page 16175:

15:10:47 "He would say, 'Tell Sunlight that I want to talk to Father', because we used to call him Father or Pa. So he would say, 'I want to talk to Pa or Father.' So Sunlight would tell Charles Taylor that Sam wants to talk to you, and he would switch on the phone and call. At that time
15:11:02 Sam Bockarie would be on the stand-by. It was not any secret. It was not hidden or that the satellite phone was not there. No, he had it. He used to hang it on his pants walking around with it. It was not hidden. And for communications it was - I would either be present or not,
15:11:20 but I will know?

Q. At the time of the Freetown invasion, how do you know he was - Sam Bockarie was in communication with a satellite phone with Charles Taylor?

A. All along communication on the VHF went all other 15:11:44 commanders, but the satellite phone communication went on directly to Charles Taylor. The night that the dialogue took place - that was at the MP headquarters in Buedu - the operator who was on duty, Tiger, Sam Bockarie told him to tell Sunlight to tell his Pa that he wanted to talk to him,
15:12:03 and that is Charles Taylor, and that very night Tiger passed a message to Sunlight. And where the satellite would receive call radios up at the MP and Sam Bockarie went into the vehicle and they went. Sam Bockarie, I said he went into his vehicle that was having the mobile radio.

Sierra Leone by the Revolutionary United Front and the deposed military junta. Our ambassador in Freetown and State Department officials have visited survivors and heard stories of entire villages being slaughtered or mutilated by rebel forces. The RUF calls its cam bane 'Operation No Living Thing'. Hundreds of people are being treat in hospitals after rebels chopped their arms, legs and/or ears with machetes. Thousands more have died before they were able to reach medical help. Many women and children have been raped. This unspeakable cruelty is a gross violation of every tenet of human rights and International Humanitarian Law.

The United States strongly condemns the rebels' horrific actions and urges rebel leadership to order an immediate end to the senseless slaughter, mutilation, and torture of the rural civilian population in Sierra Leone.

There are distressing rumours that RUF and ex-junta forces are being assisted in their campaign of terror by other governments. Although we cannot confirm these rumours, it should be clear that any government or other party which is found to be helping the rebels to prolong the tragedy in Sierra Leone will face the strongest condemnation of the United States and the international community. "

Now, first of all, the date, May, at that time, Mr Taylor, were you aware that there was this horrific campaign being waged against the civilian population in Sierra Leone?

A. May of 1998, yes, there were news reports of that, yes.

Q. Were you aware that the campaign had been given the name Operation No Living Thing?

A. No, I was not aware of any operation by the name of that,

A. Yes.
Q. -- did you plan with Bockarie the Freetown invasion?
A. Never. Never. But let's not forget even this Court - even this very court - has found that RUF was not involved in the 12:36:48 Freetown invasion. And besides, if I push you forward to that invasion I can tell you something: On the morning that that report reached to me that Freetown had been hit, the first - I mean, I was so amazed and shocked. We sought to find out what happened. And the report that got to me - the initial report 12:37:19 that got to me - was that Sam Bockarie did not know anything about it. The first report that came to me was that "Well, Sam Bockarie says he does not know anything about what is going on".
Q. Pause there. Who provided that first report?
12:37:34 A. Oh, my government. I had the minister of national security immediately contact Bockarie to find out - excuse me, "What is the hell is going on?"
Q. Pause there. Contact him how?
A. By telephone. By telephone.
12:37:50 Q. We will come back to the details of that when we get to January, but I ask again: Did you plan with Bockarie in November 1998 to invade Freetown?
A. No, I did not. I never knew about it.
Q. Did you order Bockarie to capture Kono?
12:38:15 A. Why would I? No.
Q. Why? Because, it is said, of the strategic diamond resources in Kono. Did you tell him to do that?
A. I did not tell him to do that, and I did not even know. What do I know about what strategic areas there are in Sierra Leone that contain diamonds? I know what is strategic as far as diamond goes in Liberia. I have no knowledge of the strategic nature of resources in Sierra Leone. It is not my business, and I don't want to know. So why? It is only with such a knowledge 12:38:52 that one would say "Go and take this place" or "Go and take that place". I don't know.

Q. Very well, Mr Taylor. Now, whilst we are on that topic, do you recall that we mentioned on Monday various high profile trials which were taking place in Sierra Leone during the autumn 12:39:45 of 1998?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you recall that, Mr Taylor?

A. Yes.

Q. Including the trial of Foday Sankoh?

12:39:54 A. That is correct.

Q. Who was eventually, in October, convicted of treason and sentenced to death?

A. Yes.

Q. Likewise, others put on trial by the Kabbah government --

12:40:08 A. Yes.

Q. -- had been found guilty in court-martials and likewise sentenced to death, yes?

A. Uh-huh. Uh-huh.

Q. Were those, or any of those, sentences carried out?

12:40:25 A. To the best of my knowledge, I think some of them were carried out, and one in particular I remember because I was outraged by this particular situation, and it could be that same group. There was a Victor King who was - and I am not certain which group this is, but there was a group of 24 killed and I

Q. Was he happy to adopt the role of leader?
A. Well, I'll tell you, Issa was one - he's a very careful person. I say this because in answer to your question, subsequent to this meeting when I convened a Heads of State
10:13:35 meeting in Monrovia later on in July of 2000 to try, along with my colleagues, several presidents of West Africa had convened a meeting to deal with the Sierra Leonean problem - we then posed the issue of leadership to Issa Sesay. He was a little reluctant and did not really accept unless he told us he got the permission
10:14:02 from Foday Sankoh, where both Obasanjo and Alfa Konare, Obasanjo the former President of Nigeria, and Alpha Konare, the former President of Mali that was chairman of ECOWAS that left that meeting to go to Freetown to meet Tejan Kabbah to get Foday Sankoh's approval. So if I may say, your Honours, I think he was 10:14:27 one of those reluctant leaders at the time.
Q. Did you, Charles Taylor, appoint him as leader of the RUF?
A. No, I never did. Never could have. If anyone did I would say ECOWAS did. Because at that meeting in 2000 I just mentioned that I convened a Heads of State meeting in Monrovia. At that 10:14:49 meeting were the President of The Gambia, President Yahya AJJ Jammeh.
Q. Can you help us with some spellings, please?
A. I think it's on the record. I wouldn't like to mislead the Court. I think it's on the record, please. I think these are 10:15:07 names. I will just ask for some help from the Court. Present at that meeting also was the chairman of ECOWAS, President Alpha Konare, he attended that meeting. Also present at that meeting is the late President of Togo, Gnassingbe Eyadema. Also present at that meeting was the former President of Nigeria, Obasanjo was present. I convened this meeting to discuss with them this problem that they had placed in my lap about Sierra Leone and the question came up: What do we do? Foday Sankoh is imprisoned, the July 1999 peace accord is in trouble, there's no one to talk 10:16:07 to, what do we do? So we met and at that meeting all of the Heads of State present agreed that the probable thing to do was to ask Issa Sesay to take over the leadership. Issa at that meeting said: Well, I have to go and contact my people back behind me in Sierra Leone, but even more particularly I need the 10:16:31 approval of the leader of the RUF, and so Presidents Obasanjo and Konare flew to Freetown. Tejan Kabbah brought Foday Sankoh to them. The message was delivered to Sankoh. He approved it. Obasanjo and Konare left; went to their respective countries. Issa Sesay returned to his post. Two weeks later Obasanjo and 10:17:08 Alpha Konare flew back to Liberia, and at the Roberts International Airport Issa Sesay was appointed leader of the RUF.

Q. Mr Taylor, did you ever deal in diamonds with the RUF in return for arms?

A. Never. There is not one human who believes in the truth 10:17:40 can say that I, Charles Ghankay Taylor, dealt with the RUF or anyone in the RUF taking diamonds for arms or taking diamonds for anything. None.

Q. I'll ask you very directly, Mr Taylor: Based on the evidence called by the Prosecution, and I'm speaking louder 10:18:00 because I'm told that my voice was very faint, were you regularly receiving mayonnaise jars full of diamonds from the RUF?

A. Never ever did I receive, whether it is mayonnaise or coffee or whatever jar, never receive any diamonds from the RUF. It's a lie, it's a diabolical lie. Never.

Sankoh was getting at when he talked about commit to start negotiations in good faith, or don't you know?

A. To the best of my knowledge, that was to show goodwill. To show goodwill towards the negotiations.

10:23:08 Q. Right. So are you aware of bad faith on the part of the Sierra Leone government in past peace negotiations?

A. I did not get you clear.

Q. Well, you remember I asked you questions about what was actually going on on the ground in Sierra Leone during the 10:23:39 Abidjan peace talks in 1996. Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. And you agreed that while the SLPP government was talking peace in Abidjan it was acting in bad faith in invading Zogoda. Do you remember?

10:23:58 A. Yes.

Q. Thank you. Over the page, please:

"Not later than 25 May 1999 in Lome - Togo.

4. Guarantee safe and unhindered access by humanitarian organisations to all people in need, establish safe corridors for 10:24:21 the provision of food and medical supplies to ECOMOG soldiers behind RUF lines and to RUF combatants behind ECOMOG lines."

Pausing there. It's right, isn't it, that the RUF did have a medical system - a healthcare system - in place in its own liberated zones? I think we have already dealt with that, but I

10:24:50 want to ask you: Dr Williams, was he in charge of the RUF health provision system?

A. Dr Williams? Come up again. Which Williams are you referring to?

Q. Are you aware of a Dr Williams being involved in running

5. Do not harass any civilians or take anything from them as it is against our code of conduct."

Pausing there. Foday Sankoh had always been very anxious that the RUF did not harass and harm civilians, hadn't he?

10:29:59 A. Yes.

Q. And he punished people who were caught harassing and harming civilians, didn't he?

A. Well, those that he saw, those that he heard about.

Q. Yes, thank you.

10:30:20 A. Not all. The cases that he heard about, he punished them.

Q. And indeed you told the Prosecution that in one of your many interviews, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Thank you:

10:30:36 "6. Any attempts by the enemy to infiltrate our positions as they did in 1996 is seriously liable to repel and pursue to the point of origin."

What is that reference there to 1996 and repelling people back to their point of origin?

10:31:07 A. Like in 1996 whilst the peace talks were going on in Abidjan, the government had put the Kamajors - I mean the CDF together to attack our various positions. So this time around Foday Sankoh said we shouldn't compromise. He said Mosquito and others shouldn't compromise at all, because by then he was still 10:31:29 talking to us that we should be patient. We should be patient. But this time around during the Lome Peace Accord he did stress that Mosquito and others should not compromise at all, he said, if there was any attempt from the enemy side.

Q. Because the RUF had, to use an English expression, got so many interviews it would hardly be likely you could remember any one from another, let alone journeys in between, but if we look at the first box on this page, Monday 14 August 2006, in order to review your protective measures you were paid 10,000 leones for the transport costs involved. Can you remember --

14:52:44

A. Yes.

Q. I emphasise that tell us if you can't, but can you remember going to see them somewhere three days before you were interviewed by them in Bo? Just tell us if you can't.

14:53:15

A. Well I received money from them on different occasions for transport and some other things, or sometimes lost wages, but I do not recall the dates. I do not recall the dates.

Q. Very well. The next box, Monday 6 November 2006, you get 115,000 leones for transport, lost wages and meals for going to a meeting at the Special Court with the Office of the Prosecutors. Do you recall - and it may help you if you look at the two dates below, boxes 3 and 4, of 7 and 9 November. Do you remember at the end of 2006 having a number of dealings with the Prosecution then?

14:54:08

A. I recall that I had a number of dealings with them, but the dates - I do not recall the exact date, but indeed I had different dealings with them.

Q. Thank you. Go over the page, please. Box 5, Monday 20 November, top-up card, 60,000 leones. Can you recall now how much - did you get one top-up card that was worth 60,000 leones?

14:54:37

A. Yes, I recall there was a time I got a top-up card up to 60,000 leones.

Q. And then there's a meeting on Tuesday 21 November 2006 and you're paid 35,000 leones in transport. Again, that was a meeting at the Special Court. Would I be right in assuming you don't remember that specific date?

A. Well, of course, because I received transport from the investigators on different occasions at any time I went for an interview.

Q. Yes. Well the reason I mention that one, Tuesday 21 November 2006, is you're not interviewed - according to the records we've got, you're not interviewed between 9 November 2006 and 18 January 2007 and yet you get a communications top-up card the day before, you go to a meeting with them on 21 November and your transport is paid and the box below, 13 December, for information, lost wages, transportation and meals you get 150,000 leones. Do you see that?

A. I've seen it.

Q. Can you remember now what information you were being paid for in December of 2006?

A. I have told you that I do not recall every bit of activities, but indeed at various times I received money from the investigators.

Q. Yes. And if you gave them information, is that something they would write down when you were telling them?

A. Well, information, most of the information I gave them they wrote them down. Those were some of them that you have been playing with in here.

Q. That I've been what?

PRESIDING JUDGE: I heard "playing" and I note that's what on the record.

MR MUNYARD: Very well:

Q. It's your words that I have been looking at in these to them whether I have seen the person, or not.

Q. Let us move on to box 14, curiously the same date of 9 February 2007, another top-up card for 15,000 leones, and so in two days you get 60,000 leones' worth of top-up cards. Are you 15:05:30 saying that you used all of those top-up cards on OTP business?
A. They used to give me the top-up card to use that to talk to them - the OTP - directly. That was all on OTP business.
Q. I'm not suggesting they didn't give you the - I'm not disagreeing that you were given a top-up card to communicate with 15:06:00 them and possibly other people, but it was to your advantage that they were paying your top-up cards, wasn't it?
A. Of course I had an advantage in that, because I must have used some on my personal business. That one is very common.
Q. Yes, quite. Of course. And did you think you were 15:06:23 extremely lucky that time, the day before, 8 February, to be given 130,000 just for giving them information and then between that gift and the following day getting 60,000 worth of top-up cards on top? Did you think you were doing rather well out of the Prosecution at that stage?
15:06:53 A. Well, if that is what you have said.
Q. Are you agreeing with me that you were doing rather well out of them on 8 and 9 February last year?
A. I do not call that more.
Q. Box 15, please. A week later on 16 February - and we might 15:07:20 as well go to box 16 as well - and four days after that on the 20th you get two more 30,000 top-up cards, yes? Yes?
A. I received top-up cards, but I do not recall the dates. I do not recall the dates.
Q. No, I make no criticism of you for not recalling the dates and I'm not troubled by that. I just want you to tell us this. Can you remember a time in February last year when you were on the phone an awful lot; phones paid for by the Office of the Prosecutor?

15:08:08 A. On several occasions I got top-up cards from the Prosecution at different times, that is what I'm trying to say, and I do not recall all of those times.

Q. Right. Can you remember were you just ringing the Prosecution on those occasions, or were you ringing other people 15:08:26 on behalf of the Prosecution?

A. Well, I communicated more with them. It was meant for communication with them more.

Q. All right. You weren't by any chance on the phone to Gibril Massaquoi, or CO Nya, or Colonel Isaac using these top-up 15:08:53 cards, were you?

A. No.

Q. You see, you weren't interviewed after 18 January 2007 until late April 2007 from what we can see. Over the page, box 17, 22 February 2007, 50,000 leones for medical assistance, then 15:09:31 five days later in box 18, 27 February, 67,000 leones for medication and then two days after that, 1 March 2007, box 19, 65,000 for medical treatment for you. Now, it's true that that one says "transport/lost wages". Just help us with this, if you can. In February of 2007, were you getting medical treatment as 15:10:05 well as getting medicines - medication? Were you going into a hospital, or clinic, or doctor's to get medical treatment in February of last year?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you have been able to afford that treatment had the Office of the Prosecutor not been paying for it?

A. Yes.
Q. Right, so it would have come out of your pocket had they not paid for it?
15:10:43 A. Even if they had not paid for that, I would have had some other means by which I could have paid for it.
Q. 182,000 leones' worth of medical treatment that you would have had to pay for yourself and would have paid for yourself if the Office of the Prosecutor had not kindly stepped in and met 15:11:07 the bill, is that right?
A. I had been undergoing treatment more than that even before I met them.
Q. No-one is suggesting otherwise. Box 20, please, 6 March 2007, another top-up card for 30,000. Over the page, same date, 15:11:33 same reason, same amount of money. Can you explain, just taking that one by way of example, why it is that on the same day you get two different top-up card amounts rather than just being given an amount big enough to cater for all your telephone calls? Do you go back to them saying, "I need another one now", even 15:12:00 though they've given you one that very same day? Can you recall anything like that?
A. On different occasions I received top-up cards from the Prosecution, from the investigators. I have told you that. I am not disagreeing with most of the things that are here. I'm not 15:12:23 disagreeing with them, but only that the times the events took place, or which event or on what occasions, I do not recall them, but actually I recall that I used to receive such monies from the Prosecution, or these top-ups from the investigators.
Q. Well if you're using them mainly for contact with the Prosecution, you're in contact with them an awful lot in February and March of 2007 but not interviewed by them, correct?

A. I do not recall the dates on which I was interviewed. You have asked me that question persistently and I continue to give you my response. I have told you I do not recall the dates on which I was interviewed.

Q. That is why I assisted you by pointing out that you weren't interviewed between 18 January and late April of 2007. Those were the - in that period in between you get an awful lot of top-up cards and medical treatment and you're in what appears to be very frequent communication with the Prosecution, do you agree?

A. I had frequent communication with the Prosecution, of course, but the dates you are insisting on are what I do not recall.

Q. No, no-one is expecting you to. I've got the records and that's why I'm telling you those dates. So don't worry, no-one is criticising you for not remembering the dates.

A. Okay.

Q. Box 22, Saturday 17 March - St Patrick's Day - 2007, another top-up card for 30,000 leones. Box 23, three days later, "Medical/communication", another top-up card and medical treatment paid for you 110,000 leones. Pausing at that one, you must have been very pleased to be able to get all this money for your medical treatment from the Office of the Prosecutor, correct?

A. Well I appreciated because, if I was sick and somebody saw that indeed this man is sick and indeed he deserved such an assistance and someone came to me to help me with my medical treatment, I should appreciate that.

Q. And is all the medical treatment in connection with your arm that was injured in the accident?
A. Yes.
15:15:13 Q. Thank you. 22 March, box 24, "Transport", 35,000 leones. Can you remember in the early part of last year having to spend money on transport even though it appears on the face of it you weren't interviewed at that time because you're not interviewed until 24 April? Can you remember anything like that? Do say if 15:15:42 you can't.
A. Well it was once that I recall that I went to Freetown, when they invited me to go to Freetown, and when I went they said the person who was supposed to interview me was not in Freetown. So at that time I returned to Bo, but that was just once.
15:16:02 Q. Right, that's fine. And would it cost 35,000 to go to Freetown and back again to Bo, or would it cost more than that?
A. Well, that particular trip I recall that there was a team in the provinces in Bo and it was that team that facilitated my movement to go to Freetown.
15:16:30 Q. All right. Over the page to box 25 - and there must, I suspect, be a mistake here - Tuesday 10 April 2007, "Meeting with the OTP: Lost wages", 10 leones. There's obviously a zero been missed off there. It looks as though it's 10,000 leones. Would that be about right, that you might have lost 10,000 leones in 15:17:00 wages on a particular day when you went to meet the OTP, but not for an interview because you're not interviewed on that date according to our documents?
A. Well I do not recall the date, but I had so many meetings with the OTP really.

Q. Now, boxes 26, 27 and 28 are all to do with getting you a passport and a birth certificate: passport photographs, affidavit for the birth certificate and birth certificate itself. Was this because you believed that you were likely to be 15:17:37 travelling quite soon to The Hague, April last year?
A. That was the time they said it was likely --
Q. Thank you.
A. -- only if the lawyers saw that my statement or my testimony was relevant.
15:18:00 Q. Yes, all right. Over the page, please. Box 29, 4 May 2007, another top-up card, and then on to box 30, 25 May 2007, "Witness hospitalisation and follow up medical care". Now, that's 425,000 leones. Were you in for some kind of operation then? I don't need you to go into any personal details, but I
15:18:34 just would like to know - that's a sizable amount of money and it suggests that you were actually in hospital.
A. Yes, I was admitted and I went through an X-ray, some other laboratory tests, admission fees. Everything is in there. Medicines, everything.
15:19:06 Q. And would you have been able to find that amount of money yourself had the Prosecution not kindly met the bill for you?
A. I would have got some other ways. Even if they had not done that, I would have got some other way.
Q. Do you mean you would have to had to borrow it from 15:19:30 someone?
A. It's not a matter of borrowing from someone. That apart, I had my own means by which I would move around to sustain myself and to meet my immediate needs.
Q. Next box, box 31, 11 June 2007, you have a meeting with the Office of the Prosecutor and you get paid 65,000 for lost wages, but again this is nowhere near the time of the next interview which is 30 July 2007. This is 11 June. Can you remember did you give the Prosecution information every time you met with them?

15:20:19

A. I gave the Prosecution information so many times, so many times.

Q. And as you've told us they usually wrote down what you were telling them, yes? If you lost wages of 65,000 leones on that date, does that suggest that you spent most of the day with them? I'm not expecting you to remember the specific date, but would a loss of wages of 65,000 suggest that you spent a good part of the working day with the Prosecution?

15:20:40

A. There were times that I spent more than one day with them, in fact.

15:21:09

Q. We know that. I'm asking you to try and work out from the figure that you were given for lost wages does that suggest to you that about 18 months ago, when you met with the Prosecution, that you probably met with them for a good part of the day? Just think about it for a moment and let us know your answer.

15:21:31

A. I do not recall this particular incident that you are talking about.

Q. No, Mr Fornie, I'm not asking you to try and remember the particular incident. Just listen to me carefully. If you have been paid by the Prosecution 65,000 leones for lost wages, does that suggest to you in your mind that you probably spent quite a lot of time with them on that day? We're not worrying about which day it was, but the day for which you were paid that amount of lost wages?

A. Well, that is what I am telling you. I have told you that on different days and at different times they used to hold on me sometimes for the whole day. On different occasions they used to hold on me.

15:22:23 Q. Right. We don't, of course, have any record of interview on or around 11 June 2007. Tuesday 3 July, box 32, another top-up card. Box 33, 4 July, 176,000 in medical expenses. We're now - if my rough calculations are right we're now in the region of 700,000-odd in medical expenses paid for you by the 15:23:03 Prosecution, aren't we, roughly? I emphasise that it is a rough figure. In fact it might be more than that, but do you agree that by July of last year you'd been paid easily 700,000 leones for medical expenses by the Prosecution?

A. Do you mean a bulk 700,000 leones?

15:23:36 Q. No, I mean in total. They have paid medical bills for you amounting to 700,000-odd. If I do the mathematics I might turn out to be making a conservative estimate, but we'll work on 700,000-odd. Do you agree?

A. When if you calculate them on different phases, maybe it 15:23:59 would go up to that amount on different occasions.

Q. All right. Box 34, 19 July, 80,000 for transport and meal costs - meal and transportation costs to the SCSL. Presumably another meeting with them to give information, is that correct, although nobody is expecting you to remember the date itself?

15:24:24 Would you agree that you wouldn't have got both meals and transportation costs if you hadn't been going to see them to give them information, would you?

A. I did not understand your question.

Q. I don't want to spend long on it. Look at box 34.

anything else you told them on 24 or 25 or 28 September in prepping. Move on, box 44.

A. Well --

Q. Sorry, I didn't mean to stop you.

15:33:43 A. Well, I recall the time I took those interview notes. I recall that I was purposefully in Freetown to take those cassettes along. I was logging cassettes at that time.

Q. Right. There's nothing at all about logging cassettes in any notes that we have got relating to 24, 25 or 28 September 15:34:17 last year. Let's move on. Box 44 is another 30,000 top-up card, 17 October, and then 1 November last year, "Housing assistance/one year's rent: Relocation", 480,000 leones. Now I don't want to know where you were relocated to, but I just want to understand this. Were the Prosecution paying you in November 15:34:44 last year for the next year's rent? In other words, did they give you the money to pay for the future year's rent? I ask this question for a reason.

A. It was for one year.

Q. Yes, we know that. Was it the year following the day that 15:35:07 they gave it you, or was it a year's worth of rent that you'd already paid for the previous year? Do you see the point that I'm making?

A. It was for a year. It was for this one year that I received money from the Prosecution for rent that I recall.

15:35:34 PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, Mr Witness, but the question is it paid in advance, or paid in arrears?

THE WITNESS: Well, it was not in arrears.

MR MUNYARD: Right, thank you:

Q. So it's to cover November 2007 to November 2008, yes?

A. Yes.
Q. Who had been paying your rent from November 2006 to November 2007?
A. I was paying.
15:36:08 Q. You were paying, right. Now, I don't want to spend any more time than is necessary on the next few boxes. It's top-up cards in November 2006. On 6 November when you get a top-up card you also get transport and lost wages for going to the Special Court, although no notes of interview around 6 November. The 15:36:46 next interview actually is 15 November of last year. We go over the page to 22 November, "Assistance to investigations", 135,000 leones for transport. Can you remember what that was about? Just about a year ago "Assistance to investigations" for which you were paid 135,000?
15:37:18 A. Well, I recall that I had different assistance in terms of investigations.
Q. I'm afraid that doesn't help us at all as to what it was that you assisted them with as a result of which you were paid 135,000 leones.
15:37:51 A. Well I have told you that most of these monies you're talking about, even like in the case of this money I would not disagree with it on the different times. I cannot actually tell you that it was at this time or that time that I received it, but I do not disagree with the fact that I received this money - this 15:38:13 type of money.
Q. We understand that. I was just wondering if you could remember now roughly a year ago why it was you were paid on 22 November 135,000 leones for "Assistance to investigations" and two boxes down on 28 November two days later 375,000 for "Communication/lost wages/transport Assistance to Investigations"? Do you have any recollection of what it was that was involved in that? I make it quite clear that you were interviewed on 26 November 2007.

15:38:58 A. Well, on different occasions I have told you that I gave help to Prosecution. I helped the Prosecution. I gave them map on locations regarding call signs during various years, those things, and I recall that I gave them different other assistance. We drew the Sierra Leone map, I showed them different locations

15:39:26 where radio stations where - where they were, when and at what time within Sierra Leone - and I spent sometimes two days or three days on those things. From there the other time they called me again to go for some verification, so --

Q. And they - sorry, I didn't mean to interrupt you. And they 15:39:48 presumably wrote down where you were showing them on these occasions when you were showing them where radio stations were and so on? They'd have to make a note of it, wouldn't they, otherwise they might forget because it wasn't them who had identified them, it was you, do you agree?

15:40:09 A. Well, that is not my own side of it.

Q. And so we'd expect to see a note, "Mr Fornie took us out to this place and that place and identified this radio station and that radio station", wouldn't we?

A. Well, I have told you that it is not my own side of it to 15:40:33 answer to that question.

Q. Well all I can say, Mr Fornie, is we have had no such disclosure of you going round and showing them locations. I'm not disputing that you did. One thing I should make clear is that where it says on 28 November "Communications", it clearly can't refer to the provision of a mobile phone because if you look at the previous box only six days earlier you're paid or you're given a replacement phone worth 120,000 leones. Do you agree that you were given --

15:41:15 A. No --

Q. No, do you agree that you were given a replacement phone about a year ago?

A. Yes, I agree with that, that they gave me a replacement phone, but in the case of the radio stations I did not tell you 15:41:30 that they took me right round. I was seated in an office space. I was seated in a specific place and I indicated all those places to them on the map. We did not move from one place to another.

Q. Ah, very well. I misunderstood. So we could expect to see a reference to all the various radio stations on a map recorded 15:41:52 around late November last year, yes?

A. Well, that is not my own side of the question please.

Q. I'm going to skip over any more top-up cards. We move over the page to boxes 53 to 56. At 54 there's another "Assistance to investigations", 34,000, more top-up cards and more payments for 15:42:23 lost wages and meals. The last page of this tab, which only takes us up to 28 August, two more top-up cards and some meals en route to the Special Court. Then I'd like you, please, to turn over to the last tab. Now, this is a memo - this is a document from another organisation that's been either paying you money or 15:42:59 spending money on your behalf from the Special Court. This is from the Witness and Victims Section?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, Mr Witness, you have your hand up.

THE WITNESS: Yes, my Lord. Can I please use the restroom?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Please assist the witness.

please. This, as I've said, is a document from another department of the Court called the Witness and Victims Section with whom you're very familiar, aren't you?

A. Yes.

15:49:29 Q. They've been looking after you since 6 November 2006, haven't they?

A. Yes.

Q. And we have a document here from them telling us how much they've spent on you up to 4 November this year, that's to say 15:49:50 the day before you came to The Hague, and you see where there are two numbered paragraphs 1 and 2? Can you see that section in the middle of the page?

A. Yes.

Q. They've paid you something called witness attendance

15:50:10 allowance of 2,154,000 leones - we may come back to that - transportation of 1,720,000 leones and then for medical just short of 700,000 leones. So as well as getting 700,000-odd, if my maths are correct, from the Prosecution since some time in 2006, you've also got much the same amount from the Witness and 15:50:51 Victims Section, haven't you?

A. Well, WVS had taken care of me on different occasions. I do not know the exact amount of money, because I do not know how they spent the money. I would just go for the treatment and then after all I did not know how they did the disbursement, but I am 15:51:20 sure that they had been taking care of me - of my health.

Q. Yes, well we have got the exact amount of money from them, or at least this is what they're saying they've spent on you, 695,000 leones for medical expenses. So you've had the better part of one and a half million leones spent on you by the Prosecution and the Witness and Victims Section in the past two years, do you agree?

A. Well, it is around that. It could be around that.

Q. Yes. All money that you would have had to have found out of your own pocket otherwise, do you agree?

A. Say again.

Q. You would have had to have found that money out of your own pocket, or gone without the medical treatment, if it hadn't been for these two departments of the Court paying for it. Do you agree?

A. Well, I would have still had other means to foot my medical bills. I had been spending more than this on my arms. I have been spending more than eight to ten millions, so this is just a very small amount of money in respect of this. I actually appreciate it so much, but making a comparison to say I wouldn't have been able to get 695,000 leones for my medical, that is not it.

Q. No, I'm not saying you wouldn't have been able to get it. I'm saying you would have had to spend it, or go without the treatment, had they not paid. That's all I'm saying and I think that you're agreeing. Next category, please. Look at the word below "Medical". What does that read?

A. Are you asking me?

Q. I am.

A. I see "Accommodation" under "Medical".

Q. Yes, and how much have Witness and Victims Section spent on your accommodation according to this letter from them?

A. Well, I don't know.

Q. Look across the page to the figures column.

A. It's 345,000 leones that is there.
Q. Yes. When did they spend that on you?
A. Well I don't know exactly, because since the time WVS starting dealing with me -- 15:54:08 Q. Yes. Well have they spent that money on you this year, over the last 12 months?
A. I said I do not know the exact time that this amount of money was spent on me.
Q. Well we want you to help us with it, because you're the 15:54:26 only person who can tell us what this 345,000 leones' worth of accommodation costs relate to?
A. Well, when WVS pays they did not come and tell me that, "This is what we're spending on your behalf. This is the amount". They would only spend and they were the ones who wrote 15:54:57 it. I do not know when exactly the time frame when all of these disbursements or this calculation was done.
Q. But we saw when we looked at the previous document that following your relocation in November last year you were paid 480,000 leones, or payment to that amount was made on your 15:55:24 behalf, for a year's rent following your relocation.
A. Well --
Q. Hold on a minute. Hold on a minute. Now it follows, therefore, that you were given that money by the Prosecution because you'd had to relocate. What money was paid by somebody 15:55:48 else, either to you or on your behalf, for accommodation in the sum of 345,000 leones? What does that relate to?
A. Like that money that is over there, I don't know if it's the same amount of money that reflects here. I don't know if it's the same amount of money that reflects here, but it was only once that I recall I received money for accommodation really. So - but I don't know, but I know that I have been with the WVS for a long period of time and I'm conscious that they were footing bills on my behalf.

15:56:32 Q. Right. So let us assume in your favour that on 1 November, when the Prosecution handed out or paid on your behalf 480,000 for a year's rent, that the 345 relates to the previous year's rent before you were relocated. Do you think that might be what the WVS paid for?

15:57:01 A. No.

Q. There's no particular reason why an organ of the Court such as the WVS would just be paying your rent prior to relocation, is there?

A. Well, I don't know about the organs that you are talking 15:57:24 about.

Q. What rent was being paid on your behalf by any department of the Court? We know a year's rent in advance last November - sorry, November of last year. Was anybody paying your rent before that?

15:57:49 A. No, that is the rent that I recall that they told WVS about. The Prosecution told WVS about it and they were the ones who footed that bill. Yes, the Prosecution told them.

Q. Right, let us move on. "Miscellaneous", under "Accommodation", 1,548,850 leones. Now "Miscellaneous, that sum 15:58:18 at the bottom, and "Witness Attendance Allowance" at the top, 2,154,000, we have no idea what those payments are for. Do you have any idea what those payments are for?

A. Well, I have told you that I recall on different occasions I received monies in bits and so I wouldn't tell if those - they have calculated everything together and put it here. The only thing I know is that I received monies that have been analysed on the paper.

Q. And you have received in total 3.9 million from the Prosecution over just over two years and nearly 6.5 million from Witness and Victims Section over two years. That is over 10 million leones in just over two years, including what appears to be two lots of rent for the same - on the face of it the same period of time. Are you able to help us at all with what else was paid apart from rent and transportation and medical costs; what these other millions were spent on?

A. I have told you that the WVS, like the time I used to go there, most times they footed my bill. When I went the Prosecution would sometimes just tell them, "Oh, give this man some amount", and they would always try and track how many days I would be there for, I would stay there for, even in the case of transport, so I don't know whether all of those things are what they have calculated that they have it here. So I do not actually understand what you are trying to talk about. Which one actually are you talking about here?

Q. What I'm trying to talk about is that you've made an awful lot of money out of cooperating with the Prosecution in this case, haven't you?

A. Well I made money, but it's not a lot of money as you are trying to express it. I received monies, they used to give me monies in bits, but it's not too much of money as you are trying to express it.

Q. 1,588,000 leones' worth of medical expenses you no longer had to pay for yourself; a sum in the region - a sum for rent in discuss with him.

Q. Right. They didn't show you any photographs of where they stayed?
A. I do not recall. I did not see.
13:22:28 Q. Did no-one ever show you a photograph of a nice hotel with a swimming pool that they stayed in when they were in Burkina Faso?
A. I have told you I do not recall that.
Q. All right. But you had a conversation with Sam Bockarie at 13:22:43 least when they came back and he told you what they had done, did he, while they were in Burkina Faso?
A. Sam Bockarie told me about what they went for, that is the ammunition they went to collect and they brought it. He told me about that.
13:23:08 Q. Yes. Can I just be clear about one thing before we go into a bit more detail. When you got to Monrovia before they ever go off to Burkina Faso, is that where they were expecting to go?
A. Well, when we initially moved from Buedu that was actually not the plan that we had, or let me say that was not the plan 13:23:39 that Mosquito had, because initially - in fact two days before we left he told me that I should prepare that I was going to travel with him to go to Monrovia. He said I was going to accompany him to Monrovia and he said he will leave me in Monrovia and he would travel to Libya to receive ammunition, but when we arrived in 13:24:02 Monrovia, that was when I understood - that was the time he told me that, "Oh, Daf, we have decided to divert the trip to Burkina Faso".
Q. Yes. And so once you got to Monrovia there was no more talk of Libya, was there?

A. Well, that is what I have told you. I said it was Burkina Faso. He initially spoke about Libya and what he said about Libya was that he said the Libyan trip had been cancelled. He said then they were now going to stop in Burkina.

13:24:39 Q. Right. Can you remember telling the Prosecution at any time that Sam Bockarie and others on this particular occasion went to Libya to get arms and ammunition?

A. I do not recall that.

Q. Are you sure you were on that trip to Monrovia when 13:25:17 Sam Bockarie and others went to a foreign country, a country other than Sierra Leone or Liberia?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it something --

A. I was the only operator who went with him.

13:25:34 Q. Well, even on your account he only calls you three times, doesn't he, during the time they are away in Ouagadougou?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Was it two or three, Mr Munyard?

MR MUNYARD: Maybe it is only two.

MR SANTORA: It was three. It was three in direct and --

13:25:54 THE WITNESS: I think --

MR MUNYARD: If Mr Santora and I agree then I think that is a pretty good indication that what I put was correct.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Indeed.

MR MUNYARD:

13:26:07 Q. He only calls you three times. Are you sure you weren't back in Buedu getting those calls?

A. No, because when I was in Buedu I did not have access to telephone in fact.

Q. Well, he could have called you on the radio, couldn't he; message that Tiger monitored, which I read. Then later Superman and SAJ were there in the town.

Q. I see, all right. Who was the commander in Colonel Eddie Town when it was first seized?
13:11:14 A. Initially I said here that I don't recall the commander who led.
Q. Right. Are you able to help us with when it was that SAJ Musa goes to Colonel Eddie Town with Superman?
A. The time that they were there was around '98 - 1998.
13:11:46 Q. Well, we know that. We are talking about 1998. When in 1998 did SAJ Musa and Superman go to Colonel Eddie Town?
A. It was late 1998; I don't recall the exact month.
Q. Well try to give us a bit more precision than that, if you can?
13:12:16 A. There are too many events that occurred. I cannot recall every little bit of event that occurred. I cannot be that precise. Don't push me to lie before this Court that such an incident happened on this date. I don't want to create a false impression, please.
13:12:37 PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, if you don't know you should just say so.
THE WITNESS: I don't know.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Very well. Please proceed, Mr Munyard.
MR MUNYARD:
13:12:46 Q. Now, when SAJ Musa was in Colonel Eddie Town, he made plain his disenchantment with the RUF, didn't he?
A. Apart from Colonel Eddie Town; SAJ Musa's problem with the RUF, he had made it clear ever since.
Q. Yes, and he stressed that it was vital that his troops -

Q. And although he was killed in Benguema, the objective - his objective and that of the SLA was that they would be the ones who took Freetown not the RUF as a body, do you agree?
A. Yes.
13:15:57 Q. Now, do you remember hearing Sam Bockarie at some point on the BBC revealing the position of the AFRC, the SLA troops as they were approaching Freetown, and claiming that these were actually RUF troops?
A. Please make it clearer.
13:16:35 Q. I will put it in this way: Do you recall hearing on the BBC an interview with Sam Bockarie in which he revealed the position of the fighting forces, but said that it was RUF troops who were there approaching Freetown? And when I say said it was RUF troops I mean said wrongly that it was RUF troops. Did you 13:17:03 hear him say that on the BBC?
A. I recall in different broadcasts when Mosquito commented about the attack on Freetown on the BBC and other radio stations and he directly claimed that the RUF and the AFRC were the ones which entered Freetown.
13:17:33 Q. No, Mr Fornie, I am talking about a time before SAJ Musa is killed at Benguema, but when his troops are close to Freetown. Do you remember - indeed did you record - Sam Bockarie being interviewed by the BBC in which he said it was RUF troops and gave away the location of those troops advancing on Freetown?
13:18:00 Did you either hear that or record it?
A. Well, I used to record many broadcasts. In fact, at that time I used to record almost regularly so I don't recall now if that particular broadcast was recorded by me.
Q. Let me try and jog your memory.

the 6 January invasion of Freetown, and you said you went approximately you thought early December and you went with Mosquito, Rashid, Pa Rogers and Eddie Kanneh amongst the crew that went on this trip. Do you recall starting to tell the Court about that yesterday?

09:57:43

A. Yes.

Q. I'd like you to go ahead now and slowly - I'm going to ask you to slowly describe this trip for the Court. Again I'm going to emphasise to you that you take your time when you explain this, okay?

09:57:59

A. Yes. I do recall sometime in early December myself, Sam Bockarie, the late SYB Rogers who was the People's War Council chairman, Rashid, Eddie Kanneh, among others, among other people, those of us who travelled to Monrovia. The trip that we made to Monrovia was to escort Sam Bockarie because he, Sam Bockarie, was supposed to travel to Libya, initially what he told us. He, Sam Bockarie, what he told us, he said according to the discussion he had had with Benjamin that he was to go and receive some materials, I mean ammunition. But when we arrived in Liberia the course changed and that particular movement was diverted to Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso. Sam Bockarie, Eddie Kanneh and Pa Rogers went to Burkina Faso, to the best of my knowledge.

09:59:25

Q. I'm just going to intervene one moment, Mr Witness. You said that initially you were told by Sam Bockarie that he was supposed to travel to Libya, that he had had a discussion with Benjamin and that he was going to receive some materials and he was supposed to travel to Libya. Is that correct?

10:00:04

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you learn this? Where were you when you learned this from Sam Bockarie?

A. It was in Buedu. I was in Buedu right behind Sam Bockarie's house where his satellite phone was installed, where he used to install his satellite phone, and I met him there. He 10:00:52 was sitting by his phone together with some of his bodyguards who were around him and some other people.
Q. Now you said then that when we arrived in Liberia the course changed and that particular movement was diverted to Ouagadougou. What do you mean when you say when you arrived in 10:01:13 Liberia the course changed?
A. Well, instead of Sam Bockarie going to Libya he said the Papay had told him that the ammunition had been brought to Burkina Faso, so he was now to go and receive the ammunition from Burkina Faso.
10:01:41 Q. When you say in this context the Papay, who are you referring to?
A. CIC Taylor.
Q. And just describe sequentially what happened. You said that when you arrived the course changed but then you said, of 10:02:09 Sam Bockarie, "He said the Papay had told him that the ammunition had been brought to Burkina Faso." Do you know when this happened?
A. Well, it was in December. December 19 --
Q. Let me rephrase the question. Do you know when the Papay
10:02:29 told Sam Bockarie that the ammunition had been brought to Burkina Faso? When did it happen in terms of the course of your trip?
A. It was only after we had reached in Monrovia. That was when I knew about that, that everything -- Q. How did you learn about that?

where more specifically?
A. Well, I did not see where they were. I just saw them and --
THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can the witness repeat this.
10:21:22
PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, the interpreter is not able to keep up with you. Please speak slowly and just pick up where you said, "I saw them". Continue from there.
THE WITNESS: Myself, Sam Bockarie and others met the 10:21:47 trucks while we were going on the road. That is at the outskirts of Monrovia towards Kakata. Then while we were going, while we were in the vehicle, Sam and others were discussing, and even before that at the time we were moving that was the time Sam Bockarie told me that the trucks were loaded at RIA. That is 10:22:21 before we took off from Benjamin's house. I asked him, I said, "Master, where is the material that you went for?", and he said, "They are on the way. They were loaded from the airport". That was what he explained to me, that the trucks were loaded at the Roberts International Airfield, and we continued our journey.
10:22:47
MR SANTORA:
Q. Now you said you met them with these two trucks, so is it correct that you had four vehicles total? Is that correct? Two vehicles that you left with and then two trucks?
A. Yes.
10:23:02 Q. Now you went then - where did you go after you met up with the trucks?
A. It was in Buedu. We went to Buedu directly.
Q. Did Sam Bockarie discuss anything else? Well, first of all where exactly were you within this convoy? Who were you with?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Have we actually determined that they went in convoy? For all I know, their jeep could have passed the trucks.

MR SANTORA: Okay:

10:23:33 Q. How did you proceed from - from the moment when you met up with the trucks, how did you proceed to Buedu?

A. I have said it. I said all of us went together. We went in a convoy. All of us went together.

Q. Where were you within this convoy?

10:23:51 A. Initially from the house at Benjamin Yeaten's I was in the same vehicle as Sam Bockarie, but when we got to where the trucks were I transferred into one of the other vehicles and Zigzag Marzah transferred to Sam Bockarie and they were all in the same vehicle and we continued the journey.

10:24:26 Q. Now during the course of your journey from Benjamin Yeaten's house to meet the trucks, did Sam Bockarie discuss anything else?

A. You know, I cannot remember everything that we discussed, but one important thing that we discussed in the vehicle was

10:24:50 about the ammunition that he had gone for that all of us were expecting. That is what I asked him about. I said, "Master" - that is Mosquito. That was another name that we referred to him casually, "Master". And he told me - he, Mosquito, told me - that the ammunition was on the way. They had loaded them at the 10:25:12 Roberts International Airport.

Q. Okay. Now, what happened when you arrived back in Buedu?

A. When we arrived in Buedu, the commanders that Mosquito had sent a message for we arrived together with some of them almost at the same time. Issa came - no, Issa came after Mosquito had information, he had information already at hand. Actually there had been some minor problems that had been existing between us and Gullit, that is RUF and the AFRC. That was Sam's concern. That was the only time that he was grumbling. Even before they entered Freetown and even when he received the message in the morning, that was when Sam was saying that. He said maybe Gullit and others would want to - maybe they would change this time around to cooperate if at all they didn't go there to seize power, they wouldn't want to be greedy and take power on their own.

And Sam Bockarie assured Gullit that Rambo was very close to him on his way to join him in the city and that Rambo was on his way to join him in the city and at that time late Rambo and others were around the Masiaka area, going towards Freetown.

Q. On that broadcast there was an individual named TAB Yaya, former PLO-2. Do you know who that is?

A. No, I don't know him in person and I don't know much about him.

Q. Now, there is a reference to Pademba Road prisoners. What do you know about Pademba Road prisoners during the 6 January invasion?

A. After Gullit and others had captured Freetown, it was the following morning that he sent a message and it was King Perry who transmitted the message that they had released many people from the prisons and that they had released many of the political detainees who were held prisoners, together with some other people. But when they got to Pademba Road they could not see Pa Sankoh, but that they were able to release some other people but they did not see Pa Sankoh. The message was sent to Mosquito.

After Mosquito received the message he told Five-Zero, I mean Benjamin, that the men had entered the city but they could not see the Pa, I mean Pa Sankoh, and that they did not know where Pa Sankoh had been taken to. Among the people who were 12:16:24 released were like the late ex-President Momoh, Victor Foh and others among other renown Sierra Leone politicians who were in the prisons.

And Mosquito informed Benjamin about the people who had been released and he also informed him that they could not see Pa 12:17:00 Sankoh in the prisons and he requested for more ammunition so that they will be able to defend the city. He was asking Benjamin to send ammunition for us.

Q. Now, you said that Gullit sent a message through King Perry to Sam Bockarie - sent to Mosquito - about the prisoners from 12:17:32 Pademba Road. Is that correct?

A. Through King Perry. I mean that King Perry was the one who transmitted the message as a radio operator.

Q. Then you said that after Mosquito received the message he told Five-Zero, meaning Benjamin, that the men had entered the 12:17:54 city but they couldn't see the Pa, meaning Pa Sankoh. About how much time transpired between the time Bockarie received the message from Gullit through King Perry to the time he contacted Benjamin? How much time transpired between?

A. It was that very morning just when Sam Bockarie got the 12:18:20 message, because at that time, while the 6 January operation was going on, we moved a bit from Sam Bockarie's house. We were no longer seated at Sam Bockarie's house where we used to sit, opposite that house. We went down towards Dawa Road. There was a barri, an old barri, where we used to sit because of air raid because there was frequently air raid by the Alpha Jet. The Alpha Jet used to raid Buedu and other areas.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, did you listen to the question? The question was about time.

12:19:08 MR SANTORA:

Q. Again I will ask you to further describe things as necessary, but just this question here, I am just asking you the time that passed - the time that elapsed from the moment Mosquito received the message from Gullit through King Perry to the time 12:19:26 he contacted Benjamin. You said, "It was that very morning just when Sam Bockarie got the message because at that time" and then you started talking about something else. How much time transpired?

A. It was not up to one hour. It was not up to one hour.

12:19:48 Q. And how in this particular instance did Sam Bockarie make contact with Benjamin?

A. It was through the sat phone.

Q. How do you know that?

A. All of us were sitting together in the barri where we 12:20:10 operated in the radio room.

Q. And you have described what he said - some of the things he had said to Benjamin. How do you know some of the things that he said?

A. He was sitting in the chair that was not far. If you can 12:20:29 allow me I can estimate the size of the barri. It's like from where I am sitting here to the exit at the back of the Prosecution lawyers. That was the size of the barri where he was sitting. The sat phone was - the sat phone was at one edge, one corner of the barri. And we were, that is the radio set was in the other corner of the barri.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Counsel has seen the witness's indication. Mr Munyard, have you seen the witness indicate from where he is sitting to the door behind Mr Koumjian?

12:21:12 MR MUNYARD: I didn't, but I heard him say it so I am quite happy with that.

MR SANTORA: If we can stipulate a distance, that's fine. I just don't know if we have measured this before. I would be happy to stipulate an estimate.

12:21:27 PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, can you estimate the distance you have just referred to?

THE WITNESS: Estimate by what means? What do you mean? I don't think I have any professional means to estimate that besides the approximation that I have made, the visual example 12:21:45 that I have set.

MR SANTORA: It could either stand on the record or we could ask for a stipulation of perhaps 20 metres.

PRESIDING JUDGE: I don't think so.

MR MUNYARD: Can I, who also has no sense of distance - can

12:22:06 I make a suggestion that at some point somebody probably from Court staff using the tape measure just measures the distances between the witness box and various points in the courtroom so that we will have an accurate record for the future of what these distances are and that will save - apart from anything else it

12:22:27 will save the Court staff wandering up and down with the tape measure every time it is done. Then we can use it as a template for the future.

PRESIDING JUDGE: We will implement that, Mr Munyard, but in the meantime --

JUDGE LUSSICK: In the meantime, Mr Santora, for what it's worth I would estimate the distance to be about ten metres, but I would also point out that it's not very helpful evidence of how big that barri was because theoretically it may be ten metres in 12:23:00 that direction and it might be 50 metres wide. We just don't know, so really that particular distance from the witness to the door doesn't tell us anything about the size of the barri. It just tells us perhaps the width or the length of the barri.

MR SANTORA:

12:23:20 Q. Can you just describe the barri that you're referring to, describe it in terms of the dimensions?

A. The barri is in a square form, almost the same length and width. The length and the width are almost the same, like the distance I gave to you.

12:23:43 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: If I understood the evidence properly, the witness is estimating the distance between where he was sitting at the radio --

THE WITNESS: I am sitting here.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: -- and where the satellite phone was on 12:23:54 which Bockarie was speaking in order for us to understand how he heard the conversation on the sat phone. That's what he is trying to do, I think.

MR SANTORA:

Q. How far away were you from where Sam Bockarie was using the 12:24:11 satellite phone?

A. I was sitting near the radio and he was using the satellite phone. Like after where the last chair is, at the back of the last chair at the edge of this hall. Like where I am sitting now, that is where I was and he was sitting on the other end like at the back of the last chair at the end of this hall.

Q. You mean the empty chair at the back?
A. Yes, yes, the empty chair at the back. And how I knew also was after he had spoken to Benjamin they spoke for some time.
12:25:01 After some time Benjamin came back to Mosquito and called him on the sat phone and he gave him instructions to make sure that he told Gullit and others to dispatch all those big names that he had mentioned, to call for them to be with him in Buedu at the headquarters, that they should not be at the front line. He said
12:25:29 that was the instructions from Mr Taylor. And Mosquito told the operator in charge - that was one Mohamed Kabbah, I can recall, and on that very day he was the one on duty and he sent the message. I was there when Mohamed Kabbah encoded the message and sent it to Gullit and others for them to send back those people 12:25:56 to the rear for safety.
Q. Mr Witness, before I go on - and this goes with Mr Munyard's suggestion - that dimension will be - at some future moment there will be given a distance to the dimension, but for the record he pointed from his seat to the empty seat in the back 12:26:11 corner of the Prosecution side of the courtroom.
MR MUNYARD: Just to be completely accurate he said, "The back of the chair at the rear of the courtroom".
MR SANTORA:
Q. Mr Witness, just to be - you said that - first of all, how 12:26:32 did you know he was speaking to Benjamin Yeaten? How did you know Mosquito was speaking to Benjamin Yeaten?
A. After he called Benjamin and I was sitting at the other extreme edge of the corner, he asked, "Is this Five-Zero?", and he said, "Yes". He explained to him the development at the front lines and when he was talking to him he used to respond, "Yes, sir". When they were discussing, he would respond to him directly, "Yes, sir. Okay, okay, I will do that". And when Mosquito finished he told the operator directly that he had had 12:27:24 instructions from Benjamin from above, that is Charles Taylor through Benjamin, that Benjamin had told him that the Pa had said that they should make sure that those people who had been released from Pademba Road should come to Buedu.

Q. Mr Witness, when you were giving your last answer you said
12:27:47 the following. You said, "After some time Benjamin came back to Mosquito and called him on the sat phone and he gave him instructions to make sure that he told Gullit and others to dispatch all those big names that he had mentioned to call for them to be with him in Buedu". I am going to take that down, 12:28:14 because you used a lot of words without calling out names there, okay? First of all, starting with, "After some time Benjamin came back to Mosquito and called him", meaning who?

A. And called Benjamin. It was Benjamin who came back on the line, on the telephone line, and called Mosquito. Benjamin 12:28:40 called Mosquito back on the sat phone.

Q. Then you said, "He gave him instructions to make sure that he told Gullit and others to dispatch all those big names that he had mentioned". When you say, "He gave him instructions", who are you talking about?

12:29:01 A. It was Benjamin who sent the instruction to Mosquito for Mosquito to call for the people who had been released by Gullit and others from the Pademba Road Prisons to send all of them to Buedu, including ex-President Momoh.

Q. "He told Gullit and others to dispatch all those big names that he had mentioned". What do you mean when you say "all those big names"?

A. Yes, all the big names. You know, like there was one Steve Bio among them. Steve Bio, Osho-Williams - Osho-Williams, Victor Foh. You know, really I cannot recall all of the names now, all of the names of the people who were released from Pademba that were named, but there were about 20 prominent people in Sierra Leone who were among the list.

Q. And then you said, "To call for them to be with him in Buedu and that they should not be at the front line". Who are you referring to when you say "to call for them"?

A. That is the detainees who Gullit and others had released from Pademba.

Q. "To be with him in Buedu". Who do you mean "him"?

A. To be with Mosquito in Buedu.

Q. "That they should not be at the front line". Who is "they"?

A. That the released detainees from Pademba Road should not be at the front line.

Q. Then you said, "He said that was the instructions from Mr Taylor". Who said that?

A. It was Mosquito who said that that was the instruction.

Q. Who did he say that to?

A. It was the operator to whom he was explaining. Mosquito was now explaining to the operator about his conversation with Mr Benjamin Yeaten.

Q. Now then you said that Mohamed Kabbah, who was the operator, sent this message to Gullit. Is that correct?

A. Yes, yes.

communication with the ECOMOG about Pa Sankoh, about Pa Sankoh, that Foday Sankoh said he would like to talk to us, the RUF, everybody.

Q. Before I ask you about this communication related to Sankoh, just to clarify. You said that a communication you remembered was:

"It was a communication that Gullit and others should wait for Rambo and others to join them in order to re-attack Freetown and Gullit suggested that some men should stay there, some troops should stay at the rear - I mean the front, so that everybody should not desert the rear, the combat camp, so that the AFRC/RUF should not retreat together. Mosquito did not accept that. Mosquito accepted that."

I am going to ask you to clarify this because you said - let's start from the beginning. What did you mean when you said that Gullit suggested that some men should stay there?

A. Gullit suggested that some fighters should stay in Freetown. That everybody should not retreat so that he, Rambo, would have a designated area where they would meet. They should agree on a point, on a meeting point, where Gullit and Rambo would meet and reorganise to re-attack Freetown, and Sam Bockarie accepted Gullit's suggestion.

Q. Do you know - do you have any information which men were left? Do you know?

A. Yes. The men who stayed were there until even when Gullit and Rambo met and, in fact, some of the men who were going with Rambo, as they were going, Rambo sent some of them - some of them went up to the Calaba Town area, really. While they were trying to re-attack Freetown, they were not able. They were not able to January invasion?

A. At that time SAJ Musa had died. He died before 6 January.
Q. How do you know that?
A. It was a direct message from King Perry to Mosquito.
13:28:31 Q. Were you present when this message came, if you can recall?
A. No, I cannot remember, but I read the message directly. I read it.
Q. Now, Mr Witness, you also - and I am a little bit loathe to do this because it's a completely new area, but I can just start 13:29:12 and then we can see how far we get.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Very well, Mr Santora. We have about two minutes left.

MR SANTORA:

Q. Mr Witness, you said - well aside during the course of the 13:29:24 January operation, you've talked about some of the communications that Sam Bockarie had within Sierra Leone. Was he in communication with anyone outside of Sierra Leone?
A. Yes.
Q. Who?
13:29:42 A. Mosquito was in constant contact with Benjamin Yeaten in Liberia.
Q. When you say "constant contact", what do you mean?
A. It did not take up to more than six hours without the two people talking. At least they used to talk - they used to talk 13:30:16 for at least two to three times a day through the sat phone. They used to talk at least two to three times a day through the sat phone most often.
Q. How do you know that?
A. Sometimes, most times in fact, I - we would be together in the same room sitting together, because at that time Mosquito used to spend most of his time in the radio room. That was where he was with his sat phone. Then when - even when his battery is out, if it is not charged, he will switch it off so when Benjamin 13:31:06 wanted to talk to him sometimes he will tell Sunlight to contact Bravo Zulu 4 so that Bravo Zulu 4 will tell Mosquito to switch on his sat phone so that they can talk. Then sometimes, inversely, Mosquito would tell Benjamin Yeaten to call him on the sat phone to discuss whatever they wanted to discuss.

13:31:31 PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Santora, that takes up to the lunch break.

MR SANTORA: Understood.

PRESIDING JUDGE: In fact, I think slightly beyond it. Mr Witness, we are now going to take the lunch break. We will be 13:31:43 resuming court at 2.30. Please adjourn court until 2.30.

[Lunch break taken at 1.30 p.m.]

[Upon resuming at 2.30 p.m.]

PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Santora, I note a change of appearance.

14:30:56 MR SANTORA: Yes, Nicholas Koumjian has left the Prosecution bench.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you. Please proceed.

MR SANTORA: Thank you, Madam President:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr Witness.

14:31:07 A. Good afternoon.

Q. Again just a quick reminder please, please, try to speak slowly when you are explaining something and to address the judges when you are speaking, okay?

A. I will try to keep up with that.

Q. Okay. Now, when you arrived in Kenema, what were your day-to-day duties? What were your duties in Kenema?

10:21:39 A. My duties in Kenema were to transmit messages for Mosquito, or any other commander who will be there, and also to receive messages from the various stations.

Q. Who were you in communication with while you were in Kenema?

10:22:07 A. Almost each and every station within the AFRC/RUF were within reach.

Q. And what were the content of these communications?

A. Let me come back to something that just struck my mind in respect of whom I communicated with in Kenema. We also operated 10:22:39 with one of the radio stations in Liberia, that is Mr Taylor's radio station. I used to contact them.

Q. What was the name of that station?

A. I do not recall the call sign that they had at that time, because by then the call signs used to change intermittently. I 10:23:13 do not recall the call sign for that station now.

Q. Now, going back to my previous question in terms of your communications within Sierra Leone to RUF and AFRC stations, what was the content of those communications? What were those communications about?

10:23:45 A. It was like for instance to get information from the various front lines in Sierra Leone, to coordinate movement of troops, to make request for logistics, by that I mean arms and ammunition, mining and so on and so forth.

Q. What were the communications specifically with relation to

Q. You said that this was really the first time you overheard them speaking directly on the radio. Was there any other time? Let me withdraw the question and be a little more specific. Was there any other time you heard directly Mr Taylor communicating with Mr Sankoh?

A. I cannot remember that. I cannot remember that. I cannot remember that. During my regime with Foday Sankoh I can't remember that any more.

15:48:50 Q. Now you said that - after you were in Koindu where did you go?

A. From Koindu I went towards that Kissi land, Sondokoro-Bendu area. From there Pa Sankoh assigned me to Issa, to Issa. I was with Issa from December. And that December - from that December 15:49:27 up to the time Pa Sankoh went and established Zogoda in 1994.

Q. One moment, Mr Witness. Who is Issa?

A. Mr Issa Sesay was a front line commander towards Koindu at that time.

Q. And you said that you went towards Kissi land and then you 15:50:01 mentioned a location. Where exactly did you go when you were assigned to Issa?

A. The village, we used to call there Issa Ground. Issa Ground. That was how we called the village. I can't recall the right name of the village. There are some villages at that time.

15:50:22 We did not call them by their real names. Sometimes, if you surfaced in one village where there was a farm where you had a lot of okra, we would call there okra ground. Yes.

continue destroying.
Q. Now, Mr Witness, you have been talking about what Mosquito said and I'm looking at, on my font, page 77 starting with line 11. "So he said they were contact him and he will demand". So, 13:16:08 first of all, who is saying this? "They will contact him and he will demand", who is saying this?
A. That is Mosquito.
Q. And who is the "they" that will contact --
A. He said the international committee would want to have 13:16:25 talks with him because he was leading the RUF and he said whenever the international committee contacts him, he said the only thing that he will tell them was to free Foday Sankoh before we go to peace. He said without Foday Sankoh there will be no peace. That was Mosquito saying that.
13:16:55 Q. Mr Witness, were you to have a role in this plan that Mosquito gave you?
A. Yes.
Q. And what was your role to be?
A. I was to go back to Baiima together with the brigade 13:17:24 commander CO Denis whom we called Monkey Brown. We were to Baiima to Eagle and Manawai. The command was to attack Bunumbu, Segbwema, Daru, Tondola, Bendu Junction, Jomukafebu, Kumbema all the way on to Kenema. So that was my own part of the operation.
Q. Now, this second meeting, how many people attended this 13:18:23 second meeting?
A. We were up to 35 to 40, around that, the officers.
Q. Now, Mr Witness, you said that the areas that you were to attack and including Bunumbu, Segbwema, Daru, Tondola, Bendu Junction, Kumbema, all the way to Kenema. You named one other location. Do you remember what that location was that you were to attack? It was something like Jomukafebu. Can you tell us that location again?

A. Yes, I said Tondola --

13:19:16 Q. Just the one location, sir. Something that sounded like Jomukafebu. What was this location?

A. Yes. That's the same, Jomukafebu.

MS HOLLIS: Your Honours, our phonetic spelling for that would be J-O-M-U-K-A-F-E-B-U:

13:19:39 Q. So after this second meeting then what did you do?

A. Mosquito came back to Buedu. At that time the reinforcement that he had come with from Liberia were at the MP in Buedu. Then we, the commanders who were to go with this mission, like Manawai, Eagle, CO Denis and myself, then he 13:20:28 provided Abu Keita and his reinforcement to us for us to attack the various areas that he had mentioned. From there he gave us arms, ammunition, medicines. That was Mosquito who gave us all these things.

Then he told CO Denis as the brigade commander for us to 13:21:02 move ahead on this mission. I saw him give arms, ammunition, medicines to Issa, Issa Sesay. He said Issa Sesay should go across to Kono together with Akim and others and Soriba, who were AFRC soldiers, to join Superman, CO Rambo for them to attack Kono and from there Akim should go and attack Tongo while Issa and 13:21:49 Morris Kallon would advance all the way on to Makeni.

Q. Mr Witness, you have mentioned someone CO Denis. You said he was a brigade commander. What brigade was he the commander of?

A. Well, he was the 1st Brigade commander in Kailahun.

Q. And I believe you said CO Denis, Monkey Brown. Is that the same person or different people?
A. It's the same person.
Q. And what was the nationality of CO Denis?
13:22:42 A. He's a Sierra Leonean.
Q. And what group did he belong to?
A. The RUF group.
Q. Now, Mr Witness, after you had received the reinforcements and you had received the arms and ammunition and other supplies 13:22:56 did you move to carry out your mission?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you able to capture Kenema?
A. We were unable to capture Kenema.
Q. When you carried out your mission did you follow Mosquito's 13:23:19 instructions about spare no soul?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you do?
A. We killed civilians, we burnt down villages that we had captured.
13:23:44 Q. Now, when you were unable to capture Kenema where did you go?
A. I came back to Segbwema because that was where we had captured.
Q. And how long did you remain in Segbwema?
13:24:10 A. I was in Segbwema until the Lomé Peace Accord.
Q. While you were in Segbwema did you receive information about any events in Freetown?
A. Yes.
Q. What information did you receive?

remain at Zogoda?
A. Yes. I was there until the time Zogoda fell, that is 1996 when Foday Sankoh went to the Ivory Coast to the Yamoussoukro Peace Accord, when he left CO Mohamed in charge for him to take 12:38:00 care of the soldiers - the RUF soldiers - and we based at Zogoda, where he was, and until the Kamajors and the Sierra Leone soldiers attacked the RUF and finally dislodged them from Zogoda.
Q. During the time you were at Zogoda and Foday Sankoh was still at Zogoda, were you aware of any communications Foday

A. Yes.

A. Repeat the question.
Q. During the time you were at Zogoda with Foday Sankoh, '94
12:38:55 to some time in '96, were you aware of any communications Foday Sankoh had outside of Sierra Leone?
A. Yes.
Q. And what were those communications?
A. The communication, because I myself had access to Foday
12:39:17 Sankoh at any time, at any hour, as a strike force commander, so I was there when a radio man came to call Foday Sankoh. He said they wanted to talk to him. Who wanted to talk to him? Charles Taylor. I myself will be there where we would take Foday Sankoh and we would sit by just like that white man there, sitting down,
12:39:56 and we will be here whilst they are talking. That used to take place for over a day, every day, or some time once or twice a day. We used to see him asking and they would greet each other. He would ask for Foday Sankoh. He would enquire about Foday Sankoh's health. Foday Sankoh too would respond in the same way

A. No, from Kola Tree we went back up the hills towards Wilberforce.
Q. Thereafter, did you go to Benguema?
A. Yes.
15:18:14 Q. Whilst in Benguema a Brigadier Five-Five called a muster parade, didn't he?
A. Yes.
Q. And a muster parade was an event where all civilians and soldiers would gather together to be addressed by a commander?
15:18:42 A. Yes.
Q. And at that muster parade Brigadier Five-Five gave a speech, did he not?
A. Yes, he gave a speech.
Q. And in that speech he first and foremost welcomed all of 15:19:00 you, didn't he?
A. Yes.
Q. And said that they had come to save the civilians, is that right?
A. I can't remember that.
15:19:23 Q. And did he not go on to say, "There is not going to be any kind of ruthless behaviour on the civilians"?
A. He said that.
Q. In fact he went further, did he not, and said that - he told the abducted civilians and rebels twice during the muster 15:20:07 parade that you should observe certain rules such as no fighting amongst yourselves, no stealing, no raping or killing, is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. He went on to say that he would severely punish anyone

A. Yes.

Q. But the point is you never saw anyone ordering anyone to carry out those crimes in terms of senior commanders?

15:25:23 A. No.

A. Yes.

Q. Indeed from Jui, J-U-I --

Q. You had to flee from Jui because of their greater fire power, didn't you?

Maybe if they come today, they may not come tomorrow or the day after. Maybe if 15:57:31 they come in the morning and they come in the evening again on the same day.

A. Well, the area where I was nobody was killed there. They did not kill anybody there. The area where I was, they did not 15:57:49 kill anybody there.

Q. To your knowledge, did Superman and Issa ever speak again after that?

A. Well, I don't know because at that time we had come to Makeni and everybody was free to do anything. So I don't know 15:58:09 except - no, I don't know.

Q. What happened after this fight between Superman and Issa Sesay and Issa and Rambo?
A. Well, when we were in Lunsar, it was Rambo --
THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can he repeat his answer.
15:41:53 PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, the interpreter asks you to repeat your answer, please. You said "Well, when we were in Lunsar." Please continue from there.
THE WITNESS: I said when we were in Lunsar Rambo attacked him there - Issa there - at one time, so when we returned in 15:42:15 Makeni they fought against each other. It was at that time that Issa was driven from Makeni and he went to Magburaka. Those of us who had come from Kabala were now there. There came a time when a mediation took place and they came together again.
MR KOUMJIAN:
15:42:44 Q. Okay. Before we go on to discuss the mediation, this is what we understood, Mr Witness, from your answer, and listen carefully and tell me if it is correct. What the transcript says that you said is, "I said when we were in Lunsar Rambo attacked him there - Issa there ". Is that what you said, that Rambo
15:43:10 attacked Issa?
A. I said Superman. They attacked Superman.
Q. Okay. What was the mediation that you just spoke about? After Rambo was killed, what was the mediation you just spoke about?
15:43:38 A. Well, when this fighting took place, at that time there was a masked devil --
THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can he again repeat slowly.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Sorry, Mr Witness, to interrupt, but the interpreter is having a problem hearing you clearly. You said

"When this fighting took place at that time." Continue from there, please.

THE WITNESS: I said when they were in Makeni, when the fighting started between them, Superman and Issa and Rambo, when they fought that was the time that Superman killed Rambo. Then Superman - Issa moved and came to Magburaka. That was where he was. When we met again there was a traditional priest called Pa Demba. He was the one who mediated between them.

MR KOUMJIAN:

15:44:48 Q. Who was this man, Pa Demba?

A. A local medicine man; a local juju man.

Q. Did he belong to the army or the RUF or the STF or any of those groups?

A. He was with the RUF.

15:45:18 Q. Mr Witness, since you mentioned a medicine man, I am going to take you back to Kono. When you were in Kono, was there ever a medicine man there?

A. Yes, there was one there too.

Q. Was that before you went for training or after you went for 15:45:43 training?

A. After the training, that was the time that he was there.

Q. And what did this medicine man do?

A. He used to mark people. He used to make cuts on people saying that bullets - they would not be caught by bullets. It 15:46:09 was a kind of juju.

Q. Can you show us - I show you start to point - but can you show us where he would make the cuts on people? Can you show the Judges?

A. Well, I refused to take it because those whom I met there, blood was oozing from them so I was afraid and refused.

Q. Did you see where they were bleeding from?
A. Yes. I went there and I saw him administering the marks on them. He was marking them on their chests, on their arms - upper 15:46:52 arms - and their backs.
Q. Thank you. Sorry for the digression. So after the mediation by Pa Demba, what happened between Superman and Issa Sesay?
A. Well, they were there at the time and they were working 15:47:21 together. That was where we were.
Q. How long did you stay in Makeni?
A. I took a year there.
Q. When you were in Makeni, did any other forces come to Makeni; not rebels, not SLA, not ECOMOG?
15:47:52 A. Yes.
Q. Who came?
A. UNAMSIL came, but they did not come there to fight. They had come there for peace.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Koumjian, you seem to have been 15:48:05 introduced a character called Issa Sesay. I think the witness has consistently spoken of General Issa.
MR KOUMJIAN: That is correct, your Honour. That is my error, if I did that:
Q. Sir, did you see anything happen to the UNAMSIL?
15:48:31 A. Yes, at the time that we were there.
Q. What did you see? Sorry, what did you see happen?
A. Well, at the time that we were there Wallace left us there and went to Freetown. At the time they said it was the time for disarmament, he left us at the house and went. He went to elections was very simple, wasn't it? At that time the RUF was holed up in the bush and had no prospects of being able to campaign effectively in an election, would you agree?

A. At that time I wouldn't agree with that because you 09:45:49 wouldn't say that. We were in the bush, but we still had been defending ourselves.

Q. Yes, but what I mean is you needed to have access to the whole country as a political party if you were to engage in elections, didn't you?

09:46:10 A. Yes.

Q. And in order for you to participate throughout the nation of Sierra Leone there would need to be peace first, wouldn't there?

A. Yes.

09:46:24 Q. Which is why Sankoh said "Peace before elections"?

A. Yes.

Q. And the second reason why the prospect of peace in Abidjan was destroyed was because of Kamajor attacks upon RUF positions. That's right, isn't it?

09:46:48 A. Yes.

Q. And if we look behind divider 1, please, at page 11, if we look at the second paragraph on that page in February 2007 you told the investigators this:

"While Foday Sankoh was in Abidjan for the talks which led 09:47:21 to the signing of the Abidjan Peace Accord in November 1996, the Kamajors launched an attack on Camp Zogoda, which was the then RUF headquarters, and other areas under RUF control. Kabbah says it was the Kamajor attacks which occurred up to the AFRC coup, which destroyed the chance for peace at that time."

Is that true?
A. Yes.
Q. Because whilst the RUF were in Abidjan trying to agree a peace deal the Kamajors effectively took the RUF by surprise, didn't they?
09:48:07
A. Yes.
Q. And they scored a devastating victory against the RUF, particularly at Camp Zogoda, didn't they?
A. Yes.
09:48:23
Q. Many RUF fighters were killed?
A. Yes.
Q. And it came as a shock to the RUF, didn't it?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, please look behind divider 2. This is what you say at 09:48:56
paragraph 16 on page 5:
"CO Mohamed Tarawalli was the senior man in charge at that time" - you're talking about at the time of the Abidjan peace talks - "that Foday Sankoh went to Abidjan. The witness thinks that the agreement might have been signed when Zogoda was put in disarray. Foday Sankoh had heard that Zogoda was going to be hit and relayed a message to Tarawalli with this information. Tarawalli was slow to react and the Kamajors won a major victory. Many RUF soldiers died and very few reached Kailahun. Mohamed Tarawalli later went missing and that was serious for the RUF."
09:49:33
09:49:59
Again, do you recall saying that to the investigators?
A. Yes.
Q. And that was the truth, wasn't it?
A. Yes.
Q. So in summary, Mr Kabbah, would it be fair to say that in divider 1. Behind divider 1, page 4. I want to look at the second to last paragraph on that page:

"Kabbah recalls General Dopoe Menkarzon bringing 13 Beretta rifles to Pendembu in 1991. Kabbah says that the RUF 10:00:53 used to capture enough arms from the government forces that eventually they did not need to get arms from Liberia or elsewhere. However Kabbah is aware of ammunition coming in from Liberia on many occasions. Kabbah says Foday Sankoh used to go to Monrovia and come back with ammunition and food. Sam Bockarie 10:01:24 also used to go and bring ammunition back from Liberia."

Pause there. Is that the truth?

A. Yes.

Q. And let's go now to page 20, please, the second paragraph on that page:

10:02:09 "During that period of 1998 and 1999, Kabbah says that he never saw arms being shipped from Liberia. Kabbah says by that time the RUF had enough weapons. For example, Kabbah recalls numerous AK-47 rifles captured by the RUF after the big offensive of late 1998 and early 1999 from Guinean troops who were 10:02:51 stationed in Kambia. The RUF stored these rifles in Kailahun and did not use them until they fought the Donso in late 2000 near the Guinea border."

Is that true?

A. Yes.

10:03:15 Q. So between 1998 and 1999 no arms were shipped from Liberia?

A. No arms came, but we used to get ammunitions there. Arms are different from ammunition.

Q. I will come to the ammunition in a moment, but in 1998 to 1999 no arms from Liberia. That's your evidence, is it?

A. Yes.
Q. And it's the truth, is it?
A. Yes.
Q. You can state that fact quite confidently, can you?
10:04:04 A. Yes.
Q. The reason why I want you to be sure about this is we appreciate of course, don't we, that one of the most gruesome events of the Sierra Leonean civil war was what happened on 6 January 1999, so within the period you're telling us about now no 10:04:29 arms came from Liberia. That's right, isn't it?
A. Correct. We did not get any arms from Liberia.
Q. The second point is this. The attack on Kambia, who mounted that attack?
A. The Kambia attack, it was Superman and the SLA that were 10:04:55 there in the north.
Q. And can you give me a date for that? It was some time towards the back end of 1998, wasn't it?
A. That event took place during the same attack that I have been talking about when the ECOMOG were based and the capture of 10:05:31 Kono and subsequently they went to all the other areas.
Q. And the position is this, isn't it? A huge amount of arms and ammunition were captured in Kambia, weren't they?
A. Yes.
Q. Were Gullit and SAJ Musa also involved in that attack on 10:05:52 Kambia?
A. All of them were there. That was the time that all of them were in the north.
Q. And it was after that attack on Kambia when that large amount of arms were captured - it was after that that that same group launched the attack on Freetown, wasn't it?

A. Yes.
Q. Using the arms they had captured in Kambia?
A. That area, you see, I will talk a little about it. The 10:06:36 arms that were captured in Kambia, they took arms to Kailahun which were captured from Kambia. I do not know whether all of them were sent because I was not there, so just the captured arms, the ones that they would send, they were the ones that we would see.
10:06:53 Q. I know about that and let's just digress for a moment and deal with the point that you make. Let's go behind divider 2, shall we? At page 5, paragraph 19:
"The witness advised that the AK-47s captured by the RUF during the late 1998 offensive, were stored in his home in 10:07:50 Yandowahun, two miles from Kailahun. The weapons were all brand new."
Is that true?
A. Yes.
Q. And the weapons, those were the weapons captured at Kambia, 10:08:06 weren't they?
A. Yes.
Q. And so many had been captured that some were actually put into storage because they were not needed?
A. That was what they said in Kailahun, the ones that they 10:08:29 took and stored in my own village. You see, where I was based, if they had any others --
THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, would the witness be instructed to repeat the last segment of his testimony.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, the interpreter asks that you

Q. And there was also some STF members amongst them, weren't there?
A. Yes.
Q. And those STF members were former ULIMO fighters, weren't they?
11:19:27
A. Yes.
Q. And remember us talking about, I think it was Monday, how these former SLA soldiers wanted to get back to Freetown. You remember us discussing that?
11:19:44
A. Yes.
Q. Now, it was only after that group entered Freetown that Sam Bockarie - well, let me put it differently. Let me start again. It was only after that group had entered Freetown and reached State House that they contacted the radio station in Buedu, is 11:20:15
that right?
A. It is correct.
Q. In fact you radio operators and RUF members in Buedu, the first time you knew that Gullit was in Freetown was when you heard it over the BBC. That's right, isn't it?
11:20:38
A. Yes.
Q. And when you heard it over the BBC it came as a complete surprise to you, didn't it?
A. Yes.
Q. And it was totally unexpected?
11:20:58
A. We were expecting that, because we used to get from the BBC - when they even attacked Waterloo we got the information and we knew that they were trying to advance to Freetown, even though Sam Bockarie had warned them to wait. We knew that since they never accepted the orders and that they were heading for Freetown, so it wasn't a surprise to us because that was their own mission.

Q. Their own mission, thank you. But it was unplanned so far as Sam Bockarie was concerned, wasn't it?

11:21:45 A. Yes, it was not planned.

Q. Now once you heard the news on the BBC you radio operators in Buedu started calling desperately the other radio stations to find out precisely what was going on, didn't you?

A. Yes, we found out especially Superman's station who were 11:22:11 closer to the other men.

Q. And that was the only way you were able to get any information about what was going on on the ground?

A. Yes, later Perry came on the air --

Q. I am coming to Perry. Believe me, I'm coming to him now.

11:22:35 Then suddenly Perry called on the radio, didn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. And at what time was that, a time of day?

A. I wouldn't be able to say the exact time, but he called. He called us. He was the one who first called us.

11:23:01 Q. And he called because Gullit's group had run into trouble, hadn't they?

A. Yes.

Q. They were being suppressed, to borrow a word you used. That's right, isn't it?

11:23:21 A. Correct.

Q. And they desperately needed reinforcement?

A. You are correct.

Q. And that's when they called?

A. Yes.

Q. And so so long as Benjamin Yeaten said anything everyone assumed without any evidence that it must have come from Charles Taylor, is that the position?
A. Yes, because they said he was his right-hand man and so 15:27:04 whatever he said he must have discussed that with the Pa.
Q. But there was no evidence to support it. It's just what people assumed, is that the case?

A. Yes.
Q. Now there came a time, did there not, when Jungle and a group of Liberians because of the incursion by ULIMO into Liberia became isolated in Sierra Leone?
15:28:09 A. From 2000 - from 1992 to 2000 - from 1992 to 1997, yes, they hadn't dealings.
Q. Because what had happened was Jungle had become cut off from Liberia and he was effectively thereafter fighting with the RUF, wasn't he?
15:28:42 A. Jungle - Jungle was there with their remnant renegades, not with the RUF. They were together with Fayia. They were in the bush in their own separate jungle. He was with General Fayia, the one who was in charge of Foya at that time.
Q. But he effectively became a part of the RUF, didn't he?
15:29:18 A. Yes, he used to come to us the time Fayia wanted us to go to Monrovia.
Q. The reason I am asking you about this is this. Yesterday when you were giving evidence you said this:

For the Prosecution:	Mr Nicholas Koumjian Mr Christopher Santora Ms Kathryn Howarth Ms Maja Dimitrova
For the accused Charles Ghankay Taylor:	Mr Courtenay Griffiths QC Mr Terry Munyard Mr Morris Anyah Ms Jacqueline Watts

Q. Now can you estimate roughly between about how long - how many days passed between January 6, when the men first entered, to this communication that you've just spoken about where Sam Bockarie told Gullit to make the area fearful? Can you estimate 10:00:40 how many days or weeks passed between those two times?
A. It was not up to a week. Like, for example, this night when he spoke to Gullit, because Gullit told him that they were to pull out that particular night, that was when the conversation took place.
10:01:04 MR SANTORA: I'm sorry, your Honour, I just lost the page reference:
Q. Now you said that the communication between Buedu and the men in Freetown went on every day. Is that correct?
A. Yes.
10:01:54 Q. Aside from what you have already discussed what was the content of that communication that went on every day?
A. The communication was to give, let me say direct report, because any station or any front line that was under the RUF or RUF communication every day you should give a salute report or 10:02:31 situation report on the front line to the station in Buedu and Sam Bockarie was in charge. So every station within the RUF used to do that.
Q. So during the time of the Freetown invasion who was in charge?
10:02:55 PRESIDING JUDGE: In charge of what, Mr Santora?
MR SANTORA: I'm sorry, I apologise:
Q. Who was in charge of the men in Freetown?
A. It was Gullit who was in charge of the men in Freetown, the fighting force that went there, but Sam Bockarie was in charge of the entire movement.

Q. Now you also said - you were speaking of a conversation between Sam Bockarie and Benjamin Yeaten during the time of the Freetown invasion. First of all, can you just describe generally 10:03:46 who, if anyone, was Sam Bockarie in communication with during the time of the Freetown invasion?
A. Sam Bockarie communicated with Benjamin Yeaten and he used to communicate as well with Charles Taylor, but for the communication with Charles Taylor that one he used the satellite 10:04:12 phone. And the capture of Freetown, that was not even a hidden thing that he would go to a corner and discuss like he used to do, that one he did in an open place when he was trying to inform Charles Taylor that our men were in Freetown. He did that in the open because the RUF was happy, that was a joy to the RUF that 10:04:39 they had entered Freetown.
Q. Let's start, first of all, what did you observe in terms of communications between Sam Bockarie and Benjamin Yeaten during the time of the Freetown invasion?
A. There had been communication between them for a long time.
10:05:08 It was - let me say it was a sisterly or brotherly operation that we had. So whatever good or bad information that we had from any of the ends we should share that with each other.
Q. Before you continue, I'm specifically asking you in terms of at the time of the Freetown invasion what was the state of 10:05:36 communication - what did you observe in terms of communication between Sam Bockarie and Benjamin Yeaten?
A. What I observed, it's just like for example when you and your subordinates would be doing something you would be giving him instructions or orders and that was the way I observed. Like and call. At that time, Sam Bockarie would be on the standby. It was not any secret. It was not hidden or that the satellite phone was not there. No, he had it. He used to hang it on his pants walking around with it. It was not hidden. And for 10:10:47 communications it was - I would either be present or not, but I will know.

Q. Now I'm going to ask you to focus though on the time of the Freetown invasion. Now you've spoken generally about Sam Bockarie using the satellite phone, but I'd like you to be 10:11:09 specific. At the time of the Freetown invasion, how do you know he was - Sam Bockarie was in communication with a satellite phone with Charles Taylor?

A. All along communication on the VHF went all other commanders, but the satellite phone communication went on 10:11:45 directly to Charles Taylor. The night that the dialogue took place, that was at the MP headquarters in Buedu, the operator who was on duty, Tiger, Sam Bockarie told him to tell Sunlight to tell his Pa that he wanted to talk to him, and that is Charles Taylor, and that very night Tiger passed a message to 10:12:17 Sunlight. And where the satellite would receive call radios up at the MP and Sam Bockarie went into the vehicle and they went. That was the Planet 1 and the - we too were at the --

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can the witness repeat.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Please pause, Mr Witness. The 10:12:50 interpreter needs to clarify and catch up with you. Would you go back to your answer and pick up again where you said, "That was Planet 1 and ...", and then continue from there, please.

THE WITNESS: Sam Bockarie I said he went into his vehicle that was - that was having the mobile radio. We referred to that radio as Planet 1. The base radio, that was Marvel, too was in a vehicle and we went into that vehicle. We and the - myself and the other operators and some bodyguards, we went to the MP. That was where we were that night when he called and this discussion took place.

MR SANTORA:

Q. Okay, Mr Witness, I'm going to ask you to focus specifically on the incident you just described. First of all, were you present when Sam Bockarie made this call?

10:14:00 A. I was present. I said it was up at the MP station, because there is where you - there was the hill and that was where the satellite got coverage.

Q. Now who else was present in this particular instance when Sam Bockarie made this satellite call, if you recall?

10:14:26 A. I was present, Tiger who was on duty was present, Pascal who was with Planet 1, that is Sam Bockarie's station, was there. His bodyguard commander Foday too was there.

Q. Now in terms of when this particular call took place, do you know when it occurred?

10:14:56 MR GRIFFITHS: I hesitate to interrupt my learned friend, your Honours, but the Pascal mentioned at line 14, is that the same Pascal who was in Foya because unless he was beamed over, as on Star Trek, he couldn't be in two places at the same time?

PRESIDING JUDGE: I understood that the Pascal in Foya was 10:15:18 corrected to Mortiga and that Pascal was actually in Buedu. I need to go back to give you a reference.

MR SANTORA: Do you want me to look for the reference on that? I also recall the same thing.

MR GRIFFITHS: I'm sure it's my fault. I may have mistaken something.

PRESIDING JUDGE: I have to concede, Mr Griffiths, that this particular identification of this person in Foya was - there was at least twice it was said Pascal and then it was at least twice said Mortiga.

10:15:56

MR GRIFFITHS: I'm sure it's my fault, your Honour.

MR SANTORA:

Q. Mr Witness, now I'm referring to this particular instance where you say that you were present when Sam Bockarie made a satellite phone call. Do you know approximately when this was?

10:16:11

A. The day that the communication occurred between Buedu station and King Perry in Freetown, it was that very night that the communication took place.

Q. Do you know what was discussed in this communication?

A. The one that I heard Sam Bockarie tell Charles Taylor was that our men had entered Freetown, they were advancing and they had even captured State House.

10:16:51

Q. Did you learn anything else about what was discussed?

A. He was just laughing while they were talking. He will say, "Yes, sir. Yes, sir".

10:17:28

Q. Who was laughing?

A. Sam Bockarie. Sam Bockarie.

Q. Now, how do you know he was speaking with Charles Taylor?

A. The communication for - even for them to talk came directly from our station, Buedu. He said he wanted to talk to Charles Taylor and, when the response came, that was why we even went to the MP to talk to Charles Taylor.

10:17:57

Q. Now, were there any other communications during this time that you have information about involving Sam Bockarie and the satellite phone?

A. That is the communication that I monitored between him, that is Sam Bockarie, and Charles Taylor. That was the only communication that I monitored.
10:18:41 Q. Now, you also said - before in referring to Charles Taylor you said, "We called him Father". What did you mean by that?
A. Our Pa, he was the one we depended on. When Sankoh was not present he would be the one to depend on, so we depended on him.
Q. Now, you discussed several communications with regard to - 10:19:32 between Sam Bockarie and Gullit and in one of those conversations there was a conversation about the prisoners at Pademba. Is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. What do you recall specifically that conversation to be?
10:19:58 A. Sam Bockarie said that Gullit should not leave the prisoners he had released, particularly President Momoh, that he should not leave them behind and that he should travel with them at night, not in the afternoon because in the afternoon it would be risky.
10:20:22 Q. And what was Gullit's response to that?
A. Gullit said he would do it and he brought them.
Q. What do you mean "He brought them"?
A. He took them from Freetown and brought them to our controlled zone.
10:20:44 Q. And at that point what was your controlled zone?
A. Starting from Lunsar, going towards Kabala right up to Kailahun, Kono, all of those areas were our controlled zones.
Q. Now, Mr Witness, on Friday you said that you remained in Buedu on the radio working on radio communications up until the 12:56:08 came and after three weeks when I came I was there when Sam Bockarie took off for Monrovia. Immediately he returned that was the time that that meeting was held.

Q. Now, I asked you who to your recollection was present at this meeting?

A. At the meeting were Issa Sesay, Denis Mingo - Denis was there, Monkey Brown, we had Eagle, Mannah Wai [phon], and some other men like the operator Zedman. All of us went to that meeting. We were all there.

12:56:53 Q. Were there any other radio operators there that you recall?

A. Yes. King Perry was there. Go-Joe [phon] whom we called Joe Kassa [phon], because they came with Superman, he was there.

Q. About how many people were at this meeting?

A. The meeting was attended by a large crowd, a very large 12:57:37 crowd, because we had members from the AFRC. We had the civil populace, that is the advisors, Pa Rogers and others, and the commanders who had come. The people were many there. Over a hundred people at that place.

Q. What was the subject? What do you recall about this 12:58:00 meeting? What was discussed?

A. At the meeting they talked about - they said we should construct an airstrip, that is, the airstrip was to be constructed at a village. I cannot recall the name of the village but it was around Buedu. Also the attack on Kono, how we 12:58:36 were to take Kono so that we would mine and be able to get ammunition to continue the struggle, and also the diamonds lost by Issa. These were some of the specific things that were discussed at the meeting that I can recall.

Q. Was anyone chairing the meeting or was anyone in charge of the meeting?

A. Sam Bockarie who called the meeting chaired it.
Q. Now you've mentioned that the topic of an airfield was discussed. Actually I should say you mentioned that a topic of 12:59:31 an airstrip was discussed. Describe exactly what was - to your recollection, what specifically was discussed in terms of an airstrip?
A. That airstrip was to be constructed so that we can receive our own ammunition. That is we were to be getting ammunition 12:59:56 from Libya. That is when it arrives it won't come through Monrovia, it will come straight to us. When Sam Bockarie came that was the message that he brought. He said we were to try and get the war strip. The work commenced to construct the war - the airstrip but we did not see the plane that came.
13:00:26 Q. I'm just going to ask you to clarify the last portion of your answer, Mr Witness. You said, "But we did not see the plane that came." What do you mean?
A. We constructed the airfield for a plane but we never saw a plane land there.
13:00:48 Q. Who did the construction?
A. The construction was done by civilians, soldiers because when they were going to do that work Sam Bockarie will - we would take the radio along, we would be there for the entire day and in the evening we would return. Because there was a Caterpillar 13:01:10 there that was abandoned, that was repaired and that was - it was working there together with the civilians.
Q. Now you also said another topic that was discussed were the diamonds lost by Issa. What do you recall about that topic? What was discussed about that at the meeting?

Q. Was it just one time that you learnt this from Sam Bockarie's wife, or Sam Bockarie himself?
A. Well, from Sam Bockarie it was once and the other time his wife told me when he went and spent a long time.
11:06:12 Q. Who went and spent a long time?
A. Sam Bockarie.
Q. What did his wife tell you at this time?
A. His wife told me that her husband had said that he had a meeting in the farm, that is Charles Taylor's farm, and they were 11:06:37 discussing how the things were to meet us in Buedu, she said because they had to make arrangements about the airfield, how the things were to meet us in Buedu, because the vehicles that Jungle and others were to come with were not big enough and the transportation from White Flower to 50's place - and moving from 11:07:01 White Flower to 50 and from 50 to Buedu, that was a long process. That was why they were arranging something that could be a little faster and that's how she told me about airfield. She said her husband had said they were going to construct an airstrip where they would be bringing materials, arms and ammunition.
11:07:27 Q. Thank you, Madam Witness. Just before we move on on this point I just want you to clarify a point that was raised earlier. Justice Lussick made the point about you talking about trucks and about pick-ups. At what point were weapons or supplies loaded into trucks and at what point were they loaded or reloaded into 11:07:57 pick-ups? Can we be clear about that? You talked about loading from White Flower and then reloading at Benjamin Yeaten's place and you mentioned trucks, you have mentioned pick-ups. At what point were they in trucks and at what point were they in pick-ups?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Madam Witness, we are back in open session and I again remind you of your obligation to ensure that your answers do not reveal your security. Mr Bangura, proceed.

12:59:45

MR BANGURA: Your Honour, just to get the witness to be reassured that the series of questions which we have just had were actually in private session. I am not too sure whether the witness was quite aware of that fact. I may not have got the point:

13:00:16

Q. Madam Witness, we were talking about this meeting that took place and the point we last discussed was Sam Bockarie discussing the idea of a meeting with Eddie Kanneh. You said that during the meeting they also discussed something about Freetown, about moving towards Freetown. Do you recall saying that?

13:00:48

A. Yes.

Q. Can you explain clearly what they discussed at the meeting about Freetown?

A. He said they should discuss about how to go and attack Freetown during that particular mission and that they were at first supposed to clear up Kono and he said that Kono, Superman and Komba Gbundema and others should combine. It should be a uniform mission. They together with SAJ and others, because by then there weren't existing communication between them. He said after they and SAJ would have cleared up Kono they should go to Kabala and from Kabala they should proceed to Freetown. That was what he meant by "discuss", because by then there wasn't any communication between Sam Bockarie and SAJ.

A. He went to Liberia, Monrovia.
Q. And why did he go there?
A. According to him, he went there because Charles Taylor had invited him to discuss how to be able to release the United 09:37:21 Nations peacekeepers.
Q. How did he travel to Monrovia?
A. He used a vehicle from Koidu to Foya and from Foya he flew using helicopter to Monrovia.
Q. And do you know what kind of helicopter he used?
09:37:46 A. It was the same Weasua helicopter he had used.
Q. And what happened when Issa Sesay arrived in Monrovia?
MR MUNYARD: Madam President, before my learned friend continues with this, I know that yesterday her Honour Justice Sebutinde raised the question with Ms Hollis of whether this was 09:38:06 direct knowledge of the witness or indirect and my learned friend did indicate that she would enlighten us at some point. I am not clear at the moment, and I think we probably have reached the stage where we ought to know if this witness is giving us evidence of something he actually observed or something he was 09:38:26 told about.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Ms Hollis, your response?
MS HOLLIS: That was exactly the question yesterday and, as I explained yesterday, I have prepared the questions so that at the end in more detail can be discussed the basis of knowledge 09:38:45 without identifying the person's identity, so that - and this portion, the witness will testify about events and then there will be a portion where for each of the events the witness will explain in detail to the Court how it is the witness has this information.

Q. And what happened then when these materials were taken to Vahun?
A. The man who took them there, he handed them over to Benjamin Yeaten and the following day he returned to Issa.
12:17:56 Q. Now, Mr Witness, earlier you testified about Issa Sesay taking trips to Monrovia and giving diamonds to Charles Taylor. Where did Issa Sesay get the diamonds that he was giving to Charles Taylor?
A. He got them from Kono and Tongo.
12:18:27 Q. And did Issa ever say anything about how many diamonds he took to Charles Taylor?
A. He had said something about it some time in 2002.
Q. And what did he say?
A. In 2002 when RUF had been transformed into a political 12:18:56 party, the man who was appointed to be the presidential candidate of the RUF asked Issa what his account was and he said he hadn't any account, but that he had diamonds with Charles Taylor up to 5,000 carats and he had $150,000 that he had given to Charles Taylor for safekeeping and Charles Taylor had said any time
12:19:22 elections would be coming close he would assist the RUF and that was why he was keeping the diamonds.
Q. Now you testified that Charles Taylor had also said that he was going to hold on to the diamonds that were given to him by Issa and by Sam Bockarie to give to Foday Sankoh when Foday 12:19:42 Sankoh was released. To your knowledge, did Foday Sankoh ever receive those diamonds from Charles Taylor?
A. Well, he did not receive them in my presence and, in fact, he did not receive them because Foday Sankoh was not released. He died in detention.

Q. To your knowledge, did Issa Sesay ever receive those diamonds?
A. No, he did not receive them.
Q. To your knowledge, did anyone in the RUF receive those diamonds that Charles Taylor held?
A. No, nobody in the RUF received them.
Q. You have also testified about Issa Sesay meeting a person known as Alpha Bravo and on one occasion taking diamonds to Alpha Bravo. Were there any other times that diamonds were taken to Alpha Bravo?
A. Yes, but he did not go. He used to send one of his securities to Eddie Kanneh. Eddie Kanneh in turn would meet Five-Zero and they would take the diamonds to Alpha Bravo.
Q. Who was Five-Zero?
A. Five-Zero was a code name for Benjamin Yeaten. He was called Unit 50 again, Benjamin Yeaten.
Q. And how many times did that happen?
A. It happened about two times that I can recall now.
Q. Now you testified that when Issa Sesay took diamonds to Alpha Bravo, Issa Sesay was given $300,000. On these other occasions when diamonds were taken to Alpha Bravo what, if anything, did the RUF receive in exchange for these diamonds?
A. When they took the diamonds, RUF could not receive anything. All what Issa got - heard was that Alpha Bravo had gone back to Belgium. He said he would come later.
Q. So on these other two occasions to whom were these diamonds given?
A. Eddie Kanneh said he gave the diamonds to Alpha Bravo, that he and Benjamin Yeaten went there.

Commander Zino did not arrive there up to the time he was about to leave, so in the interim he appointed Morris Kallon that he should take care of the place until Commander Zino arrives.

Q. And when did Zino arrive?

15:24:31 A. Two weeks after Pa Sankoh had left, that was the time Commander Zino arrived with his own forces at Zogoda.

Q. When you speak of Zino, do you know Zino by any other name?

A. Yes.

Q. What? What name?

15:24:51 A. Mohamed Tarawalli.

Q. Now how long was Zino, Mohamed Tarawalli, in charge at Zogoda?

A. We were there going up to October/November when the Kamajors invaded the place, so we all split. We all dispersed 15:25:21 from the place.

Q. And those who were at Zogoda, where did they go?

A. We split into two. Some went to Libya and some went to Burkina Faso.

Q. Now when you say some went to Libya, where was Libya 15:25:43 located?

A. Libya was a code name for Pujehun District. We had a town in Pujehun District which was called Sorogbema but for us to disguise that name we I used to call it Libya.

Q. Sir, what was the result of the attack in Kono District?
A. The result was a big blow on the side of the government at that time and the so-called ECOMOG.
Q. Were you forces able to capture anything during that 16:11:19 fighting that you recall?
A. Yes.
Q. What do you remember about what was captured?
A. We captured arms and ammunition from them.
Q. What kind of arms were captured, if you recall?
16:11:47 A. We captured heavy weapons like ground missiles and we captured light weapons.
Q. Were any heavy weapons that the defending forces had destroyed?
A. Yes. Those ground missiles, about three ground missiles, 16:12:16 they removed the fire pins and they went with them. They left the ordinary one there.
Q. Were any vehicles captured for --
PRESIDING JUDGE: Just pause, Mr Koumjian. Who is the "they" that removed the fire pins, please?
16:12:37 THE WITNESS: I said the RUF. I said we, the RUF, captured arms, ammunition, vehicles from the ECOMOG soldiers.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, but, Mr Witness, you also said "these ground missiles, they removed the fire pins." Who removed the fire pins? "And went with them". Who is the they that 16:13:04 removed the fire pins and went away with them?
THE WITNESS: The ECOMOG soldiers who had the weapons, they were unable to run away with them, so it was easier for them to have removed the firing pin and run away with them, so they left the empty weapons there.

PRESIDING JUDGE: That clarifies my question, Mr Koumjian. Please proceed.

MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. Sir, do you know if any vehicles were captured or destroyed by the RUF and AFRC forces?

A. We did not destroy cars because we also wanted to capture them and use them. We did not used to destroy them because we would use them to transport our manpower to the front line. We would not capture them and burn them down, but we used to capture them.

Q. My specific question was in this attack do you know if any vehicles were either captured or destroyed in the fighting, any ECOMOG vehicles?

A. Yes.

Q. Sir, what happened to the ECOMOG forces that had been in defensive positions in Kono District?

A. We overran them and we captured some of them. Some who were unfortunate died. Those who were fortunate to run away, they ran away. So that was what happened.

Q. Those that ran away, do you know in what direction they went?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did they go, if you know?

A. Some took the main road, Makeni to Freetown. Some took the other road between Tongo to Kenema.

Q. Now you mentioned Akim. Do you recall if Akim had any results during this offensive, this attack, the forces that he was commanding?

A. Repeat that. I did not understand that result area.

Do you know if any ammunition was captured during these attacks in the Kono District on Koidu Town and surrounding areas?
A. Yes, as I told you earlier, we captured some arms and ammunition during that attack when ECOMOG had left the place and ran away.
Q. What happened with the arms and ammunition that were captured during this attack on Koidu Town and the Koidu district?
A. They had people who were responsible for such things and your - any one of us, anything you are responsible for, that was the area you are supposed to go and cover. Like in my case I was responsible for mining, I was not responsible for arms and ammunition. So the person who was in care of that was the SY - I mean the G4, Christopher. He was responsible for that. He used to gather everything and ensure that they were put intact.
Q. Okay, thank you. Sir, you've mentioned the name of Issa Sesay's adjutant. Can you say it again?
A. He was called Jabba.
Q. Have you ever seen Jabba's signature?
A. Yes, I had seen it before.
Q. When have you seen Jabba's signature?
A. At the time Issa Sesay was in Kono, because anywhere Issa was, he was there with him.
Q. Would you say you saw it on one or two occasions or was it more or less than that?
A. I can say we were all in the same place or in the same town and at any time Issa was giving pass to someone or Issa was issuing pass to somebody to move from there to another point and if Issa was not around to sign Jabba would sign, so I saw that different times.

Q. Yesterday I was asking you a line of questions that I never quite finished and that was about the Abidjan peace process and you said that when Foday Sankoh first went to Abidjan it was to talk peace with the NPRC government and you agreed that by the 09:31:27 time the Abidjan Peace Accord was finally signed later in 1996, it was the government of Ahmad Tejan Kabbah. Do you remember we'd had that discussion, you knew he'd been elected but you couldn't remember the date that he was elected?

A. Yes, sir.

09:31:51 Q. And you have given evidence that at some stage Camp Zogoda, the RUF camp in the hills that had been set up some time before, was attacked and the RUF were driven out of Camp Zogoda. Do you remember saying that?

A. Yes, sir. I can remember the driving of RUF from Camp
09:32:24 Zogoda, but that is not the actual description of Zogoda like you have said.

Q. Well, don't worry about the description of it. If anyone wants to take up that point they can. I'm simply concerned with the fact that the RUF were driven out of Camp Zogoda and they 09:32:40 were driven out by government forces, were they?

A. Yes, sir, in collaboration with the Kamajors.

Q. So they were driven out by government forces and Kamajors acting in concert with the government forces, yes?

A. Yes, sir.

09:33:04 Q. And this was during the time that Foday Sankoh was attempting to negotiate a peace accord at Abidjan with that same government, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

moment. You said Benjamin Yeaten was overall in charge. Now, you have mentioned an Amphibian Father. Where did he fit in this chain of command, if you know?

A. Amphibian Father, what I knew was that he was controlling the Foya area and he was in control of a group called the navy group. He controlled that group, but what Benjamin Yeaten told us was that Charles Taylor appointed him as the joint chief of staff chairman and that he was the boss for all the other generals; he, Benjamin Yeaten.

Mr Witness, the diamonds went to Charles Taylor for safe keeping for whom?

A. For Foday Sankoh.

Q. To your knowledge, did Foday Sankoh ever receive those diamonds that were held by Charles Taylor for him?

14:53:36 A. At the time Foday Sankoh used to meet me in Monrovia he never told me that the diamonds that they had been keeping with Charles Taylor were given back to him by Charles Taylor.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, that does not answer the question. The question is where were you at the time of the attempted attack on Kossoh Town?

THE WITNESS: We were at Hastings.

09:51:17 MS HOLLIS:

Q. Did you yourself take part in this attack?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, if we could look at page 2, please, and at the top of page 2 the date is 15 January 1999: "It was agreed that the men 09:51:41 in Freetown and the men at our point were to do joint operation on Jui and Kossoh Town." Do you recall that joint operation?

A. Yes.

Q. "The Freetown men scheduled to attack Jui and we to attack Kossoh Town. That night we attacked Kossoh Town, clear the 09:52:06 enemies but the Freetown men never turn up. Therefore the enemies, with the support of the Alpha Jet, drove us from Kossoh Town."

Now, were you able to join up with the Freetown men in this joint operation?

09:52:28 A. No, the enemy, we were not --

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can he repeat this answer.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, the interpreter is trying to keep up with you. He hasn't heard you clearly so we would like you to speak a bit louder and repeat your answer from the point 09:52:45 you say, "The enemy, we were not". Continue from there, please.

THE WITNESS: We were unable to link up with the group in Freetown.

MS HOLLIS:

Q. Mr Witness, on page 2 under "Problems" the authors of the

Q. Mr Witness, do you know how to spell that, Weasua?
A. No, I don't know how to spell it.
MS HOLLIS: Your Honours, I believe that is W-E-A-S-U-A.
Q. Now, you indicated that you remained in Monrovia until 12:06:45 Foday Sankoh came to Monrovia. During that time that you were all in Monrovia do you know what Sam Bockarie did?
A. Sam Bockarie was in Monrovia to wait for Foday Sankoh. When he was there Foday Sankoh told Sam Bockarie to send a message to Johnny Paul Koroma so that the two of them can meet in 12:07:16 Monrovia before ever going to Freetown. So Sam Bockarie sent the message to Johnny Paul Koroma, who in turn came and met us in Monrovia in the same guesthouse. When Johnny Paul Koroma came later he too sent for some of his soldiers who were in Freetown. When they came they were lodged at a hotel called Hotel 12:08:02 Boulevard, but it had been changed to Hotel Royal.
When Johnny Paul came I saw Joe Tuah go to the guesthouse. I saw him give a parcel to Joe Tuah. Joe Tuah gave a parcel to Johnny Paul Koroma. Johnny Paul Koroma told us that it was Charles Taylor that had sent the parcel to him. He said the 12:08:38 parcel contained 15,000 US dollars to take care of him and his family.
Q. Now, if I can just ask you to pause there for a moment. You said that Foday Sankoh told Sam Bockarie to send a message to Johnny Paul Koroma so that the two of them can meet in Monrovia 12:09:04 before going to Freetown. What two are you talking about who were to meet in Monrovia?
A. That is Johnny Paul Koroma was to come to Monrovia. While Foday Sankoh when he comes from the Lome peace talks, they were to meet in Monrovia before proceeding to Freetown. That was what I was trying to talk about.

Q. Who was it who was to meet in Monrovia?
A. Foday Sankoh was to meet Johnny Paul Koroma in Monrovia. The two of them were to meet his brother Charles before ever they 12:09:50 proceeded to Freetown.
Q. When did Foday Sankoh come to Monrovia?
A. Foday Sankoh came to Monrovia in 1999, but I can't remember the date. But before ever Foday Sankoh came I saw - before Foday Sankoh's arrival, they took Johnny Paul Koroma from the 12:10:24 guesthouse to Hotel Africa because they said they didn't want them to stay together. So, later I saw one man who came called Paul Moriba. At that time he was a GSM director. He came and said that he had got information that the generator that was at the guesthouse was not in good condition and so the Pa, 12:11:06 Charles Taylor, had instructed him to come and replace it. Immediately that generator was replaced, so later Foday Sankoh came and met us in Monrovia at the guesthouse.
Q. Now, tell us again the name of this person who came to replace the generator.
12:11:32 A. His name was Paul Moriba.
Q. Now, you mentioned earlier that Johnny Paul Koroma and his people went to the Boulevard Hotel and now you are talking about them going to Hotel Africa. Can you explain that to us?
A. Johnny Paul Koroma, when he went to Monrovia he was at the 12:11:56 guesthouse. When he was at that guesthouse he sent for his boys from Freetown. When they came they were lodged at the Hotel Boulevard which was later changed to Hotel Royal, so before Foday Sankoh arrived in Monrovia it was just Johnny Paul who was taken from the guesthouse to Hotel Africa. That is what I meant.

A. Yes, I used to see them there again.
Q. And how often did you see them there?
A. Well, at that time I was no longer based in Buedu. I was in Balahun. I will go there and return. Sampson, Jungle and 15:12:54 others used to come and the time they used to come, according to what they told me, they used to come with a truck that contained arms and ammunition, food and other things that were in there. 15:13:16 together with the other items to Buedu, or sometimes if the road condition was better the truck will come as far as Buedu.
Q. Did they tell you who they received these arms and ammunition from?
A. Well, Jungle and others were saying that it was the Papay, 15:13:45 Charles Taylor, who used to give the arms and ammunition.
Q. Did you ever see the trucks that were used to bring the arms and ammunition to Buedu?
A. At one time I saw a military truck come to Buedu.
Q. And how big was this truck?
15:14:21 A. It was - it was a ten-tyred truck. It had two in front, two in the middle and then - two in front, four in the middle and then two at the back.
Q. While you were based in Balahun, to your knowledge how many times did Sam Bockarie go to Liberia?
15:15:20 A. I understood that he came there three times.
Q. And who did he go with to Liberia these three times?
A. He went with Jungle. And the other time, according to he, Mosquito, because I was not there, what he told me was that Varmuyan Sherif at a point in time came to him, so the two of officers said that. It simply says, "At the forum they said we should go and attack Kabala." I am personally wondering who "they" are.

MR KOUMJIAN: Okay, thank you very much:

09:38:29 Q. Mr Witness, who at the forum talked about attacking - first, who at forum talked about attacking Kabala?

A. Superman and SAJ Musa.

Q. One or - are you saying one of them, you're not sure which one? Are you saying both? Can you explain to us?

09:38:53 A. Superman was the first that made the proposal to attack Kabala and SAJ Musa supported him that he too was planning to attack Kabala, but he hadn't the manpower and ammunition, so it was good for them to go and attack Kabala.

Q. And who at the forum spoke about going to Makeni and 09:39:18 Freetown?

A. SAJ Musa.

Q. What was the reaction of Superman?

A. Superman said when they got to Kabala, when we would have gotten Kabala we would take another mission for Makeni, but our 09:39:46 first mission was for Kabala.

Q. After this forum was there an attack on Kabala?

A. Yes.

Q. About how long after the forum did the attack take place?

A. After the forum the following day we started moving, but we 09:40:10 spent a week on the way to attack Kabala.

Q. When you say "we started moving", what was the composition of the forces that attacked Kabala?

A. Superman was there, SAJ Musa and some STF fighters. Both AFRC, RUF, STF fighters, but Superman and SAJ Musa were leading the attack.

Q. Was Kabala defended by any force?
A. Yes, they had two ECOMOG forces in Kabala at the time.
Q. What were the two ECOMOG forces in Kabala at that time?
09:40:58 A. The Guinean and Nigerian contingents.
Q. What happened when you attacked Kabala?
A. We took Kabala for three days.
Q. Were you - when I say "you", the AFRC and RUF forces. Were you able to capture all of the town of Kabala?
09:41:32 A. No.
Q. Please explain that.
A. We entered, we took over the town, but they had one secondary school there called Kabala Secondary School. We were unable to take over that campus. That was where the Guinean 09:41:58 contingents were based.
Q. Were any ammunition or weapons captured during this attack?
A. Yes, we captured a lot of weapons and ammunition from the Guinean contingent.
THE INTERPRETER: "From the Nigerian contingent", instead 09:42:28 of Guinean.
MR KOUMJIAN:
Q. What ammunition was used for the attack on Kabala?
A. Well, the ammunition that we captured from Mongor, the remaining ammunition that Superman brought with him.
09:43:05 Q. Can you now recall specifically any of the weapons that were captured in Kabala during that attack and if you can't, just tell us?
A. I can recall some.
Q. Please tell us what you remember.

A. They had a weapon called FM, the LAR rifles from the ECOMOG contingent, we captured up to 400. And some pistols and other weapons that I can remember.

Q. Okay, thank you. Mr Witness, the transcript didn't get all of that so I am going to repeat what we did understand and ask you to repeat what we did not.

MR MUNYARD: Before my learned friend talks about what we understood, I didn't understand very much and I would like the witness to explain.

09:44:05 PRESIDING JUDGE: We will start with the witness repeating his answer. Mr Witness, parts of your answer were not heard clearly. Please repeat your answer. If necessary we will ask to have the question put again.

THE WITNESS: Ask the question again.

09:44:33 MR KOUMJIAN: Your Honour, what I was going to do was read the transcript up to the indiscernible and then ask the witness to continue.

PRESIDING JUDGE: If you put the question again, please, Mr Koumjian.

09:44:46 MR KOUMJIAN: I will restate the question:

Q. Mr Witness, can you tell us what you remember about any weapons captured in Kabala?

A. Yes.

Q. Please say it slowly, especially when you get to the names 09:45:01 of the weapons because we are not all familiar with those. So please explain.

A. Yes, we captured some AK-47s, LAR rifles and some pistols, mortar.

Q. Okay, the end of your answer you said "pistols, mortar".

Are those two different weapons, just to be clear?
A. Yes, when I talk about pistols they are side weapons. When I talk about mortar they are heavy weapons, mortar guns. Mortar guns.
09:45:50 Q. Can you describe for us the mortar guns that were captured?
A. Yes, we captured 60 millimetre mortar bombs, 81 millimetre mortar guns.
Q. Thank you. Mr Witness, what happened after the three days that you occupied Kabala?
09:46:21 A. They pushed us out of Kabala and we retreated from Kabala.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Just before we move out of Kabala, Mr Koumjian, I notice in the first answer the witness mentioned something called "FMs" and I don't know what an FM is.
THE WITNESS: FM is the same LAR, but we cut it short, FM.
09:46:49 PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you.
MR KOUMJIAN:
Q. Just so we are clear, what is an LAR?
A. That gun was always used by the Nigerian contingent. I don't know much about it.
09:47:07 Q. Is it a heavy weapon, is it a firearm, a handgun or a rifle?
A. It is a heavy weapon, because it is bigger than an AK-47.
Q. Is it something that a man can carry? One man can carry?
A. Yes, one person can carry it alone.
09:47:35 JUDGE LUSSICK: Mr Witness, is it an LAR or an SLR?
THE WITNESS: LAR. LAR.
JUDGE LUSSICK: Some kind of rifle, is it?
THE WITNESS: Yes, gun. LAR. LAR. They used the same bullets used by a G3. It uses the same bullets like G3.

MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. Thank you. Sir, during this attack on Kabala was there any communication that you know of between the forces that were doing the attack and anyone else?

09:48:26 A. Which of the forces are you talking about? I do not understand that question.

Q. Well, you have indicated that the attack - on the attack was Superman and SAJ Musa, correct, and various other RUF and AFRC and STF forces? Is that correct?

09:48:50 A. Yes.

Q. Did any of these forces that were attacking Kabala communicate with anyone outside of that Kabala area to your knowledge?

A. Yes.

09:49:10 Q. Please tell us what you know about communications from Kabala.

A. There was Superman communicating with Skinny - Mosquito - SAJ Musa was communicating with Brigadier Mani in Kurubonla and other communications were also going on at the time.

09:49:40 Q. Thank you. Now, you used the name Skinny. Can you explain who is Skinny?

A. Sam Bockarie.

Q. Mr Witness, who called Sam Bockarie Skinny?

A. All his friends used to call him Skinny because of his 09:50:06 body.

Q. Sir, after being pushed out of Kabala, what happened to the forces that had attacked? Where did you go?

A. We went to Koinadugu Town.

Q. The ammunition and arms that were captured, was there any communication regarding those arms and ammunition?

A. Yes.
Q. Can you please explain that?
A. Yes, I was in the radio room with Superman, SAJ Musa, when 09:51:02 Sam Bockarie called and said that the ammunition and arms that we had captured from Kabala he wanted us to send some to him so that he can send it to the other front lines.
Q. What else was said then?
A. Repeat the question. I have not understood it.
09:51:23 Q. After Sam Bockarie said that he wanted some of the ammunition sent to him, what happened?
A. After the communication Superman and SAJ Musa and other commanders called a meeting, and in that meeting they discussed that the distance is too far to send those ammunition to Kailahun
09:51:52 District and so they would like to call Sam Bockarie and tell him that they would like to use the ammunition to attack Makeni. [Indiscernible]. After the meeting --
Q. Mr Witness, I am sorry that was my fault. I was speaking over the interpreter I believe at the end of the answer. We got 09:52:16 on the transcript "... to attack Makeni" and then the interpreter added something that I didn't get.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Interpreter, can you recall the last part of the answer?
THE INTERPRETER: Yes, "That was what was on."
09:52:33 PRESIDING JUDGE: I am not quite sure if that makes sense to me.
THE INTERPRETER: "That was what was going on in short."
PRESIDING JUDGE: "After the meeting"? The words - it is before the words, "After the meeting."

MR KOUMJIAN: Your Honour, I believe the witness then said, "After the meeting." I am sorry, because I started speaking when the interpreter was adding something. I apologise.

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, he has to be advised to 09:52:59 stop mumbling the last bit of his answers. He mumbles them. We hardly get them clearly.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Very well, I will tell him. Mr Witness, the interpreter is having a problem. You are going more slowly now, that is good, but the interpreter tells us that you are 09:53:12 speaking slowly and mumbling at the end of your answers. You must keep the same volume throughout your answer, you understand?

Proceed, Mr Koumjian.

MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. Mr Witness, I have the same problem of dropping my voice at 09:53:33 the end of a sentence and so I will try not to. Sir, you indicated that there was discussion that the distance was too far to send the ammunition and so they would like to call Sam Bockarie and tell them that they would like to use the ammunition to attack Makeni. What happened then?

09:53:55 A. After that they went into the radio room and called him. After they had called him, he protested that they should send the ammunition to him. In fact, he was going to send some people to come for the ammunition.

Q. Okay, thank you. Now just clarify for us, so we are 09:54:16 absolutely clear, who called who? You used "he" and "them". Who called who in the radio room?

A. It was Superman that called Sam Bockarie. Superman and SAJ Musa called Sam Bockarie and Sam Bockarie told them that he needed the ammunition. In fact, he will send - he, Sam Bockarie, will send people to come and collect the ammunition.

Q. Thank you. Did Sam Bockarie send anyone to collect the ammunition?
A. Yes, he sent people.
09:54:56 Q. When did they arrive?
A. After the communication, I think three weeks later people arrived to Koinadugu Town.
Q. Can you remember then approximately - well, first of all let us make it clear. What year was this that we are talking 09:55:19 about?
A. '98.
Q. And can you remember if it was dry season, or rainy season?
A. It was during the rainy season. It was raining at the time.
09:55:41 Q. About how long after the time you were pushed out of Kabala did the men arrive?
A. When they - almost one month when they arrived there.
Q. Okay, thank you very much. And the attack on Kabala, just so we are clear, was that in the dry season or the rainy season?
09:56:09 A. Early in the rainy season.
Q. Where were you when the men arrived sent by Bockarie?
A. In Koinadugu Town.
Q. Who were these people that arrived?
A. They had Liberians among them. The Liberians were in the 09:56:39 majority, with some Sierra Leoneans who escorted them.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Sorry to interrupt, Mr Koumjian. The witness said it was raining at the time and was during the rainy season of which year? Have I missed something? '98?
MR KOUMJIAN: I believe he started saying - he did say that at the beginning before I asked him about the dry season and rainy season. Thank you:

Q. Mr Witness, can you give us an estimate - we understand we are not asking for an exact number. How many men approximately arrived?

09:57:18

A. Roughly, I think 60 men roughly.

Q. Now, you said some were Liberians. Can you estimate approximately what percentage, or how many of them, were Liberian?

09:57:34

A. I can't remember the number, but the majority of them were Liberians and a few Sierra Leoneans among them.

Q. Thank you. Was anyone leading this group?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that?

09:57:59

A. One Senegalese. Senegalese.

Q. And who was this person? First, is Senegalese a name or a nickname?

A. It is a nickname because he was tall.

Q. What was the nationality of this Senegalese?

09:58:24

A. He was a Liberian man.

Q. What else do you know about him?

A. I knew him for the first time after we had gone for the ammunition in Kenema. He was the same Senegalese that I met in Kenema.

09:58:44

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can he repeat that last bit.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Please repeat the last part of your answer, Mr Witness, for the interpreter. Pick up where you said, "He was the same Senegalese that I met in Kenema."

to take longer than quite quickly then we may have to retire.

We are informed that this will take about 10 minutes and therefore we will adjourn briefly for those 10 minutes. If the witness is to be escorted out then it will be necessary to put the blinds down.

Mr Witness, the technicians need to look at this problem more closely so we are going to leave the Court for about 10 minutes. Please adjourn the Court temporarily.

[Break taken at 10.13 a.m.]

10:19:26 [Upon resuming at 10.20 a.m.]

PRESIDING JUDGE: I understand it is rectified now, but Mr Koumjian if you put your question again and Mr Witness please tell us first if you hear the interpretation?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

10:20:30 MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. Sir, do you know if the Liberian forces that came under Senegalese, came with him, if these were people with any military training or military experience?

A. Yes.

10:20:50 Q. Who were they?

A. Most of the Liberians they said they were former NPFL fighters and like CO Vensy was an SSS man. He is presently in the SSS in Liberia.

Q. Thank you. Now a bit earlier, Mr Witness, in talking about 10:21:13 the forum, you said that Superman said it would be a good idea to form a battalion to search for Gullit. Was anything done about that suggestion?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us what was done.

A. They were part of the CDF, but they called them in - I don't know how they called this tribe. In their own tribe, in the Kabala district, they called them the Kapras. In the Koranko they called them Kapras. They were part of the Kamajors, the CDF forces.

Q. Thank you. Now, then you said --

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Is that correctly spelt in the transcript?

MR KOUMJIAN: I will check that, your Honour. I am not familiar with the word, but we will check it:

Q. Sir, you said that, "So when ECOMOG attacked us we repelled the attack and he came and told us we will not be able to sit here." Who said that?

A. Superman told us that we will not be able to sit here again. Superman.

Q. When SAJ Musa, you said, took his forces out of Koinadugu, what happened to Rambo Red Goat?

A. Rambo Red Goat surrendered to us and he said we are all brothers.

Q. What happened after he was surrendered? How did you receive him?

A. We received him nicely. We just laughed at him because he was talking funny, funny things and everybody was just laughing. We received him fine.

Q. Now, you said you went to Pumpkin Ground. Can you explain what that is?

A. Yes.

Q. What is Pumpkin Ground?

A. When we got to the town we did not meet anybody there. We only met pumpkins in all the rooms in all under the beds, so we referred to the place as Town Pumpkin Ground, Town Pumpkin Ground.

Q. Do you know the real name of this place?

10:42:33 A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us please?

A. Yira Filaia.

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, could the witness say that again.

10:42:43 PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, please repeat the name for the interpreter.

THE WITNESS: Yira Filaia.

MR KOUMJIAN: Your Honours, the spelling, if it isn't spelt already, Y-I-R-A and the second word F-I-L-A-I-A:

10:43:09 Q. Because it is easier for me to pronounce I will call this Pumpkin Ground. What happened after you went to Pumpkin Ground?

A. We based in Pumpkin Ground and Superman said we should start running missions to attack the ECOMOG forces.

Q. Did you attack any ECOMOG forces at this time?

10:43:33 A. Yes, we attacked ECOMOG forces.

Q. Where did you attack the ECOMOG forces?

A. We attacked Alikalia, [indiscernible].

Q. In this attack were any weapons or ammunition captured?

A. Yes, we captured a lot of arms and ammunition there.

10:44:15 Q. Sir, I want to go back to one thing you said when discussing the infighting. You said that when Superman said you should leave he gave some orders about what you should do in Koinadugu, is that correct?

A. Yes.

killed in the barracks. We saw their corpses there.
Q. Was anything captured by the RUF forces during this attack?
A. Yes.
Q. What do you recall that was captured?
11:21:43 A. We captured arms and ammunition, including armoured car, trucks and some - these small tactical jeeps for the officers and camouflage combat and other things.
Q. After Makeni where did you go?
A. After Makeni we went to Lunsar.
11:22:20 Q. Did you have to fight to go to Lunsar, or was Lunsar already occupied?
A. After Makeni, it was a time we and Komba Gbundema went with advance team. At the time I was all right. We and Komba Gbundema went to Lunsar to occupy Lunsar.
11:22:42 Q. How many people went with Komba Gbundema to Lunsar?
A. I can't estimate, but we were many because we went with so many cars.
Q. Do you remember about how long this was after Makeni had been taken?
11:22:57 A. I think in a week's period once --
THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can he repeat that last one. He was mumbling.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, could you repeat your answer from the point you said, "I think in a week's period once --" 11:23:17 Continue from there, please.
THE WITNESS: I said within a week, five days, we advanced to Lunsar.
MR KOUMJIAN:
Q. I apologise, but I need to go back for a moment to the

THE INTERPRETER: Senior to, your Honours. Interpreter's mistake.

MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. Now, Mr Witness, you indicated that there was some talk about joining your brothers. Was there any attempt --

A. Yes.

Q. Okay, can you explain?

A. Yes, when we got to Waterloo, Superman, Issa Sesay, Komba Gbundema and some senior officers got together and distributed the troops. They said Colonel Babay together with other commanders should go to Benguema barracks, whilst Rambo for the RUF, the late, should take another group to Hastings to attack Hastings including Red Lion - Red Goat, I mean. Rambo Red Goat. Myself and other commanders should go and attack Hastings, Jui, to get across the bridge and to go to Freetown and join our brothers.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Is Colonel Babay spelt correctly, or is this a different person?

MR KOUMJIAN: Komba Gbundema?

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Colonel Babay.

MR KOUMJIAN: I will get the correct spelling, your Honour.

THE WITNESS: Colonel Babay, yes.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: There is a person who was spelt B-A-B-A-Y before.

MR KOUMJIAN: Yes, that is the correct spelling, B-A-B-A-Y:

Q. So, Mr Witness, just so we're clear, who were you with at that time?

A. I was with RUF Rambo at that time to attack Hastings and Jui.

Q. What other commanders were with RUF Rambo?
A. Rambo Red Goat, Crazy and others.
Q. Okay, and what happened with your group?
A. When we got to Hastings we attacked Hastings, we cleared up 12:11:45 Hastings and we advanced to Jui because Jui is just very close to Freetown. The distance between Jui and Freetown is short. But when we got to Jui we did not - we did not overrun Jui and so we got stuck there, so we got orders from Issa Sesay and he told us that when we got to Jui there was another road that was passing 12:12:12 through Kossoh Town to Freetown and so we should release some men, up to a platoon or a battalion, to join our brothers in Freetown whilst we should try and clear up the main road. The order came from the back from Issa Sesay directly to Rambo, RUF Rambo.
12:12:33 Q. And what happened after that order was received from Issa
Sesay?
A. Later Rambo sent and asked who was supposed to be the commander to go and join the people and that Issa Sesay then appointed - said Rambo Red Goat because he said he knew his 12:12:56 brothers in the city well and he was once an SLA soldier. He said he should lead the troops to go and join the others in Freetown and that was what they did.
Q. Okay. Where were you when this order came and Rambo Red Goat was dispatched to Freetown?
12:13:18 A. I was --
THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, that is not too clear.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, please repeat your answer.
The interpreter did not hear it clearly.
THE WITNESS: We were part of Jui. We divided Jui into two zones. ECOMOG was on one side and we were on the other side.

MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. Thank you, that leads to my next question. In Jui were you - why were you unable to go through Jui. As you had mentioned earlier?

12:13:57

A. Jui was at that time one of the strong bases for ECOMOG, because in '97 they were based at Jui and Jui was very strong and it was one of the strongest bases. It was from Jui that they ran the intervention into Freetown, so ECOMOG was very strong at Jui.

12:14:24

Q. What ECOMOG forces were at Jui?

A. The Nigerian contingent.

Q. Was there any battle between your forces and the ECOMOG forces at Jui at that time before Rambo Red Goat was dispatched?

A. Yes.

12:14:49

Q. You talked about Rambo Red Goat going with a group. Can you tell us approximately how many men were in that group?

A. Yes, it can be estimated at roughly 60 to 65.

Q. Who were these men that were under the command of Rambo Red Goat?

12:15:21

A. Some RUF men, some SLA and some STF.

Q. How were they armed, if you know?

A. Everybody would be armed from his own commander. The STF were armed from General Bropleh, the RUF Issa Sesay and Superman, and the SLA Brigadier Mani and Colonel T at that time. So, they were well armed.

12:15:51

Q. And do you know where Rambo Red Goat's group went?

A. They entered the city into Freetown.

Q. Now, earlier you had mentioned a bridge. Where was that bridge?

A. Between Jui and Freetown.
Q. Was it possible for your forces to go across that bridge?
A. No.
Q. Why not?
12:16:34 A. Because the bridge was open and nobody could have challenged the bridge at that time in attempting to cross that bridge, so we did not get across.
Q. What do you mean "the bridge was open and nobody could have challenged the bridge"?
12:16:53 A. The bridge was well protected by ECOMOG at that time.
Q. Thank you. So, do you know how Rambo Red Goat's group entered the city?
A. Yes.
Q. Tell us what you know?
12:17:14 A. From Jui, the part we were occupying, there was an old road at the back of the town where the train used to pass. Rambo used that road to go to Kossoh Town, that was at the back of Jui, and to cross the river from the upper side to cross over and when you cross you go to Freetown directly.
12:17:43 Q. After Rambo Red Goat's group left your group, where did your group go?
A. We went back to Yams Farm.
Q. What happened when you got to Yams Farm?
A. We manned checkpoints and we did some destruction there to 12:18:10 make the area fearful. We burnt some houses, we opened fire on civilians for them to get out of the place and we killed some civilians at Yams Farm.
Q. Did anything else occur at Yams Farm that you remember?
A. I can't recall again.

Q. Thank you. How long were you at Yams Farm?
A. We were there I think for a week and we retreated.
Q. Now, you talked about these forces led by Bazzy and Gullit being in Freetown. Did you receive information about what was 12:18:55 going on while they were in Freetown in any way?
A. Yes.
Q. How did you learn about what was going on in Freetown?
A. At first they called and said that they had taken over the State House and, secondly, they called that they have got to 12:19:20 Pademba Road where the RUF and the AFRC were in jail that were captured by ECOMOG. The next time they called they said they had freed some of the men, including Gibril Massaquoi, and they reported that they had been attacked by different contingents, like the Guinean contingent, the Nigerian contingent and 12:19:48 different troops. That was the time that Sam Bockarie called. I heard Sam Bockarie talking over the BBC that any contingent that attacked his forces in Freetown he will command his forces to burn all the embassies down.
Q. Okay. Mr Witness, you began your answer by talking about, 12:20:09 "At first they called and they said they had taken over the State House." Just so we're clear, who was it that was calling and saying that?
A. Alfred Brown was the radio man and Gullit will always be in the radio room calling directly to Superman, calling Sam 12:20:29 Bockarie, and I was monitoring those calls directly. Alfred Brown, Gullit, Bazzy, sometimes Major CY.
Q. Do you recall these persons inside Freetown, aside from telling about their situation did they say anything else during these communications?

Q. Can you tell us what you know about Superman distributing the ammunition you brought?
A. Yes.
Q. Where did the ammunition go?
16:01:17 A. Some of the ammunition went to Rambo, RUF Rambo, to Koidu Geiya. Some of the ammunition went to Short Bai Bureh at Mortema. Some of the ammunition, we took it to Wordu to Komba Gbundema and some remained with Superman.
Q. Where did you yourself go at this time?
16:01:49 A. We went to Wordu, to Komba Gbundema.
Q. When you were in Wordu under whose command were you?
A. Komba Gbundema.
Q. Can you give us some details about any orders Superman gave for areas to be attacked in this mission?
16:02:20 A. Yes.
Q. Please tell us.
A. Superman told us to go to Wordu to join Komba Gbundema, to hand over the ammunition to him and go to Kurubonla to meet SAJ Musa, to work with him to attack Mongo Bendugu. That was the 16:02:48 instruction.
Q. Just to be clear, when you went to Komba Gbundema in Wordu, was this before or after the Fitti-Fatta mission?
A. After the Fitti-Fatta mission.
Q. About how long after the Fitti-Fatta mission?
16:03:13 A. Two days.
Q. Now, you said that Superman gave instructions that Komba Gbundema was to take the ammunition to Kurubonla, is that correct?
A. Yes.

Q. Did you go with him there to Kurubonla?
A. Kurubonla, yes.
Q. Thank you for correcting my pronunciation. Who was there in Kurubonla?
16:03:44 A. SAJ Musa.
Q. Thank you. Now, who is Komba Gbundema?
A. He was one of the commanders for the RUF.
Q. When you first went to him he was in which town?
A. Wordu.
16:04:23 Q. Were there any civilians with him?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you describe these people that were with him?
A. Yes. He was having civilians with him. The civilians, they used to call them the Junta 2s, the Junta 2. They wrote on 16:04:55 their chest "RUF", all of them. They wrote on their chest "RUF". They said they were Junta 2s for him.
Q. What were the ages of these civilians who were with Komba Gbundema?
A. Komba Gbundema had children from 5 years upwards; 5, 6, 7 16:05:13 upwards.
Q. Were there adults also with him?
THE INTERPRETER: Your Honour, could counsel please repeat the question.
PRESIDING JUDGE: You heard the request, Mr Koumjian.
16:05:27 MR KOUMJIAN: Yes, sorry:
Q. Mr Witness, Komba Gbundema, you said he had children from five years up with him. Were all the civilians with Komba Gbundema children, or were there adult civilians also with him?
A. Yes, he had his own son. All the others were abducted.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Koumjian, did I hear the witness say they wrote on their chests "RUF", or Junta 2? Which was it? Because I don't see RUF on the record.

THE WITNESS: Yes, they called them Junta 2s. They wrote on 16:06:10 their chests "RUF", on their chests "RUF", but their names were - the names for them were Junta 2. Junta 2. On their chest "RUF".

MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. Mr Witness, first of all where was it that these markings of the civilians took place?

16:07:28 PRESIDING JUDGE: We've heard it was on their chest, but do you mean where was the physical location this operation was carried out?

MR KOUMJIAN: Thank you, I will try to make my question more clear:

16:07:42 Q. In what town, or village, or district was it that these markings took place?

A. The markings - they started marking the people from Kayima. I don't know the district in which Kayima is. I do not know if it falls under Kono, or Kabala. It's just between them, Kayima.
16:08:02 The markings started taking place in Kayima on to Wordu.

Q. Sir, how were these markings made?

A. I do not understand the question.

Q. You said they wrote "RUF" on their chests. How did they write "RUF" on people's chests?

16:08:41 A. Some people used razor blade. When they did not have a razor blade they had a sharp knife that can enable them to write "RUF", those small knives they will use.

Q. Now there was one question, by the way, where your answer seems to be that you understood a different question than the one

I asked. I was trying to ask you before if all the people with Komba Gbundema were children, or if there were any adults. Where there any adults, people over 18, or were they all children?

A. They had adults and - he had adults and children with him.

16:09:26 Q. The persons that had their chests marked "RUF", what ages were they?

A. Both children and adults had the marks on them at the time.

Q. Were they men, or women, or both?

A. Both.

16:09:49 Q. Were the women marked on their chest with the razor blade, or the knife?

A. Both of them.

Q. Mr Witness, what happened after you went with Komba Gbundema to Kurubonla?

16:10:13 A. When we went to Kurubonla, Komba Gbundema and SAJ Musa called a forum.

Q. How did SAJ Musa receive Komba Gbundema?

A. He welcomed us well and he was happy.

Q. What happened - first of all, who attended the forum?

16:10:39 A. SAJ Musa, Komba Gbundema, Brigadier Mani, General Bropleh and some other senior RUF officials like Osho and others.

Q. So was this a commanders' forum, or was it an open forum for all soldiers?

A. Commanders' forum.

16:11:04 Q. Were you actually present during the forum?

A. Yes.

Q. And in what capacity were you present?

A. As a bodyguard to Superman. I was there as Superman's eye.

Q. What happened at the forum? Oh, sorry, let me go back to that. Can you please explain what you mean by that, that you were Superman's eye?

A. I was there to represent Superman to tell him whatever I see for myself.

16:11:47 Q. Was that something unusual or specific to this incident, or was that something - a duty that bodyguards would normally perform?

A. A duty that a bodyguard can normally perform.

Q. What happened at the forum that you attended as Superman's 16:12:05 eye?

A. At the forum SAJ Musa welcomed us and said he's long been expecting that for us to work together, but it was time now and Sam Bockarie's ready to work with him, so we were highly welcome and so we should plan how to attack Mongor Bendugu from the 16:12:34 Guinean contingent.

Q. Mr Witness, you mentioned some others who were in attendance and one was Brigadier Mani. Who was Brigadier Mani?

A. One of the senior officers in the national army, the SLA.

Q. Who was General Bropleh?

16:12:57 A. General Bropleh was ULIMO; head of the ULIMO at the time. I think he was in the army in Liberia, a former army commander in Liberia. In Sierra Leone he was an ULIMO commander, a Liberian.

Q. Do you know if there was any name for the forces he commanded?

16:13:18 A. Yes, the ULIMO.

Q. Okay, thank you. Do you know any other name for those forces?

A. Yes, the STF.

Q. After SAJ Musa made these remarks that you've told us about, what did the others say?

A. The other people they accepted and Komba Gbundema too was happy. He took the view - he too said Superman should give the ammunition to run the mission and that he was ready for the 16:13:57 mission.
Q. Mr Witness, you had mentioned earlier that you had taken ammunition to Komba Gbundema that came from your trip from Gbarnga. Is that correct?
A. Yes.
16:14:10 Q. Was that ammunition still with Komba Gbundema when you went to meet SAJ Musa?
A. We were to take the ammunition along with us, yes.
Q. You indicated that SAJ Musa indicated that an attack was to be planned for Mongor Bendugu.
16:14:37 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Koumjian, the answer the witness gave is most uncertain. You asked whether the ammunition that was taken prior was still with Komba and then he says, "Yes, we were to take the ammunition along with us", meaning what?
MR KOUMJIAN: Thank you:
16:14:53 Q. Mr Witness, my question for you was whether the ammunition that you had taken from Gbarnga was still with Komba Gbundema when you went and met up with SAJ Musa. What is your answer?
A. I said, yes, the ammunition was with us, with Komba Gbundema and I. We took the ammunition along with us to Kurubonla 16:15:22 to go and meet SAJ Musa.
Q. After this forum, was there an attack that took place?
A. Yes.
Q. What area was attacked?
A. Mongor Bendugu.

MR KOUMJIAN: Your Honours, Mongor is M-O-N-G-O-R:

Q. Who participated in the attack on Mongor Bendugu?

A. Komba Gbundema, Colonel T, I myself and others.

Q. Who was Colonel T?

16:16:09 A. He was one of the senior officers from the national army, AFRC.

Q. Was SAJ Musa involved in that attack on Mongor?

A. No.

Q. Did SAJ Musa participate in the planning for that attack?

16:16:29 A. Yes.

Q. Were any forces defending Mongor when you attacked?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us about those forces that were defending Mongor?

16:16:46 A. Yes, it was the Guinean forces.

Q. Were they - can you describe any armaments that the Guineans had?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of weapons did they have?

16:17:03 A. They had a 40 barrel missile, 50 calibre, 106, one barrel missile. They had a lot of weapons - armoured car, war tank.

Q. What was the result of the attack on the Guineans in Mongor?

A. The attack was successful on our side.

16:17:34 Q. Can you describe what occurred?

A. We killed a lot of Guinean soldiers, civilians and we captured some ammunition and arms from them.

Q. First, I want to deal with - you've mentioned soldiers were killed, but you also mentioned civilians. Were these civilians killed because you were targeting the Guineans and they were killed by accident, or were --

MR MUNYARD: I'd be grateful if my learned friend just asked him non-leading questions about this.

16:18:18 PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Koumjian, there have been a few leading questions in the course of the afternoon that have not been objected to, but this is leading. You must rephrase.

MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. How were the civilians killed, Mr Witness? Was it

16:18:35 intentional, or unintentional?

A. Some of them were killed intentionally and some of them were killed unintentionally, because some of them were killed during the crossfire and some of them when we attacked and took over the town they were under their beds, or other areas, and we 16:18:55 started killing them.

Q. And why would you kill civilians that were hiding under their beds? What was the reason for that?

A. Because we went with one idea that when there are soldiers based in the town when no civilian is there they would not be 16:19:12 encouraged to be based there. When a civilian is there, they would be encouraged to be based there. That's why we killed them.

Q. Thank you.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: I'm sorry, I don't understand that answer

16:19:23 at all.

MR KOUMJIAN:

Q. Can you explain your answer again, Mr Witness, about why you would kill civilians in a town that the enemy forces had occupied?

A. Yes, some of the reason - one of the reason is when the Guinean soldiers or any soldiers were based in a town they would not be encouraged to base there for long if there were a civilian there. If a civilian was there they would help them to brush the 16:19:54 town and do domestic jobs for them, so they would be encouraged to base there. That's why we always killed civilians when we meet them there, because we tell them that they were the ones helping the soldiers.

Q. Just to explore that a bit further, Mr Witness, when the 16:20:11 RUF captured a town did you use the civilians in any way to support you, or no?

A. We used them to support us, some of them.

Q. You also mentioned that weapons were captured. Can you recall any specific heavy weapons that were captured in the 16:20:40 attack on Mongor?

A. Yes.

Q. Please tell us which weapons you recall being captured?

A. We managed to capture one 40 barreled missile, an armoured car, one 50 calibre and some one barrel missiles from them.

16:21:11 Q. During the attack on Mongor did the town remain intact, the houses and the buildings in the town?

A. We burnt the town.

Q. And what did you burn in the town?

A. We burnt down the houses, we burnt their armoured car, we 16:21:39 burnt the one barrel, 40 barrel missile because we had no way to carry it and some other logistics. We burnt down cars.

Q. In the houses that you burned down, do you know whether or not there was anyone inside those houses?

A. Yes, people were in the houses that were burnt.

Q. Do you know if the people escaped from the houses that were being burnt, or not?
A. Yeah, some people escaped because we used to see people running around when we took over the town, but some people stayed 16:22:20 in their houses because we heard them shouting too.
Q. When you say some people stayed in their houses, what happened to those that stayed inside that you heard shouting, if you know?
A. Some of them were burnt down, because in some houses people 16:22:38 were screaming when fire was - were already on the houses, so I know that they were burnt. There was no way for them to escape.
Q. Now, Mr Witness, you've talked about some weapons that were destroyed and some that were burnt because you couldn't carry them. Were you able to carry away any weapons that were captured 16:23:01 from the Guineans in Mongo?
A. Yes.
Q. Were you able to capture any ammunition in Mongo?
A. Yes, we captured a lot of ammunition.
Q. Can you describe what you did with the weapons and 16:23:19 ammunition that were captured from the Guineans in Mongo?
A. Yes. The ones that we were able to carry, we carried with us to Kurubonla to SAJ Musa and we handed them over to SAJ Musa.
Q. What do you recall now as far as weapons you were able to carry to SAJ Musa?
16:23:47 A. We handed the ammunition over to SAJ Musa. From there Superman came and joined us. Both of them were in control of the ammunition and we undertook a mission for Kabala with the same ammunition that was captured from Mongo.
Q. I'm going to try once again but, Mr Witness, do you recall whether you were able to carry any weapons to SAJ Musa and, if so, what were the weapons?

A. We carried a lot of weapons. We carried mortars, GMG, some RPGs that were captured, we took them along with us, and some other light weapons like pistols, AK-47s, we took them along with us.

Q. So these weapons that were handed over to SAJ Musa, do you know if they stayed with the SAJ Musa forces after the attack on Mongo?

16:24:52 A. Yes.

Q. Do you know if these weapons stayed with SAJ Musa forces after he left Kurubonla?

A. Yes.

Q. These weapons and ammunition that were captured in Mongo, they were captured using ammunition from where, Mr Witness?

A. The ammunition that we brought along from Gbarnga, Kono, I took some to Komba Gbundema in Wordu, it was the same ammunition that we were to use to attack Mongo Bendugu.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Where is Gbarnga, Kono?

16:25:48 MR KOUMJIAN: I believe those were two separate --

Q. Mr Witness, you said you took ammunition from Gbarnga and then you said Kono. Can you describe the route.

A. Yes, the ammunition that we collected from Gbarnga in Liberia, the President's farm, it was the same ammunition that we took along to Kono, Superman's ground, and Superman gave some of the ammunition to Komba Gbundema in Wordu and it was that same ammunition that we took to Kurubonla after the meeting. It was the same ammunition that we used to attack Mongo Bendugu.

Q. And it was in this attack that the ammunition and weapons were captured from the Guineans and taken to SAJ Musa?

A. Yes.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: It would also be helpful for us to have a time frame for the Mongo Bendugu attack, please.
16:26:42 MR KOUMJIAN:
Q. Mr Witness, I know it's difficult for you to get the exact times, but let's work together to try to get some idea. What year was it that you attacked Mongo Bendugu?
A. It was late '98. The ending of the rainy season we 16:27:12 attacked Mongo Bendugu. '98, I think so.
Q. Can you give us an approximate time in months, or not, for the end of the rainy season?
A. I do not remember the month.
MR KOUMJIAN: Your Honours, actually this would be a 16:27:32 convenient time for me to break. I'm moving to a different topic.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Very well, Mr Koumjian. Mr Witness, we're going to adjourn for today. We will be resuming court again tomorrow at 9.30. I have to inform you that now that you 16:27:47 have taken the oath to tell the truth here in the court, you are not to discuss your evidence with any other person until all of your evidence is finished. Do you understand this?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Please adjourn court until tomorrow at 16:28:02 9.30.

[Whereupon the hearing adjourned at 4.27 p.m. to be reconvened on Tuesday, 24 June 2008 at 9.30 a.m.]

For Chambers:	Mr Simon Meisenberg Ms Doreen Kiggundu

For the Prosecution:	Ms Brenda J Hollis Mr Christopher Santora Ms Maja Dimitrova
For the accused Charles Ghankay Taylor:	Mr Terry Munyard Mr Morris Anyah Ms Megan Dorey

Q. Black Jesus was also imprisoned at Pademba Road, yes?
A. I don't know.
Q. Well, how do you know Black Jesus?
A. I knew him, but I never knew that he was at Pademba Road
10:03:36 because they never gave me a list that these are the names of people who had been sent at Pademba Road. If I know about Martin, it was because he was my colleague operator.
Q. Do you know where Martin Moinama is today, Madam Witness?
A. I don't know if he is alive. I heard that he died.
10:04:00 Q. Who told you he died?
A. The men who were in Freetown.
Q. Did you hear that from Foday Lansana, Madam Witness?
A. No. Foday Lansana did not go to Freetown.
Q. Well, let me ask you this: You said you heard it from the 10:04:31 men in Freetown, when exactly did you hear it from the men in Freetown?
A. Yams Farm.
Q. And were you at Yams Farm about the time of the 6 January invasion?
10:04:56 A. I was in Lunsar, but I went to Yams Farm after 6 January.
Q. So you heard after 6 January that the same Martin Moinama who had been released from Pademba Road Prison had been killed.
PRESIDING JUDGE: I think the witness said died. That, to me, includes natural causes.
10:05:24 MR ANYAH:
Q. Madam Witness, did you hear whether or not Martin Moinama had been killed?
A. Yes.
Q. What exactly did you hear?

A. Lately I understood that Martin was killed because of the testimony that he gave against Pa Sankoh and I cannot say that I asked anybody who killed him or not. No, I did not ask that. But the person who told me also told me that it was Sam Bockarie who ordered his killing.

10:06:12

Q. So if your sequence of events is correct, they released him from Pademba Road Prison and, if this rumour you heard is correct, at the request of Sam Bockarie he was killed, yes?

A. Yes, according to what the person told me.

10:06:46 MR ANYAH: Madam Court Officer, can we go to page 29 of tab 1. The relevant paragraph is 172:

Q. Madam Witness, this is what you told the Prosecution about Martin Moinama, October last when you met with them. The paragraph reads:

10:07:36 "The witness has heard of Martin Moinama, also known as the Cat, and he is late. The witness believes that he was killed before the intervention. During the Freetown invasion the witness did not hear any radio message about the Cat."

Madam Witness, why do they have you telling them that 10:08:06 Martin Moinama was killed before the intervention?

A. I can answer to that. The question was if I knew Martin and I knew him, and again they asked me when did I know that he was missing and I knew when he got missing and that was at the time when the ECOMOG took over Freetown and his wife stayed with 10:08:37 us and she told us that Issa arrested her husband and she was sure that he had been killed. That was what exactly I said. And I did not get any radio message about Martin, that he was taken to Pademba Road or not. I learned that from his wife, that he had died, because she herself did not see her [sic] after that time, but later I learned that he died after 6 January.

Q. Madam Witness, you are now telling us Martin Moinama's wife stayed with you, yes?
A. Yes.
10:09:32 Q. She stayed with you and she told you what had happened to her husband, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Indeed your answer just given in court - this is a reference to what you believed the Prosecution was asking you in 10:09:51 October last, you said:
"They asked me when did I know that he was missing and I knew when he got missing and that was at the time when the ECOMOG took over Freetown and his wife stayed with us and she told us that Issa arrested her husband and she was sure that he had been 10:10:15 killed."
This is what you've just said in court, yes?
A. Yes.
Q. When the ECOMOG took over Freetown, you're referring to the intervention in February 1998, correct?
10:10:31 A. Yes.
Q. Moinama's wife was staying with you at that time. She told you her husband had been killed, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Then why are you telling us in court that during the 6
10:10:47 January invasion in 1999 Martin Moinama was one of those released from Pademba Road Prison by the RUF invading forces?
A. I have said it here that the people who released those people from Pademba Road and when they came back from Freetown it was from them that I learnt that Martin had been killed, but I

A. Yes.
Q. Does this person, Senegalese, have another name?
A. I don't know any other name for him. I don't know.
Q. Was that the first time you had met this fellow?
12:16:03 A. Yes.
Q. When you met him Superman had already moved ahead towards Koinadugu, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And you say when you met Senegalese he had some men with 12:16:18 him, right?
A. Yes, it was Senegalese who met me.
Q. And let's be more specific. It wasn't just you. It was you and other RUF fighters, yes?
A. Yes.
12:16:36 Q. What nationality was this fellow Senegalese?
A. Like I answered last, I did not ask Senegalese about his nationality and I did not hear him speak any other dialect apart from the Liberian English and he told me that he was from Liberia. So I did not ask him whether he was a Liberian or what 12:17:05 his nationality was.
Q. How many men did Senegalese meet you at Yomadu with?
A. 30.
Q. And what did you understand the name of the group in which these men belonged to to be?
12:17:41 A. What they told me was that they were STF.
Q. When you say STF, what does STF stand for?
A. Special Task Force.
Q. And you agree that there was something called the STF or Special Task Force in existence around this time in 1998 among the warring factions in Sierra Leone, yes?

A. Yes.
Q. The leader of the Special Task Force was David Livingstone Bropleh, General Bropleh, yes?
12:18:24 A. Yes.
Q. Special Task Force had been in Sierra Leone for a very long time fighting alongside the Sierra Leone Army, yes?
A. Yes.
Q. Special Task Force was made up of a number of ULIMO - ex-ULIMO fighters, yes?
12:18:43 A. Yes.
Q. You will agree with me that ULIMO were the enemy of the NPFL when you were in Kolahun in Liberia in 1993, yes?
A. Yes.
12:19:04 Q. You will agree with me that Special Task Force was made up of ex-ULIMO Liberians, yes?
A. That was what I also understood.
Q. Those Liberians are not necessarily people that would like Charles Taylor, given that they are from ULIMO, right?
12:19:35 A. Well, I cannot tell people's mind, but I knew about the ULIMO who were in Liberia and who fought against the NPFL. But I can't tell about the ones who were in Sierra Leone who were fighting as the STF. So I don't know.
Q. But you spent more time in Sierra Leone than you did in Liberia, yes?
12:20:00 A. Yes.
Q. It is one and the same ULIMO we are talking about when we speak of ULIMO in Kolahun in 1993 and ex-ULIMO fighters in Sierra Leone in 1998, yes?

A. The question I cannot answer directly, because the ULIMO and the STF, I came to know them when they joined the AFRC. So I can't tell whether they had been in Liberia at a certain point in time whilst they were fighting there at the time ULIMO was 12:20:43 fighting there, whether they were fighting amongst that group. So all the STF who came, when they said they were ULIMO, I don't know. Maybe they were the ULIMO who were fighting against Charles Taylor.

Q. You don't know, but we do agree that they were ULIMO - ex-ULIMO fighters, to be precise, right?
12:21:05

A. Like you have said it, I will take it that way.

Q. Well, it's not like I said it. Have you told the Prosecution they were ex-ULIMO fighters in a previous statement?

A. Yes.

12:21:26 Q. Now you said something in court that you did not believe that the men with Senegalese were STF. Do you recall saying that?

A. Yes.

Q. And why did you not believe that?

12:21:43 A. They asked me and I said the STF who joined the AFRC that I knew about were speaking better Krio because they had stayed long in Sierra Leone. They knew the names of so many towns and villages. But in the case of Senegalese, when they came together with the other men I did not hear them speak proper Krio. They 12:22:10 were speaking pure Liberian tongue. So I don't think they were part of the STF that I knew that I saw amongst the AFRC.

Q. But let's start with Senegalese. Senegalese, as far as you knew, was through and through an STF member, right?

A. No.

Q. Have you told the Prosecution before that he was STF?
A. I said Bai Bureh told me that Senegalese is an STF.
Q. You did say that, but you have also told the Prosecution that some of the STF you knew were Colonel Wallace, yes?
12:23:13 A. Yes.
Q. Also known as Sea Never Dry, yes?
A. Yes.
Q. You said there was a Colonel Ngallah, N-G-A-L-L-A-H, yes?
A. Colonel Ngallah, yes.
12:23:36 Q. You said there was a Major Koroma, K-O-R-O-M-O [sic], yes?
A. Yes.
Q. And then you told them Senegalese. "He was very tall and spoke Liberian and French." You included him amongst the STF, did you not?
12:24:01 A. I included him. That is when they came and joined us when we were at Koinadugu, he was together with the STF because they spoke similar languages and they ate the same food.
Q. Where did you first hear the name Red Lion battalion, Madam Witness?
12:24:33 A. At Koinadugu.
Q. And in what context did you hear that name?
A. Like I have said before, I met with the Red Lion battalion in Koinadugu because Superman and others had already been in Koinadugu and they asked me about the groups that were there and 12:25:01 they were the SLA, the STF and the RUF, and the particular Red Lion was mostly comprised of the SLA, even before the new Red Lion was formed at the time I was in Koinadugu.
Q. Well, let's leave the new Red Lion for a moment. Your evidence is that the first time you heard the phrase Red Lion

Q. What was the result of the operation?
A. When we got to at that bridge, the ECOMOG had left Koidu Town and gone to Tankoro, to that Five-Five bridge, but just as we were getting to the bridge there were people who were RUF
10:57:44 fighters in that bridge, but there were many in the bridge. The ECOMOG launched a bomb that exploded among them and over 20 RUF men died there. That made us to withdraw from that place. Though the other flanks where these men had come from, I was not with them so I can't tell exactly the time that they left Koidu, 10:58:25 but it was from that time that I left Koidu, around 4.30 in the morning, to return to Superman's ground.

MR SANTORA: Your Honours, there is just one spelling that we have spelled before. It didn't come across. Tankoro is spelt previously as T-A-N-K-O-R-O:

10:58:57 Q. Now, did there come a time when you left Superman Ground?
A. Yes.
Q. Approximately when did you leave Superman Ground?
A. From the time that I went to Superman's ground to the time that I left there, it was up to five months.
10:59:28 Q. Why did you leave Superman Ground?
A. I first left there and went to Foday Lansana in Tefeya, and when I came back Superman told me that Mosquito, who is Sam Bockarie, had given him an order to move to go to Kurubonla where the SLAs, headed by SAJ Musa, where they were based. He said he 11:00:23 should go and attack them, that Superman should launch an attack on the SLAs at Kurubonla, and that very day I was on the set when he sent a message to enquire if Superman had left to go. And Superman left that very day. He went to Yomandu.
Q. What about yourself? Did you leave with Superman, or did you not leave yet?

A. I did not go, I stayed at the base, but when Superman went after three days he sent a message for me to go.
Q. Who sent a message for you to go?
11:01:28 A. Superman sent a message for me to join him.
Q. Where?
A. At that time he was in Yomandu.
Q. Continue. What happened after he sent that message?
A. The day that I received the message in which he included me
11:01:57 and some of his bodyguards that he had left at Superman's base, we left the next day, but when we got to Yomandu I did not find Superman there. Komba was not there. It was Short Bai Bureh that I met in Yomandu.
Q. What happened at - first of all, how long did it take you 11:02:29 approximately to get from Superman's ground to Yomandu?
A. A whole day, because I did not go straight.
Q. What happened when you got to Yomandu?
A. When I got to Yomandu Superman was not there, he had already left for Kurubonla, but when I got to Yomandu 11:03:06 I communicated with him that I and his other bodyguards have arrived in Yomandu. When he went to Kurubonla, the instruction which Sam Bockarie had given him he did not carry it out. He joined the SLAs and they moved from Kurubonla and went to Kabala. When I got to Yomandu and told him that we have arrived there, he 11:03:48 said Short Bai Bureh should get manpower from among his own men whom we met so that we and the manpower from Yomandu and those of us who had come from Superman's base could go and meet them, he Superman, where they were. I passed the night in Yomandu and the next day in the evening one Senegalese met us in Yomandu.

Q. Who is Senegalese?

A. Well Senegalese when I knew him, at first when he went that evening that he arrived Bai Bureh told me that he was an STF and the STF whom I knew were the ULIMO fighters who were fighting alongside the Sierra Leone Army in Sierra Leone. So, that was what Bai Bureh told me that Senegalese was STF. I surely knew him as a Liberian because he did not know how to speak Krio, he was speaking the Liberian English, and he said he was sent by Sam Bockarie to come and join Superman with reinforcement, which was composed of 30 men, for them to go and attack - for them to launch the attack which Sam Bockarie had sent Superman to carry out, but when he got to Yomandu Superman was not there at the time. The next morning --

Q. I am sorry, before you go on --

PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes. Mr Santora, this is getting somewhat confused.

MR SANTORA: That is why I was --

PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, "he joined the SLAs", "I told him we had arrived there." Did she tell Sam Bockarie, or Superman, or who?

MR SANTORA: I am going to clarify that. I will clarify that portion first.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, there is another series of "he"s thereafter.

MR SANTORA:

Q. Mrs Witness, I just have to ask you a few questions about some of the things you have just mentioned, okay? Now first of all you said, "Sam Bockarie had given him an order to move to Kurubonla." Who did Sam Bockarie give the order to?

A. To Superman.
Q. "... to go to Kurubonla where the SLAs, headed by SAJ Musa, where they were based. He said he should go and attack them." Who said - who do you mean when you said, "He said he should go"?
11:07:28 A. If I speak the Krio, I mean Sam Bockarie told Superman to go to Kurubonla and attack SAJ Musa's men.
Q. "And that very day I was on the set when he sent a message to enquire if Superman had left to go", who sent that message?
A. Sam Bockarie.
11:08:01 Q. And then, "Superman had left that very day. He went to Yomandu." Who left to Yomandu?
A. Superman left me at Superman's ground and went to Yomandu.
Q. Now, later on when you were saying - I asked you what happened when you got to Yomandu and you said:
11:08:34 "When I got to Yomandu, Superman was not there. He had already left for Kurubonla, but when I got to Yomandu I communicated with him that I and his other bodyguards have arrived in Yomandu." Who did you communicate with when you arrived at Yomandu?
11:08:51 A. Superman.
Q. And then, "When he went to Kurubonla, the instruction which Sam Bockarie had given him he did not carry out", who is the "he" you are referring to?
A. I am sure it was Sam Bockarie who instructed Superman to 11:09:22 carry out an operation in Kurubonla and Superman did not carry it out.
Q. And then you said, "He joined the SLAs." Who do you mean by "he" there?
A. I am still referring to Superman.

Q. "They moved from Kurubonla to Kabala", who is "they"?
A. Superman and his men and SAJ Musa and his men.
Q. Then you said, "When I got to Yomandu and told him we had arrived there", who did you tell you had arrived there?
11:10:08 A. I told Superman that I and his bodyguards whom he had requested for us to meet him had arrived in Yomandu.
Q. Now, later on you said you passed the night and the next morning - the next day, I am sorry, "In the evening, one Senegalese met us at Yomandu." You went on to say - when I asked 11:10:37 you who Senegalese was you said in your response, "He was speaking the Liberian English and he said he was sent by Sam Bockarie to come and join Superman with reinforcement." When you say, "He was speaking the Liberian English", who were you referring to?
11:11:02 A. You asked me - how you asked me who Senegalese is and I am talking about Senegalese.
Q. Did you yourself have a conversation with Senegalese?
A. I spoke with him.
Q. Can you just say what he told you in that conversation?
11:11:28 A. That is what I have just said. When I first got to Yomandu, when Senegalese got to Yomandu, Bai Bureh told me that Senegalese was an STF. Senegalese himself told me that he had come from Liberia and that it was Sam Bockarie who had sent him to join Superman.
11:11:59 Q. So do you believe Senegalese was an STF, or not?
PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Anyah?
MR ANYAH: Objection. The witness said - I think she said Bai Bureh told her that Senegalese was STF. Counsel is asking her if she believed or not and I object to the form of the question.

MR SANTORA: What is wrong with the form of the question?

PRESIDING JUDGE: She may have believed him, she may not have believed him. What is the nature of your objection?

11:12:39 MR ANYAH: She received the information from somebody and - well, I withdraw the objection.

PRESIDING JUDGE: At the end of the day whether she believed it or not doesn't go to the credibility of - sorry, does not go to whether he was an STF or not. What her belief is is 11:13:02 not relevant.

MR SANTORA:

Q. So, first you said you had a conversation with Short Bai Bureh and then you had a conversation with Senegalese. Do you believe he was STF, or not?

11:13:14 A. I did not believe that he was an STF.

Q. Why?

A. Because the STFs who joined the SLAs - I mean the AFRC and the RUF whom I saw and knew, they had taken a long time in Sierra Leone, they were speaking the Krio better, but Senegalese did not 11:13:54 speak a single Krio.

Q. Now, you said Senegalese himself told you that he had come from Liberia and that it was Sam Bockarie who had sent him to join Superman. Do you know where he came from in Liberia?

A. I did not know where he had come from in Liberia.

11:14:30 Q. And you said there was 30 men there as well. Who were these 30 men that you referred to?

A. The 30 men too were men who had arms and they were all Liberians. From what they spoke, the dialects they used, I did not know of in Sierra Leone.

Q. Did these men speak Krio, as far as you know?
A. No.
Q. Do you know where they came from?
A. I did not ask them individually, but their commander who 11:15:21 brought them, that is Senegalese, said they had come from Liberia.
Q. Did you recognise the language they were speaking, or the dialect?
A. I can still recall that there were some men among them who 11:15:53 were Kpelle, whom I saw and saw them talking with the STF, and some of the Liberians who were still within the RUF who were Kpelle I heard them talking the language.
Q. And do you know what language Senegalese spoke? Well, what language did you speak with Senegalese in?
11:16:26 A. It was only Liberian English. I did not hear him speak any particular language.
Q. Is there anything else you talked about in your conversation with Senegalese?
A. I have already told you what Senegalese told me and it was 11:16:58 Senegalese and I in the group that we were, that is the signal unit, which was composed of radio people or people dealing with radio, that we went around with when we were leaving Yomandu to go to Kurubonla.
Q. What happened after you met Senegalese in Yomandu?
11:17:41 A. We left Yomandu with Senegalese. I, Superman's bodyguards and Short Bai Bureh's men who were in Yomandu whom he added on to us, left Yomandu for Kurubonla. That was the next day, after Senegalese and the others had arrived. The next day we left Yomandu.

Q. Did you eventually arrive at Kurubonla?
A. We arrived at Kurubonla, having walked all day and all night. We arrived at Kurubonla, but Superman and SAJ Musa and others were not there any longer. It was only some soldiers, some SLAs and their wives whom they had, that we met at Kurubonla.
Q. Where did you go, if anywhere, after Kurubonla?
A. We went to Koinadugu.
Q. Approximately, how long did it take you in total to get from when you left Superman Ground to Koinadugu?
A. One week.
Q. Now when you arrived at Koinadugu, can you describe what you saw when you got to Koinadugu?
A. When we got to Koinadugu, before entering Koinadugu one last village from which you left, but it was not up to two miles to Koinadugu, that was where the STFs were. That was where I met the STFs whom General Bropleh was with. That was where they were based and that was where we met men who had come from Koinadugu from Superman's location where he and Superman, SAJ Musa, were. They came ahead of us in that village and we - together we entered Koinadugu.

It was in the evening that I entered Koinadugu. All the houses that were there it was just a few houses whereby the soldiers and SAJ Musa's men who had gone there did not occupy, and I did not really see civilians who were living by themselves, like you would say they were staying in their own houses, that is just civilians in a house, living in a house there.

Q. Now aside from Superman and SAJ Musa, what other commanders do you remember being present at Koinadugu when you were there?

MR SANTORA: Yes, and I hesitate to go into a new area.

PRESIDING JUDGE: You are going into a new area?

MR SANTORA: I am.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Well, it may be appropriate therefore to adjourn and take the break now. Madam Witness, we are now going to take our mid-morning break. We will resume court at 12 o'clock. Please adjourn court.

[Break taken at 11.30 a.m.]

[Upon resuming at 12.15 p.m.]

PRESIDING JUDGE: Counsel and Madam Witness, I apologise for the late recommencing after the break. We were unavoidably detained due to a pressing judicial and jurisdictional matter, hence the delay. Mr Santora, please continue.

MR SANTORA: Thank you, Madam President:

Q. Mrs Witness, at various points in your testimony you've referred to an individual called Major Sellay. Can you spell his name?

A. S-E-L-E, but he spelt it S-E-L-L-A-Y.

Q. When you say he, you mean Major Sellay himself spelt it S-E-L-L-A-Y?

A. Yes.

Q. One other matter before we continue, Mrs Witness. This morning, when you were talking about your conversation at Yomandu with Senegalese, you said that, "Senegalese himself told me he had come from Liberia." Did he tell you why he came from Liberia to Sam Bockarie?

A. Yes.

Q. Why?

A. What he told me was that Charles Taylor had sent him and others to Sam Bockarie and Sam Bockarie sent them to Superman.

Q. Now, you were describing your observations at Koinadugu after you arrived there and, just for clarity, do you know approximately when you arrived at Koinadugu, what was the month 12:16:43 and year?
A. It was in August.
Q. And what year was that?
A. 1998.
Q. Now, you talked about various forces and units at Koinadugu 12:17:15 when you arrived. You referred to a Strike Force unit and a Red Lion battalion. What is the - what do you known about the Red Lion battalion?
A. The Red Lion battalion that I knew was the one that Red Goat, Colonel Rambo, the SLAs headed, but the Red Lion battalion 12:17:50 that was --

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can the witness repeat this.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Pause, Madam Witness. The interpreter is trying to keep up with you. Could you please repeat the part of 12:18:00 your answer that he did not hear. Start at the point where you said, "But the Red Lion battalion, that was" - now continue, please.

THE WITNESS: The new Red Lion battalion that was formed at the time I got to Koinadugu, and that was formed by Superman, the 12:18:29 STF, the SLA or AFRC and the RUF, they constituted that Red Lion battalion.

MR SANTORA:

Q. What do you mean when you say the new Red Lion battalion?
A. Because there had already been a Red Lion battalion before

A. When I was in Lunsar, I was living in the same house where Superman was and it was at the same house that the radio station was. On 6 January I went at night and I operated, but it was not for the whole day and early in the morning --

12:55:32 THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can the witness repeat.

MR SANTORA: I'm sorry to interrupt, because I heard the witness say something that's very different than what came out and I perhaps should ask her to clarify.

THE INTERPRETER: Exactly, that's what the interpreter

12:55:47 wants her to repeat. I think she used the net, instead of the night.

MR SANTORA: Exactly. That was my point as well.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Put the question again, Mr Santora.

MR SANTORA: I'll start it over:

12:55:58 Q. Mrs Witness, I'm just going to ask you again if you can try and speak slowly so the interpreters can keep up with what you're saying, okay?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, I asked you from your vantage point at Lunsar

12:56:14 on 6 January 1999 can you describe what happened?

A. I started by saying that when I was in Lunsar I was at the same house as Superman's and it was at that same house that we had the radio that was there for Superman and was operated by me. 6 January I switched on the radio, but I did not operate for the 12:56:56 whole day. On 7 January, early in the morning --

Q. I am sorry, Mrs Witness. I don't mean to interrupt you, but I'm just going to ask you to take it step by step. On 6 January when you put the radio on, did you hear anything?

A. I did not hear anything.

signing of the peace accord?
A. Yes.
Q. Now, earlier you said that when Zogoda was attacked and when CO Mohamed - when Sam Bockarie took over leadership from CO Mohamed, do you know when Zogoda was attacked?
10:38:30
A. I can't tell the exact month, but it was in '96.
Q. Do you remember if it was before or after the signing of the peace accord, if you remember?
PRESIDING JUDGE: [Microphone not activated].
10:38:57
MR SANTORA: No, I am referring to the attack, a different attack, your Honours, on Zogoda, not - unless I - one moment. I will verify it. If your Honours just - I am referring to an attack on Zogoda and I believe the record states that in terms of that time frame your Honours were alluding to, which is referring to the attack on the witness's position at Black Water.
10:39:33
PRESIDING JUDGE: Oh, I see.
MR SANTORA: If that distinction is --
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Well, you need to make that distinction clear, because we were talking of one attack and then suddenly of 10:39:46
some other attack.
MR SANTORA: I will make the distinction clear:
Q. Now, you said that Zogoda was attacked and this was when CO Mohamed - when Sam Bockarie took over leadership from CO Mohamed. Do you remember when this attack at Zogoda occurred in terms of 10:40:14
was it before or after the signing of the peace accord?
A. It was before they signed the peace.
Q. Now, after the attack on your position near Black Water and after the peace accord was signed, what happened to you?
A. When they attacked, when the Kamajors started attacking us, were based in Gaya?

A. Yes.
Q. Where is that?
A. Gaya is between Bumpe and Mortema when you come from Sewafe 11:00:42 going to Koidu Town, but it's inside going to Yengema. It's not on the main road.
Q. Just and - well, I will get into a more precise - how you pointed out precisely later on, but just for clarity, do you know what chiefdom Gaya is in?
11:01:09 A. I can't know the chiefdom because I did not grow up in Kono.
Q. It is in Kono. How far away is it - you said between Bumpe and Mortema, is that correct?
A. Yes.
11:01:27 Q. About how far away is it from Bumpe?
A. It could be four miles, because when you leave Bumpe, going to Mortema, you will see Gaya junction on the main road, but the Gaya itself is inside.
Q. What road is this you are referring to?
11:02:03 A. It is the Kono-Masingbi Road.
Q. And Gaya is in Kono District, is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. So describe what happened when you started basing in Gaya?
A. Well, when I was in Gaya it was CO Isaac who took me, 11:02:47 together with Foday Lansana. We were in Gaya, in the barracks at the headquarters where the SLAs were. That was where we stayed.
Q. Before I ask you to continue with describing this, can you tell the Court what was your relationship with Foday Lansana?
A. He was my bush husband.

Q. And how long was he your bush husband for?
A. For seven years.
Q. And when - can you describe what was the time period of your relationship?
11:03:52 A. From 1994 to 2000.
Q. And did you have any --
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Santora, I imagine you are going to elicit evidence as to the meaning of this word "bush husband"?
MR SANTORA: Yes, I was planning on doing that, your 11:04:24 Honour, thank you:
Q. Now, when you say "bush husband", what do you mean?
A. Well, at the time that we were in the bush we were together in the same place as husband and wife and we gave birth to children. When I say bush husband, it means he never knew my 11:04:58 mother or my father, nor any of my relatives to whom he could have gone to ask for my hand in marriage.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Was this a marriage by consent?
MR SANTORA:
Q. Did you hear the justice's question?
11:05:26 A. I heard it well and I can say yes because I was not under gun point. At that time I was in the RUF and it was during the time I was undergoing my training. It was at that time that he fell in love with me.
Q. How many children did you have together?
11:05:57 A. We had three, but two are alive now.
Q. And Foday Lansana that you are referring to, what was his other name, if he had one?
A. CO Nya.

to the front lines. Is that your evidence, Mr Witness?
A. Yes.
Q. Well, let's look at tab 2 and your statement to the Office of the Prosecutor. Your Honours, this is the same statement from 10:12:07 late last year and I will be referring to page 7. Mr Witness, these are notes the Prosecution took, disclosed to us. On page 7, paragraph 32, it reads:

"The witness attended shortly after his birthday in April 1998 a secret meeting that was held in the bush between Buedu and 10:12:48 Dawa. There was approximately 100 officers present in this meeting and most of the RUF vanguards were there. Sam Bockarie, Harris Momoh, Eldred Collins, Sam Colley, Superman, Issa Sesay, Morris Kallon, Augustine Gbao, SYB Rogers, CO Isaac, Peter Vandi, Karmoh Kanneh, Ebony, Zedman, Amara Peleto and CO Rashid were all 10:13:34 there. Some AFRC were also there like JPK and Gullit. Jungle was there with another very important Liberian general who was there with some bodyguards. The witness cannot remember the name of the Liberian general."

Next paragraph, paragraph 33:

10:13:58 "During this meeting the situation of Issa Sesay who had dropped diamonds in Liberia was discussed and it was decided to send him to the front lines as a result."

Do you see that, Mr Witness?
A. Yes.
10:14:16 Q. You told this Court yesterday of a meeting where you were present concerning Issa Sesay in the jungle between Buedu and Dawa and you spoke of seeing Jungle there. You spoke of seeing General Ibrahim there, yes?
A. Yes.

Q. You told the Prosecution last October/November that you were present at this same meeting and that that was the meeting where Issa Sesay was punished by being sent to the front lines, yes?

10:14:57 A. Yes.

Q. You told the Prosecution that the reason for Issa Sesay's punishment was diamonds. He had dropped some diamonds in Liberia, yes?

A. No, I did not say so.

10:15:21 Q. Why did you tell us that you were at this meeting and yet you told the Issa Sesay investigators that you were in Koindu and you heard about this over the radio? Tell us why.

A. The punishment that was meeted out to Issa at the front line, that was what I was referring to when I said I was in 10:15:47 Koindu when I heard it over the radio. That is what I am talking about. But this other one when he dropped the diamonds, I was not in Koindu. I was at the meeting.

Q. The Prosecution's interview notes clearly say that it was at this meeting that the decision was made to send Issa Sesay to 10:16:12 the front lines and it is consistent with what you told us in court. Do you agree, Mr Witness?

A. Well, it was - that error was made by the Prosecutor. I did not tell them so, because I clearly spelt it out. Even in the last statement it is there and even to Issa Sesay's Defence 10:16:35 it is there. There were two different issues.

Q. Why did you tell the Issa Sesay Defence team you did not know what the problem was and yet in court the notes have you saying this was about diamonds?

A. There was a problem between Issa and Sam Bockarie. I did not know what the problem was. This other problem is different from that other problem that existed between Issa and Sam Bockarie. It was between them. It was an individual problem between them. This was a general problem for the entire RUF. That was why everybody went to that meeting.

Q. Yes, and that was the meeting, as the Prosecution's notes say, you told them when Issa Sesay was sent to the front lines, yes?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. What is not to your knowledge? The Prosecution's notes are not to your knowledge that you have just seen?

A. The sending of Issa from this meeting, because from this meeting it was a front line arrangement after Issa Sesay's discussion. We weren't on a front line arrangement. I did not hear them send Issa from this meeting. It was only when I was in Koindu that they sent Issa to the front line, which I heard. That was as a result of a problem between him and Sam Bockarie, but this was a general problem for the revolution.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Witness, are you saying that what is written in paragraph 33 is an error? Namely when it says, "During the meeting the situation of Issa Sesay who had dropped the diamonds in Liberia was discussed and it was decided to send him to the front line as a result", you are saying that that is a mistake?

THE WITNESS: It could be a mistake on the part of the Prosecution, yes, my Lord.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: You are saying that it is not true, it didn't happen in the meeting, or that you weren't in the meeting? I don't understand. What are you saying?

THE WITNESS: After the meeting - during this meeting - to say that after this meeting - at that meeting we discussed sending Issa Sesay at the front line. That's what I'm talking about. It was not at that meeting. The front line which Issa went to when Sam Bockarie sent him there, that was an issue between Sam Bockarie and Issa. But here I am seeing the Prosecution - I am seeing that the Prosecution has written it there so that's what I'm saying, that it might be a mistake on the part of the Prosecution.

10:19:29 MR ANYAH:

Q. Mr Witness, I am putting it to you that you are lying when you try to suggest you're speaking about two different incidents. What do you say?

A. I am not telling lies. I am saying the truth, because 10:19:46 I was there. What I saw happen is what I am talking about.

Q. I am putting it to you that when you spoke with the Issa Sesay Defence team and you did not mention Colonel Jungle and you did not mention General Ibrahim and you did not mention any of these names, Superman and the like, because you said to them you 10:20:13 were not at the meeting, that was the more accurate story. That's what I'm putting to you. What do you have to say?

A. I did not tell Issa Sesay Defence that I went to a meeting and that Colonel Jungle and others were there and they never asked me about Colonel Jungle's business. It was Issa Sesay's 10:20:34 business that they were asking me about. They did not ask me about any outsider. It was Issa Sesay's personal business that they were asking me about. What they were asking me about was the answer I was rendering.

Q. And I am putting it to you that when you come into this

TRIAL CHAMBER II

Before the Judges:	Justice Teresa Doherty, Presiding Justice Richard Lussick Justice Julia Sebutinde Justice Al Hadji Malick Sow, Alternate
For Chambers:	Mr Simon Meisenberg Ms Doreen Kiggundu
For the Registry:	Ms Rachel Irura
For the Prosecution:	Ms Brenda J Hollis Mr Alain Werner Ms Maja Dimitrova

thanked Sam Bockarie and all of us who came to attend the meeting and that he was praying that the cause of the revolution will be successful. He said he was there to tell us that the RUF and the AFRC and the relationship between them was recognised by Charles 10:37:32 Taylor, and that he was saying that although we have been pushed out of the city, we shouldn't worry ourselves, but that he was advising that we try and get hold over Kono, because that was where we will get our resources.

Then he also discussed the maintenance of an airstrip. 10:37:55 There was an airstrip that we were trying to construct behind Buedu and he said we should also try, as fast as possible, to construct that airstrip, because in case of any emergency landing of materials, the aircraft will have to land there. So it was during that meeting that I again saw Colonel Jungle.

10:38:19 Q. Thank you, Mr Witness. Now, I just want to clarify a few things. First you said that there was a call to Koindu for the battalion commander and the adjutant to come to the meeting, so at the time of that call who was the battalion commander in Koindu?

10:38:48 A. It was Colonel Harris. He was called Colonel Harris.

Q. And who was Colonel Harris?

A. He was a junior commando. He was a Sierra Leonean.

Q. Do you know his full name?

A. Harris Momoh.

10:39:09 Q. And when did he come to Koindu to become the battalion commander?

A. It was when the Guineans attacked Koindu and he was the one that Sam Bockarie sent with the reinforcement to go and help the battle in Koindu. So when he went there, he now stayed there as the commander.

Q. Now, you said that they called as well the adjutant from Koindu to come, so who was the adjutant that they called to come from Koindu?

10:39:56 A. At that time I was acting as adjutant in Koindu, I was.

Q. Because yesterday you told us that after the intervention you were sent to Koindu and at that time nobody was in charge of Koindu and you were acting as the one in charge in Koindu, so when did you become the acting adjutant in Koindu?

10:40:29 A. When Sam Bockarie sent Colonel Harris to take over in Koindu and when he became the commander I started acting as adjutant under him.

Q. Now, at the meeting that you told us about, who that you can remember was present in this meeting?

10:40:58 A. Colonel Harris was there, I was there, Superman came, Augustine Gbao, CO Augustine Gbao came, CO Augustine Gbao. Issa Sesay himself was there. There was an adjutant called Hi-Rash, Rashid Sandy, he was also present in the meeting and some other senior RUF authorities, most of them were present in that meeting

10:41:37 because it was a matter that concerned the RUF.

Q. And then when you said there was an adjutant called Hi-Rash, Rashid Sandy, who was Hi-Rash? Who was Rashid Sandy?

A. Well, Rashid Sandy was a junior commando. He was the man who was acting as general adjutant for the RUF, but he was not 10:42:05 actually the general adjutant because it was a vanguard called CO Kposowa who was the general adjutant, but at that time CO Kposowa was not with us. It was Hi-Rash that was acting as the general adjutant with us.

MR WERNER: Your Honour, I will try to get clarification

Buedu. He too had come from Koindu and gone Buedu. When I went I met them there. They told me, "Abor, why didn't you come for the meeting?" I said, "You know that we had some problem there and I was part of the fighting." That was what I called problem. 12:12:34 There was some pressure, those men wanted to advance and I said, "But we burnt down one of their war tanks from them, but we thought they would still attempt to advance on us so we were on a strong defensive, but we heard about the meeting so what was the meeting about?"

12:12:53 So Shabado, Ray and some other men explained to me that Master had come. They said he had come with ammo, a lot of ammo, and in fact he, Eddie Kanneh and others had come. One AFRC strong man who was called Eddie Kanneh, they said he came together with them. They said they went to Liberia to the father 12:13:23 and the Pa - they crossed Liberia and they went to Burkina Faso and when they came from Burkina Faso they came back with a lot of ammunition and arms, and when they came back they were even drawing plans for --

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can the witness slow down 12:13:41 and repeat.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, you are going too fast again. You have speeded up. Please go back to where you said, "They came back with a lot of ammunition and arms and when they came back they were even drawing plans ..." Continue from there, 12:13:55 speak slowly for the interpreter. Please proceed.

THE WITNESS: So Shabado and others told me that they had drawn a war plan in the meeting. A lot of people attended the meeting. They said almost all the front line commanders attended. He said, "You were the only people that we did not see, but then we understand that you had some pressure on you." He said they had drawn a war plan to go and attack Kono and Segbwema, Bunumbu-Segbwema axis simultaneously and that they were arranging for those men to go their own ammunition. I said, "How about the meeting? Who were the people attending the meeting?" They told me that Colonel Jungle was present and in fact Eddie Kanneh and CO Mosquito were there, the two of them came from the mission, that's the trip that they made to Liberia and Burkina Faso. They said the two of them came back. They said Colonel Jungle was there, General Ibrahim himself was there and Abu Keita and some other Liberians. He said all of them were there. In fact he said Abu Keita was to be with us for the mission. They said they had come. He said --

MR WERNER:

Q. Just pause, Mr Witness. First you talk - once you spoke about the Master, that Master came. Who did you refer to when you said Master?

A. Sam Bockarie. I had said it once or twice here in this Court that we used to call Sam Bockarie Master, so any time I use Master I will be referring to Sam Bockarie. Then Father, we used to call Charles Taylor the Father. So at times - I am still used to calling him that way, that's why. So they said they had come and they had drawn the plan and there was a big offensive at hand in the 2nd and 1st Brigades. Then he said, "Maybe they will even have to call you for reinforcement."

PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Werner, I think your witness has strayed far away from your question.

MR WERNER: Yes, thank you, your Honour:

Q. You mentioned Eddie Kanneh, you said he was an AFRC strong man. What else, if anything, were you told about Eddie Kanneh at that time?

A. They said Eddie Kanneh and Sam Bockarie went to Liberia, right up to when they went to Burkina Faso and the two of them returned from Liberia into Sierra Leone, the two of them were in the meeting.

Q. Mr Witness, just try, if you can, to answer my question. What else about Eddie Kanneh himself? You said he was an AFRC strong man --

12:16:59 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Werner, the question you asked the witness was, "What did you hear about the meeting?" Now I personally am lost. All this evidence he is giving, is it a precursor to the meeting or is this something that happened in the meeting? There are like two big paragraphs, I don't know 12:17:17 what they relate to. Certainly they don't appear to relate to the question you asked, "So what did you hear at this meeting?"

MR WERNER: Your Honour, the witness said that he was not at the meeting.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: About the meeting.

12:17:30 MR WERNER: Yes, your Honour.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: The answers he gives I do not think are related to what he heard about the meeting.

MR WERNER:

Q. So, Mr Witness, if you can set your mind to exactly what 12:17:43 Shabado told you - Shabado and the other bodyguards told you about what happened in this meeting. Can you tell us just at that time when you went there what were you told about that meeting?

A. The bodyguards told me about the meeting, that Master and others had come, Master and Eddie Kanneh - I meant Sam Bockarie, they had come from Liberia with a lot of ammunition. So they called up for a meeting and so all front line commanders and senior vanguards were there at the meeting. They welcomed them and they explained how they travelled, where they went and how they had come and even the materials that they brought. They explained that in the meeting.

12:18:26

Q. Just pause there, Mr Witness. Who explained that in the meeting, how they had travelled? Who explained that, according to what you were told?

12:18:41

A. It was Sam Bockarie who was giving the report about how their trip was, what they went to do and what they had brought. That's what he was telling me. He said but there were a lot of dignitaries present in a meeting, even SYB Rogers, the War Council chairman, was present. The front line commanders too were in attendance. Then the Liberian government representative. He said Colonel Jungle and General Ibrahim were in the meeting. All of them were in the meeting together with Abu Keita. They called the name of a man called Abu Keita. He too came from Liberia, this Abu Keita.

12:19:10

12:19:36

They said Sam Bockarie explained about how they travelled, what they brought, whatever transpired during the trip and SYB Rogers, the War Council chairman, thanked them in his address whilst he was addressing the meeting and some other senior officers also spoke, like Morris Kallon. CO Issa too spoke and thanked them and they drew a war plan, how they were to attack Kono and Bunumbu-Segbwema.

12:19:58

Q. Pause there. You said that you were told about what they had brought. What did you mean? What was discussed according to what you were told? What was discussed in the meeting about anything being brought? Can you tell that again?

A. They brought arms and ammunition, RPG rocket, the bombs. They brought a lot of those for the missions that was consistent with the war plans that they had drawn for Kono and Kenema. Those are the materials. They said they brought a lot of them.

Q. Mr Witness, several times you said that they had drawn a war plan. What were you told about this war plan? How drew the war plan?

12:21:18 A. It was Sam Bockarie together with the other senior officers like Issa, Morris Kallon and others. They drew how the attack should go on, who should go to Kono and who should go to Kenema. They divided the officers and from that meeting everybody should go straight to his location where he had been assigned. You 12:21:45 should go with your materials and start your attack.

Q. Now you mentioned someone called Abu Keita. Who was Abu Keita?

A. Abu Keita was a Liberian fighter who came, whom they said came. They said he too was present at the meeting and they said 12:22:13 he, Abu Keita, was to be part of the mission to go and attack.

Q. Were you told anything about who had sent Abu Keita to Sierra Leone?

MR ANYAH: Objection.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, Mr Anyah?

12:22:35 MR ANYAH: I am objecting to the leading in the question.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, it is leading, Mr Werner. Rephrase it.

MR WERNER:

Q. Mr Witness, what, if anything, were you told about who had apart from that particular time it was two times again that he told me that he went to Liberia with Sam Bockarie and came back, because I discussed with him after that two times that he told me something about that again.

16:08:43 Q. And the first time --

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Was the discussion twice, or was the journey twice?

MR WERNER:

Q. So, Mr Witness, are you saying that Shabado went twice to 16:08:51 Liberia, or did he tell you twice about one trip to Liberia?

A. He went to Liberia two times, that is what I mean.

Q. And what did he tell you after the first trip to Liberia?

A. He said they brought materials; that is ammunition and bombs.

16:09:19 Q. And can you remember when did Shabado come back from Liberia with ammunition and bombs?

A. No, I can't recall the exact time that he came. When I used to take leave from Koindu to go to Buedu and see my family, at times I was fortunate to meet him there and that was 16:09:46 the time we had the privileged conversations. If it was the time that they were just returning from Liberia, or they were preparing to go there, he will explain those things to me. So those were all things that he told me so as to keep our spirits going, that something must come to the ground and that we should 16:10:07 hold on our ground.

Q. And concerning this first trip he told you about what, if anything, did he tell you about where he got these arms and ammunition from?

A. They went and got it from Liberia. From Charles Taylor in Liberia.

Q. And how did you - well, Mr Witness, the second conversation you had with Mohamed Banya, what did he tell you about the second trip?

16:10:48 A. They went there for the same material business and food for the soldiers who were on the ground.

Q. Now again, Mr Witness, you told us about the day of your birthday in April 1998 and you told us what happened that day. The first time you spoke with Mohamed Banya about his first trip, was it before or after your birthday?

16:11:20 A. It was after my birthday. The first day I told you I saw him was on my birthday, when Sam Bockarie had the satellite phone. That was the time they went - my first time to see him go inside and it was after the fighting that took place in Koindu that I used to go to Buedu and come back. Those were the times I used to get those discussions with him.

16:11:49 Q. And about how long after - so, you told us that the fighting in Koindu started in June 1998. How long after that time did you have the first conversation with Mohamed Banya?

16:12:14 A. I can't recall the exact duration, how long it took, but it did not actually take long because immediately after that fighting Sam Bockarie used to invite us frequently for us to give him updates about how the fighting was going, because from Koindu to Guinea was just 17 miles and so any bombardment that was

16:12:40 happening there he could hear it. At that time the Guineans were frequently bombarding and by then the Guinean people had already packed up and run away, so he could either send somebody with a message to know what was happening or that he will send some of his boys to go and check. So he always wanted to know what was

Q. Mr Kargbo, we are dealing with the second delegation. When the second delegation, who had gone you say to get arms and ammunition, came back, what did they tell you?

A. Well, when they came back they met us in Magburaka at that 13:21:57 time and they came on board a plane with the arms.

Q. How long after they had gone to Liberia did they return?

A. Within a week.

Q. So, they came back before the arms and ammunition came to Magburaka?

13:22:23 A. Some of them came on board the aeroplane.

Q. Who came on board the aeroplane?

A. I can recall Lieutenant Fonti Kanu and a guy who had on Burkina Faso military fatigue with head dress. They came down with the arms.

13:22:54 Q. Well the Burkina Faso man wasn't a member of the delegation that had gone from Freetown to Monrovia, was he?

A. He was not part of the delegation.

Q. No. I am asking you who went on the delegation and who came back on the plane and I also want to know who came back before 13:23:12 the plane?

A. SYB Rogers and others returned before the arrival of the aeroplane. Mike Lamin, Fonti Kanu and Musa were those who came on board the aeroplane.

Q. Right, so Mike Lamin doesn't come back until he lands with 13:23:36 that aeroplane with materials?

A. Yes.

Q. So put him on one side, when SYB Rogers comes back did he tell you what Mr Taylor had said?

A. By then he did not explain anything to the Supreme Council had to lie. I said, "Yes, they are fine." And that I didn't tell Taylor because I was afraid to tell him that because it could have appeared as though I was putting words into Gaddafi's mouth.

16:14:11 Q. Well, we will go into that a little further later, but I just want to understand your time in Libya. What period of time were you the ambassador in Libya and Tunisia?

A. Three years.

Q. And during the time you were there did you stay in those 16:14:31 countries all the time? During the time you were the ambassador, did you stay?

A. No, most of the time I was in Liberia. I am scared of cold. I have a cardiac problem. When the place is cold I won't stay there, I had to go back home. When the winter is over I go 16:14:49 back to work.

Q. And how did you stay up to date with what was happening in Liberia and the region when you were in Tunisia or Libya?

A. Well, it was a difficult thing because I was an ambassador at the time. Apart from being inspector general, when I became 16:15:11 ambassador I was behind the iron curtain. I was very far away from Liberia. I only knew about Liberia when I visited Liberia.

Q. You said you were ambassador for three years?

A. Yes.

Q. After being ambassador did you move to another position?

16:15:29 A. Yes, I became Vice-President when Enoch Dogolea died, when the former Vice-President died, then I became Vice-President in his place.

Q. And how did that come about?

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Rapp, what would assist us is some time frames for these things, please.

MR RAPP: Yes:

Q. So you said - let's go back at the beginning. You were ambassador to Libya. When did that job begin?

16:16:01 A. 1997.

Q. And you were there for three years. When did you move to the vice-presidency?

A. 2000.

Q. And how did that come about that you became Vice-President?

16:16:18 A. Well, according to our laws the vice - when the Vice-President died there will be an election in the legislature. There was an election in the legislature and our own party, we voted against 52 names. 52 names in our party first, okay.

Q. And what was Taylor's attitude about you becoming Vice-President?

16:16:50 A. To be exact, he was the one who chose me to be his Vice-President before I could even put it into vote. He said I should become his Vice-President and that was put to a vote. Out of 52 persons who came forward I won the elections anyway to become a Vice-President to him.

16:17:14 Q. When you say elections, who voted?

A. The legislature voted and my own party voted.

Q. So you were elected by the legislature by the House and Senate?

16:17:29 A. Yes, the House and Senate and they represented the people of the country and so that's the law. They will not organise a new election which will cost more money, but the people of the House - in the House of the Senate and the House of Representatives, both houses voted and my name was put forward to the people in the country. And lastly my party voted and they chose me to be the Vice-President.

Q. Let's move now to people involved in Taylor's government during his presidency both when you were ambassador and Vice-President. A bit ago you answered questions about Benjamin Yeaten from before and I wanted to ask you did Yeaten have a position during Taylor's presidency?

A. Yes, Yeaten was in a serious position. He was the director of the special services, SSS, Special Security Services. They were responsible for the President's movement, the President's family, the President's cabinet ministers and so forth.

Q. And that was one. You said he had two responsibilities?

A. Two responsibilities. He was also a battle group commander. When there was any conflict anywhere, he had a group called Jungle Fire, he had to take that assignment to go there. He was not really in his office as an SS director. He was always out of there ensuring that nobody brought war to Liberia because there were conflicts in all of that country. Some had come from Guinea and some other areas. So he was always there to ensure.

Q. And this Jungle Fire group, what did it do specifically?

A. It's a fighting group. The fighting group that was very strong. They were trained to fight. They were at the back of the SS director. Whenever there was trouble he moved with them to quieten tension and they were very strong people.

Q. Do you know how many people were in Jungle Fire?

A. I wouldn't know. I wouldn't know, but it was a group of soldiers.

Q. Can you recall any names of individuals that were members of Jungle Fire under Yeaten?

A. I will call one or two names that I can remember. The boss himself, Benjamin Yeaten. There was Zigzag Marzah, he was one of the strong men in the Jungle Fire. He was one of the commanders in Jungle Fire.

16:20:20 Q. Now, in terms of power, how did the power of someone like Yeaten in the Taylor government compare to say the power of a cabinet minister like a defence minister?

A. No, he was powerful, to be frank. Benjamin was a very powerful figure in Taylor's government. Even I myself as 16:20:46 Vice-President would almost always salute Benjamin Yeaten, because he had great powers. He could do anything to anybody before the President knows about it. He did not wait for orders any more.

Q. Well, who had more power, Taylor or Yeaten?

16:21:07 A. No, Taylor had more power. He was the President. He was the President. But Benjamin made himself so powerful that you could not mention harm to him. But Taylor was still the President. He had the greater power.

Q. The greater power than who?

16:21:28 A. Than Benjamin Yeaten.

Q. Did Yeaten have a deputy in the SSS?

A. Yes, he had a deputy for operations. He had two deputies that I knew of. He had Joseph Montgomery and Benjamin - I mean, sorry, he had Joe Tuah.

16:21:56 Q. And you have said they were deputies for different sections?

A. Yes, different operations.

Q. Okay, now what were the different operations that each of these men was in charge of?

peace agreement by combatants supporting the government. Is that your evidence?

A. The RUF did not attack, they defended.

Q. I want to ask you now about the second meeting. This is the one somewhere near the Waterworks. This is near Buedu, but in the bush, is that correct?

12:35:23

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this was before Sam Bockarie went to Burkina Faso, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

12:35:53

Q. How long before Sam Bockarie went to Burkina Faso?

A. Well, I can't remember the date, but I can draw your attention to the fact that it was after Abacha's death that we held this meeting. I did not date it.

Q. Well, Abacha died in June 1998. How long after Abacha's death was this meeting?

12:36:21

A. Well, that meeting, after June. It could be around August or September, around that period.

Q. And why do you say the meeting was held in the bush?

A. Well, we are afraid of the air raid, the ECOMOG air raid.

12:37:04

Q. Now was it you who told the Prosecutors about this meeting first of all, or did the Prosecutors say to you that they understood there had been a meeting and asked you questions about it?

A. Well, I can't remember if I told him or he asked, because it was in a statement. I don't want to tell you that, whether I told him or he asked.

12:37:40

Q. Yes, I will be corrected if I'm wrong, but I don't think that there is anything in your statements before 1 November 2007 they give you, the commander. So I did not know whether they coded it, or they just sent it.

Q. But as far as you are concerned that instruction went out to all stations loud and clear, yes?

12:59:27 A. Yes, sir, because he sent it to all stations.

Q. Now, who was at that meeting from the AFRC?

A. Johnny Paul was there.

Q. Yes.

A. Eddie Kanneh was there, Akim Turay was there, Gullit was 12:59:58 there and some others.

Q. Why wasn't SAJ Musa there?

A. Well, even in Kono SAJ Musa - SAJ Musa did not even come to Kono. Just after the AFRC, SAJ Musa was in the northern area.

Q. Right. And can I just establish again from you, it is my 13:00:37 fault I have momentarily forgotten, when do you say this meeting was held?

A. Waterworks. Between Waterworks and Buedu.

Q. I am sorry, Mr Kanneh. It is when, not where?

A. Well, I think that meeting was after Abacha's death. After 13:01:07 Abacha's death around June, almost about the end of 2008.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: It can't be 2008, Mr Witness.

MR MUNYARD: I think he is suffering from the same problem as me quoting decades.

THE WITNESS: Sorry, sorry. Yes, 2009.

13:01:34 MR MUNYARD:

Q. Mr Kanneh, I think that you have just moved by a decade - by ten years.

A. Yes.

Q. Don't worry about it. Even some of us do that.

A. He is also liable to make mistakes, so as he stands there he has also been making mistakes and he will say "Sorry". So I am also a human being and so if I make a mistake I will then say "Sorry". So, I want to say sorry.

13:02:06 PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you, Mr Witness.

MR MUNYARD:

Q. That is absolutely fine.

PRESIDING JUDGE: So, do you want to try and answer the question now? He did say it was after Abacha's death, around 13:02:28 June.

MR MUNYARD: Yes.

PRESIDING JUDGE: And then you got the years mixed up.

THE WITNESS: After June.

MR MUNYARD: Yes, I just want to check something:

13:03:05 Q. This was the very long meeting, yes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have a look, please, in tab - yes, it is the same tab, but at page 44283. (I am trying to use the handwritten note because it is more contemporaneous, as I understand it, but I can't find 13:03:35 the point in there that I am now about to draw attention to.) I would like to look at page 44283, paragraph 38. Now I am going to read this out to you, Mr Mongor [sic]. Tell me if this is what you told the Prosecution.

A. Kanneh, sir, not Mongor.

13:04:10 Q. I am sorry, I am afraid --

PRESIDING JUDGE: I thought I was the only one with a surname problem.

MR MUNYARD: No, it may be hunger that is causing it, but there we are:

Q. Mr Kanneh, did you tell the Prosecution the following, paragraph 38, that you believed in terms of the timing of this meeting that it was after the intervention? Did you tell them that?

13:04:39 A. Yes, sir.

Q. That it was after Issa Sesay dropped the diamonds, did you tell them that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That it was before Sani Abacha of Nigeria died, did you 13:04:54 tell them that?

A. After his death.

Q. Did you tell them that it was before Sani Abacha of Nigeria died?

A. No.

13:05:03 Q. So, that is wrong where they have recorded that on that page that we have just been looking at?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Because if it was before Sani Abacha died it would have to be either the very beginning of June, or May, or even earlier, 13:05:28 wouldn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I think the reason why I called you by the wrong name is I want to ask you about Mr Mongor. He was present at that meeting, you say?

13:05:48 A. Isaac Mongor?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you and he speak at all, to each other I mean?

A. Well, we did not personally discuss, but he was a senior

A. Repeat that. Let me get it clearly.
Q. Do you remember telling the Court when you were giving your evidence to Ms Baly that this meeting started about 9, lasted three hours and ended about midnight?
13:17:09 A. Here? In this Court yesterday?
Q. Yes. And that's not actually right, is it? It started later and ended later, didn't it?
A. It started at 9 and when it ended we went to bed. That was what I made mention of here.
13:17:38 Q. Could it have started as late as 11 at night?
A. No.
Q. Page 44309, please, about halfway down the page we see a sentence that reads, "The following questions refer to the time after Sam Bockarie came back from Burkina Faso." Mr Kanneh, you 13:18:26 were asked a question, or it has been recorded at any rate that you were asked the question, "Was there another meeting at Sam Bockarie's house that took place at night?" Were you asked that question?
A. If at the time Sam Bockarie came whether there was a 13:18:48 meeting held in his premises?
Q. This is the interview of 1 November last year. Do you remember being asked, "Was there another meeting at Sam Bockarie's house at night?"
A. Yes, this is the meeting you are trying to talk about.
13:19:09 That is the meeting.
Q. And the answer that is recorded at the bottom of that page is, "Yes, it took place from 11 p.m. to 2 a.m." Did you say that?
A. Well, that was the time. The misunderstanding was with the time, whether it is 11 or 9, if I said so then I'm sorry.

Q. So you agree that it did take place from 11 p.m. to 2 am?
A. Yes, sir. Let's take the 11, the one that I had said before.
13:19:55 Q. Right. So you think that the answer that you gave nearer to the time of these events is likely to be more accurate than the evidence that you have given in court. Do you agree?
A. If it's this particular one the time is 11 at night?
Q. Do you agree that the answers that you gave to questions 13:20:29 that were asked nearer to the time of the events you were discussing are likely to be more accurate than your evidence in court if there is a disagreement between --
A. No, no.
Q. Hang on, if there is a disagreement between the evidence 13:20:46 you give in court and the answers that you appear to have given nearer to the time of the events?
A. No.
Q. And it was after this meeting ended that you all gathered round on the veranda and a phone call was made to Mr Taylor, yes?
13:21:11 A. Yes.
Q. So at 2 o'clock in the morning some time in December of 1998 your colleagues decide to ring up Mr Taylor in Liberia and wake him up, if indeed he was asleep, and give him the news of this meeting? Is that what you were telling the Court?
13:21:40 A. Our colleagues? Repeat starting from that side. That our colleagues woke up Mr Taylor, please repeat that question, sir.
Q. Are you telling the Court that at some time after 2 o'clock in the morning on a night in December 1998 your group of commanders telephoned Mr Taylor to give him the news of the

MR MUNYARD: Madam President, I'm in the Court's hands.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Is it in answer to the question, Mr Witness?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir. I want to ask something. I want to get some clarification.

14:35:29

PRESIDING JUDGE: What is the clarification you need?

THE WITNESS: I would like to know if the total went up to 12, because I was not counting when I was calling the names.

MR MUNYARD: All right. I can answer that:

14:35:50 Q. Mr Kanneh, what you said was that, "We were 12 in number", and you gave the names that you could recall. I don't think you gave a total of 12 names in your evidence on Friday, but you were giving the names that you remembered and what you said was this:

"Well, we were 12 in number that particular night that we 14:36:12 were present. I don't know how many names I have made mention of, but we were 12 in number."

Do you see? You may not have remembered all of them on Friday, but you did it make it very plain that there were 12 of you.

14:36:28 A. Yes, sir. That's what I said, because when I called out the names later I said "and others".

Q. I'm going from page 9419 of the transcript. Now, let's see what the Prosecution have recorded by looking at tab 3, page 44309. I'm starting here simply to establish that we're talking 14:37:16 about the right meeting. Halfway down the page, "The following questions refer to the time after Sam Bockarie came back from Burkina Faso." You were asked, "Was there another meeting at Sam Bockarie's house that took place at night?", and your answer, "Yes, it took place from 11 p.m. to 2 a.m." Over the page, "Who was there?", and this was the answer that you gave then. We'll go through the answer and you can tell us if it's been correctly recorded, "Mike Lamin, SB [meaning Sam Bockarie], SYB Rogers, Gbessay Ngobeh" - have I got his name right or wrong? Gbessay Ngobeh, sorry. "CO Lion, Jungle, Martin, Gaddafi (Foday), Issa Sesay, Jallow, Tom Sandi, Rashid Sandi, Junior Vandi, Sam Kolleh and Major Francis who was a Gambian."

Now, did you tell the Prosecution in November of last year that those 16 people were present at the meeting.

14:38:51 A. No, I spoke about 12 people and even yesterday I called SBY [sic] Rogers's name.

Q. I'm going to come back to SYB Rogers in a moment, but there's no mention of Morris Kallon in that list that we've just read out from the notes of your interview on 1 November last 14:39:22 year. Was he there, or wasn't he there?

A. Morris Kallon was there.

Q. There's no mention of Matthew Barbue there in that list. Was he present at the meeting, or wasn't he?

A. He was there, sir.

14:39:45 Q. There are, as I've said, 16 names listed there, not 12.

A. Well, in that meeting there were 12 of us.

Q. When this was read back to you did you correct it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?

14:40:07 A. Well, I did not know whether it had gone beyond 12, but I know we were 12, so - and I called out 12 names.

Q. Two of whom don't even appear in this list that I've just read out to you from the notes of that interview. When it was read back to you did you not point out to them that Morris Kallon and Matthew Barbue were there?

A. Well, I did not tell them that, but they were present.
Q. Sorry, you didn't tell them that Morris Kallon and Matthew Barbue were there? Is that what you're saying?
14:40:57 A. No, they were present in the meeting.
Q. Did you tell the Prosecution that in November last year?
A. Well there are some names in this list that I - I was not the one who gave them the names, but there was Morris Kallon and there was Matthew Barbue as well.
14:41:23 THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, the witness has called a name that he's referring as -- PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, the interpreter did not hear a name clearly. Please repeat your answer. Pick up from where you said, "... but there was Morris Kallon and there was Matthew 14:41:38 Barbue as well." What was the other name you mentioned?
THE WITNESS: There was Morris Kallon and Matthew Barbue. I said he spoke about CO Lion and I did not mention his name for that 12 man meeting.
PRESIDING JUDGE: When you say you did not mention his name
14:41:59 are you referring to your interview with the Office of the Prosecutor, or are you referring to court?
THE WITNESS: Prosecution's office.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Witness, are you saying CO Lion was not at the meeting?
14:42:21 THE WITNESS: Not at all.
MR MUNYARD:
Q. So out of this 16 we've got to cross out CO Lion, yes?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, let's go through this list and see who you say was there. Mike Lamin?

A. Yes, sir.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mike Lamin was there?
THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.
14:43:06 MR MUNYARD:
Q. I'm just going to your evidence from Friday. Now I know you couldn't remember all the names, but Mike Lamin was a very top level commander, general, within the RUF, wasn't he?
A. Well he did not get that rank, general.
14:43:37 Q. Let's not worry about the actual rank. He was one of the most senior figures in the movement, wasn't he?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Somebody who spoke very strongly?
A. Yes, sir.
14:43:58 Q. How is it that you'd forgotten that he was there when you were giving us this list of those on Friday?
A. When I called out the names, I don't think the names were even up to 20. Maybe those were the ones I left out. The names were not even up to 12 and that's why I said "and others". So, 14:44:26 those were the others.
Q. All right, let's go through. Mike Lamin was there. Sam Bockarie was there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. SYB Rogers was there, or was he?
14:44:41 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Because you didn't mention him on Friday, I don't think. No, you didn't.
A. Friday I spoke about him.
Q. You might have spoken about him but when you were giving the list of names you didn't include him, but we can include him in, can we?

A. Well --

Q. Don't worry about it, Mr Kanneh. We can include him in, can we? What about - you did mention, and I'm not going to try for a third time, the man you know as Chucky. You did mention him to the Prosecution in November?

A. Yes, sir, he was there.

Q. CO Lion we cross out. Jungle?

14:45:39 A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mentioned Jungle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Martin?

A. Yes, sir.

14:45:51 Q. Was he there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was there, all right. Gaddafi also known as Foday, was he there?

A. No.

14:46:04 Q. So, we cross --

A. No, sir.

Q. Who is Gaddafi, also known as Foday?

A. He was one of the battalion commanders who was at the Joru axis.

14:46:24 Q. Right, so he wasn't there. Issa Sesay, you mentioned him on Friday?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What about this person Jalloh (MP)?

A. No, he was not there.

Q. Who is Jalloh (MP)?
A. He was a military police.
Q. Tom Sandi, was he there?
A. No, sir, at that time Tom Sandi was in Kailahun.
14:47:02 Q. Rashid Sandi, was he there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Junior Vandi, JR?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Sam Kollie?
14:47:23 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Major Francis?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What about Eddie Kanneh?
A. Yes, sir.
14:47:37 Q. He was there, was he?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You mentioned him on Friday as being present, but you don't actually mention him to the Prosecution in November as being present?
14:47:56 A. I mentioned him. Maybe they did not write it.
Q. So they managed to forget that name, did they, when they were writing? As you were giving the list of names they've managed to lose that one, is that your evidence?
A. That they added and deducted, yes.
14:48:17 Q. All right. And then when it was all read back to you, what did you say about CO Lion, Gaddafi Foday, Jalloh and Tom Sandi being in the list of 16 when in fact they weren't there?
A. Well I don't know how they got it, but even myself I'm a little doubtful how these names are in this group - in this group now.

Q. Why are you doubtful?

A. Because I mentioned 12 names and now I am seeing some other names in the list, so I'm surprised.

14:49:06 Q. But, Mr Kanneh, how could these names, CO Lion, Jalloh, Tom Sandi and Gaddafi Foday have possibly been written down by the Prosecutors who were interviewing you if you hadn't actually told them these names?

A. I cannot tell how they managed to write it, but even today 14:49:42 you asked me about some other names and I was not the one who gave them those names. It was a statement. Maybe they got the names from some other place.

Q. When they were interviewing you back in November last year, did they have other people's statements in front of them and were 14:50:03 they asking you questions based on what other witnesses had told them?

A. Never. That had never happened.

Q. So where could they have got these names from, apart from you?

14:50:20 A. Even you yourself there were questions that you asked me and you mentioned names that I had not given to them, so I don't know how you people would manage to get names like those. I don't know.

Q. Well, I can tell you I get them from what the Prosecution 14:50:41 wrote down as you were listing the names. That is where I get them from, do you understand?

A. Yes, sir, but I would like to know if they had said I mentioned 16 names, if that is what they wrote on the paper.

Q. Are you telling us that you had not appreciated until now that that is exactly what they have said; that you mentioned those 16 names?

A. Well, I spoke about 12. All along I've been talking about 12 in my statements and even yesterday.

14:51:31 Q. We've been at this for the last 20 minutes. Are you saying that you didn't realise that the Prosecution got these names from you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if it's right that these were the names you told them, 14:51:52 how is it that you told them the names of four people who were nowhere near that meeting?

A. Please repeat that.

Q. If they've got it right in recording these 16 names, how is it that you managed to give them the names of four people who 14:52:13 were nowhere near the meeting?

A. Well, I have not even accepted that I was the one who gave them those extra four names. The ones that I mentioned, I accepted to you that those were the names that I gave to them.

Q. You mean the ones that you mentioned in evidence and the 14:52:35 ones that you've agreed out of this list of 16, you accept that you gave those names?

A. No.

Q. I'm going to move on. Oh, I just want to ask you about one other person. Was Isaac Mongor at this meeting?

14:53:13 A. No.

Q. Are you quite sure about that?

A. Yes, sir, I did not see him.

Q. This is the meeting at which Sam Bockarie tells you about all these arms, ammunition and other items that he'd brought back from Burkina Faso, yes?

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.
Q. And there was only one such meeting, was there, with these 12 senior figures from the RUF, plus Jungle?
14:53:53 A. Yes, sir.
Q. And this is the meeting at which SYB Rogers was present, is that right?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Even though you didn't list him on Friday. Do you agree 14:54:15 that you didn't list him on Friday when you were giving the list?
A. I called his name.
Q. Did SYB Rogers have anything to say at that meeting that you can now remember?
A. No.
14:54:34 Q. Did anyone praise Sam Bockarie for what he had achieved in bringing back these materials from Burkina Faso?
A. Amongst us, the 12 people who were there?
Q. Well, yes, not amongst anybody else who wasn't there.
A. Well, even if that could have happened maybe it is just 14:55:15 because I cannot recall now. I am not saying nobody said that or did so, but I cannot recall now.
Q. Were any photographs produced during this meeting?
A. No, there were no photographs.
Q. When do you say it was that you saw the materials that he'd 14:55:41 brought back from Burkina Faso?
A. After the meeting, the following morning.
Q. The following morning. Did you see any photographs then?
A. No.
Q. And, let me suggest to you, any photographs of a hotel in

Q. Can I just ask you about something else at the foot of that page, please, 44312. You were asked this question, "During the meeting was there discussion about getting manpower support from Liberia?" Do you remember that, that question?

15:39:22 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the answer that you are recorded as giving is this, "Jungle and Morris Kallon and Lion suggested that." Did you say that?

A. Well, the two men whom you have mentioned, I spoke about 15:39:49 them, but I did not mention Lion.

Q. Yes. Morris Kallon is not one of the 16 names that you listed earlier on, that we looked at on page 44310, when you answered the question, "Who was there?" So that would make 17 names if indeed you did say those first 16, wouldn't it?

15:40:37 A. Who is the 17th?

Q. Morris Kallon who has just appeared in this answer.

A. No, no. Even among that 12 people there is Morris Kallon's name and even the 16th name that you mentioned, there was Morris Kallon's name, and the 12 men that I called, Morris Kallon's name 15:41:05 is among them.

Q. The rest of the answer is as follows, "SB ...", that's Sam Bockarie, "... rejected this because of past problems when the NPFL came." Did you say that?

A. That he did not agree that a force would come from NPFL, 15:41:30 yes, I said that.

Q. Your answer is recorded on the LiveNote as, "That he did agree that the force would come from NPFL, yes, I said that". In fact the answer that's recorded here - here on the page of the interview notes - is that Sam Bockarie rejected the suggestion of manpower support from Liberia. "Sam Bockarie rejected this because of past problems when the NPFL came."

A. Yes, sir, I said that.

Q. That is what you said?

15:42:17 A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. And then it goes on to read, "SB ...", Sam Bockarie, "... was okay with ULIMO-K assistance."

A. He said he preferred ULIMO-K. He said he preferred them to the NPFL. That was what I mentioned.

15:42:44 Q. And were ULIMO-K still in existence in December of 1998?

A. No, at that time ULIMO-K was no longer in existence, but their members were still around.

Q. All right. So Sam Bockarie was basically saying that he did not want manpower support from Liberia, is that right?

15:43:36 A. From NPFL, yes, it's correct.

Q. And for NPFL in 1998 do you mean the Armed Forces of Liberia?

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir. The Armed Forces of Liberia, Mr Taylor's troops.

15:44:05 Q. Thank you. So, Bockarie rejected the idea of support from Mr Taylor's troops?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Over the page, please, 44313. Do you have that page there?

A. Yes, sir.

15:44:50 Q. "Resume interview - 1430", that's 2.30 in the afternoon. "Further to night time meeting at SB's house", and then some more questions were asked and the first is, "Was there any discussion about civilians?" Your answer was, "No discussion about civilians". Were you asked that question and did you give that

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And this was all part of what you describe as Operation Free the Leader, was it?
A. Yes, sir.
16:01:32 Q. And would it be right to say that the number one objective of that operation was indeed to free the leader?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Right. If I can now just go through some individual points with you. Now, Mr Kanneh, I'm just going to ask you a series of 16:02:24 questions that aren't necessarily connected subjects, but they're matters that you dealt with in your evidence earlier to the Prosecution and I just want you to deal with these loose ends, as it were. First of all, you told us that somebody called FOC was present at a meeting at the EMG ground. Do you remember saying 16:02:57 that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you told us that FOC was the leader's bodyguard, that's to say Foday Sankoh's bodyguard.
A. Yes, sir.
16:03:10 Q. Are you sure about that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You're sure that he was Foday Sankoh's bodyguard?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was he ever anybody else's bodyguard?
16:03:26 A. He was attached to a commander, but he never was a bodyguard to another person.
Q. All right. You told us also that after the overthrow you received instructions from Foday Sankoh and first you moved with Sam Bockarie, first to Pendembu, then Daru, then Benguema. Do out they will have it - those on paper, and after the main points were discussed they will have the AOB, that is any other business, and so if you had extra problems, target problems, if you had things that were disturbing you in your own area, like 10:05:41 personal things, the things that used to happen on the front line, shortages, shortages of ammunition. I spoke about shortage of ammunition in my own area and so many other men discussed things that were happening in their own areas, but the major items for which they called the meeting were those ones.

10:06:05 Q. You have referred to this particular meeting, this eight hour meeting, as "The first meeting we held". Was there a meeting - another meeting - after this first meeting?
A. Yes.
Q. How long after the first meeting was the next meeting?
10:06:34 A. Well, it did not take too long. It was within a short period, and it was the time after Mr Bockarie had travelled and returned that we held the meeting; after he had travelled to Burkina Faso and when he returned.
Q. How do you know that Mr Bockarie travelled to Burkina Faso?
10:07:05 A. Well, before he left he told us. He told us, those of us who were around. Especially those of us who were in the Kailahun District, some of the commanders, he told us that he was going to travel.
Q. And did he, as far as you know, travel to Burkina Faso?
10:07:35 A. Yes.
Q. How long was he gone for?
A. Well, that man he went - I think he spent up to a month before he returned.
Q. Did he tell you what he did when he was in Burkina Faso?

A. Well when he returned he did not actually convene a general meeting to tell us what he went for, but when he came the things that he brought that made us to actually believe that he went there because we had never received such items.

10:08:23 Q. What were those things that he brought?

A. He brought sufficient war materials: arms and ammunition, bombs, combats, boots and some other items.

Q. What quantity of arms did he bring?

A. Well I cannot estimate that now, because I was not present 10:09:01 when he arrived and before we arrived there everything was now stored in the ammo dump.

Q. Did you ever learn about what type of arms he brought?

A. Yes.

Q. What were they?

10:09:20 A. He brought AK-47s, he brought G3s.

Q. What are G3s?

A. It is an arm. The Nigerians call it Babangida. That is G3. He brought hand grenades. He brought mines. He brought RPG rockets. He brought the tubes - the RPG tubes. He brought G3

10:10:13 rounds and some other things, but for now those are the ones I can recall. The items were plenty. He brought combats and boots.

Q. What do you mean by combats and boots? What are they?

A. Well, that is what call somebody a soldier. The fatigues

10:10:45 that the soldier puts on are what is referred to as combat and the boots that they normally wear.

Q. Do you know whether Sam Bockarie went to Burkina Faso on his own, or with another person or other people?

A. Well according to him he said it was him and General

Ibrahim, because just as he told us in the first meeting it was the same thing that he told us later. He said he and General Ibrahim. Ibrahim Bah.

Q. Did he tell you at any stage what he had done in Burkina Faso?

10:11:41

A. Well he said he went and met with the President of Burkina Faso, because he went to him personally.

Q. And did he tell you what took place when he met with the President of Burkina Faso?

10:11:59

A. What happened?

Q. Yes, in the meeting with him and the President of Burkina Faso?

A. Repeat, repeat. I am not getting it clearly. I am not getting all.

10:12:24

Q. Did Sam Bockarie tell you what happened in this meeting that he had with the President of Burkina Faso?

A. No, he did not discuss that with me.

Q. Now, you said this second meeting that you held was after Sam Bockarie returned from Burkina Faso. My question is approximately how long after he returned was this second meeting held?

10:12:52

A. Well just as he returned, because it was in December that he returned and at that time it was almost little beyond middle way December, and it was in the same December that we held the meeting.

10:13:21

Q. And what year are we in?

A. It was in 1998.

Q. Where was this meeting - this second meeting - held?

A. At Sam Bockarie's house.

Q. Where was Sam Bockarie's house?
A. That is going towards Foya, Foya Road.
Q. What town was it in?
A. Buedu.
10:14:01 Q. Who was at the meeting?
A. Well, we were up to 12 in number present.
Q. Are you able to name the 12 who were present?
A. Well, I can try. I can try.
Q. Please do.
10:14:26 A. Well Mr Bockarie was present, Issa was present, Morris Kallon was present, Jungle was present, Eddie Kanneh was present, I was present, Major Francis was present, Matthew Barbor was present, Junior Vandi was present, Gbessay Gbobah who is normally referred to as Chucky was present and I think --

10:15:13 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: I am sorry, but could you repeat Chucky's name? Please repeat Chucky's name.

THE WITNESS: Gbessay Gbobah. Gbessay Gbobah.

MS BALY:

Q. Just before I turn to the spellings, can you recall if 10:15:32 anyone else was present?
A. Well, we were 12 in number that particular night that we were present. I don't know how many names I have made mention of, but we were 12 in number.
Q. Now, one person you mentioned who you have not mentioned 10:15:53 before is Major Francis. Was that his full name, or do you know his full name?
A. Well, that was how we used to call him. He was a Gambian, Major Francis.
Q. What was his position?

A. Well, when Mr Bockarie came he called on us because there was no need for him to call all the officers again, so those of us who were closer to his location, he invited us. We came to Buedu and then he explained to us that he has brought ammunition, he has brought enough logistics so that we will be able to run any kind of mission. So he said we should now plan how to take the move and that the first target should be Kono, to Makeni, up to Freetown. And that the next target should be Segbwema and Daru, that is heading towards Kenema and to go to the southern province. So those were the things we discussed and the issue of SAJ Musa's disloyalty that he has been doing all along. That was also something we discussed.

Q. When you say the first target should be Kono, to Makeni, up to Freetown, what do you mean by that the first target was to be Kono?

A. Well, Kono is a mining area. In that whole country that is the place we know for high level productivity for diamonds, so we believe that if we were able to capture there first it would have been good for us. That was the reason why Kono - he said Kono should serve as the first target that we should capture.

Q. Were any particular commanders given the role of capturing Kono?

A. Well, yes.

Q. Who?

A. Well, Sam Bockarie told us that this plan was designed in Monrovia with Mr Taylor. He said it was designed in Monrovia so he only brought it to brief us, that this should be the way we should do things so that we will be able to succeed in the war.

Q. Who was it that was going to attack Kono?

A. Well, the commanders were there, Issa was there, Morris Kallon and Superman. They were the most senior men that were supposed to run this mission in those areas.

Q. When you say run this mission in those areas, which areas are you talking about?

10:28:34

A. Kono.

Q. The plan was then to move on to Makeni, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. What was to take place at Makeni?

10:28:49

A. Well, they should clear starting from Kono up to Makeni and those are towns that you cannot just jump over and go to Freetown, they were provincial headquarters, you have to pass through them first.

Q. What do you mean when you say, "They should clear"? What do you mean by "clear"?

10:29:16

A. Clear in the sense - clear in the sense that when as you push forward you shouldn't spare any town, you shouldn't jump over any town, you shouldn't leave any town untouched. You have to pass through them all and make sure that they are under control. That is what I mean by "clear".

10:29:41

Q. What commanders were given the role of clearing Makeni?

A. It was Issa who was the overall for that operation and Morris Kallon was his deputy and Superman was third in command.

Q. Then you said on to Freetown. Was anyone given the role of moving on to Freetown?

10:30:23

A. Yes, they gave the mission to somebody.

Q. Who?

A. Well, Sam Bockarie sent the message to SAJ Musa even before they attacked Kono but he refused. He rejected the orders. He said he cannot take orders from him, so there was a heated argument over the issue.

Q. When you refer to this heated argument, did it take place in this meeting?

10:31:06 A. You mean whether the argument took place during the meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, after the meeting he called him, but in fact the argument had started for a long time ago.

10:31:25 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Witness, we did caution you about saying "he called him". Please use names so that we can follow. Please repeat your answer.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Well, repeat the question.

MS BALY:

10:31:43 Q. The question was when you were referring to a heated argument I asked you whether the heated argument took place in the meeting that you have been giving evidence about?

A. After the meeting, but there had been arguments even before the meeting, before this mission there had been an argument.

10:32:07 Just at the time Sam Bockarie sent the message to all the stations, right from that time SAJ Musa was not happy about it. He was disgruntled right up to this mission time and after they had held the meeting. He sent the same order to SAJ Musa and he refused even before the Kono thing.

10:32:32 Q. I am going to come back to this issue about SAJ Musa in a moment, all right? One of the things you said was that the next target was to be Segbwema and Daru.

A. Yes.

Q. Who, if anyone, was given the role of taking Segbwema and Daru?

A. I was.
Q. Now the second issue that you said that was discussed at the meeting was SAJ Musa.
10:33:21 A. Yes.
Q. What was it about SAJ Musa that was discussed at the meeting?
A. Well, Sam Bockarie told us that the complaint had gone up to Mr Taylor, that the man's complaints had been lodged about his 10:33:44 disloyalty towards the mission, and he too gave his own piece of advice just so that --
Q. Can I just ask you to pause there for a moment. Once again it's important that you use people's names. Sam Bockarie told you that a complaint had gone up to Mr Taylor, "That the man's 10:34:07 complaint", who is the man that made the complaint?
A. Sam Bockarie lodged the complaint to Mr Taylor against SAJ Musa regarding his attitude.
Q. What was it about SAJ Musa's attitude that he complained about?
10:34:30 A. He said he was a man who did not take any order from people. He was disloyal to the command.
Q. At the meeting was there any other discussion about SAJ Musa, apart from the fact that Sam Bockarie had made a complaint to Mr Taylor?
10:35:02 A. Yes, Mr Bockarie made us to understand that that man should not leave to tell the story and the only way we were to --
Q. What man?
A. SAJ Musa. SAJ Musa.
Q. SAJ Musa should not leave to tell the story. Continue from there?

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Not live. The record says "leave", but it is actually L-I-V-E, I imagine.

MS BALY: Yes:

10:35:34 Q. What did you say? Can you repeat your answer? You said, "Mr Bockarie made us to understand that that man should not ..." Can you continue from there?

A. He said we should go all out to ensure that that man should not live to tell the story.

10:35:54 PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Interpreter, what word did the witness use?

THE INTERPRETER: Live to tell the story.

PRESIDING JUDGE: L-E-A-V-E?

THE INTERPRETER: L-I-V-E.

10:36:04 MS BALY:

Q. And just so it is clear, what man should not live to tell the story?

A. SAJ Musa.

Q. Did Sam Bockarie say anything else about SAJ Musa not 10:36:21 living to tell the story?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. Now, take it slowly and tell us what he said.

A. He said we should only be able to get him when there was a mission, when there was operation going on. He even made us to 10:36:43 understand that that was something he had been discussing with Gullit, that during any mission that man should not live. He should die because he was a traitor. He referred to him as a traitor.

Q. Did Sam Bockarie say how SAJ Musa was to die?

A. Well, in the military terms they say it should be during operations. You know, if they will mean arms. He should die during the battle. He should be shot.
Q. Did he say who should shoot him?
10:37:30 A. He just told us that he had spoken to Gullit and that the two of them had been discussing that even before Gullit went to where SAJ Musa was. That was what he made us to understand.
Q. He made you to understand that he had been discussing this with Gullit, is that what you are saying?
10:37:53 A. Yes, yes.
Q. Did he make you understand who was to do the killing of SAJ Musa?
A. It was the discussion that he had with Gullit. He did not specify who should do the shooting, but the discussion had been 10:38:13 going on together with Gullit.
Q. This particular meeting, how long did it go on for?
A. It was a very short meeting, just for three hours, because it was at night and we did not even want Johnny Paul to know.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Ms Baly, I am not clear from the record
10:38:41 when this meeting took place.

MS BALY: I think we actually have that. It is mid-December. He did give the evidence that the meeting took place in December of 1998 and he said around the middle, if I can just find it. I can clear it with the witness now:
10:39:12 Q. Mr Witness, I am going to ask you again when was it that this meeting - this second meeting - took place?
A. It was at night in December.
Q. December what year?
A. 1998.

Q. Are you able to say - and please tell us if you can't say - when in December the meeting took place, or when abouts?
A. I cannot recall the exact date now, but it was at night that we held the meeting. I cannot recall the date.
10:39:53 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Ms Baly, the witness mentioned a phrase that SAJ Musa was disloyal to the command. What command? I would like to know.
MS BALY:
Q. What command was SAJ Musa disloyal to?
10:40:10 A. The RUF command.
Q. Was he disloyal to the RUF command generally, or was it some commander in the RUF specifically?
A. Well, I believe in the RUF if somebody was disloyal to Sam Bockarie's command then that should be that you are disloyal to 10:40:35 the RUF command because he was the head.
Q. Thank you.
A. Thank you too.
Q. This meeting - this three hour short meeting - was there anything else discussed apart from the plan to attack Freetown
10:40:54 and the SAJ Musa issue?
A. Yes.
Q. What?
A. Well, at that time even the leader who had his revolution was there. That should be the first target, to go to Pademba
10:41:18 Road and to free - to release the leader, and second we were to go to State House and overthrow the President and if possible, if we met him there, we should kill him.
Q. Just so it is clear, what President was to be overthrown and if possible killed?

MR MUNYARD: I am sorry, but now I don't know who the "they" is. I said, "They were the ones who came". Can we please find out from the witness who he is talking about at this stage?

MS BALY:

10:46:54 Q. Now what you said a moment ago was, "I said they were the ones who came". Who are "they" that came?

A. Jungle. Jungle.

Q. So, Jungle is one person?

A. And Sam Bockarie.

10:47:14 Q. And Jungle and Sam Bockarie you have already told us were both at the meeting, is that right?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. Now apart from Jungle telling you that he had discussed the plan with the Pa in Monrovia, did Jungle say anything else at the 10:47:36 meeting? At the meeting?

A. Well, that is what he said. That is what he said.

Q. After the meeting, immediately after the meeting, what did you do?

A. After the meeting, I returned to my area of operation to be 10:48:09 able to start preparation for my own responsibility that was given to me so that I would carry it out.

Q. Before we go to that, this meeting you said was held at night. About what time in the night was the meeting held?

A. That meeting I will think it was 9 o'clock, or thereafter.

10:48:45 Q. It went for approximately three hours. Did it finish around midnight?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. On that night immediately after you left, or immediately after the meeting had finished, did you see Jungle?

everything to run the mission.

Q. Where was this phone?

A. It was the same veranda at the back of Mr Bockarie's house. The veranda at the back. That was where the phone was.

10:52:39 Q. What type of phone was it?

A. It was a satellite phone.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Ms Baly, I am still unclear about this area. This witness, when you asked him what happened in the meeting, he then spoke about this testimony you are considering

10:53:04 and he says, "Yes, later after the plan had gone on Sam Bockarie spoke to Mr Taylor about the plan, how the mission was to carry on" and et cetera, et cetera. Now, this later, how much later was this after the meeting is what I would like to know and how this witness knew about this conversation I would also like to 10:53:28 know.

MS BALY:

Q. When you gave some evidence and Justice Sebutinde has just read out some of the things that you said about conversation with Charles Taylor by Sam Bockarie about the plan, where were you 10:53:53 when that conversation took place?

A. All of us were in the veranda where the meeting was held. I was at the veranda myself. I was part of the meeting.

Q. Did this conversation take place during, or as part of the meeting, or at the conclusion, or after the meeting?

10:54:24 A. About the time the meeting was to be ended. All of us, 12 of us were there.

Q. Are you saying the 12 of you were there when the conversation took place?

A. Yes, because the meeting had not ended yet so all 12 of us were still there.

Q. Just so that it's clear, who was doing the talking on the satellite phone?
A. I said first it was Mr Bockarie.
10:55:10 Q. Just so it's clear, and I know you have gone over this, but just take it one step at a time, what exactly did Sam Bockarie say at that time on the phone?
A. He told him about the mission that had been discussed in Monrovia. He said he had come and put it to the senior officers 10:55:37 and that was the meeting that was going on and that the same plan he had given to him was the same plan they had come to discuss.
Q. Same plan that they had given to who?
A. Sam Bockarie.
Q. After Sam Bockarie spoke you said Jungle spoke.
10:56:05 PRESIDING JUDGE: Who gave the plan?
THE WITNESS: Mr Taylor. Mr Taylor.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you.
MS BALY:
Q. After Sam Bockarie spoke, did anybody else speak?
10:56:17 A. Yes.
Q. Who?
A. Jungle.
Q. And what did Jungle say?
A. He repeated the same thing to Mr Taylor, because he was the 10:56:35 representative for him in the RUF, so he explained the same thing to him; that the plan they had discussed in Monrovia, they had come and put it to the senior officers and they had assured him that they would go ahead with the plan.
Q. How long did this conversation or did these conversations take?

A. They did not take long. It was just short conversations, just as what I have explained. It was not a long thing. I did not, for example, look at my watch to see how many minutes or 10:57:21 hours, but it was just a short conversation.
Q. After the conversation is that when you went to sleep for the night?
A. Yes, all of us went to sleep.
Q. The next day --
10:57:41 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Ms Baly, I would also like to know, and this is why I asked, how does this witness know about this conversation? I don't know how the satellite phone works but I can understand him listening to Bockarie and Jungle. How does he know who was on the other side?
10:58:00 MS BALY:
Q. Mr Witness, how do you know who was on the other side of the satellite phone who Sam Bockarie and Jungle were talking to?
A. Well, they told us that they were talking to Mr Taylor, that they were calling Pa Taylor. And when they called the 10:58:24 conversation was going on, we were not hearing what the other side, but when the other side was talking they were responding and the discussion was going on. They said it was Mr Taylor.
Q. During the actual talking that was going on did you hear Mr Taylor's name mentioned?
10:58:49 A. Yes, sir.
MS BALY: I hope that makes it clear how he knew:
Q. The next day what did you do?
A. Well, the next day he invited us again to go and see the armament that he had brought, the logistics that he had brought.

Q. What is the Waterworks that you've referred to?
A. Well, it's a place which was a kind of dam that they had that pumped water to the town. That was the dam.
Q. And why was this meeting held at this particular place, that is between this Waterworks and Buedu?
16:11:24
A. Well at that time there was serious fighting between us and ECOMOG and we were afraid of the air raids, so we decided to look out for a thick forest where we would hold the meeting. So, that was why we went there.
16:11:50
Q. Who was it that called this meeting?
A. Mr Bockarie.
Q. Are you able to say when this meeting took place?
A. Well, this meeting took place after the intervention. That was in 1998.
16:12:19
Q. How long after the intervention, just approximately, did this meeting take place?
A. Well if my memory serves me well, because when we left February, we went to Daru March, it was April, May, around June, or even before the death of Abacha. We held that meeting before 16:12:49
Abacha died.
Q. And when you say you held the meeting before Abacha died, who are you talking about? Who is Abacha?
A. Abacha was the President. He was the one who sent the Nigerians here. He was the President of Nigeria at that time.
16:13:17
Q. What was the purpose of the meeting?
A. Well, Mr Bockarie called this meeting and it had so many reasons for which we held the meeting.
Q. I'm going to ask you who was at the meeting and then I'll come to the reasons for the meeting. How many people were at

Q. Who did he want - who is "them"? Who did he want to know that?

A. Well, the new men who joined us. That is the AFRC group, Johnny Paul and his men.

16:19:34 Q. Another thing you said was discussed at the meeting was the Fitti-Fatta mission. What was said about that particular mission?

A. Well he said he would want us to go and clear the mining area, that is Kono, and that the Pa had told him that nothing 16:19:58 goes for nothing and that he had no machine to make arms, that they were materials. He also bought them from some other areas. So, he said - he said we should go and capture the mining area so that we would be able to get money from there and get the materials.

16:20:16 Q. Just so it's clear who is this person, the Pa, that you just referred to?

A. That is Mr Taylor - Mr Charles Taylor. Former President Taylor.

Q. Another thing that you said was discussed at the meeting 16:20:40 was Sam Bockarie's travel to Burkina Faso with General Ibrahim, is that right? Was that discussed at the meeting?

A. Yes, yes, yes, we discussed that.

Q. What did Sam Bockarie say about that?

A. He said that Mr Taylor told him that he would link in with 16:21:09 Blaise Compaore, the President of Burkina Faso, and it was Mr Ibrahim Bah who was going to travel with him. He was to move with him.

Q. Move with him where?

A. To Burkina Faso.

Q. Did Sam Bockarie say when this was to take place?
A. Well, he did say that it was not going to take a long time and it was going to be in that same month. After the month that we held the meeting, after the Fitti-Fatta operation, then he 16:21:51 moved on this mission.
Q. And I think the final thing you said that was discussed at the meeting was Issa Sesay, what Issa Sesay had done, is that right?
A. Repeat that.
16:22:10 Q. Another topic that was discussed by Sam Bockarie at the meeting was something that Issa Sesay had done, is that right?
A. Yes, yes, yes.
Q. What did Sam Bockarie say about Issa Sesay at the meeting?
A. Well, he told us - he said sorry to everybody for what 16:22:38 happened and he asked for forgiveness for Mr Sesay for what he did when he took the diamonds with him to Monrovia and he said on his way they got missing. Those were the things he told us.
Q. Just pause there for a moment. Who asked for forgiveness?
A. Well, Mr Sam Bockarie said so. He said Issa said we should 16:23:11 forgive him and he said when he went the Pa himself told him that we should forgive him.
Q. Did Sam Bockarie say why Charles Taylor was going to link him to Burkina Faso - send him to Burkina Faso?
A. Yes, because he said he told him about the mission that we 16:23:43 were to take to free the leader and it was a mission that involved heavy materials because we were supposed to clear the ECOMOG force before we get to Freetown, so he said he was going to link us up where we would be able to get direct material so that we would bring them over and be able to run the mission.

Excuse me for a while to be able to drink.
Q. Are you okay now?
A. Yes, yes, yes.
Q. And when he referred to this mission to free the leader, 16:24:29 what mission was he referring to?
A. Well, that was Operation Free the Leader and that was the material he went for for us to come and run the mission to capture Freetown and free the leader.
Q. I'll come back to that.
16:24:56 A. Yes, okay.
Q. For how long did this meeting last?
A. Well, this Waterworks meeting lasted for eights months - I'm sorry, eight hours.
Q. Did anyone apart from Sam Bockarie speak at the meeting?
16:25:24 A. Yes.
Q. Who?
A. It was Sam Bockarie who spoke more and then later Jungle spoke and he buttressed the introduction that Mr Sam did, told the former AFRC members, and he did say that he would try his 16:25:48 utmost best to see that things worked out well. So he said so, and then later Johnny Paul too spoke and some other people also spoke during the meeting.
Q. Can you remember whether there were high level commanders at that meeting?
16:26:11 A. Yes, sir.
Q. Can you remember who they were?
A. Yes, I can recall some.
Q. Can you name the ones you can recall, please?
A. Yes.

For the accused Charles Ghankay Taylor:	Mr Terry Munyard Mr Morris Anyah

you're going to ask a question you say it's incorrect, then put it correctly.

MR BANGURA: I will just go over the whole issue again:

Q. Mr Witness, you said that Kabila told you that they had been given a new order, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that order?

A. Well, the order, he said SAJ Musa has ordered them to go to Freetown. To go to Freetown. He said when we go to Freetown we were to overthrow the government that was in power. He said then when we were getting to Freetown we should not burn a house, we should not kill and not to loot or amputate.

Q. Now you also said that Kabila told you or he mentioned something about the previous order which you had. Do you recall that?

A. Yes. He said that won't work. He said the same order, the same way that we had been coming, it was the same order. When we get to Freetown it will be Operation Spare No Soul. Then I asked him what Operation Spare No Soul was. Then he said starting from ants, goats, humans, nothing should stay.

Q. When you say nothing should stay, what do you mean?

A. Well, that was the answer. When I asked him that was the answer he gave me. Even humans, ants, goats, all should be killed.

Q. Now when you say that that won't work, and he was talking about the new order which was given to him, what did he say would not work?

A. Well, he said the order that SAJ Musa has given to them, for him that will not work, he said because when we go to town starting from goats, sheep, humans, houses, he said nothing will remain, he was going along with a different order.

Q. You also talked about the old order that they had which they were going by. Did he say what the old order was?

13:21:17 A. Because when we got to that town they said we should burn down the town and kill, he said that same order was what we were going by, and loot.

Q. Thank you. Now after Kabila had informed you about this new order that was given to them by SAJ Musa did anything happen?

13:21:37 A. After that, that evening all of us left the town. We were walking during the night. We were walking during the night. We left that town and in the night we started walking and we passed through some villages and we got to one village. When SAJ Musa found out there were no persons in that village SAJ Musa ordered 13:22:02 that that town should be burnt down, so we burnt down that town. Kabila gave me petrol and he sprinkled it right round the house and he gave me a match and I scratched the match and set the house on fire. That was in the night.

MR MUNYARD: Madam President, could I ask for some 13:22:23 clarification, please. It may just be me, but looking at the transcript the witness has been giving evidence about the SAJ Musa order not to burn and kill. Then he goes on to the order from Kabila to spare no soul. Then I've got at page 88 line 10 on my typeface:

13:22:54 "Thank you. Now after Kabila had informed you about this new order that was given to them by SAJ Musa did anything happen."

The implication of that was that the second order was a new order from SAJ Musa. That isn't how I had understood his earlier evidence to be. I had understood his evidence to be SAJ Musa gives one order, Kabila gives a new contradictory order. In other words, it is Kabila who gives the new order, not SAJ Musa as Mr Bangura's question implies.

13:23:32 PRESIDING JUDGE: I think Kabila was resurrecting an old order, but let us get it properly from the witness. Mr Bangura, you've heard counsel for the Defence and it should come from the witness.

MR BANGURA: I understand the confusion earlier, but I

13:23:52 thought that was cleared up in subsequent questions, but I will get the witness to:

Q. Mr Witness, the orders which - let us talk about the order which Kabila told you about that he got from his boss which you called a new order, now who gave Kabila that order that he told 13:24:14 you about?

A. When we got to Colonel Eddie Town, after the meeting that they've held, it was SAJ Musa who gave that order that when we get to Freetown - when we were heading for Freetown and when we get to Freetown it was just to overthrow. He said they should 13:24:34 not kill a civilian, they should not loot, they should not burn a house.

Q. That was the order which he told you about which was given by SAJ Musa, is that correct?

A. Yes.

13:24:49 Q. Now Kabila then said something to the effect that the order wouldn't work, is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And did he suggest anything else?

A. Then he said that that order won't work. He said when we get to Freetown he - even ants he would not leave. He said he was going by Operation Spare No Soul when we get to Freetown.

Q. And when he said he was going by Operation Spare No Soul, was this an order which was already there before?

13:25:39 A. Well, the order that we came with, when we were under O-Five, when we got to that village where he ordered to kill and burn anybody we meet in that town, those towns that we came across, when Kabila gave me that tablet, those tablets, where I did the killings. From then on to the point where we got to SAJ

13:26:05 it was a different order that SAJ gave.

Q. But when you now say that Kabila says Operation Spare No Soul was that the same as the order which had been given by O-Five before?

A. Yes.

13:26:27 Q. Thank you. Now you were telling the Court about what happened when you got to a town where there were no people and you said SAJ Musa gave an order to you. Is that right?

A. Yes. I don't know that village. It was only in that village that he gave an order that the town should be burnt.

13:27:05 Q. And in carrying out that order what role did you play?

A. My boss Kabila had petrol and he said we should sprinkle it right round the house. Then he gave me matches for me to scratch and put it on the house. Then I did that and we left that town that very night.

13:27:35 Q. Now who sprinkled the petrol around the house?

A. It was Kabila, my boss.

Q. Now when you moved from that village where did you go next to?

A. Well, throughout then we were walking in the night. I invasion of Freetown as directed by SAJ Musa: 1, instigated by the execution of these 24 officers; and, 2, to facilitate the reinstatement of the army. Yes, Mr Witness?

A. Well, that was the word that he told us. He said we should go and reinstate the army. He said we should go with these words, then we will get support from the people.

Q. We know what words he used. We are trying to get at the meaning of those words and at the time those words meant that was a reason, amongst others, to go and invade Freetown, yes?

12:05:05 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Yes. None of this had anything to do with the RUF, did it, either the execution of the 24 officers, or the reinstatement of the army?

A. It had something to do with them, my Lord.

12:05:28 Q. Tell us what it had to do with the RUF?

A. Well, in the execution you see the 24 officers, but you will see the names of other people, including Foday Sankoh who was in prison there, and then also, like I said, you have some names of political detainees who were there who were also part of 12:05:54 the AFRC, who had come together with the RUF and the SLA, that formed the AFRC. So it also had something to do with them.

Q. Mr Witness, the two documents I have just read to you are your own words and they focus on 24 SLA officers and their execution. Do you hear mention there of Foday Sankoh being in 12:06:18 jail as a factor for the Freetown invasion?

A. But what I am trying to say is that when this happened and when Mosquito went over the air, he commented and he said it. He said, "Our men will march into Freetown. We will ensure that our men March into Freetown, as long as they are executing our

A. Okay.
Q. Now this disagreement between Sam Bockarie and SAJ Musa, are you aware that Bockarie said that he would not take any orders - rather, let me rephrase that. Are you aware that SAJ
12:56:38 Musa said he would not take any orders from Sam Bockarie after this conversation?
A. Well, yes, from their communication he said that. Despite that the troop advanced.
Q. Are you aware that Sam Bockarie in turn said that he will 12:57:00 not send any reinforcements to SAJ Musa?
A. Well, I won't dispute that fact, because there was communication between the two people, except I recollect, but I won't dispute that fact.
Q. Yes. And upon your retreat when you encountered Issa Sesay 12:57:26 - and I think you said in the vicinity of Benguema, correct?
A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. There was still distinct lines of leadership between the RUF and the AFRC or SLAs, yes?
A. No. Well, Gullit was there in Benguema, but there was 12:57:52 cordiality. Cordiality was restored because we were able to organise, I said despite the differences that existed, but at that time we were able to come together. We reorganised in Benguema.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Witness, the question was: Was there 12:58:06 still distinct lines of leadership between the RUF and the AFRC or SLA. Please answer that question.
THE WITNESS: Yes. Yes, my Lord.
MR ANYAH:
Q. Issa Sesay was not necessarily reporting to Gullit, yes?

A. Well, in my presence he did not report. He went and said we should organise a meeting to prepare to attack and Gullit said, "No problem, sir." So that brought the preparations. He had command over Gullit.

12:58:44 Q. Yes, but it would be fair to say that at this point in time these were essentially two groups working together because they had one enemy in common, the government of Ahmad Tejan Kabbah, yes?

A. Yes, my Lord.

12:59:02 Q. Yes. Let's talk briefly about diamonds, Mr Witness.

A. Yes.

Q. You mentioned at some point during your evidence last week about stocks that Superman was responsible for. Can you tell me again what those stocks you were referring to were?

12:59:31 A. Well, I said whenever mining would have gone on and when they were reporting, when they brought the diamonds, if they didn't put it in a bottle they would have an envelope and they would put it in there. Whatever diamonds they had, that was where they put them. From there they would take the diamonds to 12:59:51 Superman. I said at one time Superman, whatever was happening, he would call Bazzy to show them to him. He said all this was going to Sam for them to prepare to get more ammunition and logistics for the troops.

Q. Did you ever see what happened?

13:00:14 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Who is Sam?

MR ANYAH:

Q. Yes, Mr Witness, did you mean --

A. Sam Bockarie, sorry. Sam Bockarie, Mosquito.

Q. Mr Witness, all of these were told to you by Superman. Is

A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. The reason it says, "Funds required to facilitate the attendance of witness at the Special Court for interview process." Do you see that?
14:46:12 A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. And we can confirm from tab 1 that you were in fact interviewed on 24 November 2003.
A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. Do you agree they spent this 20,000 leones on you on that 14:46:31 day, Mr Witness?
A. Yes. Yes, my Lord.
Q. Also, on the same day they bought you lunch. I am speaking of entry number 3 now. It says, "Lunch was provided for witness while he attended for witness reconfirmation process", the sum of 14:46:52 10,000 leones. Did they buy you lunch during the interview, Mr Witness?
A. Yes.
Q. You see the entry on entry number 4 speaks of 10 April 2004? Do you see that, Mr Sesay? You are looking at the wrong 14:47:21 tab, if I might suggest that. It is the last entry on page 1.
A. Yes.
Q. The category is transport, it is a Saturday, 10 April, and it says, "Payment to witness for transportation: 5,000 leones". We have no record of you being interviewed on 10 April 2004.
14:47:55 Mr Sesay, what were they paying for your transportation for on that day?
A. Well, as far as I can recall, I was in the prisons. I think this date they took me, but they did not conduct an interview and they said there was not even much time and so I returned. So, they gave me this money for transportation. That happened. I was in prisons. They will go and collect me, I will be escorted by prison officers, the Special Court people will go and pick me and at times they will interview me.

14:48:36 Q. Mr Witness, are you saying they gave you money to pay your way back to the prison?

A. I did not request for money. They will say this is an allowance. I never requested for money. They will bring some document to me, they will say, "This is your transport 14:48:55 allowance", and I will sign. I did not request. They will bring the document and I will sign. To say that I requested that they should give me money, no.

Q. In fact, Mr Witness, you have told us you were not released until 21 August 2004, right?

14:49:14 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. So this category of transport it was actually an allowance they were giving you because you were being transported under guard to and from the Special Court premises, right?

A. Well, yes. I don't know, this is their own provision that 14:49:38 they made. Even though I was under escort, it is - I don't know whether it is the procedure put in place by the court. I will sign for the money, they give it to me and I will take it.

Q. And they have the category as "Transport" while you are a prisoner being transported under guard. You see that, 14:50:00 Mr Witness?

A. As I said, I did not request for this and I met that procedure in the court. The court had its principles put in place, so when I went I will sign and then they will give it to me and say, "This is transport allowance".

MR ANYAH:

Q. Mr Witness, we do have records of you being interviewed on 1 March 2005. We also have records of you being interviewed on 31 March 2005 which is entry number 10. Did you receive 35,000 leones on that day, Mr Witness?

14:57:29

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. That was to cover transport costs to come down from the provinces to meet with the Prosecutor, right?

A. Yes, my Lord.

14:57:49

Q. Mr Witness, I want you to look at tab 1 because now we come to some area that the Chamber might wish to have clarification about. If you look at that chart about your meetings with the Prosecution, if you look at entry number 21, that will be row 21, it has the date there 12 May 2005. Do you see that, Mr Witness?

14:58:18

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. 12 May 2005. Row number 22, the next date we have records of you meeting with the Prosecution is on 8 May 2007. Do you see that, Mr Witness?

A. Yes, my Lord.

14:58:37

Q. No records whatsoever of you meeting with them in the entire period of the year 2006. Do you see that?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Now let's go back to tab 22 and look at the amounts paid to you and the dates. Let's count how many times they paid you money, or spent money on your behalf in the year 2006 when we have no records of you meeting with them. Entry number 11, the date 4 April 2006. Do you see that, Mr Witness? Can you see entry number 11? Do you see that, Mr Witness?

14:59:12

A. 4 April, yes, 2006.

Q. If we go from entry number 11 to entry number 12, to the next page entry number 13, to the next page entry number 14, to entry number 15, to entry number 16, entry number 17, entry number 18, entry number 19, entry number 20, entry number 21, entry number 22, entry number 23, entry number 24, we are now up to page 7 of the document, entry number 25, 26, 27, 28, entry number 29, entry number 30, entry number 31, entry number 32, entry number 33, entry number 34, entry number 35, entry number 36, entry number 37, entry number 38, entry number 39, entry number 40, we are now in September 2006, entry number 41, entry number 42, entry number 43, entry number 44, you can count up to entry number 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, all the way up to - I should have stopped on 58, entry number 58, page 15.

From entry number 11 through entry number 58 all payments made in the year 2006 and we don't have one record - one record of you having been interviewed for any of those dates. Do you understand what I am saying, Mr Witness?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. What were they meeting with you about for all these meetings and spending all of this money on you in the year 2006?

A. My Lord, just as I said, I was under their control. So any time I was at my house they will call me say Bobby, you come. We need this, or we need this, or maybe they can say we want this direction or that, so I would help. And they used to call me constantly and I was under their control. They had relocated me for my protection. I did not go anywhere. Any time they needed me, I will go there. They will call me say we want you to enlighten us on this, we want you to do this for us then I will do it. But to say that I want to dispute the contents of this document, no, that's not what I am saying. Most of the times they will go and pick me up and when I will come back they will say, "No, we don't need you now" and I will return. They will 15:03:14 give me transport allowance and if I am there for some time, spend some time with them, they will give me money for meal.

Q. 40 something entries, about 47 I have counted, we don't have one interview note from any of those 47 events. Shall we take one, for example, and look at it. Let's look at entry 15:03:35 number 13. See entry number 13, Mr Witness, top of page 4, it has there 8 June 2006. Do you see that, Mr Witness? Madam Court Officer could you assist him?
A. Yes.
Q. Has there 8 June 2006. Category, information. Amount in 15:04:21 question, 15,000 leones. Let's look at the dates and the reason. Reason, "Paid for three days meals" and it gives the dates 6 June, 7 June and 8 June. This entry corresponds to 8 June. Let's flip back a page and see if you had anything to do with them on 7 June. No record for 7 June. What we see in entry 15:04:52 number 12 is that you are paid for breakfast for 6 June, 5,000 leones. Do you see that, Mr Witness?
A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. And when we flip the page to entry 13, on 8 June, despite the fact they paid you 5,000 leones for breakfast on the 6th they 15:05:24 give you money for three days meals, including 6 June, including 7 June when they are not even meeting with you at all, and then for the day in question 8 June. Do you see that, Mr Witness?
A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. Were they giving you money to feed you on days that you were not meeting with them, Mr Witness?

A. No. As long as they called me to the office and I went there they will make transportation - provision for transportation. Whatever information I was called for, I was in their hands. Whatever they needed, information or anything, I will go there. If they invited me I will honour their invitation.
Q. Yes, Mr Witness, I understand that, but you see what is happening. On 6 June they gave you 5,000 leones for breakfast. On 8 June they are giving you money for three days meals including the 6th that they have already given you 5,000 leones for. Do you see something wrong with that, Mr Witness?
A. I don't see anything wrong with that. As I said, I will be at my house and they will say Bobby, get ready, maybe you will come or we will come to pick you. I cannot dispute the fact.
Q. You remember when we started with your cross-examination on the 17th, I recall, or perhaps it was not the 17th, but whenever it was, some time last week, Thursday last, we started out with the document in tab 23. If you flip over one page you will see that document. That is by the Witnesses and Victims Section, or rather if you flip over one tab. Do you see that it says that you were brought under the protection of the court - I am reading from paragraph 2 now of that document - on 14 March 2005? Do you see that, Mr Witness?
A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. The money the WVS, or Witnesses and Victims Section, spent on you is distinct and different from the money spent on you by the Office of the Prosecutor. Are you aware of that, Mr Witness?
A. Well according to the document, yes.

Q. So since 14 March all your expenses - and you see the categories in the document in tab 23, rent, child care, all of that was being taken care of by the Witnesses and Victims Section. What we are speaking about in tab number 22 are 15:08:17 payments by the Office of the Prosecutor and they are paying you twice for meals for the same day. Do you understand the records in entry number 13 and entry number 12, what they say, Mr Witness?

A. Yes, yes, yes.

15:08:54 Q. Do you understand that there is something unusual about paying someone 5,000 for breakfast on 6 June and then on 8 June you give him additional money for meals on 6 June which has just passed?

A. Well this document states it clearly, June 6, 7 and 8, and 15:09:26 in particular they knew that I had to go and they will engage me that day, the following day and the day following that. They will give me the money in advance, because they will say, "We don't want to be disturbing you every now and then to be signing documents". At times they will call me, they will want me to go 15:09:46 with them to see areas where we were fighting and I will go with them. Places like Hastings, I will go there and show the place to them. I am not denying this fact.

Q. Do you see the next entries for 12 June? They are entries 14, 15 and 16 on the same page we were looking at.

15:10:05 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Do you see for entry number 14 they gave you 5,000 leones on Monday, 12 June for lunch? Do you see that, Mr Witness?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Now look at entry number 16, also pertains to 12 June, Monday. They gave you another 5,000 for meals. Do you see that, Mr Witness?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Same day, one payment for lunch and another payment for meals, yes?

15:10:36

A. Yes, because if I went there in the morning they will provide money for breakfast, they will go and buy it for me and if I will be there until lunch they will provide money for lunch. They did the buying. They will buy it and when they come they bring the document and I will sign.

15:10:56

Q. Twice paid for food for the same day.

A. That is what I have just told you. I said if I will be there in the morning they will provide breakfast. They will pay. In that courtroom it is that everything they bought there it is expensive. As long as I spent time there, they will provide feeding.

15:11:18

Q. Mr Witness, entry number 15 says you were paid 10,000 leones for transport and lost wages, reason "Transportation for witness to go home and report at the SCSLP" the following day, 13 June 2006. Do you see that, Mr Witness?

15:11:40

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. What kind of work were you doing in the year 2006, Mr Witness?

A. Well, I was still with my church and apart from that I had some business run by my brother and my sisters. I helped that and I monitored that. Apart from that, as I said, at times the court will call me that somebody had come and they want to visit this and that area, so I will come there and go to the place and I will ask them to pay for my transport fare because I will not go there taking money from my own pocket. At times they send vehicle for me, but when I will be returning they give me transport fare.

Q. My initial question was what sort of work were you doing. Are you saying you were employed by your church, Mr Witness?

A. Yes, my church employed me. I used to get salary from Flaming. Even where I am now, I get salary from that.

Q. And you said you were doing some business on the side through your family, yes?

A. Yes, and in fact I have a whole house and they pay rent to me and every year I get 3.5 million. Two apartments: the one downstairs 3.5 and the other one upstairs, where my brother was, they pay the money to me directly. My sister sends money for me every month. I will not tell you a lie.

Q. That is okay.

A. Okay.

Q. How much did you make on average between your church and all these other ventures on the average day in 2006?

A. Well, I would have some other businesses. I had some other ways to get money. Every month I had other means to get money, apart from the church. The church used to give me 150,000 monthly. The pastor pleaded with me to accept that and I said, "Okay, no problem". Apart from that, I have my own investment. I have some money in the bank which was paid to me by the army. I have the documentation. 5 point something million. I went and bought Treasury bearer bonds. I get interest from that.

Q. At this time, though, you were already living --

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Interpreter, what was that last thing you said?

THE INTERPRETER: Profit from that. I have - I bought Treasury bearer bonds.

MR ANYAH:

Q. Mr Witness, by this time, 12 June 2006, you were living in accommodation provided by the Special Court, correct?

A. Yes, my Lord, that is correct.

Q. You did not have to pay rent whatsoever, right?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Yes. The Special Court was feeding you in the place where you were staying, right?

A. Well they were not feeding me directly, but I had my weekly allowance that they gave to me and I did not trust them. They asked me to be relocated and they used to give me allowance.

Q. When we look through these records and we see meals and breakfast, these sums being given to you they are in addition to the weekly allowance they used to give you when you were in this house, right?

A. No, as I said, this department that you are referring to, if they called on me and if I went there they will give me my transportation fare. That happened. Because there were times I would be in the church and they will call me. They will just say, "Pay and when you come we will refund your money".

Q. Mr Witness, let's not focus on transportation. Let's focus on the issue of feeding, meals. It is correct, is it not, that the Witness and Victims Section gave you feeding allowance while you were housed by them in Freetown, correct?

A. Yes, weekly allowances. Yes.

Q. And my point is separate and distinct from that whenever the Office of the Prosecutor would get you for interviews, or meetings, they also gave you money for food, yes?

A. As long as I went there, they provided my feeding. As long as they invited me to the office and I went there, they provided my feeding and transportation cost.
15:16:48 Q. And that was in addition to what WVS was giving you on a weekly basis for food, yes?
A. Well I did not request for this, as I said.
Q. I didn't ask if you requested for it, Mr Witness. I didn't ask if you requested for it. It might be a gift, for all you 15:17:08 knew. I am just asking if it was in addition to what the Witnesses and Victims Section was giving you for food on a weekly basis?
A. No, no, when they invited me I will go there. They will go and pick me up and I will come. They will give me my 15:17:31 transportation cost. The food, they used to buy it. They will go and buy it. I didn't know how much they bought it and I will sign for it on the document.
Q. Yes, well let's break it down. When you would go to the Special Court premises you are telling us they would buy you 15:17:45 food, right?
A. Yes, my Lord, they will go and bring food from the canteen. When they will bring it they will say this is 5,000 and they will ask me to sign. Whatever, they will ask me to sign on a document and I did.
15:18:01 Q. On the dates when you did not go to the Special Court premises and you stayed in the house that was being provided for by the Witnesses and Victims Section you used to eat based on the allowance they gave you, right?
A. Yes.

Q. So the allowance you were receiving for food from the Witnesses and Victims Section was different from money spent on you for food whenever you went to the Special Court premises, right?

15:18:38 A. It was different. As long as they invited me to that office that you are referring to - not the WVS, this prosecution - if the investigators wanted to see me they provided my transportation cost. When once they provided transportation they would bring the document and I will sign.

15:18:57 Q. Mr Witness, if you look at entry number 11 where we started with, 4 April 2006 - do you see that?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. And if you go all the way to the end of the page you see the page number is "Page 3 of 17"? Do you see that, Mr Witness?

15:19:32 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. All of the entries from entry number 11 all the way to page 15 - actually, it is even worse. All the way up to page 16 of this document, entry number 63. From entry 11 through entry number 63. Entry number 63 speaks of the date 6 November 2007.

15:20:11 Do you see that, Mr Witness?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. For all of those entries, the dates between lines 11 and 63, none of those dates correspond to any interview dates of yours that we have records of. From pages 3 through pages 16, we 15:20:36 don't have any records of you meeting with them on any of those dates. And what the Chamber would like to know, I suspect, is what were you doing with them during all of these meetings? What was going on?

A. My Lord, just as I said, I will be at my house and they will invite me. At times they will ask me to go and show them a particular place, or they will ask me - they will call me and ask me, "Do you know this person?", I will say, "No", or maybe they will want to get information from me or somebody else. I was in 15:21:17 their hands. At times they will call me, or they will take me and ask me that I should take them to West Side. Maybe somebody else wanted to see the West Side. So, mostly that was why they took me. They would say they had a visitor who wanted to see West Side and I will say, "Okay, let's go. No problem". I will 15:21:37 just take an excuse from my pastor, but I will tell them and say, "Be prepared for tomorrow. We will go to the place", and we will go there.

Q. Mr Witness, look at the entry in entry number 63. As of 64 - entry 64, 16 November, we know you were interviewed on that 15:22:03 day, but the preceding entry, entry number 63, it says you were given the sum of 60,000 leones and the category is "Information". The reason you were given this money is "Purchase of information". What information were they buying for 60,000 leones, Mr Witness?

15:22:23 A. It was not to buy something. At times they will call me and they will tell me we want you to go to this and this place. Maybe it is in the provinces, I will ask them to give me transportation and I will go. If they wanted information from me, there were many areas, at times Karina and some other places, 15:22:49 I would go there. I had taken people there who wanted to see some places and if you want to see places like those it will cost you money, it will cost you transportation. So they would give me the money.

Q. Why doesn't it say money for transportation. It says, my Lord. After the AFRC trial I went back to my house and also when the RUF trial started I was called upon and in that I raised concern regarding security matters. They said okay, I should stay in the safe house. After which - during the RUF trial I was 15:41:01 taken to the safe house and I have spent about two years now in the safe house, but to say for the past four years - I was living in my family house in Wellington, so this I want to state clearly.

Q. Very well. Do you agree then that for the past two years
15:41:21 you have been staying at a house regarding which the rent has been paid for by the Special Court for Sierra Leone?

A. Yes.

Q. You finished testifying in the RUF trial in July 2006, right?

15:41:43 A. Yes, thank you.

Q. And you testified in the AFRC in May and June 2005, correct?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. This area on Spur Road - did you say it was Spur Road,
15:42:05 Mr Witness, the area where the safe house is, right?

A. Yes, it's Spur Road.

Q. This is an expensive area of Freetown, right?

A. Well, my Lord, this question is broad because you also have people - because in my case I don't even know how much is paid 15:42:44 for that place. The place was rented and I am staying there.

Q. Mr Witness, are you aware that since March 2005 until now the Special Court has spent in excess of 30,000 US dollars on you?

A. Well, I will not deny the fact that that happened, because

A. When we got to Benguema we asked for them and they said they had taken them for safety. They said they were going to as far as Kailahun.

Q. Who said this?

10:09:24 A. As I can recall, Gullit informed us because we were the last batch to withdraw from Freetown and he told us that they had taken them to Makeni but they were to take them to Kailahun.

Q. In your testimony yesterday you said the Red Lion battalion, the STF, RUF and the NPFL men --

10:09:59 MR ANYAH: Can I have a page reference?

MS ALAGENDRA: I was coming to that:

Q. At page 8298, line 18 you said the STF, NPFL and RUF from the Red Lion battalion used head bands?

A. Yes, my Lord.

10:10:38 Q. I asked you what colour were these head bands and your answer - your Honours, I am referring to line 18. Your answer was, "Most of them were red. That is danger. They all had red on." Now apart from red head bands did they wear head bands of any other colour?

10:11:12 A. There were some people in the Red Lion who had white head bands too, some others had red.

Q. And those who had white, was there anything written on the white head bands?

A. Some people wrote "RUF" on the white head bands.

10:11:57 Q. When you say, "That is danger", what do you mean?

A. Well, this battalion, wherever they got to they will come in a most powerful way. Wherever they go they will perform - then if it comes to attack they will perform very well. If it comes to burning they would do it to extremes. So wherever Red Lion got to, that was danger.

Q. Witness, do you recall --

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Excuse me, is this an interpretation that the witness himself puts on this colour, or was this a policy of Red Lion? Is this his personal interpretation of the colour red?

MS ALAGENDRA: I will ask him, your Honour:

Q. Witness, can you explain why is it that you say the wearing of red head bands meant danger as you have explained it to me?

A. When we were advancing even we who were fighting with the team, if the Red Lion battalion was amongst us we will be happy with them because when they are with us we would be happy. The moment we saw them we said, "Oh, danger is here", but then we were really happy with them because they were really hard fighters. When we saw them we just said, "Oh, the danger men have come." The red indicated danger. As soon as we saw them we knew then that danger was in our midst.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: So, Mr Witness, this was your personal assessment of the colour?

THE WITNESS: All of us who were in the troop, who were in the brigade, when the Red Lion battalion would come all of us would say, "Oh, danger has come", because they tied red head bands. We said, "Oh, danger is here."

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Witness, when you say, "Danger has come" who did you refer that they were a danger to?

A. I was referring to the Red Lion battalion. Whenever they moved. If we were in this area, for example, and Red Lion battalion came there we said, "Oh, danger is here" because they were really fierce.

Q. And they were dangerous to who?
A. They were dangerous to the ECOMOG and even the civilians. What I observed was that most of them had no relations in Freetown, not like us who had family members in Freetown, so they 10:15:17 didn't care.
Q. What does it mean that they didn't care?
A. They hadn't family members in Freetown. Say, for example, you say, "Okay, let me be careful what I do. I will select among whom I do this too." They were not even familiar to the terrain 10:15:43 so wherever they would go they would just be dangerous to anybody they saw.
Q. Witness, yesterday you were testifying about a communication between Gullit and RUF Rambo.
A. Yes, my Lord.
10:16:07 Q. And in that communication you testified that RUF Rambo said - your Honours, I am referring specifically to line 14 at page 8300. "He said, well, the SLA Rambo, whom we referred to as Red Goat, who was alongside with them." In your testimony so far you have referred to SLA Rambo who was Moses Kabia and who was 10:16:47 the chief security officer to Johnny Paul Koroma.
A. No, my Lord. This Rambo Red Goat was Idrissa Kamara. His call sign was Red Goat. It was not Moses Kabia. Moses Kabia had gone before. He was with Johnny Paul Koroma.
MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, Idrissa Kamara is spelt
10:17:18 correctly in the record:
Q. When you say that Rambo Red Goat who was alongside with them, he was alongside with who?
A. Rambo Red Goat was with Superman. They were together with SAJ in Koinadugu, but during the infight he stayed with Superman, refer to the back as rear. Behind.

Q. What, if anything, happened to these government officials who were taken to the headquarters?
A. When Gullit called from Ferry Junction that we should go 10:28:42 and take reinforcement, we went back to the rear and we met - they had been killed and their corpses were displayed around Ferry Junction.
Q. Did you come to know who killed them?
A. Gullit said he issued out the order. He asked for the men 10:29:05 and he said he had ordered their execution. There was no need for them to be in our midst.
Q. Do you know why they were killed?
A. This was an order that Gullit gave out. He said they should be executed. He said they were collaborators and they 10:29:27 were the people who fought against us that led us to go into the bush.
Q. What, if anything, happened after this incident?
A. After this incident I, Colonel Eddie and others were appointed to go and receive Rambo and his team around the Allen 10:29:57 Town area, so we went back and received them at Allen Town and brought them to Ferry Junction.
Q. Do you recall who Rambo came with? Well before that your answer "received Rambo", which Rambo are you talking about?
A. This time it was Rambo Red Goat, Idrissa Kamara. He 10:30:32 brought the team.
Q. Witness, at this stage can I ask you when you are referring to Rambo to be specific as to which Rambo you are talking about, please.
A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Witness, do you recall if Rambo Red Goat came with anyone?
A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. How many people did he come with?
A. They were above 50. There were RUF and some SLA whom 10:31:10 I knew.
Q. Do you recall out of the 50 how many were SLA?
A. The SLAs were very few. The RUF were more in number than the SLA.
Q. Are you able to give us a number as to how many SLAs?
10:31:37 A. The SLAs were about 20, but the remaining were all RUF.
Q. Witness, do you know who sent Rambo Red Goat and his men?
A. Excuse me?
Q. Do you know who sent Rambo Red Goat and his men to Allen Town?
10:32:13 A. As I said earlier, when Gullit called RUF Rambo saying that he had had an order to release reinforcement to enter and reinforce us in Freetown. He said he got the order from Mosquito.
Q. After the arrival of Rambo Red Goat and his men, did 10:32:46 anything happen?
A. Well the troop had a high morale at that time, because we expected that. Everybody was happy - the RUF, the SLA, everybody was happy - because they were heavily armed. And when they came we all moved to Ferry Junction and Gullit said that we should 10:33:16 move and join the team at Eastern Police so that we should advance back to State House, after which we moved and we undertook another advance to State House and recaptured State House.
Q. Witness, at this point can you give us a date? What date until now we have been talking about a group that remained behind. I want to know when you say "fighting force", which group are you referring to? The group that remained behind, or the group that went ahead?

11:07:42 A. Well, it was the group that was in the front that advanced to capture the State House. That is the advance fighting force. We had another group who were with Gullit. That was the brigade. They also had the family members, but this fighting force was the group that was at the battlefront.

11:08:03 Q. Witness, you have just spoken about a fighting force that you were with.

A. Well, like I have spoken about this fighting force, this was the force that advanced to recapture State House, so this is the same force that I am talking about. That was the group in 11:08:31 which I was. It comprised the Red Lion battalion mixed with all other groups that I have spoken about, together with SLA Rambo and the reinforcement that he brought. That was the fighting force that I am talking about.

Q. Witness, I understand the composition of the fighting force 11:08:52 at the time of the recapture of the State House. Now, I am asking you about the composition of the fighting force at a later stage now when the groups were withdrawing out of Freetown. Do you understand my question?

A. Yes, my Lord. This fighting force continued to remain

11:09:16 together until we got to Crazy Yard. That is the mental home. We were all together until Gullit left us at PWD and he moved with the family members, but the fighting force still remained together because it was this force that Gullit was always looking up to. Any time the fighting force retreated, the brigade will

A. Yes, it was Lieutenant Colonel Basky.
Q. Did he have any other name?
A. Saidu Kambolai.
Q. Witness, the troops that left Colonel Eddie Town, where did you all go to?
11:23:27
A. Well, as I said, we headed towards Mange Bureh.
Q. After Mange Bureh did you go anywhere else?
A. Yes, we attacked Mange Bureh and headed towards the Port Loko area.
11:23:54
Q. Did you go to any specific place in the Port Loko area?
A. Well, there was a village which they called Maraykula. We attacked Maraykula and Five-Five who was at the rear had to burn down - ordered that Maraykula be burnt so Maraykula was set on fire.
11:24:24
MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, Maraykula is M-A-R-A-Y-K-U-L-A:
Q. Who set Maraykula on fire?
A. Well, Five-Five and the other men who were with him, because Maraykula was a place we almost rested. Some people went 11:24:50
- some men went to the jungle and others were in the town, so Five-Five put that village on fire.
Q. What was put on fire in the village?
A. The houses.
Q. Did the group move anywhere after Maraykula?
11:25:10
A. Yes, we left Maraykula and headed towards Lunsar - the Lunsar axis.
Q. Just to be clear, where is Lunsar?
A. Lunsar is in the Bombali District.
Q. Did anything happen in Lunsar?

A. Well, we set up a temporary place at a place called Mamusa. That was where we created the temporary base. And then SAJ said we should attack Lunsar, because we had received information from monitoring that ECOMOG base was at Lunsar. So we appointed 11:25:58 Colonel Terminator and other men who joined and we attacked Lunsar.

Q. Did anything happen during the attack on Lunsar?

A. Well, yes. We captured some military ammunition from Lunsar from the ECOMOG forces who were there and we withdrew.

11:26:26 Q. Where did you withdraw to?

A. We returned to Mamusa.

Q. Did the group move from Mamusa at some point?

A. Yes, my Lord, but I left out something because when we left Colonel Eddie Town and advanced towards Mange Bureh, as I said, 11:26:50 we were ambushed and SAJ Musa said that the officers who were involved should be demoted, they should be reprimanded until they prove themselves. So about seven of us who were involved in that ambush who were second lieutenants were reprimanded and SAJ said we should continue at the front until we proved ourselves. It 11:27:19 was then that we finally attacked Mange Bureh.

Q. When you were demoted was there a change in your rank?

A. He reprimanded us and said we should go as sergeants. All of us who were involved in that ambush should hold the positions of sergeants until we proved well. But he said we should stay at 11:27:44 the battlefront. He must not see us at the rear. We should be in the front until we proved ourselves, because it was during that ambush that they killed some of our men.

Q. Did the group move from Mamusa at some point?

A. Yes, my Lord, we left Mamusa and advanced towards Gberi junction. Gberi bridge and Gberi junction. Gberi junction, sorry.

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, perhaps this is a convenient time to stop.

11:28:33 PRESIDING JUDGE: Very well, Ms Alagendra. Mr Witness, we are now going to take the mid-morning break. We will resume court again at 12 o'clock. Please adjourn court until 12.

[Break taken at 11.29 a.m.]

[Upon resuming at 12.00 p.m.]

12:01:43 PRESIDING JUDGE: Ms Alagendra, please proceed.

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, can I ask that the witness be given the map of Bombali District.

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, before that the interpreter would like to make a correction.

12:02:09 PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, Mr Interpreter, what is that correction?

THE INTERPRETER: The witness spoke about a base and he used the words "temporal base" and it was inadvertently interpreted by the interpreter as "temporal base". It actually 12:02:27 should be interpreted as temporary base.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you. We will have to find out on the record and have it noted accordingly.

THE INTERPRETER: Thank you.

PRESIDING JUDGE: The map you referred to is Bombali, is 12:02:39 it, Ms Alagendra?

MS ALAGENDRA: That is right, your Honour. It appears at S5 of the map book.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Ms Alagendra, whatever you said was not on the record because I think your microphone was not on, or something.

MS ALAGENDRA: Yes, I will just repeat that. I was asking that the witness be shown the map of Bombali District, which appears at the page marked S5 of the map book.

12:03:39 Your Honours, the procedure that was used previously was that the map was removed from the sleeve and put onto the screen and the witness was marking the locations as we went. He was also provided with a black marker like pen for him to circle the locations and another colour which he used to write the numbers.

12:04:10 MS MUZIGO-MORRISON: Black?

MS ALAGENDRA: One black and the other pen used was blue. He used the black to circle and the blue to write the numbers. Thank you.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Are we ready to proceed?

12:04:56 MS ALAGENDRA: I am, your Honour. I was just checking whether the witness was ready.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Have we ascertained yet if the witness is able to read the map?

MS ALAGENDRA: I will ask him, your Honour:

12:05:14 Q. Witness, can you clarify for the Court your ability to read maps?

A. Yes, my Lord.

MS ALAGENDRA: Is that sufficient, your Honour?

PRESIDING JUDGE: I think it is.

12:05:31 MS ALAGENDRA: Thank you, your Honour.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Obviously, if it is to be challenged it will be challenged.

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Witness, the map in front of you it says on top of it that it is the map of Bombali District, Sierra Leone. I am going to ask you to - witness, I am going to ask you to look at this map in front of you and I am going to ask you to mark some of the locations in Bombali District that you have named in the course 12:06:28 of your testimony these last few days. Is that all right?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Witness, you referred to a place called Karina. Do you see Karina on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

12:07:21 Q. Could you circle Karina on the map and can you put a number 1 next to Karina. You referred to a place Gbendembu in the course of your testimony. Can you find Gbendembu on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you circle Gbendembu.

12:08:06 JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Could you move the map so we can see on the screen, because we can't.

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Put a number 2 next to it, please, witness. You referred to Rosos in the course of your testimony. Do you see Rosos on 12:08:42 the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you circle it and put a number 3 next to Rosos.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: We can't see anything. We can't. We can't see what it is he has circled.

12:09:23 MS ALAGENDRA: Perhaps it can be zoomed in a little bit:

Q. Witness, you referred to Mateboi in your testimony. Do you see it on the map?

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Did the witness put a 3 against Rosos? It doesn't look like he did.

THE WITNESS: No, my Lord.

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Witness, can you put a number 3 next to Rosos, please. Can you circle Mateboi on the map?

12:10:19 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. And put a number 4 next to it. In your testimony to the Court you stated that Major Eddie Town which later became Colonel Eddie Town was situated in between the Tonko Limba Chiefdom and the Sanda Magbolontor Chiefdom. Do you recall that?

12:11:08 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Could you first circle Tonko Limba Chiefdom on the map, please. Put a number 5 next to that. Do you see Sanda Magbolontor Chiefdom on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

12:11:47 Q. Could you circle that and put a number 6 next to that. Witness, would you be able to tell the Court where exactly Colonel Eddie Town was located on this map?

A. Well, I don't have the right name for Colonel Eddie Town. It is between Sanda Magbolontor, it is not too far from Madina to 12:12:50 Kantia, because from Kantia to Colonel Eddie Town is not too far away, also from Madina --

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can the witness take it slowly.

PRESIDING JUDGE: A little slower for the interpreter,

12:13:05 Mr Witness, please. Mr Interpreter, have you got all the answer?

THE INTERPRETER: No, your Honour.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Tell me where you have lost? Where did you lose it?

THE INTERPRETER: Let him repeat everything, your Honour.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, you were saying about Madina. You said also from Madina. Can you continue from there, please?

THE WITNESS: I said Madina is not too far away from Colonel Eddie Town. I also mentioned Kantia which is also not too far away from our base which was Colonel Eddie Town.

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Witness, by looking at the map would you be able to point to the Court where Colonel Eddie Town is? If you can just answer the question first before looking at the map. Could you, or could you not?

A. I can locate from the map. I can just not recall the name of the village.

Q. That is fine. Can you look at the map and where you say Colonel Eddie Town was located could you put an X in that place. Could you put a number 7 next to that, please, witness. Do you see Madina on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you circle Madina and put a number 8 next to Madina. Do you see Kantia on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you circle Kantia and put a number 9 next to that. Do you see Kukuna on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you circle Kukuna and put a number 10 next to that, please. Do you see Makeni on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Could you circle Makeni and put a number 11 next to that, please. Thank you, witness. Your Honours, this will be all the markings for the Bombali District map. Your Honours, can I ask that this map be marked for identification MFI-22, I believe.

PRESIDING JUDGE: I think that is correct. Now a one page document, a map headed "Bombali District - Sierra Leone" as marked by the witness with numbers and circles from 1 to 11 is marked for identification MFI-22. Yes, please proceed, Ms Alagendra.

MS ALAGENDRA: Thank you, your Honour:

Q. Witness, just before the break you told the Court that you left Mamusa and you advanced towards Gberi junction. In that same answer you also said Gberi bridge and Gberi junction. Can you be a bit more precise as to where the troops moved to from Mamusa?

A. From Mamusa we headed towards Gberi junction.

Q. Where is Gberi junction?

A. Gberi junction is also between the Port Loko District and Bombali District. It is a junction between Port Loko District and Bombali District.

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, Gberi junction was spelt correctly earlier, so I am going to leave the record for later correction.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: That is Port Loko junction. Was that Port Loko junction?

MS ALAGENDRA: That is what I heard, your Honour:

Q. Did you go to any other place from Gberi junction?

A. Well, the troop moved for Gberi bridge.

Q. And from Gberi bridge did the troop move anywhere else?

A. Well, we encountered a small target where we met the Kamajors. We flushed them and advanced ahead towards Mansumana axis, that was Masiaka, Mansumana axis.

Q. When you arrived at the Mansumana axis in Masiaka did you hear anything?

A. Yes, when we approached Masiaka, Mansumana axis, we got news from the international media where the Government of Sierra 12:21:28 Leone claimed that they had flushed the junta troops, that was the AFRC/RUF troops that was heading for Freetown, that they had flushed them out and Masiaka was their defensive and no troop will cross Masiaka.

Q. Did anything happen after you heard this news?

12:22:02 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. What happened?

A. Well, immediately SAJ Musa called on the brigade administration and said we were to organise a troop to attack Masiaka immediately, so to destroy the defensive made by the 12:22:32 government at Masiaka.

Q. What happened after SAJ Musa passed this instruction?

A. Well, manpower was gathered together from the different battalions and organised themselves and advanced on Masiaka. Papa 17, Colonel Papa - Lieutenant Colonel Papa, his aka was Papa 12:23:12 17, was appointed by SAJ Musa who led the troop to attack Masiaka.

Q. Witness, just to be clear, this Colonel Papa, is he a different person from Hassan Papa Bangura?

A. Yes, my Lord, he is a different person. Papa 17 - because 12:23:36 that was the way we used to call him - he came along with SAJ Musa's group. He is different from Colonel Hassan Papa Bangura who was the operation commander.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Sorry to interrupt - you are going to ask the same question as I was going to ask. Please continue.

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Are you saying Papa 70 or Papa 17?

A. Papa 17. One seven.

Q. Thank you, witness. Did anything happen after Papa 17 was appointed to lead the troops?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. What happened?

A. Well, I also joined the troop. Together, like I have said the demoted officers that SAJ Musa had said they should engage at the front line to prove themselves, we went and attacked Masiaka, but on our first attempt we were unable to capture the ground. It was only the second attempt that we entered Masiaka.

Q. Did anything happen when you entered Masiaka?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. What happened?

A. Well we encountered stiff resistance from the Guineans who were based at Masiaka, but we were able to dislodge them and got some ammunition from the Guineans who were based there. I also captured an SPG, which is a support propelled grenade. We lost a commander, he was killed during the battle, Papa 17, after which houses were burnt in Lunsar - and I am sorry in Masiaka and some Guineans were killed. We - they retreated from Masiaka. We retreated from Masiaka and came back to the temporary base and reported to SAJ.

Q. Witness, who were the Guineans based in Masiaka?

A. Well, this was the troop that was with ECOMOG. They were part of the ECOMOG troop that were based in Sierra Leone.

Q. Who burnt houses in Masiaka?

A. Well, myself and the other commanders. I mean, the troop that entered Masiaka. We set fire to the houses in Masiaka.

Q. You said you returned back to base. Where did you return to?
A. Well, we went back to the base between Mansumana and 12:27:13 Masiaka axis where we made our temporary base.
Q. Witness, when you returned to this temporary base did anything happen? Did anything happen to your rank?
A. Yes, SAJ Musa recommended me and one Amidu Kamara called Keforkeh. He said automatically we should be promoted to captain 12:27:49 for the bravery and the capture of the SPG.
Q. Witness, can you repeat the name again, please?
A. Amidu Kamara, AKA Keforkeh.
MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, Amidu is A-M-I-D-U Kamara and Keforkeh is K-E-F-O-R-K-E-H:
12:28:20 Q. Witness, is Keforkeh an alias?
A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. What happened after this, witness?
A. Well after base SAJ Musa said troops should go to the highway and ensure that they tried to ambush the ECOMOG troop 12:28:51 passing on that highway, so Colonel Terminator was appointed and some other men. They went to the highway, they ambushed two ECOMOG vehicles that were moving from Masiaka to the Waterloo Highway and we succeeded in ambushing them and then we returned to the base.
12:29:18 Q. Now you say, "They went to the highway, they ambushed two ECOMOG", and then you say, "we succeeded in ambushing". Who was involved in this ambush?
A. Like I said, Colonel Terminator was the leader. It was a mixed group. Colonel Terminator was the commander, Lamin Sidique, who led the ambush team, and we at the end succeeded. I was with them, we succeeded in ambushing the ECOMOG force and then later the two vehicles were burnt and then we returned to the temporary base.

12:30:08 Q. Did anything happen when you returned to the temporary base?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. What happened?

A. Also, SAJ Musa also appointed Terminator and selected some 12:30:30 other people to go and disorganise the base at Mile 38 that he had got an information that ECOMOG were there. There also Terminator led the group together with some others and attacked Magbuntoso, which was Mile 38, and they succeeded in pushing the ECOMOG forces there. They also retreated, but indeed the leader, 12:31:07 Terminator, was shot, he sustained injury, so we retreated and came back to SAJ.

Q. Is Mile 38 known by any other name?

A. Well, the name --

PRESIDING JUDGE: Just a moment, please. Mr Anyah, you are 12:31:25 --

MR ANYAH: Yes, I would be grateful for some indication as to the time frame for the attack on Mile 38.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Ms Alagendra, you have heard the application.

12:31:37 MS ALAGENDRA: I will do that, your Honour.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: I also thought the witness said Mile 38 was Magbuntoso. He already said that.

MS ALAGENDRA: Yes, your Honour, I see it. I apologise.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: We need the spelling though.

MS ALAGENDRA: Magbuntoso, your Honour, is spelt M-A-G-B-U-N-T-O-S-O:

Q. Witness, this attack on Mile 38, when did it take place?

12:32:12 A. Well, this was early end of December in 1998.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: What is "early end of December"?

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Witness, what do you mean by "early end of December"?

A. This happened towards the Christmas. We were going towards 12:32:38 the Christmas in 1998, in December. It was around the 20-something in December 1998.

Q. Did the troops move anywhere after Mile 38?

A. Yes, after they returned SAJ Musa said the entire troop should advance and so we had to advance towards RDF. This was a 12:33:16 brigade advance. ECOMOG retreated from RDF. We advanced towards Mamamah. Yes, we went and based at Mamamah.

Q. What is RDF?

A. Well, this was a base settled by the NPRC called Rapid Deployment Force with the Sierra Leone Army heart.

12:33:49 MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, Mamamah is spelt M-A-M-A-H [sic]:

Q. Witness, where is Mile 38 located?

A. Mile 38 is between Koya rural district.

Q. Where is RDF located?

12:34:14 A. It is also within that same area, Koya rural district.

Q. Where is Mamamah?

A. Mamamah too is within with Koya rural district.

Q. And where is Koya rural district?

A. Well, this is between the west end - I mean within the Western Area, but it is also a district by itself that is called Koya rural district. It is not too far from Masiaka.

JUDGE LUSSICK: Now, Ms Alagendra, when the witness says, "Mile 38 is between Koya rural district", does he mean within Koya rural district?

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Witness, can you clarify that for the Court, please?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Please do so.

12:35:29 A. Mile 38 is within Koya rural district. Mile 38, Mamamah, RDF are all within Koya rural district.

Q. Witness, when the troops arrived at Mamamah, did anything happen?

12:36:08 A. Well, yes, we listened to an announcement over the international media and General Mosquito went over the air and said the troop is moving towards Freetown and that they have captured a military strategic base which was RDF and they were heading for Freetown. Then he said also from the rear they are coming and they were advancing towards Kono and they will move to capture Daru.

Q. Witness, in this broadcast that you heard, do you recall if General Mosquito said anything about who were the troops that captured RDF?

12:37:13 A. Well, he said his men that, "We are moving towards Freetown". He said his men that were moving, the AFRC and RUF joint force that were moving towards Freetown, had captured a military strategic base which was RDF and that they were moving towards Freetown. He said the other forces are also moving to capture Kono and Daru as well.

Q. Did he specify which other forces?
A. Yes, he said the AFRC/RUF forces are moving from all angles.
Q. Witness, how long after your group captured RDF did this 12:38:04 announcement come on?
A. It was just after we captured there and based at Mamamah that the announcement came up.
Q. Did anything happen as a result of this broadcast?
A. Yes, my Lord, as far as I can recall.
12:38:32 Q. What happened?
A. Well SAJ Musa called Alfred Brown, who was one of the radio men, and he was angry with him that he was giving information to Mosquito and he was not happy with that. He said he will not subject himself under the control of Mosquito. So he was not 12:39:04 happy with that because Mosquito was an SBU and so he was angry with Alfred Brown, but later the other commanders spoke to him so --
Q. So?
A. Let go of Alfred Brown.
12:39:27 Q. Okay, witness, I want to clarify a few issues out of this answer. Firstly, witness, you testified earlier about an RUF commander called Alfred Brown and here you are talking about Alfred Brown who was one of the radio men. Were there two Alfred Browns in your group?
12:39:56 A. No, my Lord. Like I have said earlier, I said Alfred Brown came together with SAJ Musa. He was a radio man. They came together to Colonel Eddie Town. This very Alfred Brown was the one SAJ Musa was angry with.
Q. Which group did Alfred Brown belong to?

A. Alfred Brown was an RUF. He was with the RUF.
Q. Now can you explain to us what you mean by SAJ Musa saying he was not happy with that because Mosquito was an SBU?
A. Well, just as I said, because of that infighting that 12:40:57 happened with SAJ in Koinadugu he said there are no longer any differences, but the troops should advance, because that was their earlier plan, that there should be a brigade advance to Freetown. He said he should not link up with or give any information to Mosquito.
12:41:21 Q. Witness, you still haven't explained what you meant when you said because Mosquito was an SBU, just that phrase.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, do you understand the question?
THE WITNESS: Yes, my Lord. SAJ said Mosquito was not a 12:41:45 trained man. He said SAJ, he was a trained military man who had gone through military courses. He said Mosquito should not - now that he is advancing, should not control him. He said the main aim was to advance and capture Freetown. There was no need to take command from him until they have captured Freetown.
12:42:07 MS ALAGENDRA:
Q. Who called Mosquito an SBU?
A. It was SAJ Musa who said Mosquito was an SBU to him.
Q. And this explanation you have just provided, who gave this explanation?
12:42:28 A. Well, it was SAJ who said that.
Q. After Mamamah did the troops move anywhere else?
A. Yes, my Lord. The ECOMOG started bombarding that area, so we moved ahead to Newton and we captured Newton.
Q. Where is Newton?

A. Newton is close to - after Waterloo we have Newton. It too is in the Koya rural district.
Q. How long did the troops remain in Newton?
A. Well, we were there until during the night. We spent some 12:43:29 hours at Newton. Towards nightfall SAJ said we should advance to capture Waterloo and advance on to Benguema.
Q. Did the troops advance to Waterloo?
A. Yes, before we advanced we declared born naked, Operation Born Naked wherein all of us removed our uniforms that we were 12:44:03 wearing, our uniform shirts and tied it around our waist so that we will be able to identify ourselves. If you were putting something on we will know that you were an enemy. After which we advanced to capture Waterloo.
Q. Witness, who declared Operation Born Naked?
12:44:43 A. Well, it was SAJ Musa. He said so that we will be able to identify one another because it was a night combat. Everybody should remove the uniform shirt that you had and tie it, so whoever was not in that form would be considered an enemy.
Q. You said the troops advanced to capture Waterloo, was 12:45:08 Waterloo captured?
A. Yes, my Lord. We advanced and captured Waterloo.
Q. Witness, can you give us a time frame at this stage?
A. Well, this happened around 23 December 1998.
Q. Did anything happen when the troops arrived in Waterloo?
12:45:39 A. Well, yes. We captured Waterloo and we were giving messages to the civilian populace that we have come, those of us who had gone had come again, that they should come and join us and that we have come to reinstate the army as SAJ has said that this was a way of cajoling the civilians. That those of us who they had pushed out had come back. That we have come to reinstate the army and that the people should support us. So we were talking to the people in Waterloo, giving them messages to go and tell the people in Freetown that we were coming.

12:46:30 Q. Did anything else happen in Waterloo?

A. Well, later SAJ Musa sat together with the brigade administrator whilst the others were looting, looting to get logistics like rice and other things in Waterloo, SAJ summoned Foday Bah Marah and told him to take some men so that we can go

12:46:59 and capture Benguema. Whilst they were in Waterloo Foday Bah took me and some other men. We were mixed. We went to attack Benguema. When we attempted the ECOMOG responded with a heavy support firing. That caused Bulldoze, that is Foday Bah Marah, to tell us to wait and as he was going to inform SAJ that the 12:47:37 manpower that was in Benguema was very heavy. So I and the other men waited until later when we saw the brigade coming. SAJ --

Q. I would ask you to pause. You're talking about looting taking place in Waterloo. Who was looting?

A. Well, this was done by the combined team that came because 12:48:03 that was the area where we found food and other things, so everybody was taking.

Q. Who were you looting from?

A. The civilians whom we met at Waterloo, they were the ones we were taking things from.

12:48:23 Q. At this stage in Waterloo witness, where was the Red Lion battalion?

A. Well, as I said, it was a brigade advance. All of us came to Waterloo.

Q. Do you know if SAJ Musa was aware that the troops were looting?

A. Well, you know he was sitting down, because when we captured Waterloo at the junction they were sitting down there, himself, Bazzy and Gullit. Everybody was taking what he wanted.
12:48:58 The looting was going on.
Q. So does that mean he knew?
A. Yes, he saw with his own very eyes. He saw that people were taking things that they wanted. Everybody was taking what he wanted.
12:49:16 Q. You were saying that you and the other men waited until later you saw the brigade coming.
A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. Can you please continue from there?
A. Well, when the brigade got closer to us we advanced and 12:49:37 this time SAJ Musa joined with the advance. He had an AA and he was shooting continually and later we used a 60 millimetre mortar. Finally we disorganised the ECOMOG force that we found in Benguema and we captured Benguema. At that time everybody was busy because Benguema is a military training centre so everybody
12:50:07 was busy in Benguema. Some people were looting, some people were taking ammunition, everything. Whilst this was going on --
Q. Witness, can I pause you there first please. What is an AA?
A. It's the anti-aircraft weapon. It's a support weapon.
12:50:31 Q. Please continue. You were saying while this was going on?
A. Well, while this was going on I, Bazzy, O-Five, Colonel Eddie went towards where they had mounted a 120 millimetre mortar. We were trying to fix the plate very close to the drill shell and the ammunition dump.

Q. Who had mounted the 120 millimetre weapon?
A. Well, this weapon was being used by the ECOMOG to bombard our base at Mamamah.
Q. Please continue, witness.
12:51:30 A. So whilst we were trying to fix the plate we heard an explosion, a heavy explosion, in Benguema. So in this explosion all of us stood and saw one Barrie who was also a PS, personal security, Captain Barrie, to SAJ Musa. He was carrying somebody. He said, "Oh, Eagle, problem." He said, "Eagle has encountered a 12:52:04 problem." So he put him down.
Q. Witness, I will ask you to pause. Your Honours, Barrie is B-A-R-R-I-E. Witness, who is Eagle?
A. Well, it was SAJ Musa. That was his call sign that he was using, Eagle.
12:52:30 Q. Please continue, witness.
A. So within that period they brought the - broke a door and put SAJ on it. O-Five was trying to give milk to SAJ, but SAJ could not take it. So they started saying, "Oh, it looks like Eagle has died." But when they laid SAJ, the helmet that he was 12:53:04 wearing was pierced, something that I myself saw. After that Amara Kallay told me that, "Ice T, let's move away from this area, let's go." He said because if the other men found out that SAJ had died this would cause a very serious problem, so let us go. So I too left there. By then Gullit had come there, 12:53:38 Five-Five had come. I left Bazzy, Colonel Eddie, O-Five. They were all close to the corpse and I left and I joined Amara Kallay and we moved towards Macdonald.
Q. Witness, I am going to ask you to pause. At this stage now did you know what happened to SAJ Musa?

A. Well, from what I saw, when they gave SAJ the milk straight off I knew SAJ had died.
Q. Did you know what had happened to him prior to him being carried to where you were?
12:54:26 A. Well, this bomb exploded in that area. That was what they said. Gullit said the bomb killed SAJ.
Q. In which area?
A. Well it was in Benguema that this incident happened, but after that - after we had left - I and Amara Kallay and others, 12:54:53 Junior Lion, and we went to Macdonald where we settled, the troops were divided. Gullit, Five-Five, O-Five, Hassan Papa Bangura, all of them were together with SAJ's corpse. They were also around the hill in Benguema.
Q. Witness, I am going to ask you to pause there to explain to 12:55:25 the Court what is it that you saw when you said you saw his helmet pierced - SAJ's helmet. What did you see?
A. Well what I saw was a bullet hole that went through that hit SAJ, because you can see where the bullet went through, where it was pierced, and so I believed that SAJ was shot. Later the 12:56:02 rumour was doing the round around the brigade that it was Gullit who killed SAJ.
Q. You said that you returned and you saw Gullit, Five-Five, O-Five and Hassan Papa Bangura with SAJ Musa's corpse. Can you continue from there, please?
12:56:26 A. I said I left them there. When all of them had come I moved with Amara Kallay and we went to Macdonald Hill where Junior Lion, Foday Bah, Basky and some other men and other members whom we were fighting together with based. There was a day that we were not able to see Gullit and their own group, so later a patrol team located us and brought us to where Gullit was based. So, when we got there to my surprise I saw Gullit fully dressed with - fully dressed in SAJ Musa's helmet and the uniform that SAJ Musa was wearing, and above all Alabama, who was SAJ Musa's CSO, was very close to Gullit.

12:57:34

MS ALAGENDRA: Witness, I am going to ask you to pause. Your Honours, I apologise for not directing your attention to this earlier, but at the time the witness was explaining about what he saw with the helmet he had pointed to the right-hand side of his temple and I just wanted the court record to reflect that.

12:57:54

PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, we will put on record that the witness indicated with his hand the right-hand side of his temple while describing the helmet being pierced by a bullet at the side of the head. The side of the forehead, in fact.

12:58:19

MS ALAGENDRA: Yes, your Honour. Thank you:

Q. Witness, what happened after you saw Gullit dressed in SAJ Musa's uniform and helmet?

A. Well, Gullit did not say anything. Automatically we all recognised him as the commander, so he was in full control of the troops now.

12:58:54

Q. Witness, what if anything happened to SAJ Musa's corpse?

A. Well, when we got there Gullit said they have buried SAJ Musa at Koba Water area. He said they have buried him.

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, Macdonald is spelt M-A-C-D-O-N-A-L-D, Alabama is ALABAMA, Koba Water is K-O-B-A and Water the normal spelling:

12:59:22

Q. Witness, do you recall the date that SAJ Musa was buried?

A. Well, as I said, we almost entered on 23 December and he died that night in the morning hours of the 24th. As far as I can recall it was at that time, because when we came they had buried him.

Q. So which date is it, 23 or 24 December?

A. It should be the 24th, because it was on the 23rd that we attacked Benguema. That was when he died. So, on 24th in the morning that was when they said they buried him.

Q. Did anything else happen after this?

A. Well after this, we got to that point, Gullit said we should go deep into the jungle.

Q. Which point?

A. We came towards deep into the Benguema - the hills around Benguema. It was around there that we went.

Q. What happened after Gullit said the troop should go deep into the jungle?

A. Well, after this Gullit restructured the brigade and made some other appointments.

Q. While restructuring the brigade, did Gullit say anything?

A. Well the only thing that Gullit said when he saw I and Keforkeh, he said that captain promotion that we were going along with we were not supposed to be going along with a captain promotion. He said we should be acting as lieutenants until we prove ourselves well. He said I and Keforkeh should not carry that promotion. That was what he told us.

Q. Did Gullit's position change at this stage?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. What did it change to?

A. Well, straightaway Gullit became - he later became - after SAJ's death he became the chief in command and he made other appointments.

Q. Do you recall the other appointments he made?
A. Yes, I can recall.
Q. What were the other appointments?
A. He made Bazzy the deputy chief in command and a member of 13:02:53 the brigade administration. He made Santigie Borbor Kanu to continue his position as chief of staff and member of the brigade administration. He also appointed Franklyn Conteh, whom we also called Woyoh. He made him the director of operations, DOO.
Q. Did anything happen to the ranks of the battalion 13:03:24 commanders?
A. Yes, he also promoted the lieutenant colonels to colonels.
Q. Did Alabama have any assignment at this stage?
A. Yes, Alabama was still with him as his CSO.
Q. Did anything happen to O-Five's position, who you said 13:04:06 earlier was operations commander?
A. No, my Lord. O-Five remained to be the operation commander. He also appointed Foyoh as the mission commander, Colonel Foyoh. He also appointed Junior George Johnson as the task force commander. Then he appointed Roadblock, Commander 13:04:39 Roadblock, as the military police commander.
Q. Was there a deputy operations commander?
A. Yes, my Lord. He appointed Junior Sherrif as the deputy operations commander.
Q. At this stage were there any changes as to the number of 13:05:08 battalions?
A. Well, the battalion remained the same.
Q. Can you remind us again what they were?
A. We had the 1st battalion, the 2nd battalion, the 3rd battalion, the 4th battalion and the 5th battalion, RDF and the Red Lion battalion.

Q. Were there any changes in the commanders of these battalions?

A. Yes, there were slight changes in the commanders. For instance the RDF had a commander, but he was an SLA. We called him NPFL. They appointed him as commander for the RDF because Colonel Terminator had had a problem and also Bulldoze, Foday Marah, we also called him Bulldoze, they made him the second battalion commander. We also had Foday Bah Marah, who was Bulldoze. He became the G4 commander. He was responsible for all arms and ammunition that we had. He kept them. We had civilians who would carry those ammunition as we went along, so we called him G4.

Q. Witness, at this point the family members that you have been referring to who were the captured civilians, where were they?

A. They were all taken to the jungle. We did not leave them behind.

Q. You testified that there were SBUs with the various battalions. At this point where were the SBUs?

A. I said the entire brigade, including the SBUs, the family members, all of them went to that Macdonald Hill.

Q. The SBUs, were they still divided amongst the various battalions?

A. Yes, my Lord. They were with the various battalions and commanders.

Q. Do you recall if the Red Lion battalion had SBUs?

A. Yes, they too had SBUs that were with them.

Q. Did your position change, witness?

A. Well, the only position was that I still remained as a front line - as combat commander always engaged at the battlefront, because Gullit too said we should prove ourselves because he too questioned our promotion that was made by SAJ Musa.

13:08:28

Q. Witness, you have said "front line' and you have said "combat commander". Can you be a bit clearer as to what your position was at this point?

A. Well, as I am saying, when I say "front line" it is the same word, "combat". When you are in the combat zone you are in the front line. It is a killing zone and so you were always engaged - you are always engaged in battles.

13:08:49

Q. Apart from being a combat commander, did you have any other assignment at this point?

A. Well at this time, as I said, I was still with Basky at the 5th battalion. I was with Basky.

13:09:12

Q. Did you have any assignment in the 5th battalion?

A. Yes, I was the IO of the 5th battalion, intelligence officer.

Q. What was your duties as intelligence officer?

13:09:36

A. Well at the time that I was with the battalion I was to ensure that I got intelligence about the areas that we were leaving, if there were enemies threats. If we had an information from the headquarters, as the IO I will bring that up and give reports to the battalion commander.

13:10:00

Q. At this point how many fighters were in your group, do you recall?

A. Which of the groups?

Q. The group you were with, the entire troop, how many fighters were there?

A. Well, the group we came with up to Freetown was large, the troop was large. We were nearly 1,000, those of us who came.

Q. Witness, after these deployments were made did anything happen?

13:10:42

A. Well, yes, Gullit said that he had had a dream and he wanted that dream to come true, that he had dreamt SAJ Musa - sorry, he said a woman had dreamt that SAJ Musa was crying, that the operation should continue. That is we should complete the mission to capture Freetown. He said so he was talking to the men to be prepared so that we can go and attack Freetown.

13:11:12

Q. Witness, can you be a bit clearer as to who had this dream, SAJ Musa or a woman?

PRESIDING JUDGE: I think SAJ had passed on. It was Gullit or --

13:11:36

MS ALAGENDRA: I beg your pardon:

Q. Gullit or the woman?

A. It was the woman who met Gullit and told him that she had had a dream and in this dream SAJ Musa was crying that the mission should continue and that we should enter Freetown. So Gullit informed the troops. But after that Gullit said we should go and attack a place in the peninsula. I have just lost the name of the place. So he organised this team headed by Junior Sherrif. York. York. Okay, York. We went to attack York. So

13:11:50

13:12:27

Junior Sherrif headed this group and we went and attacked York, but we lost our artillery commander and that caused us to withdraw to the jungle where we had based.

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, York is Y-O-R-K:

Q. Witness, where is York?

A. York is around the peninsula in Freetown.
Q. Witness, did I spell York correctly?
A. Yes, my Lord, Y-O-R-K.
Q. Thank you. Did anything happen after this operation in 13:13:16 York?
A. Well, we lost one of our commanders there called Lagah. He was the artillery commander, so that caused us to retreat to the jungle.
MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, Lagah is L-A-G-A-H:
13:13:40 Q. Did anything happen after you retreated to the jungle?
A. Yes, when we came back Gullit mounted the set and called Mosquito and informed him that the troops - the troop was ready to advance on Freetown, but that we needed reinforcement to reinforce him to capture Freetown.
13:14:13 Q. How do you know about this communication?
A. Well, this happened because at that time it was within the brigade. We had not gone yet. We were within the jungle. Gullit was trying to organise. So it happened in my presence, when Gullit made this. And I was not the only person there.
13:14:35 Most of the senior commanders were also there when he called Mosquito and told him that the troop was prepared but that he needed reinforcement to attack Freetown.
Q. Witness, when you say mounted the set, what set are you talking about?
13:14:56 A. I am talking about the radio communication set that was with us.
Q. Do you recall if Mosquito responded?
A. Yes, my Lord, I can remember.
Q. What was Mosquito's response?

A. Well, Mosquito said the reinforcement was on its way, but there are targeted areas that they needed to clear up, but the reinforcement was coming, we will get reinforcement from Kono and Makeni. He said Super, Issa Sesay would come and reinforce us so 13:15:40 that we can bulldoze Freetown.

Q. Did he say which areas needed to be cleared up?

A. Yes, my Lord. He said the troops were preparing. He said they were weakening the ECOMOG so that they will not reinforce Freetown. He said they were weakening the ECOMOG in Kono and 13:16:06 that they were weakening them also in that Daru axis, between Daru and Segbwema axis. He said so when they would have done that they will reinforce us so that we can make an advance on Freetown.

Q. When he said they were weakening the ECOMOG so they will 13:16:26 not reinforce Freetown, firstly tell the Court who was weakening the ECOMOG?

A. Well, as I earlier said, it was an operation that was planned. The RUF, SLAs who were in the eastern part around that Kono area moved, those of us who were in the north moved and 13:16:51 those of us in that Kailahun-Daru axis also moved. So whilst we were attacking they were simultaneously attacking. So it was a strategy that we used so that the ECOMOG would not reinforce each other in any other position. So those who were in Kono would not reinforce those in Makeni. Those who were in Daru would not 13:17:10 reinforce those who were in Kenema. Those who were within Benguema would not be able to reinforce because we had destabilised them in Freetown.

So this was the strategy that we used and this was what Mosquito was telling Gullit. He said now that the men were pushing to ensure that they weakened ECOMOG they would come and reinforce us later and we will all bulldoze our way to Freetown.

Q. When you say, "He said when they have done that we will reinforce us so that we can make an advance on Freetown", can you explain that bit?

13:17:56

A. Well, what he was saying is that he will reinforce the troops that were being led by Gullit to advance on Freetown. Troops will come from - he said from Kono axis and Makeni to reinforce us so that we can make a bigger advance to bulldoze the ECOMOG in Freetown.

13:18:18

Q. Witness, earlier you referred to a person by the name of Super. Who is Super?

A. Well, Superman. We used to call him Denis Mingo. His name is Denis Mingo and he was an RUF commander. He is also a Liberian but he is an RUF commander.

13:18:41

Q. Did Mosquito say which troops were heading towards Kono?

A. Well, yes. He said Issa has moved. Issa, Morris Kallon and Rambo RUF and Akim have moved from Gandorhun Jagbwema Fiama Highway to capture Kono. He said the other troops have left Kailahun to move to that Daru axis so that they can capture Daru and Segbwema, because since Daru had a brigade he said they should destabilise there and Segbwema so as to weaken the ECOMOG strategic bases and we will bulldoze Freetown and they will be unable to reinforce Freetown.

13:19:14

13:19:38

Q. Who would bulldoze Freetown?

A. Well, the troop that was led by Gullit and the reinforcement that was to come would push ahead and bulldoze Freetown.

Q. So that who will be unable to reinforce Freetown? You said "they"?

A. I have not got you clearly.

Q. Sorry, your answer was: "We will bulldoze Freetown", you have explained that is Gullit's group, "and they will be unable to reinforce Freetown." Who would not be able to reinforce Freetown?

A. That is the ECOMOG that were based in the provinces will be unable to reinforce and destabilise us in Freetown.

Q. Witness, the Akim you are referring to, who is this?

13:20:41 A. Akim Turay was an SLA who withdrew to Gandorhun along with Johnny Paul Koroma.

Q. Witness, did anything happen after this communication?

A. Well, after this communication we did some sacrifice. We performed some sacrifice and Gullit sprinkled the water on every 13:21:21 fighter and we moved towards Hastings, the hills around Hastings, we moved towards that area and we were still waiting for the reinforcement.

Q. What was the purpose of Gullit sprinkling this water?

A. Well, he was a man with so many beliefs. He said that was 13:21:52 a sacrifice for us to be able to enter Freetown. They did it and sprinkled the water. It was put in a calabash, or a bowl, sorry, and they sprinkled that on each and every one of us.

Q. Did anything happen after this?

A. Well, the troops, the whole brigade moved. We were still 13:22:17 in the hills. We moved towards Hastings hills.

Q. Where is Hastings, witness?

A. Hastings is around Freetown Highway, Freetown-Waterloo Highway.

Q. Witness, did anything happen after this?

A. Well, actually we based and waited at the Hastings hills. We were hungry so Gullit said the troops should go and get food in Waterloo. So we moved to Waterloo to get some food and we returned to the camp. Later when Gullit mounted the set again he 13:23:25 called Issa --

Q. Witness, I want you to pause. Where did you get food from in Waterloo?

A. Well, that was a food finding that we went on in Waterloo because after we have gone through there and SAJ had died we were 13:23:45 in the hills seeing people down. So Gullit said we should go down there to get food because we were hungry. So we moved back to Waterloo and looted enough food and returned to the hills.

Q. Whose food did you loot?

A. Well, the civilians whom we met in Waterloo, we took - 13:24:12 forcefully took their foods from them and returned.

Q. You told us Gullit then mounted a set and called Issa?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you repeat again who did he call, I think I interrupted you?

13:24:31 A. Gullit called Issa and told him that we were waiting for the reinforcement.

Q. Which Issa did he call?

A. Issa Sesay of the RUF, because they called him Solar System. That was his call sign that he was using because he,
13:24:55 Gullit, was - he had his own call sign. Bazzy had Dark Angel. Every one of them had their call signs. Various commanders had their call signs. Gullit was Black Jah. Bazzy was Dark Angel. Five-Five was Cave. Mosquito was Log and most times we called him Skinny.

Q. How do you know about this communication?
A. Well, this, as we returned, Gullit said he will call those men because he has waited. So that happened in my presence also, because it was within the jungle that Gullit mounted the set. But he had the monitoring set and the one that he used to talk. He mounted the set and called Issa. So Issa told him that he has moved and they were towards Makeni, they captured Kono and they were heading for Makeni. He said they were still on course to weaken the ECOMOG forces so that they can reinforce us, Gullit, so that all of us can enter Freetown.
Q. Did Gullit respond?
A. Yes, my Lord. Gullit said, well, he was still standing by waiting for the reinforcement. He said he will still wait for the reinforcement. And that day also over the international media we heard that the RUF/AFRC have captured Kono and were moving towards Makeni.
Q. At this time did you know where Superman was?
A. Yes, Superman also called because - I mean, sorry, Gullit also called Superman. Superman also confirmed that they were within Bumbuna together with Brigadier Mani and they were advancing towards Binkolo to capture Makeni, because it was a two-pronged attack, according to the monitoring that we were doing.
Q. What do you mean by a two-pronged attack?
A. Well, Issa, Morris Kallon and others were coming from the Kono axis to enter Makeni. They were to use Matotoka, Magburaka to enter Makeni whilst Super was coming from Binkolo - sorry Bumbuna, Binkolo and was to use the highway to Makeni.
MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, perhaps this may be a convenient time to take a break.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Very well, Ms Alagendra, if that is an appropriate time in the evidence. Mr Witness, we are now going to take the lunchtime adjournment. We will resume court again at 13:28:09 2.30. Please adjourn court.

[Lunch break taken at 1.30 p.m.]

[Upon resuming at 2.30 p.m.]

PRESIDING JUDGE: Please proceed, Ms Alagendra.

MS ALAGENDRA: Thank you, your Honour:

14:30:18 Q. Witness, just to take you back a little bit, you've testified that Gullit's group, or in relation to Gullit's group and the communication with Mosquito, you said, "We will bulldoze Freetown". What did you mean by bulldoze?

A. That is we will clear any military target that would be in 14:30:54 front of us whilst we'll be advancing.

Q. Witness, you were explaining what was a two-pronged attack and you said, "We were monitoring". Could you be a bit precise as to who was monitoring?

A. The brigade Gullit was moving with had a monitoring set 14:31:42 which was monitoring all the areas that was under the AFRC/RUF control as to how the advance was proceeding.

Q. Witness, from Waterloo did the troops you were with move anywhere?

A. As I said, after Waterloo we went back to Benguema.

14:32:16 Q. Did anything happen in Benguema?

A. I don't know the time frame. I had explained the attack on Benguema. I don't know what you're referring to. I don't know the time frame.

Q. No, witness, I will repeat the question. My question was did anything happen in Benguema? I hadn't asked you for a time frame yet.

PRESIDING JUDGE: This is after the return?

MS ALAGENDRA: Yes, your Honour.

14:32:52 PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, are you - do you understand the question? The witness looks puzzled. Perhaps you could put the question again, or rephrase it slightly.

MS ALAGENDRA: Yes, your Honour:

Q. Witness, you testified that after Waterloo your group

14:33:10 returned to Benguema. Is that correct?

A. I want to know if you are referring to the two instances. The advance when we were in the hills when we were hungry and went back to Waterloo, I don't know if that is the attack you're referring to?

14:33:42 PRESIDING JUDGE: I'm just trying to understand the sequence here. They came down through Newton into Benguema towards Hastings. Is the evidence that they then went back to Benguema? That they went backwards?

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, if I may a minute to check the 14:34:02 transcript?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Yes, I see the line you're referring to actually, but - just a moment, please. Mr Anyah is on his - was on his feet.

MR ANYAH: I understood the evidence to be that they were 14:34:14 at Waterloo and then some members of the group, the witness as well as Foday Bah, went on a tangent to Benguema for a specific purpose and retreated back to Waterloo. And then the second mention comes when they are at Hastings, and that is in relation to leaving Waterloo, going in search of food and coming back to Waterloo. So I think the witness is perplexed perhaps, because he has already addressed the first events in Benguema and I will leave it at that. It's up to the Prosecution to put their case.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Of course, Mr Anyah, but that may well help us clarify the situation.

Ms Alagendra, the witness of course is yours and if he's puzzled you can rephrase it.

MS ALAGENDRA: I will try my best, your Honour.

Q. Witness, you spoke - you testified about a food finding mission?

A. Yes.

Q. When you were based at Hastings, the hills at Hastings, you said?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. And you did say that took place in Waterloo, am I correct?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. And then you spoke about communications which took place when you were at the hills at Hastings?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. So, I was referring to the food finding patrol that you went on to Waterloo.

A. Okay, thank you.

Q. And my question to you is after the food finding patrol in Waterloo where did you go to?

A. We returned to the Hastings hills where the brigade was based.

Q. Did anything happen at that point?

A. After that we were at the Hastings hills. After we had had some food we saw helicopters - combat helicopters - bringing manpower to Hastings, so Gullit said we were to organise another advance so we should go and disorganise the evacuation that was going on in Hastings. So we prepared ourselves, Basky, Junior Lion and others. The troop was led by Basky and I too joined the troop, moved to Hastings and attacked Hastings.

Q. Witness, these helicopters - combat helicopters - do you know who they belonged to?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Who?

A. It was the Nigerian ECOMOG who were based in Hastings.

Q. And you were saying they were bringing manpower to Hastings. What is this manpower you're talking about?

A. As we were overlooking from up the hills, we saw reinforcement from - there were --

THE INTERPRETER: Your Honours, can the witness repeat from where he said "reinforcement"?

PRESIDING JUDGE: Mr Witness, pause. The interpreter has not caught up with you. Repeat, please, from the point you say, "Up in the hills we saw the reinforcement". Continue from that point.

THE WITNESS: We saw the reinforcements that the helicopters were bringing to Hastings at the airfield and at the Hastings police training school, PTS, they were alighting and they were deploying, taking positions in that area.

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. And you were also talking about an evacuation. Who was being evacuated?

A. When we were in the hills we saw the helicopter coming from the Lungi end, bringing Nigerian ECOMOG forces to be reinforced at Hastings.

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: It's still not clear what evacuation he's talking about. Perhaps he's not using the word in the normal sense?

14:39:24 MS ALAGENDRA: I will try to clarify that, your Honour:

Q. Witness, you did use the word "evacuation" and you said, "Gullit said we were to organise another advance so we should go and disorganise the evacuation that was going on in Hastings". Can you explain what evacuation was going on in Hastings?

14:39:46 A. Let me put it in a simple way. The helicopter was bringing Nigerian soldiers to reinforce the others in Hastings at the airfield and the police training school, PTS. We overlooked them whilst we were in the hills. We saw everything.

Q. Was it only reinforcements that were coming into Hastings?

14:40:16 A. They had a military position there, so they were just bringing some more to build up on the number to reinforce the Nigerian forces that were there.

Q. Were there people being removed from Hastings?

A. No, my Lord, we did not see any civilian movements.

14:40:46 Q. What happened after you saw this?

A. Gullit said, well, we should organise a team that would go down to Hastings to disorganise that troop that had come there.

Q. Did anything happen after Gullit said that?

A. Yes, my Lord. He appointed Basky and some other men from 14:41:28 both battalions and I too joined the troops. We moved and attacked Hastings.

Q. Witness, when you say both battalions, which two battalions are you referring to?

A. I said the battalions I'm referring to, all of the battalions. All of them contributed manpower to go and attack Hastings.

Q. Witness, just give us a figure as to how many battalions contributed manpower to attack Hastings?

14:42:11 A. The various battalions, 1st Battalion, 2nd Battalion, 3rd Battalion, 4th Battalion, 5th Battalion, the RDF and the Red Lion Battalion, all of them contributed troops.

Q. What happened during the attack on Hastings?

A. During that attack we were able to disorganise the ECOMOG

14:42:43 troops who were there, some of them were captured and we executed them and we burnt the Hastings airfield. We met some old aircrafts already at the field. We set them on fire, after which we withdrew to the Hastings jungle.

Q. Who was executed?

14:43:17 A. Some of the Nigerian ECOMOG soldiers whom we captured from that place.

Q. Do you recall how many Nigerian soldiers were executed?

A. About three of them that we captured.

Q. How were they executed?

14:43:42 A. We shot them. When we captured them we shot them to death.

Q. Did anything else happen during the attack on Hastings?

A. As I said, we set Hastings - we set fire on Hastings and we burnt some of the old aircrafts that were on the field and we returned to the temporary base that we had established at 14:44:20 Hastings, in the hills.

Q. Did anything happen after you returned to the temporary base?

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Ms Alagendra, I'm not sure if Hastings is a village, a town, what is it?

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Witness, where is Hastings?

A. Hastings is just after Jui. It's between Freetown and Waterloo on the highway. They used to call the place Hastings Town. It has an airfield, it has the PTS, police training school, in that area.

Q. Did anything happen after you returned to the temporary base?

A. Yes, we went back and reported to Gullit. Basky reported exactly what had happened. He gave a situation report about our performance in the area and after which we were there for some time and we were attacked in the hills where we lost some of our men. We lost our support firer Johnny and we also lost one of the commanders. I have forgotten his name now. He was a colonel. He too was killed.

Q. Did anything else happen in Hastings?

A. The only thing was that we repelled the attack and Gullit said we should get prepared that night and advance towards - we were to make a brigade advance to Hastings again, Jui and Allen Town, then we should enter.

Q. What do you mean by a brigade advance?

A. This time you are not just to choose a - say this particular battalion should go, or you select people from different battalions, no, the whole brigade should move and go and capture Hastings, Jui and Allen Town.

Q. Did anything happen after Gullit said that?

A. Yes, my Lord. The night we prepared and we made an advance towards Hastings again. We recaptured Hastings and we had a very fierce fight between the ECOMOG force and our own troops. We fought, we lost some of our men and finally we were able to push them. Because we used our heavy support weapons, we pushed ECOMOG from Jui and captured Jui. Whilst the troop that Gullit was leading captured Jui, Junior Lion and some other men used the 14:48:08 route towards Grafton whilst I, Tito and others moved towards the bridge at Jui and captured the Jui bridge.

Q. Witness, where exactly is Jui?

A. Jui is within - is between the Freetown-Waterloo Highway. It's just after Allen Town. From Jui you go to Grafton.

14:48:55 Q. Witness, at this time what was your position?

A. I was a combatant officer. I was at the front line, engaged at the front line in the battles.

Q. The troops that you were with moving towards Jui bridge, who was leading that group?

14:49:26 A. Tito was the commander who moved with me and others to the Jui bridge and we crossed the bridge and they said we should wait and Tito left me and some other men defending the bridge. He went back and took the entire brigade, the family members, as I said, the civilians that we had captured, those were the ones we 14:49:58 referred to as family members, and the entire brigade. They met us and we crossed and we went to a place in Allen Town that was a very small jungle. We were based there for some time.

Q. Witness, at this point where was the Red Lion battalion?

A. Well, Red Lion battalion too moved at the brigade - I am 14:50:32 sorry, where - that place in Allen Town, all of us were there. It was only Junior Lion and some other men who used the Grafton Highway. He was going - he was continuing, pursuing the other ECOMOG guys who were going around that end, the Grafton end.

Q. Witness, you've spoken about a group led by Tito, a group led by Junior Lion and a group led by Gullit.

A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. In relation to these groups where was the Red Lion battalion?
14:51:17 A. Well, Red Lion battalion was with the brigade. That was where Tito - the troop that Tito led. We went to capture the bridge and when we captured the bridge we went back and all of them came down together with the entire brigade and we went and established a temporary base at Allen Town.
14:51:46 MR ANYAH: Sorry to interrupt again. I would be grateful for some time frame indications if we are now in January 1999, or still in December 1998.
PRESIDING JUDGE: Ms Alagendra, you've heard counsel.
MS ALAGENDRA: Yes, your Honours, I will do that:
14:52:05 Q. Witness, before you proceed further can you tell the Court where we are in terms of time?
A. This was 4 January 1999.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: We didn't get any time frames for the Hastings attack. Also, Ms Alagendra, I would seek some 14:52:28 clarification. The witness talked of burnings in Hastings. He says they burnt Hastings. I'm not sure what exactly it is that they burnt apart from a few aircrafts, old aircrafts.
MS ALAGENDRA: I will go back to that, your Honour:
Q. Witness, I am going to take you back a little bit. The 14:52:50 attack in Hastings that you described, when did that happen? Do you remember the date?
A. That was around 3 January 1999.
Q. You spoke about burnings taking place in Hastings. What was burnt in Hastings?

A. Hastings, it was the airfield, the structures that were at the airfield and the old aircrafts. Those were the things we burnt.

Q. Was anything else burnt in Hastings?

14:53:35 A. No, my Lord. We just attacked the military base that was there and we withdrew.

Q. Witness, you just told the Court that the Red Lion battalion was with the group that was being led by Tito. Am I right?

14:53:58 A. I said the group which I moved with, Tito was the commander, the group that captured the bridge. That was the area that Red Lion and the brigade used, because after we had captured the bridge the Red Lion battalion, the entire brigade, moved and we crossed the bridge. We went and based at Jui - I'm sorry, Allen Town.

14:54:30 Q. Is it your testimony that the Red Lion was with the brigade?

A. Yes, was with the brigade while we were advancing, because this advance, we were mixed. This time it was not by battalion, we were together, because the first attempt when we tried we lost some of our men. So Junior Lion withdrew and he was even beating some men to bring them to the fore. So it was a mixed troop. But Tito, I and others moved, we crossed and captured the bridge. We crossed and we waited there and Tito returned to take the 14:55:24 brigade where the Red Lion battalion too was part of.

Q. Witness, when you talk about the brigade at this point what are you referring to?

A. Well the brigade comprised Gullit who was the CIC, there was Bazzy who was the deputy CIC, there was Five-Five who was the chief of army staff and you had the adjutants and other commanders and the family members. The civilians whom we captured, we called them family members.

Q. You've testified that after your group captured Jui bridge you moved to Allen Town, am I right?

14:56:22

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. When your group arrived at Allen Town, did you meet anybody there?

A. As we got to Allen Town, the civilians had already left the place.

14:56:46

Q. Did you meet the other groups?

PRESIDING JUDGE: That's a bit vague, Ms Alagendra. What other groups?

MS ALAGENDRA: I'll be clearer, your Honour:

14:57:03

Q. Witness, when you arrived at Allen Town do you know where the brigade was?

A. As I said, when we got to Allen Town Gullit and the others came. We went and established a temporary base at a place that is actually primary jungle. It was not a thick forest. But at that time Junior Lion and the other guys who moved towards the Grafton end had not come yet, so we were at that primary jungle temporarily.

14:57:32

Q. For how long did you remain there?

A. We were there until towards the evening when we came to the town itself - the Allen Town itself - and we occupied the houses, because we met the civilians that had already left their houses.

14:57:59

Q. For how long did you remain in Allen Town?

A. We were in Allen Town until 5 January, waiting for Junior Lion, and on the 5th Junior Lion came. He came from the Grafton end to Allen Town, but while he was advancing towards Allen Town to meet us we had a jet raid. A jet attacked our positions and we lost one of our colonels, Colonel Chucks. He died. We continued waiting almost towards 1 a.m.

14:59:10 Q. What jets are you talking about?

A. This was the ECOMOG Alpha Jet, which we referred to as the 448.

Q. Would you please state again the name of the colonel who died?

14:59:33 A. Colonel Chucks.

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, if I can ask the witness to assist us with the spelling:

Q. Witness, can you spell Chucks?

A. C-H-U-C-K-S.

15:00:02 Q. You said you continued waiting until almost 1 a.m.?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Did anything happen after 1 a.m.?

A. Yes, Gullit called all the battalion commanders and the military supervisors and he addressed the troops.

15:00:30 Q. How did you know this?

A. This happened in my presence in Allen Town.

Q. What did Gullit say?

A. Gullit said that the troop was then about to enter Freetown and that he was ordering that as we would be entering Freetown we 15:00:59 would make sure - we should ensure that we burnt down all police stations and, secondly, we should open the central prisons because there were soldiers in the prisons. We had had information as well that Foday Sankoh was in prison there, who was the RUF leader, and other political detainees too were there in the prisons, so we should ensure that those people were freed from the prisons. We should also make sure that collaborators, those who opposed the junta forces which comprised the RUF and the SLAs, that we should kill them. And he also said - he said something, he said, "From your pockets to my pocket", that is whatever that was of value if you're a civilian and I am a fighter and if I see you and I asked you to give me what you had, if you refuse to hand it over to me I shall kill you.

Q. Did Gullit say anything else?

15:02:41 A. He said we should ensure that as we would be entering we should defend Freetown so we'd be able to get a good number of civilians so if there was anything, if we had resistance, we should capture those civilians and we will use them to gain recognition.

15:03:03 Q. Did he say anything else, witness?

A. As far as I can recall, these are some of the things that he spoke about and he said we should be prepared to attack Freetown.

Q. Witness, do you know who you were going to attack in 15:03:24 Freetown?

A. The ECOMOG troop was based in Freetown, so we were going there to attack them and the government which was in Freetown at that time.

Q. Apart from the ECOMOG that was in Freetown, do you know if 15:03:50 there were any other forces in Freetown?

A. Yes, we were aware about the Kamajors' presence there and some of the other SLA members who were fighting alongside the ECOMOG forces. They were loyal to the government.

Q. Can you remind us what do you mean by SLA?

A. This was the Sierra Leone Army, but when we left, when we came from the jungles, some of them went and surrendered to the government whilst we took to the jungle.

Q. Witness, at this time what was the size of Gullit's troops?

15:04:54 A. As I said we were more than 1,000, those of us who entered Freetown.

Q. Can you tell the Court what kind of weaponry your group had at this point?

A. My Lord, we were well armed. We had SPG, which was support

15:05:23 propelled grenade. We had commando mortars, which we called also 60 millimetre mortars. We had 81 millimetre mortars too. We had rocket propelled grenades. Almost all the battalions had them. We also had LAR, which is light automatic rifle. We had SMG, which was sub-machine gun. We used that too. We had AK-47 and 15:06:16 we also had machetes. Some men had machetes when we entered Freetown. The unarmed civilians had machetes.

Q. Did you have any kind of vehicle in your group?

A. At the time we were in Allen Town we hadn't a vehicle at that time. We did our attacks on foot. We hadn't a vehicle at 15:06:52 that time.

Q. Witness, what happened when the troops left Allen Town?

A. Immediately after that the brigade waited just for a while. Gullit and the others waited for a while whilst we were being organised - the fighters were being organised. We were mixed.

15:07:29 The Red Lion - it was like a brigade advance. Four battalions moved. We came down Allen Town, the ECOMOG forces attacked us and we repelled the attack. We pushed them. We came right down to Calaba Town, firing heavily. We came and captured Brewery. As we captured Brewery, we based there. From there as I said the

A. After that we advanced towards the library, which was very close to the State House, and we came up towards Tower Hill, and the other group went down to the Cotton Tree and we attacked the State House. They were pushing from the other end and we were 15:28:38 pushing from the other end and we captured State House. From there the brigade came where Gullit and the family members came.
Q. Gullit and the family members came where?
A. At State House.
Q. When you say "State House", witness, what do you mean?
15:29:07 A. This was the President's - sorry, it was the office of the President. That was the time of former President Ahmad Tejan Kabbah's time.
Q. Do you recall the time when State House was captured?
A. As I said it was a short time around 6 a.m., almost 6 a.m.
15:29:35 to 6 something. That was when we captured State House in the morning hours.
Q. Did anything happen after State House was captured?
A. Yes, we met and Gullit said we should go and open the central prisons. Bazzy joined us, together with some other men, 15:30:07 and so we were moving towards Pademba Road. We burnt down the CID headquarters. That is the Criminal Investigation Department which belonged to the Sierra Leone Police. We burnt that down. From there we advanced towards the central prisons, which is called Pademba Road Prisons. We met some resistance from the 15:30:38 ECOMOG, but they eventually retreated and we broke into the prisons and the manpower that we met there was so high. It was nearly 3,000 - nearly 3,500, including soldiers, prominent lawyers, so many people who were with the AFRC.
JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Mr Interpreter, did he say 3,000, or 3,500?

THE INTERPRETER: He said 3,000 and later he said 500 after, so I don't know whether he met 3,000 or 3,500.

MS ALAGENDRA:

15:31:25 Q. Witness, can you tell us again the number of people who were released from Pademba?

A. I want to use the gents.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Please assist the witness.

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honour, if I may?

15:36:14 PRESIDING JUDGE: Are you all right, Mr Witness?

THE WITNESS: Yes, my Lord.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Please proceed, Ms Alagendra.

MS ALAGENDRA: Thank you, your Honour:

Q. Witness, can you tell the Court again how many people were 15:36:22 released from Pademba Road Prison?

A. It was about 3,500 that we met in the prison, because they were mixed.

Q. Witness, at the time when --

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: What does he mean by "mixed"?

15:36:47 MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honour, I think he explained that earlier, but I will ask him to explain it again:

Q. Witness, when you say "mixed" what do you mean? Can you explain that?

A. There were SLAs whom we met there, there were some RUF

15:37:09 members who were in the prisons too and there were some political detainees too, including some prominent lawyers, and there were some women in the prisons and some criminals whom the government had arrested and were there.

Q. Witness, at this point when you released the prisoners from

Q. Witness, can you remind the Court who is FAT Sesay again, please?
A. FAT Sesay was the brigade administrator that we had.
Q. Witness, at this point in the State House who was in 15:56:04 command of the troops?
A. It was Tamba Alex Brima, who was called Brigadier Tamba Alex Brima.
Q. Do you know if Tamba Alex Brima was reporting to anybody?
A. Yes, my Lord.
15:56:26 Q. Who?
A. When we captured State House all the reports he made to Mosquito. Whatever happened he briefed Mosquito.
Q. At this time in the State House, witness, were there other commanders present?
15:56:50 A. Yes, my Lord.
Q. Who?
A. You had Bazzy. He was at the State House. He was the deputy commander. You had Five-Five. He too was in the State House. You had Woyoh and others, the military supervisors 15:57:14 themselves were based in State House and even Hassan Papa Bangura was based in State House.
Q. Was anything happening at the State House at this time?
A. Well, at that time we had just captured State House and soldiers, the SLA, the troops, the RUF, all of them who came, 15:57:40 they were all moving around and they were getting young girls and women and they were bringing them to State House at that time. We also captured some Nigerian ECOMOG soldiers. We brought them to State House and they brought them before Gullit.
Q. How many young girls were being brought to the State House?

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. What happened after this communication?

A. Well, Gullit switched off the set and said we should prepare for the advance and he ordered that that village should be burnt down, that the village should be put on fire and it was B company and C company which were that rear, they set the village on fire while the brigade moved.

Q. Witness, do you recall the name of this village?

A. No, I cannot recall, but it was within that Bumbuna axis. I cannot recall the name of the village now.

Q. Who set the village on fire?

A. It was an order from Gullit, he called the B Company commander and issued out the order.

Q. What was burnt in this village?

A. They set the houses on fire.

Q. Were there any civilians living in this village?

A. No, we did not meet civilians in that village.

Q. Now, you said the brigade moved. Where did the brigade move to?

A. We moved towards a village together with the brigade and captured one man called Tamba Sewa. They said he was a juju priest.

MS ALAGENDRA: Your Honours, for the record Tamba Sewa is T-A-M-B-A S-E-W-A:

Q. This village that you moved to, witness, where you met Tamba Sewa, do you know which district it is?

A. It was in Koinadugu district. It was very close to Bumbuna.

Q. Did anything happen --

JUDGE SEBUTINDE: Ms Alagendra, Tamba Sewa was a juju priest, not a Jewish priest.

MS ALAGENDRA: Yes, the witness did say juju:

Q. Just for the record, when you say "juju" what do you mean?

10:16:38 A. According to my idea, these are people they would go to to worship, to prepare - I don't know how they call it. We used to call it [indiscernible], they make some charms for you which we'll use to fight. Charms that you use to fight.

Q. Thank you, witness. Did anything happen at this village?

10:17:12 A. Well, Tamba Sewa was arrested and he said - pleaded with Gullit not to kill him. He said he would help the troop, he would prepare something that everybody would have which will disable the enemy from attacking us. He pleaded with Gullit that they should not eat the goat, but the sheep and the ducks they 10:17:49 were free to eat and after that he prepared the charms which he gave to every fighter. We tied the charm on our arms. From there the troop left and headed towards Bumbuna Highway.

Q. What happened after that?

A. When we left that village we moved ahead and had an attack.

10:18:35 Q. Witness, can you give us a time frame now where we are at?

A. This was around July, July to August 1998. July, sorry, 1998. June/July 1998. June/July 1998, yeah.

Q. And where did you have an attack?

A. Just after the village where Tamba Sewa was, whilst we were 10:19:05 going we were attacked.

Q. Do you recall who attacked your group?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Who?

A. This was the Executive Outcomes, the South Africans.

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you circle Bumpe and put a number 8 next to that. Now, you testified about a place called Yengema.

12:42:07 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Do you see Yengema on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you circle it and put a number 9 next to that. You testified about a place Yomandu.

12:42:36 A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Do you see Yomandu on the map?

A. Yes, my Lord.

Q. Can you circle it and put a number 10 next to it. Thank you, witness.

MS ALAGENDRA: 21, your Honour.

PRESIDING JUDGE: Thank you.

MS ALAGENDRA:

Q. Witness, you said that the group you were with was 12:44:41 withdrawing and you were heading towards Tombodu. Did your group arrive in Tombodu?

A. Yes, my Lord. I arrived with commander Bomb Blast, Hassan Papa Bangura, in Tombodu.

Q. When you went to Tombodu, who did you find there?

A. Well, when I arrived in Tombodu Gullit was there, Bazzy, Woyoh, Abdul Sesay who was the - who were the military supervisors. Ibrahim Bioh Sesay was there and other commanders, and the family members as I have named them before.

12:45:38 Q. Witness, you earlier told us what family members meant. Could you tell us again, please, at this point. When you say family members, who are you referring to?

A. I said that these were the civilians who I and the other people captured who were under our command, both the RUF and the 12:46:02 SLAs that were in that area, those whom we had captured.

Q. At this point when you withdrew to Tombodu, what was the number of the captured civilians that your group moved with to Tombodu?

A. Well, the number was large. The number was large, because 12:46:26 most of them who continued to be with us at the base, we ensured that, like I said, we protected them so that nobody will escape. They continued to stay with us. About 200 of them were with us.

Q. These roughly 200 civilians, where were they captured from?

A. Well, some of them were captured in Makeni and some in Kono 12:46:55 where we were based.

Q. Witness, you testified earlier about the ammunition that was distributed by Superman to Bazzy and Bomb Blast. At this point in Tombodu, were there any left?

A. Well, we had got this ammunitions before, like I said, to 12:47:25 repel the ECOMOG forces. When we withdrew we still had this ammunition.

Q. How long were you and the group you were with in Tombodu?

A. Well, the same day of the withdrawal, when I and Hassan Papa Bangura arrived, Gullit informed Hassan Papa Bangura that
